a strenuously satirical and powerful organ of Conservative opinion in prose and verse, begun in November 1797, and carried on—in dead earnest even when at its wittiest—till the July of next year. Canning was the master-spirit, but he had Gifford for editor, and amongst his principal collaborators George Ellis and Hookham Frere; Pitt, too, may have lent a hand. The Whig Rolliad had been rollicking, broadly humorous, at times coarse and offensively personal; but it aimed more at fun than at the destruction of error and the dissemination of truth. These were distinctly amongst the aims of the Anti-Jacobin, and there is therefore some excuse for a measure of bitterness and even ferocity both in defence and assault, which cannot be attributed solely to Gifford. The Anti-Jacobin stood up for the English constitution against all foes, domestic and foreign, especially against French republicans and their friends; for Christianity and the Church of England against innovators, freethinkers, Dissenters, and atheists; for common-sense against the poetry and philosophy of Erasmus Darwin; for English humour and taste against the false and feeble sentiment, silly rodomontade, lax morality, pointless dramatic construction, and general imbecility the Tory wits (from imperfect knowledge) conceived to be characteristically German. The management was sometimes, as might be expected, indiscriminating and unfair in the selection of persons to be attacked. Thus 'Coleridge and Southey, Lloyd and Lamb and Co.' are invoked, along with 'Paine, Williams, Godwin, Holcroft,' and 'all creeping creatures venomous and low,' to worship the revolutionary Lepaux. It is not singular that Southey should at this time have been denounced as an incendiary, or that Helen Maria Williams should have been very disrespectfully alluded to. Coleridge never admitted that he was fairly treated in these references, and even when a high Tory, continued to resent the inclusion in this connection of poor Charles Lamb's name.

In the Anti-Jacobin for 1802 there is a commendatory notice of the poem called The Infidel and Christian Philosopher, contrasting the deathbeds of Voltaire and Addison; the long extract on Voltaire's end begins thus—

View you pale wretch who late with haughty pride
Like you his Saviour and his God deny'd.
Mark how his fiery eyeballs, glaring roll,
And shew the anguish of his tortur'd soul;

and Voltaire is made to bewail his blasphemies and in abject terror implore the sovereign mercy which he scorned before.

The same number, reviewing a volume of poetry 'by the author of Gebir,' repudiates 'all knowledge of the former productions of this notable bard' named on the title (including The Phocceans and Chrysaor), but pronounces this 'the most arrant doggrel as ever poor critic was compelled to regard. In short, worse lines and worse principles were seldom if ever united in one poor volume. . . . This fastian probably comes from one of the dissenting manufactories at Warwick.'

A good deal of difficulty has been found in fixing the authorship of the various contributions to the Anti-Jacobin, which were of course anonymously published; many of the best were the joint work of two or more of the band. Some of the very best were undoubtedly wholly or almost wholly Canning's work. Amongst these are generally reckoned the prospectus; the inscription for the cell of Mrs Brownrigg, the murderer; the second and third parts of The Loves of the Triangles; The Needy Knife-Grinder; the second and third parts of The Progress of Man; and The New Morality. Canning shared with Ellis and Frere in the play of The Rovers (with its English heroes Puddingfield and Beefington), meant to ridicule German plays generally, though in truth it has little relevance to any actual German work; and the 'Song of Rogero' is apparently his, though it is said Pitt added the last verse.

GEORGE CANNING.

From the Bust by Sir Francis Chantrey in the National Portrait Gallery.

The Brownrigg poem caricatured Southey's inscription for the cell of Henry Marten, the parliamentary regicide, at Chepstow; the 'Friend of Humanity' was the Irish Whig M.P., Tierney; the Progress of Man satirised Payne Knight's Progress of Civil Society; and the Loves of the Triangles was the too amazingly effective caricature of Erasmus Darwin's Loves of the Plants—it killed Darwin's poem and blasted his laurels. Indeed, it might be argued that the Anti-Jacobin helped greatly to put all didactic poetry out of fashion, and so, in spite of its politics and literary principles, to promote a new era in literature and a taste diametrically opposed to that of the eighteenth century.

From the New Morality come the often-quoted lines—

Give me the avowed, the erect, the manly foe ;
Bold I can meet, perhaps may turn his blow ;
But of all plagues, good Heaven, thy wrath can send,
Save, save, oh ! save me from the candid friend !

as also the couplet—

A steady Patriot of the World alone,
The Friend of every Country—but his own.

Inscription for the Door of the Cell in Newgate, where Mrs Brownrigg, the Prentice-olde, was confined previous to her execution.

For one long term, or ere her trial came,
Here Brownrigg linger'd. Often have these cells
Echoed her blasphemies, as with shrill voice
She screamed for fresh Geneva. Not to her
Did the blithe fields of Tothill, or thy street,
St Giles, its fair varieties expand ;
Till at the last, in slow-drawn cart, she went
To execution. Dost thou ask her crime ?
She whipp'd two female prentices to death,
And hid them in the coal-hole. For her mind
Shaped strictest plans of discipline. Sage schemes !
Such as Lycurgus taught, when at the shrine
Of the Orthyian goddess he bade flog
The little Spartans ; such as erst chastised
Our Milton when at college. For this act
Did Brownrigg swing. Harsh laws ! But time shall come
When France shall reign, and laws be all repeal'd !

From 'The Progress of Man.'

Lo ! the rude savage, free from civil strife,
Keeps the smooth tenour of his guiltless life ;
Restrain'd by none save Nature's lenient laws,
Quaffs the clear stream, and feeds on hips and haws.
Light to his daily sports behold him rise !
The bloodless banquet health and strength supplies.
Bloodless not long—one morn he haps to stray
Through the lone wood—and close beside the way
Sees the gaunt tiger tear his trembling prey ;
Beneath whose gory fangs a leveret bleeds,
Or pig—such pig as fertile China breeds.

Struck with the sight, the wondering Savage stands,
Rolls his broad eyes, and clasps his lifted hands !
Then restless roams—and loaths his wonted food ;
Shuns the salubrious stream, and thirsts for blood.

By thought matur'd, and quicken'd by desire,
New arts, new arms, his wayward wants require.
From the tough yew a slender branch he tears,
With self-taught skill the twisted grass prepares ;
Th' unfashion'd bow with labouring efforts bends
In circling form, and joins th' unwilling ends.
Next some tall reed he seeks—with sharp-edg'd stone
Shapes the fell dart, and points with whiten'd bone.

Then forth he fares. Around in careless play,
Kids, pigs, and lambkins unsuspecting stray.
With grim delight he views the sportive band,
Intent on blood, and lifts his murderous hand.
Twangs the bent bow—resounds the fateful dart,
Swift-wing'd, and trembles in a porker's heart.

Ah ! hapless porker ! what can now avail
Thy back's stiff bristles, or thy curly tail ?
Ah ! what avail those eyes so small and round,
Long pendent ears, and snout that loves the ground ?

Not unreveng'd thou diest !—In after times
From thy spilt blood shall spring unnumber'd crimes.
Soon shall the slaught'rous arms that wrought thy woe,
Improv'd by malice, deal a deadlier blow ;
When social Man shall pant for nobler game,
And 'gainst his fellow man the vengeful weapon aim.

As love, as gold, as jealousy inspires,
As wrathful hate or wild ambition fires,
Urged by the statesman's craft, the tyrant's rage,
Embattled nations endless wars shall wage,
Vast seas of blood the ravaged fields shall stain,
And millions perish—that a King may reign !

For blood once shed, new wants and wishes rise :
Each rising want invention quick supplies.
To roast his victuals is Man's next desire,
So two dry sticks he rubs, and lights a fire ;
Hail fire ! &c. &c.

From 'The Loves of the Triangles.'

And first, the fair Parabola behold,
Her timid arms with virgin blush unfold !
Though on one focus fix'd, her eyes betray
A heart that glows with love's resistless sway,
Though, climbing oft, she strive with bolder grace
Round his tall neck to clasp her fond embrace,
Still ere she reach it, from his polish'd side
Her trembling hands in devious Tangents glide.

In The Friend of Humanity and the Knife-grinder, generally called, from the first line, The Needy Knife-grinder, Canning ridicules the youthful Jacobin effusions of Southey, in which, he says, it was sedulously inculcated that there was a natural and eternal warfare between the poor and the rich. The Sapphic lines of Southey afforded a tempting subject for ludicrous parody, and lest he should be suspected of painting from fancy, Canning quoted the following stanza :

Cold was the night-wind : drifting fast the snows fell ;
Wide were the downs, and shelterless and naked ;
When a poor wanderer struggled on her journey,
Weary and way-sore.

The Friend of Humanity and the Knife-grinder.

F. of H. Needy Knife-grinder ! whither are you going ?
Rough is your road, your wheel is out of order ;
Bleak blows the blast—your hat has got a hole in't,
So have your breeches !

Weary Knife-grinder ! little think the proud ones,
Who in their coaches roll along the turnpike-
Road, what hard work 'tis crying all day, 'Knives and Scissors to grind O !'

Tell me, Knife-grinder, how came you to grind knives ?
Did some rich man tyrannically use you ?
Was it the squire, or parson of the parish,
Or the attorney ?

Was it the squire, for killing of his game? or
Covetous parson, for his tithes distraining?
Or roguish lawyer, made you lose your little
All in a lawsuit?

(Have you not read the Rights of Man, by Tom Paine?)
Drops of compassion tremble on my eyelids,
Ready to fall, as soon as you have told your Pitiful story.

K.-G. Story! God bless you! I have none to tell, sir;
Only last night a-drinking at the Chequers,
This poor old hat and breeches, as you see, were Torn in a scuffle.

Constables came up for to take me into Custody; they took me before the justice;
Justice Oldmixon put me in the parish-
Stocks for a vagrant.

I should be glad to drink your honour's health in
A pot of beer, if you will give me sixpence;
But for my part, I never love to meddle
With politics, sir.

F. of H. I give thee sixpence! I will see thee d——d first—

Wretch, whom no sense of wrongs can rouse to ven-
Sordid, unfeeling, reprobate, degraded, [geance—
Spiritless outcast!

[Kicks the Knife-grinder, overturns his wheel, and exit in a transport of republican enthusiasm and universal philanthropy.]

Song of Rogero, in 'The Rovers.'

Whene'er with haggard eyes I view
This dungeon that I'm rotting in,
I think of those companions true
Who studied with me at the University of Gottingen,
niversity of Gottingen.

[Weeps and pulls out a blue kerchief, with which he wipes his eyes; gazing tenderly at it, he proceeds.]

Sweet kerchief, checked with heavenly blue,
Which once my love sat knotting in—
Alas, Matilda then was true!

At least I thought so at the University of Gottingen,
niversity of Gottingen.

[At the repetition of this line, Rogero clanks his chains in cadence.]

Barbs! barbs! alas! how swift you flew
Her neat post-wagon trotting in!
Ye bore Matilda from my view;
Forlorn I languished at the University of Gottingen,
niversity of Gottingen.

This faded form! this pallid hue!
This blood my veins is clotting in,
My years are many—they were few
When first I entered at the University of Gottingen,
niversity of Gottingen.

There first for thee my passion grew,
Sweet, sweet Matilda Pottingen!
Thou wast the daughter of my Tutor, law professor at the University of Gottingen,
niversity of Gottingen.

Sun, moon, and thou vain world, adieu,
That kings and priests are plotting in:
Here doomed to starve on water gruel, never shall I see the University of Gottingen,
niversity of Gottingen.

[During the last stanza, Rogero dashes his head repeatedly against the walls of his prison; and finally so hard as to produce a visible contusion. He then throws himself on the floor in an agony. The curtain drops, the music still continuing to play till it is wholly fallen.]

There is a Memoir prefixed to Canning's Speeches edited by Therry (6 vols. 1828); A. Stapleton's Political Life of Canning
(1831) and Canning and his Times (1859) are eulogistic; more recent are Lives by Hill (1887), Marriott (1903), Temperley (1905), and Bagot's Canning and his Friends (2 vols. 1909). See also Lord Dalling's Historical Characters (1867), and Canning's Official
Correspondence, edited by E. J. Stapleton (2 vols. 1887). The Poetry of the Anti-Jacobin was separately published in 1801; and, with explanatory notes, by Charles Edmonds in 1852 (3rd ed. 1890).

John Hookham Frere (1769-1846) was born in London of a good old East Anglian family, was the son of an accomplished anti-quary, and was educated at Eton and Caius College, Cambridge. He next entered the Foreign Office, and from 1796 to 1802 was member for the Cornish pocket-borough of West Looe. Along with his old schoolfellow Canning, he gave steady support to Pitt's Government, and contributed to the Anti-Jacobin (1797-98), whose editor was Gifford, and many of whose best pieces were the conjoint work of Canning and Frere, sometimes also of Ellis. Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs (1799), Frere was appointed envoy to Portugal (1800), and then twice Minister to Spain (1802-4; 1808-9), where he was much blamed for his conduct to Sir John Moore. He was recalled after the retreat to Corunna, and renounced public life, twice refusing the offer of a peerage. By his father's death in 1807 he succeeded to the Roydon property near Diss; in 1816 he married the Dowager-Countess of Erroll; and in 1818, for her health's sake, they settled at Malta. She died there in 1831 (ten months before Scott's well-known meeting with Frere); and Frere himself died fifteen years later. In 1817 Murray published a small poetical volume under the eccentric title of Prospectus and Specimen of an intended National Work, by William and Robert Whistlecraft, of Stowmarket in Suffolk, Harness and Collar Makers. Intended to comprise the most Interesting Particulars relating to King Arthur and his Round Table. The world was surprised to find, under this odd disguise, a happy effort further to naturalise in English the gay ottava rima of Berni, Casti, and their imitators in Italian. The brothers Whistlecraft formed, it was quickly seen, but the mask of some scholarly wit belonging to the higher circles of society. To two cantos published in 1817 a third and fourth were added the following year. The description of Arthur and his knights at Carlisle shows the characteristic vein:

They looked a manly generous generation;
Beards, shoulders, eyebrows, broad, and square, and thick,
Their accents firm and loud in conversation,
Their eyes and gestures eager, sharp, and quick,

Shewed them prepared, on proper provocation,
To give the lie, pull noses, stab and kick ;
And for that very reason, it is said,
They were so very courteous and well-bred.

In a wild valley near Carlisle, poetically described, lived a race of giants. The giants having attacked and carried off some ladies on their journey to court, the knights deem it their duty to set out in pursuit ; and having overcome the oppressors, they relieve the captives from durance :

The ladies?—They were tolerably well,
At least as well as could have been expected :
Many details I must forbear to tell ;
Their toilet had been very much neglected ;
But by supreme good-luck it so befell,
That when the castle's capture was effected,
When those vile cannibals were overpowered,
Only two fat duennas were devoured.

Near the valley of the giants was an abbey, containing fifty friars, 'fat and good,' long on good terms with their neighbours. The giants, naturally fond of music, would sometimes approach the sacred pile :

And oft that wild untutored race would draw,
Led by the solemn sound and sacred light,
Beyond the bank, beneath a lonely shaw,
To listen all the livelong summer night,
Till deep, serene, and reverential awe
Environed them with silent calm delight,
Contemplating the minster's midnight gleam,
Reflected from the clear and glassy stream.

But chiefly, when the shadowy moon had shed
O'er woods and waters her mysterious hue,
Their passive hearts and vacant fancies fed
With thoughts and aspirations strange and new,
Till their brute souls with inward working bred
Dark hints that in the depths of instinct grew
Subjective—not from Locke's associations,
Nor David Hartley's doctrine of vibrations.

Unhappily this happy state of things is broken up by the introduction of a ring of bells into the abbey, a kind of music to which the giants had an insurmountable aversion :

Meanwhile the solemn mountains that surrounded
The silent valley where the convent lay,
With tintinnabular uproar were astounded
When the first peal burst forth at break of day :
Feeling their granite ears severely wounded,
They scarce knew what to think or what to say ;
And—though large mountains commonly conceal
Their sentiments, dissembling what they feel,

Yet—Cader-Gibbrish from his cloudy throne
To huge Loblommon gave an intimation
Of this strange rumour, with an awful tone,
Thundering his deep surprise and indignation ;
The lesser hills, in language of their own,
Discussed the topic by reverberation ;
Discoursing with their echoes all day long,
Their only conversation was, 'ding-dong.'

These giant mountains inwardly were moved,
But never made an outward change of place ;

Not so the mountain giants (as behoved
A more alert and locomotive race) ;
Hearing a clatter which they disapproved,
They ran straight forward to besiege the place,
With a discordant universal yell,
Like house-dogs howling at a dinner-bell.

Meanwhile a monk, Brother John by name, who had opposed the introduction of the bells, has gone, in a fit of disgust with his brethren, to amuse himself with the rod at a neighbouring stream :

A mighty current, unconfined and free,
Ran wheeling round beneath the mountain's shade,
Battering its wave-worn base ; but you might see
On the near margin many a watery glade,
Becalmed beneath some little island's lee,
All tranquil and transparent, close embayed ;
Reflecting in the deep serene and even
Each flower and herb, and every cloud of heaven ;

The painted kingfisher, the branch above her,
Stand in the steadfast mirror fixed and true ;
Anon the fitful breezes brood and hover,
Freshening the surface with a rougher hue ;
Spreading, withdrawing, pausing, passing over,
Again returning to retire anew :
So rest and motion in a narrow range,
Feasted the sight with joyous interchange.

Brother John becomes aware of the approach of the giants in time to run home and give the alarm ; and after stout resistance by the monks, the giants at length withdraw from the scene of action. It finally appears that the pagans have retired in order to make the attack upon the ladies, which had formerly been described. The ottava rima had already been used by the Scottish poet Tennant in his Anster Fair ; but it was Whistlecraft's clever combination of absurdity and sense, burlesque and real poetry in the measure, that showed Byron what an admirable instrument it was. He wrote Beppo in imitation of Frere's work, and imitated much more than the verse ; and Don Juan was a still more masterly development of the same method and measure.

His friends credit him with writing the greater part of The Loves of the Triangles in the Anti-Jacobin (see page 673), and with a share in The Knife-grinder as well as in The Rovers. His translation of The Battle of Brunanburh (1801) for Ellis's Specimens was a foretaste of his wonderful skill in this way. But Frere's most serious and permanent contribution to English literature was made in his masterly translations of the 'Frogs,' 'Acharnians,' 'Knights,' and 'Birds' of Aristophanes, privately printed at Malta in 1839, but first made known through an article by Sir G. Cornewall Lewis in the Classical Museum for 1847. It is universally admitted that these renderings—free versions rather than strict translations—are masterpieces of a difficult art, and in a specially difficult department—the transfusion into modern English verse, somewhat of the original type, of ancient Greek wit, humour, satire, rauc phraseology, ringing rhythms, and verbal felicities innumerable.

Scene from the 'Acharnians.'

Enter a MEGARIAN with his two little girls.

Megarian. Ah, there 's the Athenian market ! Heaven I say ; the welcomest sight to a Megarian. [bless it, I've look'd for it, and long'd for it, like a child For its own mother. You, my daughters dear, Disastrous offspring of a dismal sire, List to my words ; and let them sink impress'd Upon your empty stomachs ; now 's the time That you must seek a livelihood for yourselves. Therefore resolve at once, and answer me ; Will you be sold abroad, or starve at home ?

Both. Let us be sold, papa !—Let us be sold.

Meg. I say so too ; but who do ye think will purchase Such useless mischievous commodities ? However, I have a notion of my own, A true Megarian scheme ;—I mean to sell ye Disguised as pigs, with artificial pettitoes. Here, take them, and put them on. Remember now, Show yourselves off ; do credit to your breeding, Like decent pigs ; or else, by Mercury, If I'm obliged to take you back to Megara, There you shall starve far worse than heretofore. —This pair of masks too—fasten 'em on your faces, And crawl into the sack there on the ground. Mind ye—Remember—you must squeak and whine, And racket about like little roasting pigs. —And I'll call out for Diceopolis.

Hoh Diceopolis, Diceopolis !

I say, would you please to buy some pigs of mine ?

Diceopolis. What 's there ? a Megarian ?

Meg. [sneakingly]. Yes—we're come to market.

Dic. How goes it with you ?

Meg. We're all like to starve.

Dic. Well, liking is everything. If you have your That 's all in all : the likeness is a good one, [liking, A pretty likeness ! like to starve, you say, But what else are you doing ?

Meg. What we're doing ?

I left our governing people all contriving To ruin us utterly without loss of time.

Dic. It 's the only way : it will keep you out of Meddling and getting into scrapes. [mischief,

Meg. Ay, yes.

Dic. Well, what 's your other news ? How 's corn ? What price ?

Meg. Corn ? it 's above all price ; we worship it.

Dic. But salt ? You 've salt, I reckon—

Meg. Salt ? how should we ?

Have you not seized the salt pans ?

Dic. No ! nor garlic ?

Have not ye garlic ?

Meg. What do ye talk of garlic ?

As if you had not wasted and destroyed it, And grubb'd the very roots out of the ground.

Dic. Well, what have you got then ? Tell us ! Can't ye !

Meg. [in the tone of a sturdy resolute lie]. Pigs !— Pigs truly—pigs forsooth, for sacrifice.

Dic. That 's well, let 's look at 'em.

Meg. Ay, they're handsome ones ;

You may feel how heavy they age, if ye hold 'em up.

Dic. Hey day ! What 's this ? What 's here ?

Meg. A pig to be sure.

Dic. Do ye say so ? Where does it come from ?

Meg. Come ? from Megara.

What, an't it a pig ?

Dic. No truly, it does not seem so.

Meg. Did you ever hear the like ? Such an unaccountable suspicious fellow ! it is not a pig, he says ! [countable But I'll be judged ; I'll bet ye a bushel of salt, It 's what we call a natural proper pig.

Dic. Perhaps it may, but it 's a human pig.

Meg. Human ! I'm human ; and they're mine, that 's all. Whose should they be, do ye think ? so far they're human. But come, will you hear 'em squeak ?

Dic. Ay, yes, by Jove, With all my heart.

Meg. Come now, pig ! now 's the time : Remember what I told ye—squeak directly ! Squeak, can't ye ? Curse ye, what 's the matter with ye ? Squeak when I bid you, I say ; by Mercury I'll carry you back to Megara if you don't.

Daughter. Wee wee.

Meg. Do you hear the pig ?

Dic. The pig, do ye call it ? It will be a different creature before long.

Meg. It will take after the mother, like enough.

Dic. Ay, but this pig won't do for sacrifice.

Meg. Why not ? why won't it do for sacrifice ?

Dic. Imperfect ! here 's no tail !

Meg. Poh, never mind ;

It will have a tail in time, like all the rest.

But feel this other, just the fellow to it ;

With a little further keeping, it would serve

For a pretty dainty sacrifice to Venus.

Dic. You warrant 'em wean'd ? they'll feed without the mother ?

Meg. Without the mother or the father either.

Dic. But what do they like to eat ?

Meg. Just what ye give 'em ; You may ask 'em if you will.

Dic. Pig, pig !

1 Daughter. Wee wee.

Dic. Pig, are ye fond of peas ?

1 Daughter. Wee wee wee wee.

Dic. Are ye fond of figs ?

1 Daughter. Wee wee wee wee wee wee.

Dic. You little one, are you fond of figs ?

2 Daughter. Wee wee.

Dic. What a squeak was there ! they're ravenous for Go somebody, fetch out a parcel of figs [the figs ; For the little pigs ! Heh, what, they'll eat, I warrant. Lawk there, look at 'em racketing and bustling ! How they do munch and crunch ! in the name of heaven, Why, sure they can't have eaten 'em already !

Meg. [sneakingly]. Not all, there 's this one here, I took myself.

Dic. Well, faith, they're clever comical animals.

What shall I give you for 'em ? What do ye ask ?

Meg. I must have a gross of onions for this here ;

And the other you may take for a peck of salt.

Dic. I'll keep 'em ; wait a moment. [Exit,

Meg. Heaven be praised !

O blessed Mercury, if I could but manage

To make such another bargain for my wife,

I'd do it to-morrow, or my mother either.

Frere's Works (1871) have a Memoir by his nephew, Sir Bartle Frere. See also studies by Festing (1892) and Eichler (Vienna, 1905).

George Ellis (1753–1815), the son of a West Indian planter, was already writing mock-heroics about Bath society in 1777, and next year published Poetical Tales by Sir Gregory Gander, which delighted Scott and the world, and are referred to in the fifth canto of Marmion, dedicated to Ellis. The young wit, having Whig connections, was one of the most effective members of the Rolliad group, and is believed to have written the attack on Pitt, quoted at page 671; but he afterwards changed sides and was a constant contributor to the Anti-Jacobin. Attached to a diplomatic mission to the Netherlands, he wrote a history of the Dutch revolution in 1785–87, travelled in Germany in 1791, and after 1796 sat in Parliament for Seaford. His labours as the first scholarly editor of Specimens of the Early English Poets have been already commemorated in this work (Vol. I. p. 30). The first edition (1790) was greatly extended in 1801, and 1851 saw a fifth edition. His Specimens of Early English Romances (1805; 2nd ed. 1811) conferred a further favour on students of literature; and he edited Way's translations of select Fabliaux of the twelfth and thirteenth centuries (1796; 3rd ed. 1815). He was a cherished friend of Sir Walter Scott's and a faithful correspondent.

Richard Payne Knight (1750–1824), a wealthy Herefordshire squire, virtuoso, and collector of ancient coins, marbles, and bronzes, was recognised at home and abroad as a high authority on ancient art, and wrote on Greek epigraphy, the symbolism of art, and the like. For a book on the worship of Priapus he was severely handled by Mathias in The Pursuits of Literature; his didactic poem on The Progress of Civil Society gave occasion to one of the cleverest burlesques in the Anti-Jacobin; and his other tedious poem, The Landscape, came also in for much uncomplimentary criticism. He made over his collections to the British Museum.

Thomas James Mathias (1754?–1835), author of The Pursuits of Literature, was the son of a minor functionary in the queen's household, seems to have been at Eton, and was certainly educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he was distinguished as Latinist and verse writer. From the university he passed in 1782 into the queen's service, becoming her treasurer. But in broken health he went to Italy in 1815, and there (mainly about Naples) remained till his death. He was the best Italian scholar England had produced, edited Italian authors, published collections of Italian poems, translated English verse into Italian, and himself wrote Italian poems. He also wrote and published much Latin verse, and he ruined himself by a magnificent edition of Gray's works (1814). From 1780 he made himself known as a satirist in English prose and verse, mainly on the Tory side, and against Whigs in Church and State. But it was by the Pursuits of Literature, in four verse dialogues, published anonymously between 1794 and 1797 (16th ed. 1812), that he brought himself to bear on his time by audacious satire of literary personages such as Joseph Warton, Parr, Godwin, Payne Knight, and Monk Lewis—several of them victimised also by the Anti-Jacobin. Like Gifford's Baviad and Mæviad, the text was overlaid with elaborate notes; and the poem, in spite of occasional piquant and telling lines or short passages, was ere long voted unconscionable and indiscriminate in its censures and tedious on the whole, and is now little read.

Henry Grattan (1746–1820), born in Dublin, at seventeen entered Trinity College, and embraced the reforming principles of Henry Flood with such ardour that his father, the Recorder of Dublin, disinherited him. At the Middle Temple in London he neglected law for the debates in the House of Commons. In 1772 he was called to the Irish Bar, and in 1775 entered the Irish Parliament as member for Charlemont. Flood had lost his popularity by accepting office under Government, and Grattan leapt at a bound into his place, strove to secure the removal of the restrictions upon Irish trade, and next plunged into a struggle for legislative independence. When in 1782, after the great Convention at Dungannon, the Rockingham Ministry surrendered, the Irish Parliament in gratitude voted Grattan £50,000. But it proved impossible for 'Grattan's Parliament,' so little representative and so much subject to corruption, to rise to real statesmanship. Grattan devoted himself mainly to advocating, in vain, the reform of special abuses. The corruption of the Castle government, the persistent repression of the agitation for Catholic relief (which Grattan, himself a Protestant, warmly supported), and the spirit of discontent generated by the French Revolution fomented the movement of the United Irishmen. Hopeless of his policy and broken by ill-health, Grattan retired on the eve of the rebellion, but returned to take his seat for Wicklow, and bravely to combat the Bill for the Union. Four years after the Union was carried out, he was elected to Westminster as member for Malton in Yorkshire, and for Dublin in the following year. The remaining energies of his life were devoted to the cause of Catholic emancipation. In December 1819 his health began to give way; in the following May he crossed from Dublin, a dying man, to speak once more for the cause; and, dying five days after his arrival, was buried in Westminster Abbey. In April 1782, a month before the English Parliament formally recognised the independence of the Irish Parliament, Grattan began thus one of his most famous speeches:

Irish Parliamentary Independence.

I am now to address a free people: ages have passed away, and this is the first moment in which you could be distinguished by that appellation. I have spoken on the subject of your liberty so often that I have nothing to add, and have only to admire by what Heaven-directed steps you have proceeded until the whole faculty of the nation is braced up to the act of her own deliverance. I found Ireland on her knees; I watched over her with a paternal solicitude; I have traced her progress from injuries to arms, and from arms to liberty. Spirit of Swift! spirit of Molyneux! your genius has prevailed! Ireland is now a nation! in that new character I hail her! and bowing to her august presence, I say, Esto perpetua! She is no longer a wretched colony, returning thanks to her governor for his rapine, and to her king for his oppression; nor is she now a squabbling, fretful sectary, perplexing her little wits and firing her furious statutes with bigotry, sophistry, disabilities, and death, to transmit to posterity insignificance and war. Look to the rest of Europe, and contemplate yourself, and be satisfied. Holland lives on the memory of past achievements; Sweden has lost liberty; England has sullied her great name by an attempt to enslave her colonies. You are the only people—you, of the nations in Europe, are now the only people who excite admiration, and in your present conduct you not only exceed the present generation, but you equal the past. I am not afraid to turn back and look antiquity in the face: the revolution—that great event, whether you call it ancient or modern I know not, was tarnished with bigotry: the great deliverer (for such I must ever call the Prince of Nassau) was blemished with oppression; he assented to, he was forced to assent to, acts which deprived the Catholics of religious, and all the Irish of civil and commercial rights, though the Irish were the only subjects in these islands who had fought in his defence. But you have sought liberty on her own principle: see the Presbyterians of Bangor petition for the freedom of the Catholics of Munster. You, with difficulties innumerable, with dangers not a few, have done what your ancestors wished but could not accomplish, and what your posterity may preserve but will never equal; you have moulded the jarring elements of your country into a nation, and have rivalled those great and ancient commonwealths whom you were taught to admire and among whom you are now to be recorded: in this proceeding you had not the advantages which were common to other great countries; no monuments, no trophies, none of those outward and visible signs of greatness such as inspire mankind and connect the ambition of the age which is coming on with the example of that going off, and form the descent and concatenation of glory: no, you have not had any great act recorded among all your misfortunes, nor have you one public tomb to assemble the crowd, and speak to the living the language of integrity and freedom.

From the Philippic against Flood (1783).

With regard to the liberties of America, which were inseparable from ours, I will suppose this gentleman to have been an enemy decided and unreserved; that he voted against her liberty; and voted, moreover, for an address to send 4000 Irish troops to cut the throats of the Americans; that he called these butchers 'armed negotiators,' and stood with a metaphor in his mouth and a bribe in his pocket, a champion against the rights of America, the only hope of Ireland, and the only refuge of the liberties of mankind.

Thus defective in every relationship, whether to constitution, commerce, toleration, I will suppose this man to have added much private improbity to public crimes; that his probity was like his patriotism, and his honour on a level with his oath. He loves to deliver panegyrics on himself. I will interrupt him, and say: Sir, you are much mistaken if you think that your talents have been as great as your life has been reprehensible; you began your parliamentary career with an acrimony and personality which could have been justified only by a supposition of virtue: after a rank and clamorous opposition you became on a sudden silent; you were silent for seven years: you were silent on the greatest questions, and you were silent for money! In 1773, when a negotiation was pending to sell your talents and your turbulence, you absconded from your duty in parliament, you forsook your law of Poynings, you forsook the questions of economy, and abandoned all the old themes of your former declamation; you were not at that period to be found in the House; you were seen like a guilty spirit haunting the lobby of the House of Commons, watching the moment in which the question should be put, that you might vanish; you were descried with a criminal anxiety retiring from the scenes of your past glory; or you were perceived coasting the upper benches of this House like a bird of prey, with an evil aspect and a sepulchral note, meditating to pounce on its quarry. These ways—they were not the ways of honour—you practised pending a negotiation which was to end either in your sale or your sedition: the former taking place, you supported the rankest measures that ever came before Parliament, the embargo of 1776, for instance. 'O fatal embargo, that breach of law and ruin of commerce!' You supported the unparalleled profusion and jobbing of Lord Harcourt's scandalous ministry—the address to support the American war—the other address to send 4000 men, whom you had yourself declared to be necessary for the defence of Ireland, to fight against the liberties of America, to which you had declared yourself a friend;—you, Sir, who delight to utter execrations against the American commissioners of 1778, on account of their hostility to America;—you, Sir, who manufacture stage thunder against Mr Eden for his anti-American principles;—you, Sir, whom it pleases to chant a hymn to the immortal Hampden;—you, Sir, approved of the tyranny exercised against America;—and you, Sir, voted 4000 Irish troops to cut the throats of the Americans fighting for their freedom, fighting for your freedom, fighting for the great principle, liberty; but you found at last (and this should be an eternal lesson to men of your craft and cunning) that the King had only dishonoured you; the Court had bought but would not trust you; and having voted for the worst measures, you remained for seven years the creature of salary, without the confidence of Government. Mortified at the discovery, and stung by disappointment, you betake yourself to the sad expedients of duplicity; you try the sorry game of a trimmer in your progress to the acts of an incendiary; you give no honest support either to the Government or the people; you, at the most critical period of their existence, take no part, you sign no non-consumption agreement, you are no volunteer, you oppose no perpetual mutiny bill, no altered sugar bill; you declare that you lament that the declaration of right should have been brought forward; and observing with regard to prince and people the most impartial treachery and desertion, you justify the suspicion of your Sovereign by betraying the Government, as you had sold the people: until at last, by this hollow conduct and for some other steps, the result of mortified ambition, being dismissed, and another person put in your place, you fly to the ranks of the volunteers, and canvass for mutiny; you announce that the country was ruined by other men during that period in which she had been sold by you. Your logic is that the repeal of a declaratory law is not the repeal of a law at all, and the effect of that logic is an English act affecting to emancipate Ireland by exercising over her the legislative authority of the British Parliament. Such has been your conduct, and at such conduct every order of your fellow-subjects have a right to exclaim! The merchant may say to you—the constitutionalist may say to you—the American may say to you—and I, I now say, and say it to your beard: Sir, you are not an honest man.

The best collection of Grattan's Speeches is by his son, Henry Grattan, M.P. (1822), who edited his Miscellaneous Works (1822) and wrote the standard Life (1839-46). See too Lecky's Leaders of Public Opinion in Ireland (new ed. 1902), and excellent studies by R. Dunlop ('Statesmen' series, 1889) and A. E. Zimmern (1902).

William Pitt (1759-1806), second son of the great Earl of Chatham, and himself one of the chief of English statesmen, occupies also a high place among English orators. His home education (he never was at a public school) gave him a thorough knowledge of the Greek and Latin classics, while the practice of extempore translation, in which he was exercised by his tutors, fostered greatly what was doubtless the native gift of eloquence. Consequently, when he entered the House of Commons at the age of twenty-one, he was already a finished orator—not so much, according to Burke, 'a chip of the old block,' as 'the old block itself.' Fox hailed him as 'one of the first men in the House,' and in less than three years he had justified the eulogy by becoming Prime Minister. Thenceforward for more than twenty years he remained one of the great triumvirate of English parliamentary orators, along with Fox and Sheridan; for Burke had never been a really popular speaker. The oratorical duels between him and Fox, recurring almost yearly between 1783 and 1801, are among the memorable things in the history of English eloquence. Macaulay, who was certainly no Pittite, acknowledges that while he had 'less amplitude of mind and less richness of imagination than Burke, less ingenuity than Windham, less wit than Sheridan, less perfect mastery of dialectical fence and less of that highest sort of eloquence which consists of reason and passion fused together than Fox,' he was yet, 'by the unanimous judgment of those who were in the habit of listening to that remarkable race of men, placed, as a speaker, above Burke, above Windham, above Sheridan, and not below Fox.' No English Prime Minister ever quoted Latin more copiously or more happily: his thrilling citation of two beautiful Virgilian lines at the close of a great speech on the slave-trade has obtained commemoration in history. The last of all his public utterances, made in the dark days after Austerlitz and Trafalgar, and only a few weeks before his own death, is a masterpiece of brevity. 'England,' he said, 'has saved herself by her energy, and will save Europe by her example.' His parliamentary speeches, from one of which, delivered in 1785, the following extract is taken, were published in four volumes in 1806.

The King's Prerogative.

By what I am now going to say, perhaps I may subject myself to the invidious imputation of being the minister and friend of prerogative; but, Sir, notwithstanding those terms of obloquy with which I am assailed, I will not shrink from avowing myself the friend of the king's just prerogative. Prerogative, Sir, has been justly called a part of the rights of the people, and sure I am it is a part of their rights which the people were never more disposed to defend, of which they never were more jealous than at this hour. Grant only this, that this House has a negative in the appointment of ministers, and you transmute the executive power into this House. Sir, I shall call upon gentlemen to speak out; let them not come to resolution after resolution without stating the grounds on which they act; for there is nothing more dangerous among mixed powers than that one branch of the legislature should attack another by means of hints and auxiliary arguments, urged only in debate, without daring to avow the direct grounds on which they go, and without stating in plain terms on the face of their resolutions, what are their motives, and what are their principles which lead them to come to such resolutions. Above all, Sir, let this House beware of suffering any individual to involve his own cause, and to interweave his own interests in the resolutions of the House of Commons. The dignity of the House is for ever appealed to: let us beware that it is not the dignity of any set of men: let us beware that personal prejudices have no share in deciding these great constitutional questions. The right honourable gentleman is possessed of those enchanting arts whereby he can give grace to deformity; he holds before your eyes a beautiful and delusive image; he pushes it forward to your observation; but as sure as you embrace it, the pleasing vision will vanish, and this fair phantom of liberty will be succeeded by anarchy, confusion, and ruin to the constitution. For in truth, Sir, if the constitutional independence of the crown is thus reduced to the very verge of annihilation, where is the boasted equipoise of the constitution? Where is that balance among the three branches of the legislature which our ancestors have measured out to each with so much precision? Where is the independence—nay, where is even the safety of any one prerogative of the crown, or even of the crown itself, if its prerogative of naming ministers is to be usurped by this House, or if (which is precisely the same thing) its nomination of them is to be negated by us without stating any one ground of distrust in the men, and without suffering ourselves to have any experience of their measures? Dreadful, therefore, as the conflict is, my conscience, my duty, my fixed regard for the constitution of our ancestors, maintain me still in this arduous situation. It is not a proud contempt or defiance of the constitutional resolutions of this House; it is no personal point of honour; much less is it any lust of power that makes me still cling to office: the situation of the times requires of me, and I will add, the country calls aloud to me, that I should defend this castle; and I am determined, therefore, I will defend it.

Lord Stanhope's Life of Pitt (4th ed. 1879) is the best biography; but see also Lord Macaulay's Encyclopædia Britannica article and monographs by Rosebery (reprinted 1914), Whibley (1906), and J. H. Rose (1911-12).

John Philpot Curran (1750-1817), another great Irish orator, was born at Newmarket in County Cork, and was far from studious at Trinity College, Dublin. From the Middle Temple in London he was called to the Irish Bar in 1775; and his wit and vehement eloquence soon brought him eminence and a large practice. K.C. and a member of the Irish Parliament, he was a strong supporter of Grattan, but was less successful in the House than with the juries, and his sarcastic speeches brought on him no less than five duels. A Protestant himself, he worked hard for the Catholic cause. Both before and after the Irish rebellion of 1798 he was powerful in his defence of those tried for sedition or treason, and his speeches were many of them masterly. He steadily opposed the Union. After Pitt's death and after the accession of the Whigs, Curran was Master of the Rolls in Ireland (1806-14). Thurlow's one famous speech was not more popular or effective than one sentence of Curran's in his speech in defence of Archibald Hamilton Rowan, prosecuted by the Government for a seditious libel in 1792. The libel contained this declaration: 'In four words lies all our power—universal emancipation and representative legislature.' 'I speak,' said Curran, 'in the spirit of the British law, which makes liberty commensurate with and inseparable from British soil; which proclaims even to the stranger and sojourner, the moment he sets his foot upon British earth, that the ground on which he treads is holy, and consecrated by the genius of Universal Emancipation. No matter in what language his doom may have been pronounced; no matter what complexion incompatible with freedom an Indian or an African sun may have burnt upon him; no matter in what disastrous battle his liberty may have been cloven down; no matter with what solemnities he may have been devoted upon the altar of slavery; the first moment he touches the sacred soil of Britain, the altar and the god sink together in the dust; his soul walks abroad in her own majesty; his body swells beyond the measure of his chains that burst from around him, and he stands redeemed, regenerated, and disenthralled by the irresistible genius of Universal Emancipation.' This memorable utterance may have been suggested by the passage on slavery in Cowper's Task (quoted above at page 607), in which occur the lines:

Slaves cannot breathe in England; if their lungs
Receive our air, that moment they are free;
They touch our country, and their shackles fall.

But oddly enough British writers seem never to remember that this virtue is not peculiar to British soil. Thus the eminent Scottish jurist, Lord Fountainhall, who was in 1665-66 studying law in Paris, records in his Diary the impression made on him by the fact that this maxim as to a slave was true of France: 'Be the lawes of France, let him be a Turk, slave to a Venitian or

Spaniard, no sooner sets he his foote on French ground but ipso facto he is free.'

William Cobbett (1763-1835), one of the most skilful and effective writers of strong, racy English, was born at Farnham in Surrey, and brought up as a ploughman. In 1783 he came to London and enlisted; for six years (1785-91) he served as sergeant-major in New Brunswick. He entered on his literary career in Philadelphia as a political pamphleteer under the name of Peter Porcupine, and returning to England in 1800, continued to write as a decided loyalist and High-Churchman. But having, as is supposed, received some slight from Pitt, he attacked the Ministry with extraordinary bitterness in his Weekly Political

WILLIAM COBBETT.

From an Engraving by W. Ward after J. R. Smith.

Register. Tory first, it altered its politics in 1804, till at last it 'became the most fierce and determined opponent of the Government, and the most uncompromising champion of Radicalism.' A great lover of the country, Cobbett settled at Botley in Hampshire, where he planted, farmed, and went in for manly sports; a true soldiers' friend, he got two years in Newgate (1810-12), with a fine of £1000, for denouncing the flogging of militiamen under guard of German mercenaries. In 1817 money muddles and dread of a second imprisonment drove him once more across the Atlantic. He farmed in Long Island, writing all the while for the Register, till in 1819 he ventured back again, and came bringing Tom Paine's bones. Botley had to be sold, but he started a seed-farm at Kensington; and bent now on entering Parliament, stood for Coventry (1821) and Preston (1826). Both times he failed; but his ill-advised trial for sedition (1831) was followed next year by his return for Oldham to the first Reformed Parliament. His career there was signalled chiefly by a crack-brained attack on Peel; the late hours were too much for him, and three years later he died at Normanby farm near Guildford, his last home.

Cobbett's inconsistency as a political writer was so broad and undisguised as to become proverbial. He had made the whole round of politics, from ultra-Toryism to ultra-Radicalism, and had praised and abused nearly every public man and measure for thirty years. He loathed Whigs and 'mock gentlefolks,' 'loan-jobbers, stock-jobbers, Jews, and taxeaters of all kinds;' nor did he speak gently of 'great captains,' admirals, or parsons—'deans, I believe, or prebends (sic), or something of that sort.' He was always confident and boastful, often coarse and virulent; and one becomes tired of having his pet prejudices cited as maxims of universal acceptance, of hearing London always referred to as 'the Wen,' and of seeing the poverty of the labourers attributed simply to the existence of paper money. Colonies such as New Brunswick are a mere source of aimless expense, wildernesses useless save as places to which to send barrack-masters, chaplains, and commissioners at the public expense. So far from the population of England having increased during the last twenty years, as the census made out, it was evident, he said, to any rational mind, from deserted villages and empty country churches, 'that in the time of the Plantagenets England was out of all comparison more populous than it is now.' He truly sympathised with the poor, and denounced the Reformation for having made over the monastic provision for them to greedy nobles. He had a keen eye, a powerful intellect, and a sharp and frank tongue. And he loved to write of the meadows and green lanes of England, rejoiced in noble trees (not 'nasty firs') and beautiful landscapes, pined in America for the English singing birds, and keenly felt the poetry of nature. The idiomatic strength, copiousness, and purity of his English style are patent, and he is often extraordinarily happy in his natural descriptions. But his perversity in literary matters proceeded at least as much from obtuseness as from love of paradox. 'It has become of late years the fashion to extol the virtues of potatoes as it has been to admire the writings of Milton and Shakespeare.' He wonders how Paradise Lost could have been tolerated by a people conversant with astronomy, navigation, and chemistry. And when in his old age he did set himself to try and read Shakespeare, he found some things to please him, but much more he did not like at all; and concludes, 'in short, I despised the book, and wondered how any one could like it.' Jeremy Bentham said of him: 'He is a man filled with odium humani generis; his malevolence and lying are beyond anything.' The philosopher (also a Radical) did not make sufficient allowance for Cobbett, who acted on momentary impulse, and never calculated consequences to himself or others. No man in England was better known than Cobbett, down to the minutest circumstance in his character, habits, and opinions. He wrote freely of himself as he did of his fellows; and in all his writings there was overflowing natural freshness, liveliness, and vigour. He had the truly great writer's power of making every one who read him feel and understand completely what he himself felt and described.

Cobbett's unsurpassed Rural Rides (new edition, with notes by Pitt Cobbett, 1885) were a reprint (1830) from the Register, and followed or were followed by the excellent and entertaining English Grammar (1818), the savage History of the Reformation in England and Ireland (1824-27), the Woodlands (1825), the shrewd, homely Advice to Young Men (1830), A Legacy to Parsons, Cobbett's Tour in Scotland, A History of George IV., and some thirty other works; and he was the originator of the publications ultimately known as Hansard's Debates (1803; passed to Hansard in 1812) and Howell's State Trials (1809).

The first extract is from the introduction to the Reformation, the following from the Rural Rides and other reminiscences.

A Valediction.

Here I had signed my name, and was about to put the date. It was on its way from my mind to my hand, when I stopped my hand all at once and exclaimed: 'Good God! the ninth of July! the anniversary of my sentence of two years' imprisonment in a felon's gaol, with a fine of a thousand pounds to the King, and, at the end of the two years, with seven years' bail, myself in three thousand pounds and two sureties in a thousand pounds each; and all this monstrous punishment for having expressed my indignation at Englishmen having been flogged, in the heart of England, under a guard of German troops! Good God!' exclaimed I again. 'What! am I, on the anniversary of that day, which called forth the exultation of the Hampshire parsons, who (though I had never committed any offence, in private life, against any one of them) crowed out aloud, in the fulness of their joy, "Ha! he's gone for ever! He will never trouble us any more!" and who, in a spirit truly characteristic of their corps, actually had, as a standing toast, "Disgrace to the Memory of Cobbett."—What!' exclaimed I again, 'and am I, on the anniversary of that very day, putting the finishing hand; yea, sending from under my fingers to the press, the last, the very last words, the completing words, the closing point, of a work which does the job for them and for all their tribe; of the former part of which work I, myself, have sold forty thousand copies, containing six hundred and forty thousand Numbers; and which work is now sold in English, in two Stereotyped Editions in the United States of America; which work has been published at Madrid and at New York in Spanish, at Paris, Geneva, and Alost in French, at Cologne in German, and at Rome in Italian; and all this took place just about sixteen years after these Hampshire parsons had taken for a standing toast: "Disgrace to the Memory of Cobbett!"' And, then, feeling health and vigour in every vein and in every nerve; seeing, lying before me, manuscript (equal to twenty pages of print) written by me this very day; knowing the effects which, in the end, that manuscript must have on these parsons, and the great good that it must do to the nation; reflecting, feeling, seeing, knowing, thus it is that I, in justice to our pious, sincere, brave, and wise forefathers, and in compassion to my suffering countrymen; and to the children of us all, send this little volume forth to the world.

A Hampshire Hanger.

At Bower I got instructions to go to Hawkey, but accompanied with most earnest advice not to go that way, for that it was impossible to get along. The roads were represented as so bad, the floods so much out, the hills and bogs so dangerous, that really I began to doubt; and if I had not been brought up amongst the clays of the Holt Forest and the bogs of the neighbouring heaths, I should certainly have turned off to my right, to go over Hindhead, great as was my objection to going that way. 'Well, then,' said my friend at Bower, 'if you will go that way, by G—, you must go down "Hawkey Hanger;" of which he then gave me such a description! But even this I found to fall short of the reality. I inquired simply whether people were in the habit of going down it; and the answer being in the affirmative, on I went through green lanes and bridle-ways till I came to the turnpike road from Petersfield to Winchester, which I crossed, going into a narrow and almost untrodden green lane, on the side of which I found a cottage. Upon my asking the way to Hawkey, the woman at the cottage said, 'Right up the lane, sir: you'll come to a hanger presently: you must take care, sir: you can't ride down: will your horses go alone?'

On we trotted up this pretty green lane; and, indeed, we had been coming gently and generally uphill for a good while. The lane was between highish banks and pretty high stuff growing on the banks, so that we could see no distance from us, and could receive not the smallest hint of what was so near at hand. The lane had a little turn towards the end; so that out we came, all in a moment, at the very edge of the hanger! And never in all my life was I so surprised and so delighted! I pulled up my horse, and sat and looked; and it was like looking from the top of a castle down into the sea, except that the valley was land and not water. I looked at my servant, to see what effect this unexpected sight had upon him. His surprise was as great as mine, though he had been bred amongst the North Hampshire hills. Those who had so strenuously dwelt on the dirt and dangers of this route had said not a word about beauties, the matchless beauties of the scenery. These hangers are woods on the sides of very steep hills. The trees and underwood hang, in some sort, to the ground, instead of standing on it. Hence these places are called Hangers. From the summit of that which I had now to descend, I looked down upon the villages of Hawkey, Greatham, Selborne and some others.

From the south-east, round, southward, to the north-west, the main valley has cross-valleys running out of it, the hills on the sides of which are very steep, and, in many parts, covered with wood. The hills that form these cross-valleys run out into the main valley, like piers into the sea. Two of these promontories, of great height, are on the west side of the main valley, and were the first objects that struck my sight when I came to the edge of the hanger, which was on the south. The ends of these promontories are nearly perpendicular, and their tops so high in the air that you cannot look at the village below without something like a feeling of apprehension. The leaves are all off, the hop-poles are in stack, the fields have little verdure; but, while the spot is beautiful beyond description even now, I must leave to imagination to suppose what it is when the trees and hangers and hedges are in leaf, the corn waving, the meadows bright, and the hops upon the poles!

From the south-west, round, eastward, to the north, lie the heaths, of which Woolmer Forest makes a part, and these go gradually rising up to Hindhead, the crown of which is to the north-west, leaving the rest of the circle (the part from north to north-west) to be occupied by a continuation of the valley towards Headley, Binstead, Frensham and the Holt Forest. So that even the contrast in the view from the top of the hanger is as great as can possibly be imagined. Men, however, are not to have such beautiful views as this without some trouble. We had had the view; but we had to go down the hanger. We had, indeed, some roads to get along as well as we could afterwards; but we had to get down the hanger first. The horses took the lead, and crept partly down upon their feet and partly upon their hocks. It was extremely slippery too; for the soil is a sort of marl, or, as they call it here, maume, or mame, which is when wet very much like grey soap. In such a case it was likely that I should keep in the rear, which I did, and I descended by taking hold of the branches of the underwood, and so letting myself down. When we got to the bottom I bade my man, when he should go back to Uphusband, tell the people there that Ashmanworth Lane is not the worst piece of road in the world. Our worst, however, was not come yet, nor had we by any means seen the most novel sights.

After crossing a little field and going through a farm-yard, we came into a lane, which was at once road and river. We found a hard bottom, however; and when we got out of the water, we got into a lane with high banks. The banks were quarries of white stone, like Portland-stone, and the bed of the road was of the same stone; and the rains having been heavy for a day or two before, the whole was as clean and as white as the steps of a fund-holder or dead-weight doorway in one of the Squares of the Wen. Here were we, then, going along a stone road with stone banks, and yet the underwood and trees grew well upon the tops of the banks. In the solid stone beneath us there were a horse-track and wheel-tracks, the former about three and the latter about six inches deep. How many many ages it must have taken the horses' feet, the wheels, and the water to wear down this stone so as to form a hollow way! The horses seemed alarmed at their situation; they trod with fear; but they took us along very nicely, and at last got us safe into the indescribable dirt and mire of the road from Hawkey Green to Greatham. Here the bottom of all the land is this solid white stone, and the top is that mame which I have before described. The hop-roots penetrate down into this stone. How deep the stone may be I know not; but when I came to look up at the end of one of the piers, or promontories, mentioned above, I found that it was all of this same stone.

A Tavern Dinner.

Having laid my plan to sleep at Andover last night, I went with two Farnham friends, Messrs Knowles and West, to dine at the ordinary at the George Inn, which is kept by one Sutton, a rich old fellow, who wore a round-skirted sleeved fustian waistcoat, with a dirty white apron tied round his middle, and with no coat on; having a look the eagerest and the sharpest that I ever saw in any set of features in my whole life-time; having an air of authority and of mastery which, to a stranger, as I was, seemed quite incompatible with the meanness of his dress and the vulgarity of his manners: and there being, visible to every beholder, constantly going on in him a pretty even contest between the servility of avarice and the insolence of wealth. A great part of the farmers and other fair-people having gone off home, we found preparations made for dining only about ten people. But after we sat down, and it was seen that we designed to dine, guests came in apace, the preparations were augmented, and as many as could dine came and dined with us.

After the dinner was over, the room became fuller and fuller; guests came in from the other inns, where they had been dining, till at last the room became as full as possible in every part, the door being opened, the doorway blocked up, and the stairs leading to the room crammed from bottom to top. In this state of things, Mr Knowles, who was our chairman, gave my health, which, of course, was followed by a speech; and, as the reader will readily suppose, to have an opportunity of making a speech was the main motive for my going to dine at an inn, at any hour, and especially at seven o'clock at night. In this speech I, after descanting on the present devastating ruin, and on those successive acts of the Ministers and the parliament by which such ruin had been produced; after remarking on the shuffling, the tricks, the contrivances from 1797 up to last March, I proceeded to offer to the company my reasons for believing that no attempt would be made to relieve the farmers and others, by putting out the paper-money again, as in 1822, or by a bank-restriction. Just as I was stating these my reasons, on a prospective matter of such deep interest to my hearers, amongst whom were land-owners, land-renters, cattle and sheep dealers, hop and cheese producers and merchants, and even one, two, or more country bankers; just as I was engaged in stating my reasons for my opinion on a matter of such vital importance to the parties present, who were all listening to me with the greatest attention; just at this time a noise was heard, and a sort of row was taking place in the passage, the cause of which was, upon inquiry, found to be no less a personage than our landlord, our host Sutton, who, it appeared, finding that my speech-making had cut off, or at least suspended, all intercourse between the dining, now become a drinking, room and the bar; who, finding that I had been the cause of a great 'restriction in the exchange' of our money for his 'neat' 'genuine' commodities downstairs, and being, apparently, an ardent admirer of the 'liberal' system of 'free trade'; who, finding, in short, or rather supposing, that if my tongue were not stopped from running, his taps would be, had, though an old man, fought, or, at least, forced his way up the thronged stairs and through the passage and doorway, into the room, and was (with what breath the struggle had left him) beginning to bawl out to me, when some one called to him, and told him that he was causing an interruption, to which he answered, that that was what he had come to do! And then he went on to say, in so many words, that my speech injured his sale of liquor!

The disgust and abhorrence which such conduct could not fail to excite produced, at first, a desire to quit the room and the house, and even a proposition to that effect. But, after a minute or so to reflect, the company resolved not to quit the room, but to turn him out of it, who had caused the interruption; and the old fellow, finding himself tackled, saved the labour of shoving, or kicking, him out of the room, by retreating out of the doorway with all the activity of which he was master. After this I proceeded with my speech-making; and, this being ended, the great business of the evening, namely, drinking, smoking, and singing, was about to be proceeded in, by a company who had just closed an arduous and anxious week, who had before them a Sunday morning to sleep in, and whose wives were, for the far greater part, at a convenient distance. An assemblage of circumstances more auspicious to 'free trade' in the 'neat' and 'genuine' has seldom occurred! But, now behold, the old fustian-jacketed fellow, whose head was, I think, powdered, took it into that head not only to lay 'restrictions' upon trade, but to impose an absolute embargo; cut off entirely all supplies whatever from his bar to the room, as long as I remained in that room. A message to this effect from the old fustian man having been, through the waiter, communicated to Mr Knowles, and he having communicated it to the company, I addressed the company in nearly these words: 'Gentlemen, born and bred, as you know I was, on the borders of this county, and fond, as I am, of bacon, Hampshire hogs have, with me, always been objects of admiration rather than of contempt; but that which has just happened here induces me to observe that this feeling of mine has been confined to hogs of four legs. For my part, I like your company too well to quit it. I have paid this fellow six shillings for the wing of a fowl, a bit of bread, and a pint of small beer. I have a right to sit here; I want no drink, and those who do, being refused it here, have a right to send to other houses for it, and to drink it here.'

However, Mammon soon got the upper hand downstairs, all the fondness for 'free trade' returned, and up came the old fustian-jacketed fellow, bringing pipes, tobacco, wine, grog, sling, and seeming to be as pleased as if he had just sprung a mine of gold! Nay, he soon after this came into the room with two gentlemen, who had come to him to ask where I was. He actually came up to me, making me a bow, and, telling me that those gentlemen wished to be introduced to me, he, with a fawning look, laid his hand upon my knee! 'Take away your paw,' said I, and, shaking the gentlemen by the hand, I said, 'I am happy to see you, gentlemen, even though introduced by this fellow.' Things now proceeded without interruption; songs, toasts, and speeches filled up the time, until half-past two o'clock this morning, though in the house of a landlord who receives the sacrament, but who, from his manifestly ardent attachment to the 'liberal principles' of 'free trade,' would, I have no doubt, have suffered us, if we could have found money and throats and stomachs, to sit and sing and talk and drink until two o'clock of a Sunday afternoon instead of two o'clock of a Sunday morning. It was not politics; it was not personal dislike to me; for the fellow knew nothing of me. It was, as I told the company, just this: he looked upon their bodies as so many gutters to drain off the contents of his taps, and upon their purses as so many small heaps from which to take the means of augmenting his great one; and, finding that I had been, no matter how, the cause of suspending this work of 'reciprocity,' he wanted, and, no matter how, to restore the reciprocal system to motion. All that I have to add is this: that the next time this old sharp-looking fellow gets six shillings from me for a dinner, he shall, if he choose, cook me, in any manner that he likes, and season me with hand so unsparring as to produce in the feeders thirst unquenchable.

Then and Now.

After living within a few hundred yards of Westminster Hall, and the Abbey Church, and the Bridge, and looking from my own windows into St James's Park, all other buildings and spots appear mean and insignificant. I went to-day to see the house I formerly occupied. How small! It is always thus: the words large and small are carried about with us in our minds, and we forget real dimensions. The idea, such as it was received, remains during our absence from the object. When I returned to England in 1880, after an absence, from the country parts of it, of sixteen years, the trees, the hedges, even the parks and woods, seemed so small! It made me laugh to hear little gutters that I could jump over called rivers! The Thames was but a 'creek'! But when, in about a month after my arrival in London, I went to Farnham, the place of my birth, what was my surprise! Everything was become so pitifully small! I had to cross, in my post-chaise, the long and dreary heath of Bagshot; then, at the end of it, to mount a hill called Hungry Hill; and from that hill I knew that I should look down into the beautiful and fertile vale of Farnham. My heart fluttered with impatience, mixed with a sort of fear, to see all the scenes of my childhood; for I had learned before the death of my father and mother. There is a hill not far from the town, called Crooksbury Hill, which rises up out of a flat in the form of a cone, and is planted with Scotch fir-trees. Here I used to take the eggs and young ones of crows and magpies. This hill was a famous object in the neighbourhood. It served as the superlative degree of height. 'As high as Crooksbury Hill' meant, with us, the utmost degree of height. Therefore the first object that my eyes sought was this hill. I could not believe my eyes! Literally speaking, I for a moment thought the famous hill removed, and a little heap put in its stead; for I had seen in New Brunswick a single rock, or hill of solid rock, ten times as big, and four or five times as high! The post-boy going down-hill, and not a bad road, whisked me in a few minutes to the Bush Inn, from the garden of which I could see the prodigious sand-hill where I had begun my gardening works. What a nothing! But now came rushing into my mind all at once my pretty little garden, my little blue smock-frock, my little nailed shoes, my pretty pigeons that I used to feel out of my hands, the last kind words and tears of my gentle and tender-hearted and affectionate mother! I hastened back into the room. If I had looked a moment longer I should have dropped. When I came to reflect, what a change! I looked down at my dress. What a change! What scenes I had gone through! How altered my state! I had dined the day before at a secretary of state's in company with Mr Pitt, and had been waited upon by men in gaudy liveries! I had had nobody to assist me in the world. No teachers of any sort. Nobody to shelter me from the consequence of bad, and no one to counsel me to good behaviour. I felt proud. The distinctions of rank, birth, and wealth all became nothing in my eyes; and from that moment—less than a month after my arrival in England—I resolved never to bend before them.

On Field-sports.

Taking it for granted, then, that sportsmen are as good as other folks on the score of humanity, the sports of the field, like everything else done in the fields, tend to produce or preserve health. I prefer them to all other pastime, because they produce early rising; because they have a tendency to lead young men into virtuous habits. It is where men congregate that the vices haunt. A hunter or a shooter may also be a gambler and a drinker; but he is less likely to be fond of the two latter if he be fond of the former. Boys will take to something in the way of pastime; and it is better that they take to that which is innocent, healthy, and manly, than that which is vicious, unhealthy, and effeminate.

A new edition of Selections from Cobbett's Political Works, in 6 vols., was issued by his son (2 vols. 1848); Rural Rides was reprinted in 1930. See Memoirs by E. Smith (2 vols. 1878), E. I. Carlyle (1904), Lewis Melville (2 vols. 1913), G. D. N. Cole (1924).

Henry James Pye (1745-1813), poetaster and police magistrate, has for more than a hundred years been a standing joke—an unhappy fate he would doubtless have escaped had he not had the fortune to be made poet-laureate; for the 'poetical Pye,' as Sir Walter called him, was, to quote an editorial note to the Vision of Judgment, 'eminently respectable in everything but his poetry.' 'That bad eminence' was not, like Satan's, due to merit, nor was it so much owing to his unequalled eminence in badness as to his being raised to official literary eminence in spite of the admitted badness of his poetry. Born in London, he studied at Magdalen College, Oxford, and inherited from his father great estates in Berkshire, and even greater debts. He sat in Parliament for the county from 1784 to 1790, had meanwhile to sell his property, and was glad in 1792 to obtain the post of police magistrate for Westminster, as forty-four years earlier Fielding had been. From his youth he had been ambitious to shine as a poet, and while at Oxford printed a birthday ode to the Prince of Wales. When in 1790 Pitt appointed him laureate, he had published several 'poetical essays' (on Beauty, Amusement, &c.), and poems on Farringdon Hill, The Progress of Refinement, on shooting, and even on ballooning! (Ærophonion)—banal subjects mostly, and all in a hopelessly banal style, though his Six Odes from Pindar were respectable, like his translation of Aristotle's Poetics. Hence the appointment to the laureateship was the signal for an outburst of mirth, scorn, and witticism at the laureate's expense, renewed from time to time on the regular appearance of royal birthday odes and laureate's verses to order. Pye translated from Tyrtæus and the Homeric Hymns; wrote a Carmen Seculare for the year 1800; and in 1801 produced his epic Alfred, deserving by its six books' length to rank as his magnum opus. It is hardly remembered that he was also a playwright, his tragedies of The Siege of Meaux and Adelaide having been produced (with small success) in 1794 and 1800; in A Prior Claim, a comedy, he collaborated with his son-in-law. The Inquisitor, published in 1798, was an adaptation from the German, but was anticipated by Holcroft's rendering of the same original.

His Comments on the Commentators of Shakespear commend not too enthusiastically Shakespeare's works, 'the perusal of which, through the course of my life, has been a favourite amusement in my hours of leisure.' Shakespeare is notoriously very careless as to the unities and probabilities; is unequalled in the terrific and sublime, but 'does not possess the power of Otway and many inferior poets of exciting pity.' 'He highly possesses all the sublimity, the variety, the accurate description, and the scenery independent of the representation, of the epopee, both serious and comic united.' He excels in certain of the virtues of the 'ethic poet' and of the lyric poet, but 'sometimes swells his sublime to the bombast, and sometimes sinks his humour to buffoonery.' The chief faults of his commentators 'arise from a desire to say everything they can say, not only on the passage commented on, but on everything that has been said in the comment;' and Pye thereupon proceeds in 350 pages to add his comments to those of Malone and Steevens, pointing out the obvious superfluity of so many of them. Probably Pye's most popular work was his Summary of the Duties of a Justice of Peace out of Sessions, which, published in 1808, reached a fourth edition in 1827.

As laureate, Pye succeeded Warton, held the office twenty-three years, and was himself succeeded by Southey. It was his curious function by hardly interrupted versification to connect the beginning of George III.'s reign and the creative period of the nineteenth century. He represents nobody but himself, and happily he exerted no influence; but 'when the Pye was opened,' to quote one of the many bad jokes made at his expense—when he began to publish poems, Boswell had not yet discovered Johnson, Goldsmith had not printed any of the books by which his name is known; and when Pye's mill ceased producing, Coleridge and Wordsworth, Scott and Byron, had established their name and fame as representative poets.

It was in the fateful year 1801 that Pye produced his magnum opus, a monumental epic on Alfred, his trials and triumphs, of more than four thousand decasyllabic rhyming lines, distributed into six books, and magnificently printed in a splendid quarto. Written in the last years of the eighteenth century for the inauguration of the nineteenth, and issued just when the union with Ireland had come into force, the poem naturally adopted a strongly unionist tone, and indulged in roseate hopes for the newly constituted United Kingdom and empire, which, if not justified by the event exactly as was forecast, have yet been in other respects more than fulfilled. Relying more on creative imagination than even on the most fabulous of the Scottish historians, Pye makes Alfred in his dark days come, a suppliant for help, to Gregory of Scotland; and the issue of Alfred's crowning mercy, the defeat of the Danes at Ethandun, is largely due to the Scottish allies, with whom the poet, still more unhistorically, makes an Irish and a Welsh contingent co-operate. The services in the field of the remaining section of the Celtic fringe are not recognised; but, to atone for this, Pye gives 'a Cornubian bard' an important share in the proceedings of the day. On the arrival, somewhat unexpected, of the Scottish, Welsh, and Irish armies, the English are not a little gratified at these convenient additions to their fighting strength:

Wondering, they see upon the aerial brow
Cambria's and Caledonia's banners flow. . . .
Here crowned with recent conquest to the skies
The snow-white steed in Saxon banners flies;
There Cambria's griffin on the azure field
In snaky volumes writhes around the shield;
And Scotia's lion, proud, erect, and bold,
Rears high his irritable crest in gold.
Gold too her harp and strung with silver wire,
Erin her arms displays with kindred fire,
And Britain's sister isles in Alfred's cause conspire.

Alfred fully recognised the importance of having all the peoples of the British islands united against outlandish invaders and foes:

My faithful subjects and my brave allies,
All equal heirs of Albion's fostering skies,
Nor peace nor liberty can Britain know
But from the fall of yon injurious foe. . . .
And ye from Cambria's hills who join our band,
From Caledonia's rocks and Erin's strand,
Generous and brave compeers! O now be shewn
The only strife that future times shall own.

In the ensuing battle the various contingents behave with equal bravery:

Here Caledonia's hardy mountaineers
Lift the broad targe, there mark her lowland spears;
While Cambria's and Ierne's warriors brave
With lighter arms

do their duty on this memorable day. Donald, the Scottish prince, dies gloriously at the hands of the Danish Hubba while in the act of saving Alfred's life. And when the decisive battle of Ethandun—Pye rightly identifies it with Eddington—crushed the foe 'in the dire blazonry of Danish gore,' and Guthrum had made absolute surrender, then after all was over and much speech-making satisfactorily accomplished, the 'Cornubian Bard'—so that the Saxons and the other Celts might not forget the old British kingdom of Cornwall or West Waies—has a long and important statement to make, winding up with a highly optimistic prophetic vision, which might be regarded as a complete programme of enlightened Unionism plus Imperialism. Even if we date the vision in 1801, rather than in 871, it seems well worth quoting (with Pye's own capitals):

Now learn events yet unrevealed that lie
In the dark bosom of futurity.
As my delighted eyes in yon firm line
With friendly folds see Albion's banners join,
I view them in prophetic vision shewn
United subjects of a mighty throne ;
See Cambria's, Caledonia's, Anglia's name
Blended and lost in Britain's prouder fame.
And ye, fair Erin's sons, though Ocean's tide
From Britain's shores your kindred shores divide,
That tide shall bear your mingled flags unfurl'd
A mutual barrier from an envying world ;
While the same waves that hostile inroad awe
The sister isles to closer compact draw,
Waft Friendship's intercourse and Plenty's stores
From Shannon's brink to Humber's distant shores.
Each separate interest, separate right shall cease,
Link'd in eternal amity and peace,
While Concord blesses with celestial smiles
THE FAVOURED EMPIRE OF THE BRITISH ISLES.

Robert Bloomfield (1766–1823), author of The Farmer's Boy, was born at Honington near Bury St Edmunds. His father, a tailor, died whilst the poet was a child, and at eleven he was placed under his uncle, a farmer. He was too feeble and diminutive for field-labour, and four years later he joined an elder brother in London, to learn the trade of shoemaker; but his country service furnished materials for his Farmer's Boy, and gave reality to his descriptions. But it was in the shoemaker's garret that his poetry first came to the birth; and it was Capell Lofft, the literary lawyer and Suffolk squire, to whom the manuscript was shown after rejection by several London booksellers, who introduced it to the world and befriended the writer in many ways. At this time Bloomfield was thirty-two years of age, and having married in 1790, had three children. The Farmer's Boy (1800) straightway became popular, and was even translated into French and Italian (part of it into Latin also); 26,000 copies went off in less than three years; and the Duke of Grafton settled on its author a shilling a day, and got him a post (1802) in the Seal Office, which he soon resigned. In 1802 Bloomfield published Rural Tales; to these succeeded Wild Flowers (1806), The Banks of the Wye (1811), May-day with the Muses (1822), &c. He made Æolian harps; he engaged in the bookselling business, but was notably unlucky; and latterly, half-blind and irritable almost to madness, he lived at Shefford in Bedfordshire. Christopher North praised The Soldier's Home as no whit inferior to Burns's

Soldier's Return; Charles Lamb, on the other hand, tried the Farmer's Boy, but found it unappetising; and later generations have inclined rather to Lamb's than to Christopher's view. The smoothness and correctness, good feeling and good taste, of the peasant-poet's verses are remarkable; fire and fervour, passion and power, are usually lacking; the descriptions, if true to nature, are often tame and tedious. Yet he sometimes has admirable passages, and occasionally noteworthy sentences and phrases, such as: 'If fields are prisons, where is Liberty?' 'And strangers tell of three times skimmed sky-blue;' 'What trouble waits upon a casual frown.' Bloomfield's name will survive as a marvel of self-culture when his poetry is unread and forgotten. Of the following extracts the first two are from the Farmer's Boy, which falls into four parts, one for each of the seasons; the others from May-day with the Muses.

The Invocation.

O come, blest Spirit! whatso'er thou art,
Thou kindling warmth that hover'st round my heart,
Sweet inmate, hail! thou source of sterling joy,
That poverty itself cannot destroy,
Be thou my Muse, and faithful still to me,
Retrace the paths of wild obscurity.
No deeds of arms my humble lines rehearse;
No Alpine wonders thunder through my verse,
The roaring cataract, the snow-topt hill,
Inspiring awe till breath itself stands still:
Nature's sublimer scenes ne'er charmed mine eyes,
Nor science led me through the boundless skies;
From meaner objects far my raptures flow;
O point these raptures! bid my bosom glow!
And lead my soul to ecstasies of praise
For all the blessings of my infant days!
Bear me through regions where gay Fancy dwells,
But mould to Truth's fair form what memory tells.

Live, trifling incidents, and grace my song,
That to the humblest menial belong:
To him whose drudgery unheeded goes,
His joys unreckoned, as his cares or woes;
Though joys and cares in every path are sown,
And youthful minds have feelings of their own,
Quick springing sorrows transient as the dew,
Delights from trifles, trifles ever new.
'Twas thus with Giles: meek, fatherless, and poor:
Labour his portion, but he felt no more;
No stripes, no tyranny his steps pursued;
His life was constant, cheerful servitude:
Strange to the world, he wore a bashful look,
The fields his study, nature was his book;
And as revolving seasons changed the scene
From heat to cold, tempestuous to serene,
Through every change still varied his employ,
Yet each new duty brought its share of joy.

Harvest-home.

A glorious sight, if glory dwells below,
Where Heaven's munificence makes all the show
O'er every field and golden prospect found,
That glads the ploughman's Sunday morning's round,
When on some eminence he takes his stand,
To judge the smiling produce of the land.

Here Vanity slinks back, her head to hide :
 What is there here to flatter human pride ?
 The towering fabric, or the dome's loud roar,
 And steadfast columns may astonish more,
 Where the charmed gazer long delighted stays,
 Yet traced but to the architect the praise ;
 Whilst here, the veriest clown that treads the sod,
 Without one scruple gives the praise to God ;
 And twofold joys possess his raptured mind,
 From gratitude and admiration joined.

Here, 'midst the boldest triumphs of her worth,
 Nature herself invites the reapers forth ;
 Dares the keen sickle from its twelvemonth's rest,
 And gives that ardour which in every breast
 From Infancy to Age alike appears,
 When the first sheaf its plummy top uprears.
 No rake takes here what Heaven to all bestows—
 Children of want, for you the bounty flows !
 And every cottage from the plenteous store
 Receives a burden nightly at its door.

Hark ! where the sweeping scythe now rips along :
 Each sturdy mower, emulous and strong,
 Whose writhing form meridian heat defies,
 Bends o'er his work, and every sinew tries ;
 Prostrates the waving treasure at his feet,
 But spares the rising clover, short and sweet.
 Come, Health ! come, Jollity ! light-footed, come ;
 Here hold your revels, and make this your home.
 Each heart awaits and hails you as its own ;
 Each moistened brow, that scorns to wear a frown :
 The unpeopled dwelling mourns its tenants strayed ;
 E'en the domestic laughing dairymaid
 Hies to the field, the general toil to share.
 Meanwhile the farmer quits his elbow-chair,
 His cool brick floor, his pitcher, and his ease,
 And braves the sultry beams, and gladly sees
 His gates thrown open, and his team abroad,
 The ready group attendant on his word,
 To turn the swarth, the quivering load to rear,
 Or ply the busy rake the land to clear.
 Summer's light garb itself now cumbrous grown,
 Each his thin doublet in the shade throws down ;
 Where oft the mastiff skulks with half-shut eye,
 And rouses at the stranger passing by ;
 Whilst unrestrained the social converse flows,
 And every breast Love's powerful impulse knows,
 And rival wits with more than rustic grace
 Confess the presence of a pretty face.

May-day with the Old Squire.

Thus came the jovial day ; no streaks of red
 O'er the broad portal of the morn was spread,
 But one high-sailing mist of dazzling white,
 A screen of gossamer, a magic light,
 Doomed instantly, by simplest shepherd's ken,
 To reign awhile, and be exhaled at ten.
 O'er leaves, o'er blossoms, by his power restored,
 Forth came the conquering sun and looked abroad ;
 Millions of dew-drops fell, yet millions hung,
 Like words of transport trembling on the tongue,
 Too strong for utterance :—Thus the infant boy,
 With rosebud cheeks, and features tuned to joy,
 Weeps while he struggles with restraint or pain ;
 But change the scene, and make him laugh again,
 His heart rekindles, and his cheek appears
 A thousand times more lovely through his tears.

From the first glimpse of day a busy scene
 Was that high swelling lawn, that destined green,
 Which shadowless expanded far and wide,
 The mansion's ornament, the hamlet's pride ;
 To cheer, to order, to direct, contrive,
 Even old Sir Ambrose had been up at five ;
 There his whole household laboured in his view,—
 But light is labour where the task is new.
 Some wheeled the turf to build a grassy throne
 Round a huge thorn that spread his boughs alone,
 Rough-rin'd and bold, as master of the place ;
 Five generations of the Higham race
 Had plucked his flowers, and still he held his sway,
 Waved his white head, and felt the breath of May.
 Some from the green-house ranged exotics round,
 To bask in open day on English ground :
 And 'midst them in a line of splendour drew
 Long wreaths and garlands gathered in the dew.
 Some spread the snowy canvas, propped on high,
 O'er sheltered tables with their whole supply ;
 Some swung the biting scythe with merry face,
 And cropped the daisies for a dancing space ;
 Some rolled the mouldy barrel in his might,
 From prison'd darkness into cheerful light,
 And fenced him round with cans ; and others bore
 The creaking hamper with its costly store
 Well corked, well flavoured, and well taxed, that came
 From Lusitanian mountains dear to fame,
 Whence Gama steered, and led the conquering way
 To eastern triumphs and the realms of day.
 A thousand minor tasks filled every hour,
 Till the sun gained the zenith of his power,
 When every path was thronged with old and young,
 And many a skylark in his strength upsprung
 To bid them welcome. Not a face was there
 But for May-day at least had banished care :
 No cringing looks, no pauper tales to tell,
 No timid glance—they knew their host too well,—
 Freedom was there, and joy in every eye :
 Such scenes were England's boast in days gone by.
 Beneath the thorn was good Sir Ambrose found,
 His guests an ample crescent formed around ;
 Nature's own carpet spread the space between,
 Where blyth domestics plied in gold and green.
 The venerable chaplain waved his wand,
 And silence followed as he stretched his hand,
 And with a trembling voice, and heart sincere,
 Implored a blessing on th' abundant cheer.
 Down sat the mingling throng, and shared a feast
 With hearty welcomes given, by love increased ;
 A patriarch family, a close-linked band,
 True to their rural chieftain, heart and hand ;
 The deep carouse can never boast the bliss,
 The animation of a scene like this.

At length the damask cloths were whisked away,
 Like fluttering sails upon a summer's day ;
 The heyday of enjoyment found repose ;
 The worthy baronet majestic rose ;
 They viewed him, while his ale was filling round,
 The monarch of his own paternal ground.
 His cup was full, and where the blossoms bowed
 Over his head, Sir Ambrose spoke aloud,
 Nor stopped a dainty form or phrase to cull—
 His heart elated, like his cup, was full :—
 ' Full be your hopes, and rich the crops that fall ;
 Health to my neighbours, happiness to all !'

Dull must that clown be, dull as winter's sleet,
Who would not instantly be on his feet :
An echoing health to mingling shouts gave place,
'Sir Ambrose Higham, and his noble race !'

A complete collection of Bloomfield's works, which comprise many short and occasional pieces as well as a short prose 'village drama,' was made in 1824; and there have been several editions of them since, as in 1864 and 1883. The Farmer's Boy, with an introduction and notes by Darlington, appeared in 1895.

Capell Lofft (1751-1824), was a Whig barrister with a taste for letters; he wrote legal treatises, poems, magazine articles, and books on theological, astronomical, and political subjects. The son of the famous Duchess of Marlborough's secretary, he was born in London, passed from Eton to Peterhouse, Cambridge, lived on his estate at Troston near Bury St Edmunds, and died near Turin. He was a keen reformer, a warm admirer of Napoleon, the friend of Fox, Clarkson, Wilberforce, and Arthur Young, and the patron of Bloomfield. A son who bore the same name (1806-73) and died at Millmead in Virginia was also a poet and miscellaneous writer.

James Grahame (1765-1811), the son of a thriving Whig lawyer in Glasgow, went in 1784 to Edinburgh to study law, and, after qualifying as a Writer to the Signet, was admitted as an advocate in 1795. But in 1809 he took Anglican orders, and was successively curate of Shipton Moyne in Gloucestershire, and of Sedgefield in Durham. Ill-health compelled him to abandon his curacy when his talents had attracted notice and rendered him a popular preacher; and he died soon after his return to Scotland. His works include, besides one or two earlier pieces, Mary, Queen of Scotland, a dramatic poem (1801), The Sabbath (1804), Sabbath Walks (1805), The Birds of Scotland (1806), and British Georgics (1809), all in blank verse. The Sabbath is his best achievement; in the Georgics, spite of some fine descriptions, he is too detailed and too practical in his instructions. Scott spoke warmly of him, Christopher North lauded him, and Byron, as might be expected, sneered. Grahame has some affinity with Cowper. He has no humour or satire, it is true, and he has many prosaic lines, but he displays not a little of Cowper's power of close and happy observation, with the same devoutness and seriousness tending to melancholy. The ordinary features of the Scottish landscape he portrays truly, sometimes vividly, and always without exaggeration, though he often adds a special note of tenderness or solemnity. Content with humble things, he paints the charms of a fettered cottage-life, the calm of a Sabbath morning, a walk in the fields, or even a bird's nest, with such unfeigned delight and striking truth that the reader is constrained to see and feel with him, to rejoice in the elements of poetry and meditation scattered around, even in the homeliest objects.

From 'The Sabbath.'

How still the morning of the hallowed day !
Mute is the voice of rural labour, hushed

The ploughboy's whistle and the milkmaid's song.
The scythe lies glittering in the dewy wreath
Of tedded grass, mingled with fading flowers,
That yester-morn bloomed waving in the breeze.
Sounds the most faint attract the ear—the hum
Of early bee, the trickling of the dew,
The distant bleating midway up the hill.
Calmness seems throned on yon unmoving cloud.
To him who wanders o'er the upland leas,
The blackbird's note comes mellow from the dale ;
And sweeter from the sky the gladsome lark
Warbles his heaven-tuned song ; the lulling brook
Murmurs more gently down the deep-sunk glen ;
While from yon lowly roof, whose curling smoke
O'er mounts the mist, is heard at intervals
The voice of psalms, the simple song of praise.

With dove-like wings Peace o'er yon village broods :
The dizzying mill-wheel rests ; the anvil's din
Hath ceased ; all, all around is quietness.
Less fearful on this day, the limping hare
Stops, and looks back, and stops, and looks on man,
Her deadliest foe. The toil-worn horse, set free,
Unheedful of the pasture, roams at large ;
And, as his stiff unwieldy bulk he rolls,
His iron-armed hoofs gleam in the morning ray.

But chiefly man the day of rest enjoys.
Hail, Sabbath ! thee I hail, the poor man's day.
On other days, the man of toil is doomed
To eat his joyless bread, lonely, the ground
Both seat and board, screened from the winter's cold
And summer's heat by neighbouring hedge or tree ;
But on this day, embosomed in his home,
He shares the frugal meal with those he loves ;
With those he loves he shares the heartfelt joy
Of giving thanks to God—not thanks of form,
A word and a grimace, but reverently,
With covered face and upward earnest eye.
Hail, Sabbath ! thee I hail, the poor man's day :
The pale mechanic now has leave to breathe .
The morning air pure from the city's smoke ;
While wandering slowly up the river-side,
He meditates on Him whose power he marks
In each green tree that proudly spreads the bough,
As in the tiny dew-bent flowers that bloom
Around the roots ; and while he thus surveys
With elevated joy each rural charm,
He hopes—yet fears presumption in the hope—
To reach those realms where Sabbath never ends.

But now his steps a welcome sound recalls :
Solemn the knell, from yonder ancient pile,
Fills all the air, inspiring joyful awe :
Slowly the throng moves o'er the tomb-paved ground ;
The aged man, the bowed down, the blind
Led by the thoughtless boy, and he who breathes
With pain, and eyes the new-made grave well pleased ;
These, mingled with the young, the gay, approach
The house of God—these, spite of all their ills,
A glow of gladness feel ; with silent praise
They enter in ; a placid stillness reigns,
Until the man of God, worthy the name,
Opens the book, and reverentially
The stated portion reads. A pause ensues.
The organ breathes its distant thunder-notes,
Then swells into a diapason full :
The people rising sing, 'with harp, with harp,
And voice of psalms ;' harmoniously attuned

The various voices blend ; the long-drawn aisles,
 At every close, the lingering strain prolong . . .
 Nor yet less pleasing at the heavenly throne,
 The Sabbath service of the shepherd-boy !
 In some lone glen, where every sound is lulled
 To slumber, save the tinkling of the rill,
 Or bleat of lamb, or hovering falcon's cry,
 Stretched on the sward, he reads of Jesse's son ;
 Or sheds a tear o'er him to Egypt sold,
 And wonders why he weeps : the volume closed,
 With thyme-sprig laid between the leaves, he sings
 The sacred lays, his weekly lesson conned
 With meikle care beneath the lowly roof,
 Where humble lore is learnt, where humble worth
 Pines unrewarded by a thankless state.
 Thus reading, hymning, all alone, unseen,
 The shepherd-boy the Sabbath holy keeps,
 Till on the heights he marks the straggling bands
 Returning homeward from the house of prayer.
 In peace they home resort. Oh, blissful days !
 When all men worship God as conscience wills.
 Far other times our fathers' grandsires knew,
 A virtuous race to godliness devote.

From 'Sabbath Walks.'

Delightful is this loneliness ; it calms
 My heart : pleasant the cool beneath these elms
 That throw across the stream a moveless shade.
 Here nature in her midnight whisper speaks ;
 How peaceful every sound !—the ringdove's plaint,
 Moaned from the forest's gloomiest retreat,
 While every other woodland lay is mute,
 Save when the wren flits from her down-coved nest.
 And from the root-sprigs trills her ditty clear—
 The grasshopper's oft-pausing chirp—the buzz,
 Angrily shrill, of moss-entangled bee,
 That soon as loosed booms with full twang away—
 The sudden rushing of the minnow shoal
 Scared from the shallows by my passing tread.
 Dimpling the water glides, with here and there
 A glossy fly, skimming in cirelets gay
 The treacherous surface, while the quick-eyed trout
 Watches his time to spring ; or from above,
 Some feathered dam, purveying 'mong the boughs,
 Darts from her perch, and to her plumeless brood
 Bears off the prize. Sad emblem of man's lot ! . . .
 How dazzling white the snowy scene ! deep, deep
 The stillness of the winter Sabbath day—
 Not even a footfall heard. Smooth are the fields,
 Each hollow pathway level with the plain :
 Hid are the bushes, save that here and there
 Are seen the topmost shoots of brier or broom.
 High-ridged the whirled drift has almost reached
 The powdered keystone of the churchyard porch.
 Mute hangs the hooded bell ; the tombs lie buried ;
 No step approaches to the house of prayer.
 The flickering fall is o'er : the clouds disperse,
 And show the sun, hung o'er the welkin's verge,
 Shooting a bright but ineffectual beam
 On all the sparkling waste.

From the 'Georgics.'

How pleasant came thy rushing, silver Tweed,
 Upon my ear, when, after roaming long
 In southern plains, I've reached thy lovely bank !
 How bright, renowned Sark, thy little stream,

Like ray of columned light chasing a shower,
 Would cross my homeward path ; how sweet the sound,
 When I, to hear the Doric tongue's reply,
 Would ask thy well-known name !

And must I leave,

Dear land, thy bonny braes, thy dales,
 Each haunted by its wizard stream, o'erhung
 With all the varied charms of bush and tree ?
 And must I leave the friends of youthful years,
 And mould my heart anew, to take the stamp
 Of foreign friendships in a foreign land,
 And learn to love the music of strange tongues !
 Yes, I may love the music of strange tongues,
 And mould my heart anew to take the stamp
 Of foreign friendships in a foreign land :
 But to my parchèd mouth's roof cleave this tongue,
 My fancy fade into the yellow leaf,
 And this oft-pausing heart forget to throb,
 If, Scotland, thee and thine I e'er forget.

John Leyden (1775–1811), Orientalist and poet, was born at Denholm in Roxburghshire. His father, a shepherd, seeing his natural bent, determined to educate him for the Church. From 1790 to 1800 he was a student of Edinburgh University. An excellent Latin and Greek scholar, he acquired also French, Spanish, Italian, and German, besides Hebrew, Arabic, and Persian. From 1796 he studied medicine. He became no mean proficient in mathematics and various branches of science ; every difficulty seemed to vanish before his commanding talents, retentive memory, and robust application. Some of his college vacations were spent at home ; and as his father's cottage afforded him little opportunity for quiet and seclusion, he looked out for accommodation abroad. 'In a wild recess,' says Sir Walter Scott, 'in the den or glen which gives name to the village of Denholm, he contrived a sort of furnace for the purpose of such chemical experiments as he was adequate to performing. But his chief place of retirement was the small parish church, a gloomy and ancient building, generally believed in the neighbourhood to be haunted. To this chosen place of study, usually locked during week-days, Leyden made entrance by means of a window, read there for many hours in the day, and deposited his books and specimens in a retired pew. It was a well-chosen spot of seclusion, for the kirk—excepting during divine service—is rather a place of terror to the Scottish rustic, and that of Cavers was rendered more so by many a tale of ghosts and witchcraft of which it was the supposed scene, and to which Leyden, partly to indulge his humour, and partly to secure his retirement, contrived to make some modern additions. The nature of his abstruse studies, some specimens of natural history, as toads and adders, left exposed in their spirit-phials, and one or two practical jests played off upon the more curious of the peasantry, rendered his gloomy haunt not only venerated by the wise, but feared by the simple of the parish.' From this singular and romantic study, Leyden sallied forth, with his curious and various stores, to astonish his college associates; he already numbered among his friends the most distinguished literary and scientific men of Edinburgh. In 1796-98 he was tutor to the sons of Mr Campbell of Fairfield, whom he accompanied to the University of St Andrews. There he pursued his own researches in Oriental learning, and was licensed to preach; in 1799 he published Discoveries and Settlements of the Europeans in Northern and Western Africa. He also contributed to the Edinburgh Magazine, to 'Monk' Lewis's Tales of Wonder, and to Scott's Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border. So ardent was he in assisting Sir Walter that once he walked between forty and fifty miles, and back again, for the sole purpose of visiting an old person who possessed an ancient historical ballad. He cherished a strong desire to visit foreign countries; but when his friends sought from Government on his behalf some appointment for him connected with the learning and languages of the East, the only situation they could obtain for him was that of assistant-surgeon at Madras. In six months or so Leyden brushed up his medical studies and obtained the M.D. of St Andrews. In December 1802, summoned to join the Christmas fleet of Indiamen, Leyden finished his poem, the Scenes of Infancy, describing his native Teviotdale, and left Scotland for ever. After his arrival at Madras his health gave way, and he was obliged to remove to Prince of Wales Island. He remained there for some time, visiting Sumatra and the Malayan Peninsula, and amassing the curious information concerning the language, literature, and descent of the Indo-Chinese tribes, which enabled him to lay a most valuable dissertation before the Asiatic Society at Calcutta. An appointment as professor in the Bengal College was soon exchanged for a more lucrative post, that of a judge in Calcutta; but his spare time was still devoted to Oriental manuscripts and antiquities. 'I may die in the attempt,' he wrote to a friend, 'but if I die without surpassing Sir William Jones a hundredfold in Oriental learning, let never a tear for me profane the eye of a Borderer.' The possibility of an early death in a distant land often crossed the mind of the ambitious student; in his Scenes of Infancy he expressly anticipates a fate he had then no reason to expect:

The silver moon at midnight cold and still,
Looks, sad and silent, o'er yon western hill;
While large and pale the ghostly structures grow,
Reared on the confines of the world below.
Is that dull sound the hum of Teviot's stream?
Is that blue light the moon's, or tomb-fire's gleam,
By which a mouldering pile is faintly seen,
The old deserted church of Hazeldean,
Where slept my fathers in their natal clay,
Till Teviot's waters rolled their bones away?
Their feeble voices from the stream they raise—
'Rash youth! unmindful of thy early days,
Why didst thou quit the peasant's simple lot?
Why didst thou leave the peasant's turf-built cot,

The ancient graves where all thy fathers lie,
And Teviot's stream that long has murmured by?
And we—when death so long has closed our eyes,
How wilt thou bid us from the dust arise,
And bear our mouldering bones across the main,
From vales that knew our lives devoid of stain?
Rash youth, beware! thy home-bred virtues save,
And sweetly sleep in thy paternal grave.'

In 1811 Leyden accompanied the Governor-General in the military expedition which conquered Java from the Dutch; and in Scott's words, 'his spirit of romantic adventure led him literally to rush upon his death; for, with another volunteer who attended the expedition, he threw himself into the surf, in order to be the first Briton of the expedition who should set foot upon Java. When the success of the well-concerted movements of the invaders had given them possession of the town of Batavia, Leyden displayed the same ill-omened precipitation, in his haste to examine a library, or rather a warehouse of books. The apartment had not been regularly ventilated, and either from this circumstance, or already affected by the fatal sickness peculiar to Batavia, Leyden, when he left the place, had a fit of shivering, and declared the atmosphere was enough to give any mortal a fever. The presage was too just: he took his bed, and died in three days (August 28, 1811), on the eve of the battle which gave Java for a while to the British Empire. Scott alluded to his death in the Lord of the Isles:

JOHN LEYDEN.

From the Sketch by Captain Elliot.

Scarba's Isle, whose tortured shore
Still rings to Corrieveckan's roar,
And lonely Colonsay;

Scenes sung by him who sings no more,
His bright and brief career is o'er,
And mute his tuneful strains ;
Quenched is his lamp of varied lore,
That loved the light of song to pour :
A distant and a deadly shore
Has Leyden's cold remains—referring here to Leyden's ballad The Mermaid, the scene of which is laid at Corrievreckan ; it was published with his Cout of Keeldar in the Border Minstrelsy. Scott too generously said that for mere melody of sound the opening of the Mermaid had seldom been excelled in English poetry.

Leyden's learning was portentous ; he dealt not merely with Sanskrit and Prakrit, Persian and Pushtu, Hindustani and Bengali, but with the tongues of the Dekkan, of the Maldives, of Macassar and Bali, and with various forms of Malay. His biographer credits him with a working knowledge of seventeen European and twenty-eight Oriental languages. At home he had edited the Complaynt of Scotlande and Scottish Descriptive Poems (including Albania ; see page 440), and for six months the Scots Magazine. His characteristic Journal of a Tour in the Highlands in 1800, after being lost for a century, was published by James Sinton (with a bibliography) in 1903.

Ode to an Indian Gold Coin.

Slave of the dark and dirty mine !
What vanity has brought thee here ?
How can I love to see thee shine
So bright, whom I have bought so dear ?
The tent-ropes flapping lone I hear
For twilight converse, arm in arm ;
The jackal's shriek bursts on mine ear
When mirth and music went to cheer.

By Cheral's dark wandering streams,
Where cane-tufts shadow all the wild,
Sweet visions haunt my waking dreams
Of Teviot loved while still a child,
Of castled rocks stupendous piled
By Esk or Eden's classic wave,
Where loves of youth and friendships smiled,
Uncursed by thee, vile yellow slave !

Fade, day-dreams sweet, from memory fade !
The perished bliss of youth's first prime,
That once so bright on fancy played,
Revives no more in after-time.
Far from my sacred natal clime,
I haste to an untimely grave ;
The daring thoughts that soared sublime
Are sunk in ocean's southern wave.

Slave of the mine ! thy yellow light
Gleams baleful as the tomb-fire drear.
A gentle vision comes by night
My lonely widowed heart to cheer :
Her eyes are dim with many a tear,
That once were guiding stars to mine ;
Her fond heart throbs with many a fear !
I cannot bear to see thee shine.

For thee, for thee, vile yellow slave,
I left a heart that loved me true !
I crossed the tedious ocean-wave,
To roam in climes unkind and new.
The cold wind of the stranger blew
Chill on my withered heart ; the grave,
Dark and untimely, met my view—
And all for thee, vile yellow slave !

Ha ! com'st thou now so late to mock
A wanderer's banished heart forlorn,
Now that his frame the lightning shock
Of sun-rays tipt with death has borne ?
From love, from friendship, country, torn,
To memory's fond regrets the prey ;
Vile slave, thy yellow dross I scorn !
Go mix thee with thy kindred clay !

From 'The Mermaid.'

On Jura's heath how sweetly swell
The murmurs of the mountain bee !
How softly mourns the writhed shell
Of Jura's shore, its parent sea !

But softer floating o'er the deep,
The mermaid's sweet sea-soothing lay,
That charmed the dancing waves to sleep,
Before the bark of Colonsay.

Aloft the purple pennons wave,
As, parting gay from Crinan's shore,
From Morven's wars, the seamen brave
Their gallant chieftain homeward bore.

In youth's gay bloom, the brave Macphail
Still blamed the lingering bark's delay :
For her he chid the flagging sail,
The lovely maid of Colonsay.

'And raise,' he cried, 'the song of love,
The maiden sung with tearful smile,
When first, o'er Jura's hills to rove,
We left afar the lonely isle !

'When on this ring of ruby red
Shall die,' she said, 'the crimson hue,
Know that thy favourite fair is dead,
Or proves to thee and love untrue.'

Now, lightly poised, the rising oar
Disperses wide the foamy spray,
And echoing far o'er Crinan's shore,
Resounds the song of Colonsay :

'Softly blow, thou western breeze,
Softly rustle through the sail !
Soothe to rest the furrowy seas,
Before my love, sweet western gale !

'Where the wave is tinged with red,
And the russet sea-leaves grow,
Mariners, with prudent dread,
Shun the shelving reefs below.

'As you pass through Jura's sound,
Bend your course by Scarba's shore ;
Shun, O shun, the gulf profound,
Where Corrievreckan's surges roar !

'If from that unbottomed deep,
With wrinkled form and wreathed train,
O'er the verge of Scarba's steep,
The sea-snake heave his snowy mane.

'Unwarp, unwind his oozy coils,
Sea-green sisters of the main,
And in the gulf where ocean boils,
The unwieldy wallowing monster chain.

'Softly blow, thou western breeze,
Softly rustle through the sail!
Soothe to rest the furrowed seas,
Before my love, sweet western gale!'

Thus all to soothe the chieftain's woe,
Far from the maid he loved so dear,
The song arose, so soft and slow,
He seemed her parting sigh to hear.

The lonely deck he paces o'er,
Impatient for the rising day,
And still from Crinan's moonlight shore,
He turns his eyes to Colonsay.

The moonbeams crisp the curling surge,
That streaks with foam the ocean green;
While forward still the rowers urge
Their course, a female form was seen.

That sea-maid's form, of pearly light,
Was whiter than the downy spray,
And round her bosom, heaving bright,
Her glossy yellow ringlets play.

Borne on a foamy crested wave,
She reached amain the bounding prow,
Then clasping fast the chieftain brave,
She, plunging, sought the deep below.

Ah! long beside thy feigned bier,
The monks the prayer of death shall say;
And long for thee, the fruitless tear
Shall weep the maid of Colonsay!

But downward like a powerless corse,
The eddying waves the chieftain bear;
He only heard the moaning hoarse
Of waters murmuring in his ear.

The murmurs sink by slow degrees,
No more the waters round him rave;
Lulled by the music of the seas,
He lies within a coral cave. . . .

No form he saw of mortal mould;
It shone like ocean's snowy foam;
Her ringlets waved in living gold,
• Her mirror crystal, pearl the comb.

Her pearly comb the siren took,
And careless bound her tresses wild;
Still o'er the mirror stole her look,
As on the wondering youth she smiled.

Like music from the greenwood tree,
Again she raised the melting lay:
'Fair warrior, wilt thou dwell with me,
And leave the maid of Colonsay?

'Fair is the crystal hall for me
With rubies and with emeralds set;
And sweet the music of the sea
Shall sing, when we for love are met.

'How sweet to dance with gliding feet
Along the level tide so green,
Responsive to the cadence sweet
That breathes along the moonlight scene!

'And soft the music of the main
Rings from the motley tortoise-shell,
While moonbeams o'er the watery plain
Seem trembling in its fitful swell.' . . .

Proud swells her heart! she deems at last
To lure him with her silver tongue,
And, as the shelving rocks she passed,
She raised her voice, and sweetly sung.

In softer, sweeter strains she sung,
Slow gliding o'er the moonlight bay,
When light to land the chieftain sprung,
To hail the maid of Colonsay.

O sad the Mermaid's gay notes fell,
And sadly sink remote at sea!
So sadly mourns the writhed shell
Of Jura's shore, its parent sea.

And ever as the year returns,
The charm-bound sailors know the day;
For sadly still the Mermaid mourns
The lovely chief of Colonsay.

Leyden's Poetical Remains, with a Memoir by his cousin, Rev. James Moeton, were published in 1819; a reprint of the Scenes of Infancy in 1875 had a Life by Tulloch; J. Reith issued a Life in 1908. Scott's Memoir of him appeared in the Edinburgh Annual Register for 1811; and there is much about him in Archibald Constable and his Literary Correspondents (1873), as well as in Lockhart's Life of Scott.

George Crabbe,

in Byron's judgment 'Nature's sternest painter, yet the best,' was born at Aldeburgh in Suffolk, on the Christmas Eve of 1754. His father was collector of salt-duties, a clever, strong, violent man, who though poor exerted himself to give his boy a good education; he lived to witness his son's growing fame, and, with parental fondness, to transcribe in his own handwriting the poem of The Library. The mother was a meek, religious woman; of three younger brothers, one perished miserably with his whole crew, captain of a slaver whose cargo mutinied triumphantly, and another was lost sight of in Honduras. George got some schooling at Bungay and Stowmarket, and from 1768 to 1774 was surgeon's apprentice at Wickham Brook and at Woodbridge. In his first place he had to help the ploughboy; in his second he fell in love with Sarah Elmy ('Mira'), who lived with her uncle, a wealthy yeoman, at Parham. Then a spell of drudgery in his father's warehouse; nine months in London, picking up surgery cheaply; some three years' struggling practice at Aldeburgh; and at last in April 1780, with three pounds in his pocket, he sailed again for London, resolved to try his fortune in literature. Eight years before he had written verses for Wheble's Magazine; he had published Inebriety, a Poem (Ipswich, 1775); and now his Candidate soon found a publisher, unluckily a bankrupt one. A season of penury dire as Chatterton's was borne by Crabbe with pious bravery; he had to pawn clothes and instruments; appeals to Lords Thurlow, North, Shelburne met no response; and early in 1781 he saw himself threatened with arrest for debt, when he made his case known to Burke. Forty-one years later he told Lockhart at Edinburgh how, having delivered his letter at Burke's door, he paced Westminster Bridge all night long until daybreak. Burke proved a generous patron; from the hour of their meeting Crabbe was a made man, and as guest at

GEORGE CRABBE.

From an Engraving after the Portrait by T. Phillips, R.A.

Beaconsfield, he met Fox, Dr Johnson, Sir Joshua Reynolds, and others of the statesman's great friends. Lord Thurlow—who now, as in the case of Cowper, came with tardy notice and ungraceful generosity—invited him to breakfast, and at parting presented him with a bank-note for £100. Dodsley that same year brought out the Library; and the very next winter Crabbe took orders, and was licensed to the curacy of his native parish of Aldeburgh. In 1782 Burke procured for him the post of chaplain to the Duke of Rutland at Belvoir Castle; thenceforward he was never in fear of want, but he seems to have felt all the ills of dependence on the great, and in 'The Patron' and other poems has strongly depicted them.

In 1783 appeared The Village, already read and corrected by Johnson and Burke. Its success was instant and complete. Some of the descriptions in the poem—as that of the parish workhouse—were copied into all the periodicals, and at once took that place in our national literature they still retain. Thurlow presented him with two small Dorset livings in his gift, and congratulated him, with an oath, on his being as like Parson Adams as twelve to a dozen. In 1783 Crabbe married Miss Efsny; and in 1785, taking the curacy of Stathern, near Belvoir Castle, he bade adieu to the ducal mansion and transferred himself to the village parsonage. In 1787 he exchanged his two small Dorset livings for two of greater value in the Vale of Belvoir, one of them the rectory of Muston, and there he lived for a time; but the poet in him remained silent for many years. After thirteen happy years (1792–1805) in Suffolk, at Parham, Great Glemham, and Rendham, he returned to Muston, his Leicestershire rectory; and his wife having died there in 1813, exchanged it the next year for Trowbridge in Wiltshire. In 1807 he published his Parish Register, which secured an unprecedented success. The poem had been previously submitted to Fox; parts of it—especially the story of Phœbe Dawson—were among the last things that interested the great Whig on his deathbed. The Borough (1810) is similar in substance but more connected; the Tales in Verse (1812) contain perhaps his finest illustrations of life and character. Crabbe spent a great part of his income at Trowbridge (£800 a year) in charity. He was still eagerly active in literary work, and in 1817–18 was engaged on his last notable undertaking, the Tales of the Hall (1819); for which and the remaining copyright of all the earlier poems Mr Murray gave £3000. In this connection Tom Moore has given an amusing illustration of his brother-poet's simplicity in money matters. Thomas Campbell commented on his mildness in literary argument, strange in so stern a poet of nature, and on his 'vigilant shrewdness that almost eluded you by keeping its watch so quietly.' The Tales of the Hall were received with the approval due to an old favourite, but without enthusiasm. In 1822 the poet paid a visit to Sir Walter Scott in Edinburgh. He arrived some days before his host welcomed George IV. at Leith; and so (pace Lockhart) it cannot have been in rapture at greeting Crabbe as guest that Scott sat down on and smashed the glass out of which the king had just drunk his health, and which Sir Walter had carried off in his pocket. Crabbe soon got wearied of the New Town, but could always amuse himself in the Old. His latter years were spent in clerical duties, in social intercourse, and in fossil-hunting; at threescore and ten he was still busy, cheerful, and affectionate. He died at Trowbridge on 3rd February 1832.

The Village, the Parish Register, and the shorter tales of Crabbe were his most popular poems. The Tales of the Hall are less interesting, though Edward FitzGerald loved them; they deal with the higher ranks of life; and with them the poet of the poor was hardly at home. Yet some of the episodes are in his best style: Sir Owen Dale, Ruth, Ellen, and other stories are marked with Crabbe's sign-manual—a fidelity to nature which redeems verses otherwise dull enough. His field of observation was narrow, his gift of description somewhat limited, but his pictures have a strong dramatic effect—they are visibly drawn direct from the life. They are often too true; human nature exhibited in its naked reality and with all its defects shocks our vanity and mortifies our pride. The life-experience of the poet gave the bent to his genius. He well knew how untrue and absurd were the pictures of rural life which regularly figured in poetry. His own youth was painful—spent amidst want and misery, changing only from gloom to passion; though in later years he had more of the amenities of refined and intellectual society at his command than Cowper, yet he did not, like Cowper, attempt to paint their manifold charms. When he took up his pen, his mind turned to Aldeburgh and its wild amphibious race—to the parish workhouse, where the wheel hummed doleful through the day—to erring damsels and luckless swains, the prey of overseers or justices—or to the haunts of desperate poachers and smugglers, Gipsies and gamblers, where vice and misery stalked undisguised in their darkest forms. He stirred up the dregs of human society, and while exhibiting to the life the hideous and hateful features, yet worked them into moving poetry. Like his own Sir Richard Monday, he never forgot the parish. True, village-life in England in its worst form, with the old poor-laws and game-laws, with a non-resident clergy, displayed a scale of marked contrasts, some bright, some gloomy, and Crabbe drew them all. His Isaac Ashford is as honourable to the humbler English poor as Scott's Jeanie Deans or Dandie Dinmont is to Scottish character. The faithful maid who watched over her dying sailor is a noble tribute to the power of true love amongst the lowly; 'The Parting Hour' and 'The Patron' are equally honourable to the poor and to the middle classes. But no doubt Crabbe was in general a gloomy painter of life; he was irrepressibly driven to depict the unlovely and unamiable; whether for poetic effect or from painful experience, he makes the evil in life predominate over the good; by nature or by force of circumstances, he was a pessimist—a realist, in the sense we associate with the work, in prose and verse, of moderns like Thomas Hardy. Even his pathos and tenderness are generally linked to something harsh, startling, or humiliating, to disappointed hopes or unavailing sorrow. The minuteness with which he dwells on such aspects of life sometimes makes his descriptions tedious and apparently unfeeling; he drags forward every defect, every vice and failing, not for the purpose of edifying something good out of the evil, but, as it would seem, merely for the sake of completing the picture. In his higher flights, where scenes of strong passion, vice, or remorse are depicted, Crabbe is a moralist-poet, purifying the heart by terror and pity, and by appalling realisations of the misery and desolation that mark the track of unbridled passion. His story of Sir Eustace Grey in this kind is told with almost terrific power, and with a lyrical cry in its verse. His usual vehicle is the Popian couplet—Horace Smith dubbed him 'a Pope in worsted stockings'—much less flowing and melodious than its model, and often ending in points and quibbles. Thus his thrifty housewife, Widow Goe, falls down in sickness, 'Heaven in her eye, and in her hand her keys;' the apothecary 'carries fate and physic in his eye.' This kind of thing does really heighten the effect of his humorous and homely descriptions; but it is too much of a mannerism, and it mars the finer passages. As a painter of English scenery Crabbe is as original and forcible as in character-sketching. His seascapes are peculiarly striking; and he invests even sterile marshes and barren sands with interest. His objects are seldom picturesque; but he noted every weed and plant—the purple bloom of the heath, the dwarfish flowers among the wild gorse, the slender grass of the sheep-walk, and even the pebbles, seaweed, and shells amid 'the glittering waters on the shingles rolled;' and he passionately loved the sea. It will be remembered by all readers of Lockhart's Life of Scott how on his deathbed Scott insisted again and again on having something by Crabbe read to him, and how, though his memory had lost its grip, he listened always with pleasure to passages his son-in-law read to him from his old favourite. Cardinal Newman declared Tales of the Hall to be a poem, 'whether in conception or in execution, one of the most touching in our language;' proclaimed in The Idea of a University that he read it on its first publication 'with extreme delight, and had never lost his love of it;' and in successive editions still testified that on a re-reading he was 'even more touched by it than heretofore.'

Parish Workhouse and Apothecary.

Theirs is yon house that holds the parish poor,
Whose walls of mud scarce bear the broken door;
There, where the putrid vapours, flagging, play,
And the dull wheel hums doleful through the day;
There children dwell who know no parents' care;
Parents who know no children's love dwell there;
Heart-broken matrons on their joyless bed,
Forsaken wives, and mothers never wed;
Dejected widows with unheeded tears,
And crippled age with more than childhood-fears;
The lame, the blind, and, far the happiest they!
The moping idiot and the madman gay.
Here too the sick their final doom receive,
Here brought amid the scenes of grief to grieve,
Where the loud groans from some sad chamber flow,
Mixed with the clamours of the crowd below;
Here sorrowing they each kindred sorrow scan,
And the cold charities of man to man:

Whose laws indeed for ruined age provide,
 And strong compulsion plucks the scrap from pride ;
 But still that scrap is bought with many a sigh,
 And pride embitters what it can't deny.
 Say ye, oppressed by some fantastic woes,
 Some jarring nerve that baffles your repose ;
 Who press the downy couch, while slaves advance
 With timid eye, to read the distant glance ;
 Who with sad prayers the weary doctor tease,
 To name the nameless ever-new disease ;
 Who with mock patience dire complaints endure,
 Which real pain and that alone can cure ;
 How would ye bear in real pain to lie,
 Despised, neglected, left alone to die ?
 How would ye bear to draw your latest breath
 Where all that's wretched paves the way for death ?

Such is that room which one rude beam divides,
 And naked rafters form the sloping sides ;
 Where the vile bands that bind the thatch are seen,
 And lath and mud are all that lie between ;
 Save one dull pane that, coarsely patched, gives way
 To the rude tempest, yet excludes the day :
 Here on a matted flock, with dust o'erspread,
 The drooping wretch reclines his languid head ;
 For him no hand the cordial cup applies,
 Or wipes the tear that stagnates in his eyes ;
 No friends with soft discourse his pain beguile,
 Or promise hope till sickness wears a smile.

But soon a loud and hasty summons calls,
 Shakes the thin roof, and echoes round the walls ;
 Anon a figure enters, quaintly neat,
 All pride and business, bustle and conceit,
 With looks unaltered by these scenes of woe,
 With speed that, entering, speaks his haste to go ;
 He bids the gazing throng around him fly,
 And carries fate and physic in his eye ;
 A potent quack, long versed in human ills,
 Who first insults the victim whom he kills ;
 Whose murderous hand a drowsy bench protect,
 And whose most tender mercy is neglect.

Paid by the parish for attendance here,
 He wears contempt upon his sapient sneer ;
 In haste he seeks the bed where misery lies,
 Impatience marked in his averted eyes ;
 And, some habitual queries hurried o'er,
 Without reply, he rushes on the door ;
 His drooping patient, long inured to pain,
 And long unheeded, knows remonstrance vain ;
 He ceases now the feeble help to crave
 Of man ; and silent sinks into the grave.

(From The Village.)

Isaac Ashford.

Next to these ladies, but in nought allied,
 A noble peasant, Isaac Ashford, died.
 Noble he was, contemning all things mean,
 His truth unquestioned and his soul serene :
 Of no man's presence Isaac felt afraid ;
 At no man's question Isaac looked dismayed :
 Shame knew him not, he dreaded no disgrace ;
 Truth, simple truth, was written in his face ;
 Yet while the serious thought his soul approved,
 Cheerful he seemed, and gentleness he loved ;
 To bliss domestic he his heart resigned,
 And with the firmest, had the fondest mind :
 Were others joyful, he looked smiling on,
 And gave allowance where he needed none ;

Good he refused with future ill to buy,
 Nor knew a joy that caused reflection's sigh ;
 A friend to virtue, his unclouded breast
 No envy stung, no jealousy distressed—
 Bane of the poor ! it wounds their weaker mind
 To miss one favour which their neighbours find—
 Yet far was he from stoic pride removed ;
 He felt humanely, and he warmly loved :
 I marked his action when his infant died,
 And his old neighbour for offence was tried ;
 The still tears, stealing down that furrowed cheek,
 Spoke pity plainer than the tongue can speak.
 If pride were his, 'twas not their vulgar pride,
 Who, in their base contempt, the great deride ;
 Nor pride in learning, though my clerk agreed,
 If fate should call him, Ashford might succeed ;
 Nor pride in rustic skill, although we knew
 None his superior, and his equals few :
 But if that spirit in his soul had place,
 It was the jealous pride that shuns disgrace ;
 A pride in honest fame, by virtue gained,
 In sturdy boys to virtuous labours trained ;
 Pride in the power that guards his country's coast,
 And all that Englishmen enjoy and boast ;
 Pride in a life that slander's tongue defied,
 In fact a noble passion, misnamed pride.

He had no party's rage, no sectary's whim ;
 Christian and countryman was all with him ;
 True to his church he came ; no Sunday-shower
 Kept him at home in that important hour ;
 Nor his firm feet could one persuading sect
 By the strong glare of their new light direct ;
 ' On hope, in mine own sober light, I gaze,
 But should be blind and lose it in your blaze.'

In times severe, when many a sturdy swain
 Felt it his pride, his comfort to complain,
 Isaac their wants would soothe, his own would hide,
 And feel in that his comfort and his pride.

At length he found, when seventy years were run,
 His strength departed and his labour done ;
 When, save his honest fame, he kept no more ;
 But lost his wife and saw his children poor ;
 'Twas then a spark of—say not discontent—
 Struck on his mind, and thus he gave it vent :

' Kind are your laws—'tis not to be denied—
 That in yon house for ruined age provide,
 And they are just ; when young, we give you all,
 And then for comforts in our weakness call.
 Why then this proud reluctance to be fed,
 To join your poor and eat the parish bread ?
 But yet I linger, loath with him to feed
 Who gains his plenty by the sons of need :
 He who by contract all your paupers took,
 And gauges stomachs with an anxious look :
 On some old master I could well depend ;
 See him with joy, and thank him as a friend ;
 But ill on him who doles the day's supply,
 And counts our chances who at night may die :
 Yet help me, Heaven ! and let me not complain
 Of what befalls me, but the fate sustain.'

Such were his thoughts, and so resigned he grew ;
 Daily he placed the workhouse in his view !
 But came not there, for sudden was his fate,
 He dropt expiring at his cottage-gate.

I feel his absence in the hours of prayer,
 And view his seat, and sigh for Isaac there ;

I see no more those white locks thinly spread
Round the bald polish of that honoured head ;
No more that awful glance on playful wight
Compelled to kneel and tremble at the sight,
To fold his fingers all in dread the while,
Till Mister Ashford softened to a smile ;
No more that meek and suppliant look in prayer,
Nor the pure faith—to give it force—are there. . . .
But he is blest, and I lament no more,
A wise good man contented to be poor.

(From The Parish Register.)

Phœbe Dawson.

Two summers since I saw at Lammas fair
The sweetest flower that ever blossomed there ;
When Phœbe Dawson gaily crossed the green,
In haste to see, and happy to be seen ;
Her air, her manners all who saw admired,
Courteous though coy, and gentle though retired ;
The joy of youth and health her eyes displayed,
And ease of heart her every look conveyed ;
A native skill her simple robes expressed,
As with untutored elegance she dressed ;
The lads around admired so fair a sight,
And Phœbe felt, and felt she gave, delight.
Admirers soon of every age she gained,
Her beauty won them and her worth retained ;
Envy itself could no contempt display,
They wished her well, whom yet they wished away.
Correct in thought, she judged a servant's place
Preserved a rustic beauty from disgrace ;
But yet on Sunday-eve, in freedom's hour,
With secret joy she felt that beauty's power ;
When some proud bliss upon the heart would steal,
That, poor or rich, a beauty still must feel.

At length, the youth ordained to move her breast,
Before the swains with bolder spirit pressed ;
With looks less timid made his passion known,
And pleased by manners most unlike her own ;
Loud though in love, and confident though young ;
Fierce in his air, and voluble of tongue ;
By trade a tailor, though, in scorn of trade,
He served the squire, and brushed the coat he made ;
Yet now, would Phœbe her consent afford,
Her slave alone, again he'd mount the board ;
With her should years of growing love be spent,
And growing wealth ; she sighed and looked consent.

Now through the lane, up hill, and cross the green—
Seen by but few, and blushing to be seen—
Dejected, thoughtful, anxious, and afraid—
Led by the lover, walked the silent maid :
Slow through the meadows roved they many a mile,
Toyed by each bank and trifled at each stile ;
Where, as he painted every blissful view,
And highly coloured what he strongly drew,
The pensive damsel, prone to tender fears,
Dimmed the false prospect with prophetic tears :
Thus passed the allotted hours, till, lingering late,
The lover loitered at the master's gate ;
There he pronounced adieu ! and yet would stay,
Till chidden—soothed—entreated—forced away !
He would of coldness, though indulged, complain,
And oft retire and oft return again ;
When, if his teasing vexed her gentle mind,
The grief assumed compelled her to be kind !
For he would proof of plighted kindness crave,
That she resented first, and then forgave,

And to his grief and penance yielded more
Than his presumption had required before :
Ah ! fly temptation, youth ; refrain ! refrain !
Each yielding maid and each presuming swain !
Lo ! now with red rent cloak and bonnet black,
And torn green gown loose hanging at her back,
One who an infant in her arms sustains,
And seems in patience striving with her pains ;
Pinched are her looks, as one who pines for bread,
Whose cares are growing and whose hopes are fled ;
Pale her parched lips, her heavy eyes sunk low,
And tears unnoticed from their channels flow ;
Serene her manner, till some sudden pain
Frets the meek soul, and then she's calm again. . . .

But who this child of weakness, want, and care ?
'Tis Phœbe Dawson, pride of Lammas fair ;
Who took her lover for his sparkling eyes,
Expressions warm, and love-inspiring lies ;
Compassion first assailed her gentle heart
For all his suffering, all his bosom's smart :
'And then his prayers ! they would a savage move,
And win the coldest of the sex to love :'
But ah ! too soon his looks success declared,
Too late her loss the marriage-rite repaired ;
The faithless flatterer then his vows forgot,
A captious tyrant or a noisy sot :
If present, railing till he saw her pained ;
If absent, spending what their labours gained ;
Till that fair form in want and sickness pined,
And hope and comfort fled that gentle mind.

Then fly temptation, youth ; resist ! refrain !
Nor let me preach for ever and in vain !

(From The Parish Register.)

The Felon's Dream.

Yes ! e'en in sleep the impressions all remain,
He hears the sentence and he feels the chain ;
He sees the judge and jury when he shakes,
And loudly cries, 'Not guilty,' and awakes :
Then chilling tremblings o'er his body creep,
Till worn-out nature is compelled to sleep.

Now comes the dream again : it shews each scene,
With each small circumstance that comes between—
The call to suffering, and the very deed—
There crowds go with him, follow, and precede ;
Some heartless shout, some pity, all condemn,
While he in fancied envy looks at them ;
He seems the place for that sad act to see,
And dreams the very thirst which then will be ;
A priest attends—it seems the one he knew
In his best days, beneath whose care he grew.

At this his terrors take a sudden flight ;
He sees his native village with delight ;
The house, the chamber, where he once arrayed
His youthful person, where he knelt and prayed ;
Then, too, the comforts he enjoyed at home,
The days of joy, the joys themselves, are come ;
The hours of innocence, the timid look
Of his loved maid, when first her hand he took
And told his hope ; her trembling joy appears,
Her forced reserve, and his retreating fears.
All now are present—'tis a moment's gleam
Of former sunshine—stay, delightful dream !
Let him within his pleasant garden walk,
Give him her arm, of blessings let them talk.

Yes ! all are with him now, and all the while
Life's early prospects and his Fanny's smile ;

Then come his sister and his village friend,
 And he will now the sweetest moments spend
 Life has to yield : no, never will he find
 Again on earth such pleasure in his mind :
 He goes through shrubby walks these friends among,
 Love in their looks and honour on the tongue ;
 Nay, there 's a charm beyond what nature shews,
 The bloom is softer, and more sweetly glows ;
 Pierced by no crime, and urged by no desire
 For more than true and honest hearts require,
 They feel the calm delight, and thus proceed
 Through the green lane, then linger in the mead,
 Stray o'er the heath in all its purple bloom,
 And pluck the blossom where the wild-bees hum ;
 Then through the broomy bound with ease they pass,
 And press the sandy sheep-walk's slender grass,
 Where dwarfish flowers among the gorse are spread,
 And the lamb browses by the linnet's bed ;
 Then 'cross the bounding brook they make their way
 O'er its rough bridge, and there behold the bay ;
 The ocean smiling to the fervid sun,
 The waves that faintly fall, and slowly run,
 The ships at distance, and the boats at hand ;
 And now they walk upon the seaside sand,
 Counting the number, and what kind they be,
 Ships softly sinking in the sleepy sea ;
 Now arm in arm, now parted, they behold
 The glittering waters on the shingles rolled :
 The timid girls, half dreading their design,
 Dip the small foot in the retarded brine,
 And search for crimson weeds, which spreading flow,
 Or lie like pictures on the sand below ;
 With all those bright red pebbles that the sun
 Through the small waves so softly shines upon ;
 And those live lucid jellies which the eye
 Delights to trace as they swim glittering by ;
 Pearl shells and rubied star-fish they admire,
 And will arrange above the parlour fire.
 Tokens of bliss ! 'Oh, horrible ! a wave
 Roars as it rises—save me, Edward, save !'
 She cries. Alas ! the watchman on his way
 Calls, and lets in—truth, terror, and the day !

(From The Borough.)

Gipsies.

On either side
 Is level fen, a prospect wild and wide,
 With dikes on either hand by ocean's self supplied :
 Far on the right the distant sea is seen,
 And salt the springs that feed the marsh between ;
 Beneath an ancient bridge the straitened flood
 Rolls through its sloping banks of slimy mud ;
 Near it a sunken boat resists the tide,
 That frets and hurries to th' opposing side ;
 The rushes sharp, that on the borders grow,
 Bend their brown flow'rets to the stream below,
 Impure in all its course, in all its progress slow :
 Here a grave Flora scarcely deigns to bloom,
 Nor wears a rosy blush, nor sheds perfume :
 The few dull flowers that o'er the place are spread
 Partake the nature of their fenny bed ;
 Here on its wiry stem, in rigid bloom,
 Grows the salt lavender that lacks perfume ;
 Here the dwarf sallows creep, the septfoil harsh,
 And the soft slimy mallow of the marsh ;
 Low on the ear the distant billows sound,
 And just in view appears their stony bound ;

No hedge nor tree conceals the glowing sun ;
 Birds, save a wat'ry tribe, the district shun,
 Nor chirp among the reeds where bitter waters run. . . .

Again, the country was enclosed, a wide
 And sandy road has banks on either side ;
 Where, lo ! a hollow on the left appeared,
 And there a gipsy tribe their tent had reared ;
 'Twas open spread, to catch the morning sun,
 And they had now their early meal begun,
 When two brown boys just left their grassy seat,
 The early traveller with their prayers to greet :
 While yet Orlando held his pence in hand,
 He saw their sister on her duty stand ;
 Some twelve years old, demure, affected, sly,
 Prepared the force of early powers to try ;
 Sudden a look of languor he descries,
 And well-feigned apprehension in her eyes ;
 Trained but yet savage, in her speaking face
 He marked the features of her vagrant race ;
 When a light laugh and roguish leer expressed
 The vice implanted in her youthful breast :
 Forth from the tent her elder brother came,
 Who seemed offended, yet forbore to blame
 The young designer, but could only trace
 The looks of pity in the traveller's face :
 Within, the father, who from fences nigh
 Had brought the fuel for the fire's supply,
 Watched now the feeble blaze, and stood dejected by.
 On ragged rug, just borrowed from the bed,
 And by the hand of coarse indulgence fed,
 In dirty patchwork negligently dressed,
 Reclined the wife, an infant at her breast ;
 In her wild face some touch of grace remained,
 Of vigour palsied and of beauty stained ;
 Her bloodshot eyes on her unheeding mate
 Were wrathful turned, and seemed her wants to state,
 Cursing his tardy aid—her mother there
 With gipsy-state engrossed the only chair ;
 Solemn and dull her look ; with such she stands,
 And reads the milk-maid's fortune in her hands,
 Tracing the lines of life ; assumed through years,
 Each feature now the steady falsehood wears :
 With hard and savage eye she views the food,
 And grudging pinches their intruding brood ;
 Last in the group, the worn-out grandsire sits
 Neglected, lost, and living but by fits :
 Useless, despised, his worthless labours done,
 And half protected by the vicious son,
 Who half supports him ; he with heavy glance
 Views the young ruffians who around him dance ;
 And, by the sadness in his face, appears
 To trace the progress of their future years :
 Through what strange course of misery, vice, deceit,
 Must wildly wander each unpractised cheat !
 What shame and grief, what punishment and pain,
 Sport of fierce passions, must each child sustain—
 Ere they like him approach their latter end,
 Without a hope, a comfort, or a friend !

(From Tales—' Lover's Journey.)

Approaching Age.

Six years had passed, and forty ere the six,
 When Time began to play his usual tricks :
 The locks once comely in a virgin's sight,
 Locks of pure brown, displayed th' encroaching
 white ;

The blood once fervid now to cool began,
 And Time's strong pressure to subdue the man :
 I rode or walked as I was wont before,
 But now the bounding spirit was no more ;
 A moderate pace would now my body heat,
 A walk of moderate length distress my feet.
 I showed my stranger-guest those hills sublime,
 But said, 'The view is poor, we need not climb.'
 At a friend's mansion I began to dread
 The cold neat parlour, and the gay glazed bed ;
 At home I felt a more decided taste,
 And must have all things in my order placed ;
 I ceased to hunt, my horses pleased me less,
 My dinner more ; I learned to play at chess ;
 I took my dog and gun, but saw the brute
 Was disappointed that I did not shoot ;
 My morning walks I now could bear to lose,
 And blessed the shower that gave me not to choose :
 In fact, I felt a languor stealing on ;
 The active arm, the agile hand were gone ;
 Small daily actions into habits grew,
 And new dislike to forms and fashion new ;
 I loved my trees in order to dispose,
 I numbered peaches, looked how stocks arose,
 Told the same story oft—in short, began to prose.

(From Tales of the Hall.)

The Crazy Maiden's Song.

Let me not have this gloomy view
 About my room, around my bed ;
 But morning roses, wet with dew,
 To cool my burning brows instead.
 As flow'rs that once in Eden grew,
 Let them their fragrant spirits shed,
 And every day the sweets renew,
 Till I, a fading flower, am dead.
 Oh ! let the herbs I loved to rear
 Give to my sense their perfumed breath ;
 Let them be placed about my bier,
 And grace the gloomy house of death.
 I'll have my grave beneath a hill,
 Where, only Lucy's self shall know ;
 Where runs the pure pellucid rill
 Upon its gravelly bed below ;
 There violets on the borders blow,
 And insects their soft light display,
 Till, as the morning sunbeams glow,
 The cold phosphoric fires decay.

That is the grave to Lucy shown,
 The soil a pure and silver sand,
 The green cold moss above it grown,
 Unplucked of all but maiden hand :
 In virgin earth, till then unturned,
 There let my maiden form be laid,
 Nor let my changed clay be spurned,
 Nor for new guest that bed be made.

There will the lark—the lamb, in sport,
 In air—on earth—securely play,
 And Lucy to my grave resort,
 As innocent, but not so gay.
 I will not have the churchyard ground
 With bones all black and ugly grown,
 To press my shivering body round,
 Or on my wasted limbs be thrown.

With ribs and skulls I will not sleep,
 In clammy beds of cold blue clay,
 Through which the ringed earth-worms creep,
 And on the shrouded bosom prey ;
 I will not have the bell proclaim
 When those sad marriage rites begin,
 And boys, without regard or shame,
 Press the vile mouldering masses in.

Say not, it is beneath my care ;
 I cannot these cold truths allow ;
 These thoughts may not afflict me there,
 But, O ! they vex and tease me now.
 Raise not a turf, nor set a stone,
 That man a maiden's grave may trace,
 But thou, my Lucy, come alone,
 And let affection find the place.

Oh ! take me from a world I hate,
 Men cruel, selfish, sensual, cold ;
 And, in some pure and blessed state,
 Let me my sister minds behold ;
 From gross and sordid views refined,
 Our heaven of spotless love to share,
 For only generous souls designed,
 And not a man to meet us there.

(From Tales of the Hall.)

Sketches of Autumn.

It was a fair and mild autumnal sky,
 And earth's ripe treasures met th' admiring eye,
 As a rich beauty, when her bloom is lost,
 Appears with more magnificence and cost :
 The wet and heavy grass, where feet had strayed,
 Not yet erect, the wanderer's way betrayed ;
 Showers of the night had swelled the deepening rill,
 The morning breeze had urged the quickening mill ;
 Assembled rooks had winged their seaward flight,
 By the same passage to return at night,
 While proudly o'er them hung the steady kite,
 Then turned him back, and left the noisy throng,
 Nor deigned to know them as he sailed along.
 Long yellow leaves, from osiers, strewed around,
 Choked the small stream, and hushed the feeble sound ;
 While the dead foliage dropped from loftier trees,
 Our squire beheld not with his wonted ease ;
 But to his own reflections made reply,
 And said aloud, 'Yes ! doubtless we must die.'
 'We must,' said Richard ; 'and we would not live
 To feel what dotage and decay will give ;
 But we yet taste whatever we behold,
 The morn is lovely, though the air is cold :
 There is delicious quiet in this scene,
 At once so rich, so varied, so serene ;
 Sounds to delight us—each discordant tone
 Thus mingled please, that fail to please alone ;
 This hollow wind, this rustling of the brook,
 The farm-yard noise, the woodman at yon oak—
 See, the axe falls !—now listen to the stroke !
 That gun itself, that murders all this peace,
 Adds to the charm, because it soon must cease.'

(From Tales of the Hall.)

Cold grew the foggy morn, the day was brief,
 Loose on the cherry hung the crimson leaf ;
 The dew dwelt ever on the herb ; the woods
 Roared with strong blasts, with mighty showers the floods :

All green was vanished, save of pine and yew,
That still displayed their melancholy hue;
Save the green holly with its berries red,
And the green moss that o'er the gravel spread.

(From Tales—'The Patron.')

It is hardly unfair to compare Crabbe's

Better to love amiss than nothing to have loved,

from The Struggles of Conscience, with Tennyson's

'Tis better to have loved and lost
Than never to have loved at all.

It was Crabbe who opined, not without reason, that he 'who often reads, will sometimes wish to write.' It is in The Widow's Tale that we read of

A tender, timid maid! who knew not how
To pass a pig-sty, or to face a cow,

and who was aggrieved

When the coarse cloth she saw, with many a stain
Soiled by rude hinds who cut and come again.

[The poet's son, Rev. George Crabbe (1785-1857), prefixed a Life to his works (8 vols. 1834). There are studies by Kibel (1888), Ainger ('Men of Letters,' 1903), Huchon (1907), Broadley and Jerrold's Romance of an Elderly Poet (1913) gives Crabbe's sentimental correspondence with Elizabeth Charter in 1815-25. The best edition of the works is by Sir A. W. Ward (3 vols. 1906-7).]

FRANCIS HINDES GROOME.

Jeremy Bentham (1748-1832), for more than half a century conspicuous as an author on jurisprudence and ethics, lived in intimate correspondence with the leading men of several generations and of various countries, and was unceasingly active in the propagation of utilitarianism and in insisting on reform in law. The son of a pushing and prosperous London attorney, he was educated at Westminster School and Queen's College, Oxford. He was little over twelve when he went to Oxford, but even then he was, from his precocity, not unjustly known by the name of 'the philosopher'; and though he never liked Oxford methods of study or of life, he took his degree of B.A. in 1763, and after studying law at Lincoln's Inn, was called to the Bar. He had a strong dislike to the legal profession, and never but once pleaded in public. His first publication was an acute but hypercritical examination of a passage in Blackstone's Commentaries, and was called A Fragment on Government (1776). The critique was prompted, no doubt, by 'a passion for improvement in those shapes in which the lot of mankind is meliorated by it,' but also by a profound contempt for Blackstone. He was stimulated by Priestley's writings. 'In the phrase, "the greatest happiness of the greatest number," I then saw delineated,' says Bentham, 'for the first time, a plain as well as a true standard for whatever is right or wrong, useful, useless, or mischievous in human conduct, whether in the field of morals or of politics.' The famous phrase was used first by Hutcheson (1726), then in Italian by Beccaria, and was found by Priestley in a translation of Beccaria's Crimes and Punishments

(1766); but unhappily Priestley, Bentham, and the rest have none of them given a final and universal definition of human happiness. To ensure it, Bentham considered it necessary to reconstruct the laws and government—to have annual parliaments and universal suffrage, secret voting, and a return to the ancient practice of paying wages to parliamentary representatives. In all his political, sociological, and juridical writings this doctrine of utility, so understood, is the leading and pervading principle. In 1778 he published a pamphlet on The Hard Labour Bill, recommending an improvement in the mode of criminal punishment; amongst those that followed were Letters on Usury (1787), Introduction to the Principles of Morals and Politics (1789), Discourses on Civil and Penal Legislation (1802), Punishments and Rewards (1811), A Treatise on Judicial Evidence (1813), Codification and Public Instruction (1817), and The Book of Fallacies (1824). The article in the Dictionary of National Biography quotes a classified list of seventy-four publications. By the death of his father in 1792, Bentham succeeded to property in London and to farms in Essex yielding from £500 to £600 a year. He lived frugally, but with elegance, in one of his London houses, kept young men as secretaries, corresponded and wrote daily, and by a life of temperance and industry, with great self-complacency and the society of a few devoted friends, the eccentric philosopher attained to the age of eighty-four. He left his body to be dissected, and his skeleton, clothed in his usual attire, is preserved in University College, London.

His works were collected and edited by Bowring and Hill Burton, and published in eleven volumes. But as some of the works were rearranged, abridged, and altered by Bowring and others, it is sometimes doubtful how far the statements perfectly represent Bentham's own words or ideas. Originally Bentham's style was natural, clear, and even brilliant. In his later works he adopted a peculiar uncouth style and nomenclature, which deter ordinary readers, and indeed have rendered many of his works a dead-letter. The substance of his published works and MSS. was rearranged and translated into excellent French by M. Dumont, a Genevese disciple, and there were Spanish and Portuguese translations. James Mill made known his principles at home; Sir Samuel Romilly discussed and criticised them in the Edinburgh Review, and Sir James Mackintosh in his Ethical Dissertation. Of his new coined words it should be noted that some—such as codify, minimise, international—have been found useful, and have become an essential and permanent part of the English language. In the science of legislation Bentham exhibited profound capacity and extensive knowledge; but he is chargeable with not sufficiently 'weighing the various circumstances which require his rules to be modified in different countries and times, in order to render them either more useful, more easily introduced, more generally respected, or more certainly executed.' J. S. Mill declared: 'There is hardly anything in Bentham's philosophy which is not true. The bad part of his writings is his resolute denial of all that he does not see, of all truths but those which he recognises.' This does not fully indicate the fact that he was both dogmatic and intolerant, holding that those who deliberately differed from him were either fools or knaves. He greatly furthered the improvement of the lamentable poor-laws; like so many of the older Radicals, he held that both for England and France, colonies are disadvantageous to the mother-country, and should be emancipated. Many of his schemes have been realised; many more are in course of realisation. The end and object of them all was the general welfare, and his chief error lay in conceiving that organic changes are possible by manifesto and enactment, or otherwise than through the growth and modification of popular needs, ideas, and institutions. In Mill's words, 'he found the philosophy of law a chaos, and left it a science'; and he was the philosophic pioneer of Liberalism and of Radicalism.

From the 'Defence of Usury.'

The business of a money-lender, though only among Christians and in Christian times a proscribed profession, has nowhere, nor at any time, been a popular one. Those who have the resolution to sacrifice the present to the future, are natural objects of envy to those who have sacrificed the future to the present. The children who have eaten their cake are the natural enemies of the children who have theirs. While the money is hoped for, and for a short time after it has been received, he who lends it is a friend and benefactor: by the time the money is spent, and the evil hour of reckoning is come, the benefactor is found to have changed his nature, and to have put on the tyrant and the oppressor. It is an oppression for a man to reclaim his own money; it is none to keep it from him. Among the inconsiderate—that is, among the great mass of mankind—selfish affections conspire with the social in treasuring up all favour for the man of dissipation, and in refusing justice to the man of thrift who has supplied him. In some shape or other, that favour attends the chosen object of it through every stage of his career. But in no stage of his career can the man of thrift come in for any share of it. It is the general interest of those with whom a man lives, that his expense should be at least as great as his circumstances will bear; because there are few expenses which a man can launch into but what the benefit of them is shared, in some proportion or other, by those with whom he lives. In that circle originates a standing law forbidding every man, on pain of infamy, to confine his expenses within what is adjudged to be the measure of his means, saving always the power of exceeding that limit as much as he thinks proper; and the means assigned him by that law may be ever so much beyond his real means, but are sure never to fall short of them. So close is the combination thus formed between the idea of merit and the idea of expenditure, that a disposition to spend finds favour in the eyes even of those who know that a man's circumstances do not entitle him to the means: and an upstart, whose chief recommendation is this disposition, shall find himself to have purchased a permanent fund of respect, to the prejudice of the very persons at whose expense he has been gratifying his appetites and his pride. The lustre which the display of borrowed wealth has diffused over his character awes men during the season of his prosperity into a submission to his insolence, and when the hand of adversity has overtaken him at last, the recollection of the height from which he has fallen throws the veil of compassion over his injustice.

The condition of the man of thrift is the reverse. His lasting opulence procures him a share, at least, of the same envy that attends the prodigal's transient display: but the use he makes of it procures him no part of the favour which attends the prodigal. In the satisfactions he derives from that use—the pleasure of possession, and the idea of enjoying at some distant period, which may never arrive—nobody comes in for any share. In the midst of his opulence he is regarded as a kind of insolvent, who refuses to honour the bills which their rapacity would draw upon him, and who is by so much the more criminal than other insolvents, as not having the plea of inability for an excuse.

Could there be any doubt of the disfavour which attends the cause of the money-lender in his competition with the borrower, and of the disposition of the public judgment to sacrifice the interest of the former to that of the latter, the stage would afford a compendious but a pretty conclusive proof of it. It is the business of the dramatist to study, and to conform to, the humours and passions of those on the pleasing of whom he depends for his success; it is the course which reflection must suggest to every man, and which a man would naturally fall into, though he were not to think about it. He may, and very frequently does, make magnificent pretences of giving the law to them: but woe be to him that attempts to give to them any other law than what they are disposed already to receive! If he would attempt to lead them one inch, it must be with great caution, and not without suffering himself to be led by them at least a dozen. Now I question whether, among all the instances in which a borrower and a lender of money have been brought together upon the stage, from the days of Thespis to the present, there ever was one in which the former was not recommended to favour in some shape or other—either to admiration, or to love, or to pity, or to all three—and the other, the man of thrift, consigned to infamy.

From Bentham's 'Commonplace Book.'

'O Locke! first master of intellectual truth! without whom those who have taught me would have been as nothing! let thy blest spirit, if now it looketh down upon the affairs of men, acknowledge my obedience to the first great lesson of thy life, in the assertion of independence, and make its report in my favour to the Throne, the Judgment-seat above. Priestley was the first (unless it was Beccaria) who taught my lips to pronounce this sacred truth:—That the greatest happiness of the greatest number is the foundation of morals and legislation. Johnson is the pompous vamer of commonplace morality—of phrases often trite without being true. . . . When the truths in a man's book, though many and important, are fewer than the errors; when his ideas, though the means of producing clear ones in other men, are found to be themselves not clear, that book must die: Montesquieu must therefore die: he must die, as his great countryman, Descartes, had died before him: he must wither as the blade withers when the corn is ripe: he must die, but let tears of gratitude and admiration bedew his grave. O Montesquieu! the British constitution, whose death thou prophesiedst, will live longer than thy work, yet not longer than thy fame. Not even the incense of the illustrious Catharine can preserve thee. Locke—dry, cold, languid, wearisome, will live for ever. Montesquieu—rapid, brilliant, glorious, enchanting—will not outlive his century. I know—I feel—I pity—and blush at the enjoyment of a liberty which the birth-place of that great writer (great with all his faults) forbade him to enjoy. I could make an immense book upon the defects of Montesquieu—I could make not a small one upon his excellencies. It might be worth while to make both, if Montesquieu could live.'

See Life by Bowring in the collected works (in 22 parts, 1838-43; issued in 1844 in 11 vols. by J. H. Burton), Burton's Benthamiana (1843), and C. M. Atkinson's study of his life and work (1903).

William Godwin,

author of Caleb Williams, was born at Wisbech in Cambridgeshire, 3rd March 1756, the seventh of the thirteen children of John Godwin (1723-72), a Dissenting minister, who moved to Debenham in 1758, and in 1760 to Guestwick in Norfolk. After three years' schooling at Hindolveston, three more with a tutor at Norwich, and one as usher in his former school, Godwin in 1773 entered Hoxton Presbyterian College, in 1778 quitted it as pure a Sandemanian and Tory as he had gone in. But during a five years' ministry at Ware, Stowmarket, and Beaconsfield, he turned Socinian and Republican, and by 1787 was a 'complete unbeliever.' Meanwhile he had taken to literature, in 1783-84 writing three novels for £42, a Life of Chatham, and Sketches of History, in Six Sermons. In 1785 he became principal writer in the New Annual Register. The French Revolution gave him an opening, and his Enquiry concerning Political Justice, and its Influences on General Virtue and Happiness (2 vols. 1793; repr. 1926), brought fame, widespread influence, the leadership of a school of thought, and a thousand guineas. It was calmly subversive of everything (law and 'marriage, the worst of all laws'); but as it preached down violence, and was deemed caviare to the multitude, its author escaped prosecution. In Things as they Are, or the Adventures of Caleb Williams (1794), Godwin's aim was to inculcate his characteristic doctrines, and to comprehend 'a general review of the modes of domestic and unrecorded despotism by which man becomes the destroyer of man.' His hero tells his own tale of suffering and of wrong—of innocence persecuted and reduced to the brink of death and infamy by aristocratic power, and by tyrannical or partially administered laws; but his story is so full of interest and vigour that the reader loses sight of the political object and the implied satire, and thinks only of the characters and incidents. The imagination of the novelist overpowered his philosophy; he was a greater inventor than propagandist; and his character of Falkland is one of the most striking in the whole range of English fiction. But the political views he shared were soon brought still more aggressively forward. His friends, Holcroft, Thelwall, Horne Tooke, and others, were arrested and tried on a charge of high treason. Godwin had apparently not been formally associated with their societies, and however obnoxious to those in power, had not rendered himself amenable to the laws of his country. Yet if we may credit a curious entry in Sir Walter Scott's diary, he must have been early mixed up with the English Jacobins. Scott declared that Canning, while in the Temple, was startled out of somewhat revolutionary opinions by a visit from Godwin, who told him 'to his astonishment that, in expectation of a new order of things, the English Jacobins designed to place him, Canning, at the head of the revolution. He was much struck, and asked time to think what course he should take; and having thought the matter over, he went to Mr Pitt, and made the Anti-Jacobin confession of faith.' This must have been before 1793. In any case Godwin was ready with his pen in his friends' defence. Judge Eyre, in his charge to the grand jury, had laid down principles very different from his, and he instantly published Cursory Strictures on the judge's charge, so ably written that the pamphlet is said to have mainly led to the acquittal of the accused.

In 1796 Godwin issued a series of essays on Education, Manners, and Literature, entitled The Inquirer; in August 1797 he married Mary Wollstonecraft, who died five months later after giving birth to a daughter (Mrs Shelley). Godwin's contempt of the ordinary English modes of thinking and acting was displayed by this marriage. His wife brought with her a natural daughter by a former protector, and had lived with Godwin for some time before their marriage: 'The principal motive,' he says, 'for complying with the ceremony was the circumstance of Mary's being in a state of pregnancy.' In the Memoirs of Mary Wollstonecraft Godwin, now written by him, all the details of her life and conduct are minutely related. In 1799 appeared his St Leon, a story of the 'miraculous,' and designed to illustrate human feelings and passions in incredible situations. His hero attains the possession of the philosopher's stone, and secures exhaustless wealth by transmuting the baser metals into gold; at the same time he learns the secret of the elixir vite, by which he has the power of renewing his youth. The romance has many attractions—splendid description and true pathos; its chief defect is an excess of the terrible. In 1800 Godwin produced his unlucky tragedy of Antonio; in 1801, Thoughts on Dr Parr's Spital Sermon, a reply to attacks made upon him, or on his code of morality, by Parr, Mackintosh, and others. In 1803 he brought out a Life of Chaucer, in two quartos. The Life of Chaucer was ridiculed by Scott in the Edinburgh Review for its enormous bulk, minute details, and extraneous dissertations; but it is, for the time, a good and careful piece of work, exhibiting much sound criticism and a relish for true poetry. In 1804 came Fleetwood, or the New Man of Feeling. The title was unfortunate, as reminding the reader of the old Man of Feeling; this new one was self-willed and capricious, a morbid egotist, whose irritability, frantic outbursts of passion, and matrimonial troubles moved contempt rather than sympathy. The better parts of the novel consist of the episode of the Macneills, a tale of family pathos, and some detached descriptions of Welsh scenery. In 1801, after two unsuccessful courtships, Godwin had been married by the bustling widow, Mary Jane Clairmont, his next-door neighbour, who accosted him one day from her balcony: 'Is it possible that I behold the immortal Godwin!' She had two children already, and a third was born of the marriage. So in the family group as now constituted there were poor Fanny Imlay (1794-1816), who died by her own hand; Mary Wollstonecraft Godwin (1797-1851), who in 1816 married Shelley; Charles Clairmont; 'Claire' Clairmont (1797-1879), the mother by Byron of Allegra; and William Godwin (1803-32), to whose posthumous novel, Transfusion, a memoir was prefixed by his father.

In 1805 Godwin, having opened a bookseller's shop in London, under the assumed name of 'Edward Baldwin,' sent forth a number of children's books, small histories and other compilations, some of them by himself; Charles Lamb mentions an English Grammar, in which Hazlitt assisted; and Lamb himself wrote a children's book, The King and Queen of Hearts (reprinted 1902). He tried another tragedy, Faulkner, in 1807, also unsuccessful. Next year he published an Essay on Sepulchres; and in 1815, Lives of Edward and John Phillips, the Nephews of Milton. He had paid a visit to Scotland, and engaged with Constable for another novel, Mandeville, a tale of the times of Cromwell (1817), measured and stately in style, and abounding in that moral anatomy which the author delighted in, but often carried beyond truth and nature. We next find Godwin combating the opinions of Malthus upon Population (1820), and then setting about an elaborate History of the Commonwealth (4 vols. 1824-28). The great men of that era were exactly suited to his taste, with their resolute energy of character, their triumphant hostility to monarchy, their republican enthusiasm, and strange notions of faith. Godwin evidently tasked himself to produce authorities for all he advanced. He took up, as might be expected, strong opinions; but in striving to be accurate and minute, he became too specific and chronological—it was truly said that the History 'creeps and hitches in dates and authorities.' In Cloudesley (1830) he found his new hero, like Caleb Williams, in humble life, and he set him against his patron; but there the parallel ends. The elastic vigour, the verisimilitude, the crowding incidents, the absorbing interest, and the overwhelming catastrophe of Caleb Williams are not to be found in Cloudesley; there is even little delineation of character. Instead we have fine English, 'clouds of reflections without any new occasion to call them forth; an expanded flow of words without a single pointed remark.' The next thing was a metaphysical treatise, Thoughts on Man, &c.; and his last (1834) a compilation, Lives of the Necromancers. In 1833 the revolutionary author accepted the sinecure post of yeoman-usher of the Exchequer, conferred on him by Earl Grey's Ministry; and in the house attached to this appointment, in New Palace Yard, he ended his long and laborious life on 7th April 1836. From Old St Pancras churchyard his body and Mary Wollstonecraft's were removed in 1851 to Bournemouth, where also rests Mrs Shelley.

WILLIAM GODWIN.

From Portrait by John Opie, R.A., in the National Portrait Gallery.

The Life of Godwin (1876), by Mr Kegan Paul, is a valuable if over-eulogistic biography of one who in truth was largely a blend of Micawber and Pecksniff. Yet he unquestionably was one of the most remarkable and influential men of his times. The boldness of his speculations and opinions, his vehemence of feeling, and his irrepressible outspokenness were curiously contrasted with his plodding habits, his imperturbable temper, and the obscure humdrum of his daily life. The most startling and astounding theories were propounded by him with undoubting confidence; and sentiments that, if reduced to action, would have overturned the whole framework of society, were complacently dealt out by their author as if they had merely formed an ordinary portion of a busy literary life. Godwin never willingly destroyed a written line, and his biographer found a vast quantity of letters and manuscripts, some never opened from the day they were laid aside by Godwin's own hand years before his death. The correspondence includes letters from Charles Lamb, Coleridge, Shelley, Wordsworth, Scott, Mackintosh, Lady Caroline Lamb, Mrs Inchbald, and others. The Life shows Godwin's powerful influence on Shelley and Bulwer Lytton; but it was reserved for a Frenchman, M. Émile Legouis, to show in La Jeunesse de Wordsworth (1896; trans. 1897, 1921) that 'The Prelude' and 'The Borderers' were as strongly Godwinian as the 'Lyrical Ballads' were anti-Godwinian.

Caleb Williams, the most interesting and original of Godwin's novels, is altogether a work of extraordinary art and power. It has the plainness of narrative and the apparent reality of the fictions of Defoe or Swift. Caleb Williams, an intelligent young peasant, is employed as secretary and kindly tutor of a sombre and mysterious gentleman named Falkland. Half by chance and half from curiosity he discovers that his master has been guilty of a murder, for which he has allowed two innocent men to be hanged. His knowledge of this secret costs him a long and cruel persecution from Falkland, who at last has him arrested for theft. Driven to bay, Williams at his trial discloses the crime of his master, who dies of shame and despair, while the other is acquitted only to suffer agonies of remorse for sacrificing one who had been his benefactor.

Of the other novels of Godwin, St Leon alone will probably descend to posterity in company with Caleb Williams; though Godwin's romances have all a strong family likeness. If the impossible hypothesis on which St Leon is founded be admitted, then the subordinate incidents are natural and justly proportioned. The possessor of the philosopher's stone is an interesting visionary—a French Falkland of the sixteenth century, and as unfortunate, for his miraculous gifts entail but misery on himself and bring ruin to his family. Even exhaustless wealth is in itself no blessing; and this is the moral of the story. The character of the heroic Marguerite, wife of Leon, is one of the author's finest delineations. Bethlem Gabor is also a vigorous and striking sketch, though introduced too late in the novel to relieve flagging interest.

From 'Caleb Williams.'

I can conceive of no shock greater than that I received from the sight of Mr Falkland. His appearance on the last occasion on which we met had been haggard, ghost-like, and wild, energy in his gestures, and frenzy in his aspect. It was now the appearance of a corpse. He was brought in, in a chair, unable to stand, fatigued and almost destroyed by the journey he had just taken. His visage was colourless; his limbs destitute of motion, almost of life. His head reclined upon his bosom, except that now and then he lifted it up, and opened his eyes with a languid glance, immediately after which he sank back into his former apparent insensibility.

He seemed not to have three hours to live. He had kept his chamber for several weeks, but the summons of the magistrate had been deputed to him at his bedside, his orders respecting letters and written papers being so peremptory that no one dared to disobey them. Upon reading the paper, he was seized with a very dangerous fit; but as soon as he recovered, he insisted upon being conveyed, with all practicable expedition, to the place of appointment. Falkland, in the most helpless state, was still Falkland, firm in command, and capable to extort obedience from every one that approached him.

What a sight was this to me! Here was Falkland, solemnly brought before a magistrate to answer to a charge of murder. Here I stood, having already declared myself the author of the charge, gravely and sacredly pledged to support it. This was my situation; and thus situated I was called upon immediately to act. My whole frame shook. I would eagerly have consented that that moment should have been the last of my existence. I, however, believed that the conduct now most indispensably incumbent on me was to lay the emotions of my soul naked before my hearers. I looked first at Mr Falkland, and then at the magistrate and attendants, and then at Mr Falkland again. My voice was suffocated with agony. I began: 'Would to God it were possible for me to retire from this scene without uttering another word! I would brave the consequences—I would submit to any imputation of cowardice, falsehood, and profligacy, rather than add to the weight of misfortune with which Mr Falkland is overwhelmed. But the situation, and the demands of Mr Falkland himself, forbid me. He in compassion for whose fallen state I would willingly forget every interest of my own, would compel me to accuse, that he might enter upon his justification. I will confess every sentiment of my heart. Mr Falkland well knows—I affirm it in his presence—how unwillingly I have proceeded to this extremity. I have revered him; he was worthy of reverence. From the first moment I saw him, I conceived the most ardent admiration. He condescended to encourage me; I attached myself to him with the fullness of affection. He was unhappy; I exerted myself with youthful curiosity to discover the secret of his woe. This was the beginning of misfortune. What shall I say? He was indeed the murderer of Tyrrel! He suffered the Hawkines to be executed, knowing that they were innocent, and that he alone was guilty! After successive surmises, after various indiscretions on my part, and indications on his, he at length confided to me at full the fatal tale! Mr Falkland! I most solemnly conjure you to recollect yourself! Did I ever prove myself unworthy of your confidence? The secret was a most painful burden to me: it was the extremest folly that led me unthinkingly to gain possession of it; but I would have died a thousand deaths rather than betray it. It was the jealousy of your own thoughts, and the weight that hung upon your mind, that led you to watch my motions, and conceive alarm from every particle of my conduct. You began in confidence—why did you not continue in confidence? . . . I fell at last into the hands of the miscreants. In this terrible situation I, for the first time, attempted, by turning informer, to throw the weight from myself. Happily for me, the London magistrate listened to my tale with insolent contempt. I soon, and long, repented of my rashness, and rejoiced in my miscarriage. I acknowledge that in various ways Mr Falkland showed humanity towards me during this period. He would have prevented my going to prison at first; he contributed to my subsistence during my detention; he had no share in the pursuit that had been set on foot against me: he at length procured my discharge when brought forward for trial. But a great part of his forbearance was unknown to me; I supposed him to be my unrelenting pursuer. I could not forget that, whoever heaped calamities on me in the sequel, they all originated in his forged accusation. The prosecution against me for felony was now at an end. Why were not my sufferings permitted to terminate then, and I allowed to hide my weary head in some obscure yet tranquil retreat? Had I not sufficiently proved my constancy and fidelity? Would not a compromise in this situation have been most wise and most secure? But the restless and jealous anxiety of Mr Falkland would not permit him to repose the least atom of confidence. The only compromise that he proposed was, that, with my own hand, I should sign myself a villain. I refused this proposal, and have ever since been driven from place to place, deprived of peace, of honest fame, even of bread. For a long time I persisted in the resolution that no emergency should convert me into the assailant. In an evil hour I at last listened to my resentment and impatience, and the hateful mistake into which I fell has produced the present scene. I now see that mistake in all its enormity. I am sure that if I had opened my heart to Mr Falkland, if I had told to him privately the tale that I have now been telling, he could not have resisted my reasonable demand. After all his precautions, he must ultimately have depended upon my forbearance. Could he be sure that if I were at last worked up to disclose everything I knew, and to enforce it with all the energy I could exert, I should obtain no credit? If he must in every case be at my mercy, in which mode ought he to have sought his safety—in conciliation, or in inexorable cruelty? Mr Falkland is of a noble nature. Yes! in spite of the catastrophe of Tyrrel, of the miserable end of the Hawkinses, and of all that I have myself suffered, I affirm that he has qualities of the most admirable kind. It is therefore impossible that he could have resisted a frank and fervent expostulation, the frankness and the fervour in which the whole soul was poured out. I despaired while it was yet time to have made the just experiment; but my despair was criminal, was treason against the sovereignty of truth. I have told a plain and unadulterated tale. I came hither to curse, but I remain to bless. I came to accuse, but am compelled to applaud. I proclaim to all the world that Mr Falkland is a man worthy of affection and kindness, and that I am myself the basest and most odious of mankind! Never will I forgive myself the iniquity of this day. The memory will always haunt me, and embitter every hour of my existence. In thus acting, I have been a murderer—a cool, deliberate, unfeeling murderer. I have said what my accursed precipitation has obliged me to say. Do with me as you please. I ask no favour. Death would be a kindness compared to what I feel!

Such were the accents dictated by my remorse. I poured them out with uncontrollable impetuosity, for my heart was pierced, and I was compelled to give vent to its anguish. Every one that heard me was petrified with astonishment. Every one that heard me was melted into tears. They could not resist the ardour with which I praised the great qualities of Falkland; they manifested their sympathy in the tokens of my penitence.

How shall I describe the feelings of this unfortunate man! Before I began he seemed sunk and debilitated, incapable of any strenuous impression. When I mentioned the murder, I could perceive in him an involuntary shuddering, though it was counteracted, partly by the feebleness of his frame, and partly by the energy of his mind. This was an allegation he expected, and he had endeavoured to prepare himself for it. But there was much of what I said of which he had had no previous conception. When I expressed the anguish of my mind, he seemed at first startled and alarmed lest this should be a new expedient to gain credit to my tale. His indignation against me was great for having retained all my resentment towards him, thus, as it might be, in the last hour of his existence. It was increased when he discovered me, as he supposed, using a pretence of liberality and sentiment to give new edge to my hostility. But as I went on, he could no longer resist. He saw my sincerity; he was penetrated with my grief and compunction. He rose from his seat, supported by the attendants, and—to my infinite astonishment—threw himself into my arms!

'Williams,' said he, 'you have conquered! I see too late the greatness and elevation of your mind. I confess that it is to my fault, and not yours, that it is to the excess of jealousy that was ever burning in my bosom that I owe my ruin. I could have resisted any plan of malicious accusation you might have brought against me. But I see that the artless and manly story you have told has carried conviction to every hearer. All my prospects are concluded. All that I most ardently desired is for ever frustrated. I have spent a life of the basest cruelty to cover one act of momentary vice, and to protect myself against the prejudices of my species. I stand now completely detected. My name will be consecrated to infamy, while your heroism, your patience, and your virtues will be for ever admired. You have inflicted on me the most fatal of all mischiefs, but I bless the hand that wounds me. And now—turning to the magistrate—'and now do with me as you please. I am prepared to suffer all the vengeance of the law.'

From 'Political Justice.'

Speak the language of truth and reason to your child, and be under no apprehension for the result. Show him that what you recommend is truly valuable and desirable, and fear not but he will desire it. Convince his understanding, and you enlist all his powers animal and intellectual in your service. How long has the genius of education been disheartened and unnerved by the pretence that man is born all that it is possible for him to become? How long has the jargon imposed upon the world, which would persuade us that in instructing a man you do not add to but unfold his stores? The miscarriages of education do not proceed from the boundedness of its powers, but from the mistakes with which it is accompanied. We often inspire disgust, where we mean to infuse desire. We are wrapped up in ourselves, and do not observe, as we ought, step by step the sensations that pass in the mind of our hearer. We mistake compulsion for persuasion, and delude ourselves into the belief that despotism is the road to the heart.

Education will proceed with a firm step and with genuine lustre when those who conduct it shall know what a vast field it embraces; when they shall be aware that the effect, the question whether the pupil shall be a man of perseverance and enterprise or a stupid and inanimate dolt, depends upon the powers of those under whose direction he is placed, and the skill with which those powers shall be applied. Industry will be exerted with tenfold alacrity when it shall be generally confessed that there are no obstacles to our improvement which do not yield to the powers of industry. Multitudes will never exert the energy necessary to extraordinary success till they shall dismiss the prejudices that fetter them, get rid of the chilling system of occult and inexplicable causes, and consider the human mind as an intelligent agent, guided by motives and prospects presented to the understanding, and not by causes of which we have no proper cognisance and can form no calculation.

MARY WOLLSTONECRAFT GODWIN.

From the Portrait by John Opie, R.A.

Apply these considerations to the subject of politics, and they will authorise us to infer that the excellencies and defects of the human character are not derived from causes beyond the reach of ingenuity to modify and correct. If we entertain false views and be involved in pernicious mistakes, this disadvantage is not the offspring of an irresistible destiny. We have been ignorant, we have been hasty, or we have been misled. Remove the causes of this ignorance or this miscalculation, and the effects will cease. Show me in the clearest and most unambiguous manner that a certain mode of proceeding is most reasonable in itself or most conducive to my interest, and I shall infallibly pursue that mode, as long as the views you suggested to me continue present to my mind. The conduct of human beings in every situation is governed by the judgments they make and the sensations that are communicated to them.

See Lives by Kegan Paul (1876), Ford K. Brown (1926); Brailsford's Shelley, Godwin, and their Circle (1913); French studies by Gourg (1908) and Roussin (1913); Hazlitt's Spirit of the Age; Sir Leslie Stephen's English Thought and Studies of a Biographer (vol. iii.); and the bibliographies to Shelley and Mrs Godwin.

Mary Wollstonecraft Godwin (1759-97), the protagonist of the Rights of Women, was born in London or in Epping Forest district, of Irish extraction, the second of six children. Her father, a drunken ne'er-do-weel, squandered £10,000. At nineteen Mary Wollstonecraft went out to earn her own livelihood, becoming in turn a companion at Bath, a schoolmistress at Newington Green, and governess in Lord Kingsborough's family at Mitchelstown, Dublin, and Bristol. Of those ten years the chief events were her mother's death (1780); the flight of a sister, with Mary's help, from a brutal husband (1784); and a visit to Lisbon to nurse a dying friend (1785). Then in 1788 she turned translator and literary adviser to Johnson, the London publisher, who the year before had paid her ten guineas for her Thoughts on the Education of Daughters. In this capacity she became acquainted not only with the literati of the day, but with reformers—Paine, Priestley, and the painter Fuseli. In 1790 she produced her Vindication of the Rights of Man, an answer to Burke's Reflections on the French Revolution, and in 1791 her Vindication of the Rights of Woman, a book, dedicated to Talleyrand, which made her both famous and infamous. She started alone for Paris in the winter of 1792. There, as a witness of the 'Terror,' she collected materials for her valuable but never-finished Historical and Moral View of the French Revolution (vol. i. 1794); and there, in April 1793, she met Captain Gilbert Imlay, an American timber-merchant and author of a book on the western territory of the American Union. In May 1794 at Havre she bore him a daughter, Fanny; in November 1795, after a four months' visit to Scandinavia as his 'wife' and accredited agent, she tried to drown herself from Putney Bridge. Imlay, whom she adored, had cruelly deserted her. But soon she resumed her old tasks. Ere long she was living, or rather not living, with William Godwin (see p. 702), for both kept their separate lodgings in Somerstown. They had first met in 1791. The coming of a child made them forgo theories and marry in March 1797; on 30th August the child (Mary Wollstonecraft Godwin, afterwards Mrs Shelley) was born; on 10th September the mother died.

High-flown in style and hastily written, her Rights of Woman is nevertheless a work of genius, expounding equality of the sexes and the main doctrines of the present-day Women's movement—a unique achievement for an eighteenth-century woman of imperfect education. Affectionate and beautiful (witness Opie's canvas), she pleaded to and for her sex with great power and originality, without cynicism and without rancour.

Other writings were Mary, a Fiction (1788); Original Stories from Real Life (1788; 2nd ed. 1791, illustrated by Blake); Letters written during a Short Residence in Sweden, Norway, and Denmark (1796); and Posthumous Works (4 vols. 1798), including The Wrongs of Woman: or

Maria, a Fragment, and the passionate Letters to Inlay.

Kegan Paul's edition of these Letters (1879) has a Memoir of her; see also Memoirs by Godwin (1798), Mrs Pennell ('Eminent Women' series, 1885), and Stirling Taylor (1911); a German study of Godwin and Mary Wollstonecraft by Helene Simon (1909); and Selections by Miss Jebb (1912).

Thomas Robert Malthus (1766-1834), author of the Essay on the Principle of Population, was born of good family at his father's estate near Dorking, became a Fellow of Jesus College, Cambridge, and in 1797 curate at Albury in Surrey. In 1798 he published anonymously his famous Essay, of which in 1803 he brought out a greatly enlarged and altered edition. In it he maintained that the optimistic hopes of Rousseau and Godwin are rendered baseless by the natural tendency of population to increase faster than the means of subsistence. The only limit to its increase is the want of room and food. With man, the instinct of propagation is controlled by reason; but even in his case the ultimate check to population is the want of food, though there are both preventive and positive checks—the preventive being moral restraint or prophylactic methods. The positive checks include unwholesome occupations, severe labour, extreme poverty, bad nursing, large towns, excesses of all kinds, diseases and epidemics, wars, plague, and famine. Malthus gives no sanction to the theories and practices currently known as Malthusianism. An amiable and benevolent man, he suffered much misrepresentation and abuse at the hands of both revolutionaries and conservatives. The problem had been handled by Franklin, Hume, and many other writers, but Malthus crystallised the views of those writers, and presented them in systematic form with elaborate proofs derived from history. Darwin saw, 'on reading Malthus On Population, that natural selection was the inevitable result of the rapid increase of all organic beings,' for such rapid increase necessarily leads to the struggle for existence; and Mr H. G. Wells, most audacious of those who have a prophetic glimpse of the future reconstruction of social conditions, describes the Essay as the most 'shattering' book that ever has been or will be written. In 1804 Malthus married happily, and next year was appointed Professor of Political Economy and Modern History in the East India college at Haileybury, a post which he occupied till his death. He wrote other two important works, An Inquiry into the Nature and Progress of Rent (1815), largely anticipating Ricardo, and Principles of Political Economy (1820). Thus Malthus states part of his thesis in the first chapter of the Essay:

It may safely be pronounced, therefore, that population, when unchecked, goes on doubling itself every twenty-five years, or increases in a geometrical ratio.

The rate according to which the productions of the earth may be supposed to increase, it will not be so easy to determine. Of this, however, we may be perfectly certain, that the ratio of their increase must be totally of a different nature from the ratio of the increase of population. . . .

That we may be the better able to compare the increase of population and food, let us make a supposition which, without pretending to accuracy, is clearly more favourable to the power of production in the earth than any experience we have had of its qualities will warrant.

Let us suppose that the yearly additions which might be made to the former average produce, instead of decreasing, which they certainly would do, were to remain the same; and that the produce of this island might be increased every twenty-five years, by a quantity equal to what it at present produces. The most enthusiastic speculator cannot suppose a greater increase than this. In a few centuries it would make every acre of land in the island like a garden.

If this supposition be applied to the whole earth, and if it be allowed that the subsistence for man which the earth affords might be increased every twenty-five years by a quantity equal to what it at present produces, this will be supposing a rate of increase much greater than we can imagine that any possible exertions of mankind could make it.

It may be fairly pronounced, therefore, that, considering the present average state of the earth, the means of subsistence, under circumstances the most favourable to human industry, could not possibly be made to increase faster than in an arithmetical ratio.

The necessary effects of these two different rates of increase, when brought together, will be very striking. Let us call the population of this island eleven millions; and suppose the present produce equal to the easy support of such a number. In the first twenty-five years the population would be twenty-two millions, and the food being also doubled, the means of subsistence would be equal to this increase. In the next twenty-five years the population would be forty-four millions, and the means of subsistence only equal to the support of thirty-three millions. In the next period the population would be eighty-eight millions, and the means of subsistence just equal to the support of half of that number. And at the conclusion of the first century the population would be a hundred and seventy-six millions, and the means of subsistence only equal to the support of fifty-five millions, leaving a population of a hundred and twenty-one millions totally unprovided for.

Taking the whole earth, instead of this island, emigration would of course be excluded; and, supposing the present population equal to a thousand millions, the human species would increase as the numbers 1, 2, 4, 8, 16, 32, 64, 128, 256, and subsistence as 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9. In two centuries the population would be to the means of subsistence as 256 to 9; in three centuries as 4096 to 13, and in two thousand years the difference would be almost incalculable.

In this supposition no limits whatever are placed to the produce of the earth. It may increase for ever, and be greater than any assignable quantity; yet still the power of population being in every period so much superior, the increase of the human species can only be kept down to the level of the means of subsistence by the constant operation of the strong law of necessity, acting as a check upon the greater power.

See Bonar's Malthus and his Work (1885; new ed. 1905).

George Alexander Stevens (1710–84), author of A Lecture upon Heads, dramatic sketches of contemporary follies, and of the famous song, 'Cease, rude Boreas, blustering railer,' was bred a London tradesman, became an unsuccessful actor, and secured a precarious livelihood by writing poems, poor dramas, burlesques, skits, and 'humorous miscellanies,' and by giving single-handed 'entertainments,' a department of song, speech, and extravaganza in which he was a pioneer. In a collection of songs by various hands published by him, 'Hearts of Oak' was first definitely ascribed to Garrick.

Charles Dibdin (1745–1814), writer and composer of many famous songs, was born at Southampton, early attracted notice by his singing, and, still a boy, composed an operetta, The Shepherd's Artifice, which was produced at Covent Garden in 1762. He subsequently lived an unsettled life as an actor and composer of stage-music, and on occasion sang and accompanied himself on his own instrument. He quarrelled frequently and violently with patrons like Garrick, made himself impossible under Sheridan's management at Drury Lane, neglected his first wife, and cherished irregular relations with various other women. In 1788 he commenced a series of musical entertainments (sometimes diversified with equestrian feats), which acquired great celebrity; the first was entitled The Whim of the Moment. He retired in 1805 with a pension of £200 granted him two years before; it was withdrawn in 1807, when he returned to public life with unfortunate financial results. Dibdin wrote nearly a hundred sea-songs, 'the solace of sailors in long voyages, in storms, and in battles'—among the best 'Poor Jack' and 'Tom Bowling'; one of the first, 'Blow high, blow low,' sung in Dibdin's piece called Seraglio in 1776, was brought to birth during a gale on the return voyage from Calais, whither he had fled to escape a debtor's prison. Seamen are wont to say it is only too obvious that his sea-songs are songs written about the sea and about seamen, not by one of themselves, but by a typical landsman. Another famous song of the inexhaustible verse-writer is 'The Anchorsmiths.' He also wrote nearly seventy dramatic pieces.

Tom Bowling.

Here, a sheer hulk, lies poor Tom Bowling,
The darling of our crew;
No more he'll hear the tempest howling,
For Death has broached him to.
His form was of the manliest beauty,
His heart was kind and soft;
Faithful below he did his duty,
But now he's gone aloft.

Tom never from his word departed,
His virtues were so rare;
His friends were many and true-hearted,
His Poll was kind and fair;

And then he'd sing so blithe and jolly;
Ah, many's the time and oft!
But mirth is turned to melancholy,
For Tom is gone aloft.

Yet shall poor Tom find pleasant weather,
When He, who all commands,
Shall give, to call life's crew together,
The word to pipe all hands.
Thus Death, who kings and tars despatches,
In vain Tom's life has doffed;
For though his body's under hatches,
His soul is gone aloft.

Poor Jack.

Go, patter to lubbers and swabs, do you see,
'Bout danger, and fear, and the like;
A tight-water boat and good sea-room give me,
And it a'nt to a little I'll strike.
Though the tempest top-gallant mast smack smooth should smite,
And shiver each splinter of wood,
Clear the deck, stow the yards, and bouse everything tight,
And under reefed foresail we'll scud:
Avast! nor don't think me a milksop so soft,
To be taken for trifles aback;
For they say there's a Providence sits up aloft,
To keep watch for the life of poor Jack!

I heard our good chaplain palaver one day
About souls, heaven, mercy, and such;
And, my timbers! what lingo he'd coil and belay;
Why, 'twas just all as one as High Dutch;
For he said how a sparrow can't founder, d'ye see,
Without orders that come down below;
And a many fine things that proved clearly to me
That providence takes us in tow:
For, says he, do you mind me, let storms e'er so oft
Take the top-sails of sailors aback,
There's a sweet little cherub that sits up aloft,
To keep watch for the life of poor Jack!

Two of his sons, Charles (1768–1833) and Thomas John (1771–1841), wrote songs and dramas. See Dibdin's Autobiography (4 vols. 1803) and The Dibdins, by E. R. Dibdin (1888).

John Collins, actor, entertainer, and song-writer, was humbly born at Bath; was bred a staymaker but became a fairly successful actor; and from 1775 till the end of the century gave in London and elsewhere popular entertainments which were a medley of anecdotes, theatrical reminiscences, jokes, mock-heroic speeches, sentiments, and caricature of Scotsmen, Irishmen, and Welshmen. He died in 1808, having for some years been part-proprietor of a Birmingham newspaper, in which his songs (some of them represented in anthologies like Palgrave's and Locker-Lampson's) were originally published. One 'truly noble poem,' To-morrow, was obviously suggested by Walter Pope's Old Man's Wish (see page 98).

To-morrow.

In the downhill of life, when I find I'm declining,
May my lot no less fortunate be
Than a snug elbow-chair can afford for reclining,
And a cot that o'erlooks the wide sea;

With an ambling pad-pony to pace o'er the lawn,
While I carol away idle sorrow,
And blithe as the lark that each day hails the dawn,
Look forward with hope for to-morrow.

With a porch at my door, both for shelter and shade too,
As the sunshine or rain may prevail ;
And a small spot of ground for the use of the spade too,
With a barn for the use of the flail :
A cow for my dairy, a dog for my game,
And a putse when a friend wants to borrow ;
I'll envy no nabob his riches or fame,
Nor what honours await him to-morrow.

From the bleak northern blast may my cot be completely
Secured by a neighbouring hill ;
And at night may repose steal upon me more sweetly
By the sound of a murmuring rill :
And while peace and plenty I find at my board,
With a heart free from sickness and sorrow,
With my friends may I share what to-day may afford,
And let them spread the table to-morrow.

And when I at last must throw off this frail covering
Which I've worn for three-score years and ten,
On the brink of the grave I'll not seek to keep hovering,
Nor my thread wish to spin o'er again :
But my face in the glass I'll serenely survey,
And with smiles count each wrinkle and furrow ;
As this old worn-out stuff which is threadbare to-day,
May become everlast ng to-morrow.

Scriptorapologia, or Colian's Doggerel Dish of all Sorts (1804), is a volume of his poems.

Thomas Morton (1764-1838), dramatist, was born in Durham, and quitted Lincoln's Inn for play-writing. For thirty-five years he lived at Pangbourn near Reading, and finally settled in London, where he died. Between his first drama, Columbus (1792), and his musical farce, The Invincibles (1828), he produced some five-and-twenty pieces, besides others written in collaboration with his son. Many of them were very successful, and had parts in them which became famous. Speed the Plough, acted at Covent Garden forty-one times in 1798 and repeatedly revived, is a five-act comedy with some of the worst faults of transpontine melodrama ; it is ill-constructed, and the incidents are not led up to ; the personages behave in an incredibly irrational manner, and often snivel, drivel, and talk fustian. But it contains some happy strokes, and had the luck of introducing Mrs Grundy to the world. In the play she does not specifically appear in the character the world has insisted in associating with her name. She is by no means the incarnation of 'suspicion' and censoriousness, of narrow-mindedness and philistine prejudice. On the contrary, she is simply the neighbour farmer's worthy wife, of whom Dame Ashfield is just a little jealous. Dame Ashfield is annoyed when Mrs Grundy's butter is praised as the best in the market ; she is pleased, if she receives a compliment, that Mrs Grundy should be there to hear it ; and feels that her happiness at the splendour of her own pretty daughter's marriage to a gentleman of rank will not be complete unless Mrs Grundy is there to witness it, and be a little humbled in consequence. Mrs Grundy, so far from being a universal or spiteful censo morum, is from her various and undisputed excellences an inevitable standard of reference in Dame Ashfield's mind and conversation, to the great annoyance of Farmer Ashfield. The farmer has nothing to say against Mrs Grundy herself ; it is in his wife he sees signs of an unamiable temper. Mrs Grundy never actually appears in the play, but is referred to in the following passages, and in them only.

Mrs Grundy.

FARMER ASHFIELD on a stool, with his pipe and jug on the table. Enter DAME ASHFIELD, basket on arm.

Ashfield. Well, dame, welcome whoam. What news does thee bring vrom market ?

Dame. What news, husband ? What I have always told thee ; that Farmer Grundy's wheat brought five shillings a quarter more than ours did.

Ash. All the better vor he.

Dame. Ah ! the sun seems to shine on purpose for him.

Ash. Come, come, Missus, as thee has not the grace to thank God for prosperous times, dan't thee grumble when they be unkindly a bit.

Dame. And I assure thee, Dame Grundy's butter was quite the crack of the market.

Ash. Be quiet, woolye ? always ding dinging Dame Grundy into my ears—what will Mrs Grundy zay ? What will Mrs Grundy think ? Canst thee be quiet, let her alone, and behave thyself pratty ?

Dame. Certainly I can—I'll tell thee, Tummus, what she said at church last Sunday.

Ash. Canst thee tell what parson zaid ? Noa ! Then I'll tell thee. A' zaid that envy were as foul a weed as grows, and cankers all wholesome plants that be near it—that's what a zaid.

Dame. And do you think I envy Mrs Grundy, indeed ?

Ash. Why dan't thee letten her alone then ? I do verily think when thee goest to t'other world, the vurst question thee'll ax 'ill be, if Mrs Grundy's there ? Zoa be quiet, and behave pratty, doo 'e. Has thee brought whoam the Salisbury News !

Dame. No, Tummus ; but I have brought a rare budget of news with me. First and foremost, I saw such a mort of coaches, servants, and wagons, all belonging to Sir Abel Handy, and all coming to the castle ; and a handsome young man, dressed all in lace, pull'd off his hat to me, and said, 'Mrs Ashfield, do me the honour of presenting that letter to your husband.' So there he stood without his hat. Oh, Tummus, had you seen how Mrs Grundy looked.

Ash. Dom Mrs Grundy ; be quiet, and let I read, woolye ? [Reads.] 'My dear Farmer' [taking off his hat]. Thankye, zur ; zame to you wi' all my heart and soul. 'My dear Farmer'—

Dame. Farmer—why, thee're blind, Tummus—it is 'My dear Feyther'—'Tis from our own dear Susan.

Ash. Odds ! dickens and daizies ! zoo it be, zure enow ! 'My dear Feyther, you will be surprised'—Zoo I be, he, he ! what pretty writing, beant it ? all as straight as thof it were ploughed—'surprised to hear that in a few hours I shall embrace you. Nelly, who was formerly our servant, has fortunately married Sir Abel Handy Bart.'

Dame. Handy Bart—pugh! Bart. stands for Baro-night, man.

Ash. Likely, likely. Drabbit it, only to think of the zwaps and changes of this world!

Dame. Our Nelly married to a great baronet! I wonder, Tummus, what Mrs Grundy will say?

Ash. Now, woolye be quiet and let I read—'And she has proposed bringing me to see you; an offer, I hope, as acceptable to my dear feyther'—

Dame. 'And mother'—

Ash. Bless her, how prettily she do write 'feyther,' dan't she?

Dame. And 'mother.'

Ash. Ees, but feyther first, though—'as acceptable to my dear feyther and mother as to their affectionate daughter, Susan Ashfield.'

A facetious personage in the play, seeing Dame Ashfield making lace on a pillow, opens the conversation thus:

Bob. How do you do? How do you do? Making lace, I perceive. Is it a common employment here?

Dame. Oh, no, sir; nobody can make it in these parts but myself. Mrs Grundy, indeed, pretends; but, poor woman, she knows no more of it than you do.

Bob. Than I do? that's vastly well. My dear madam, I passed two months at Mechlin for the express purpose.

Dame. Indeed!

Bob. You don't do it right; now I can do it much better than that. Give me leave, and I'll show you the true Mechlin method. [Turns the cushion round, kneels down, and begins working.] First you see, so—then so—

Even at the next mention of her name, Mrs Grundy is simply a respected neighbour, not a prude or hypocrite:

Ash. I tell ye, I zee'd un gi' Susan a letter, an' I dan't like it a bit.

Dame. Nor I;—if shame should come to the poor child—I say, Tummus, what would Mrs Grundy say then?

Ash. Dom Mrs Grundy; what would my poor wold heart say? but I be bound it be all innocence.

When the brave farmer and his wife refuse to turn out of their house, at the wicked baronet's command, the (unrevealed) son of the baronet's brother and victim, the wicked baronet proceeds to sell up the farmer, who is in his debt. The farmer and his wife talk over the unpleasant prospect.

Ash. Drabbit it! what can he do? he can't send us to gaol. Why, I have corn will sell for half the money I do owe 'un—and han't I cattle and sheep?—deadly lean, to be sure—and han't I a thumping silver watch, almost as big as thy head? and Dame here ha' got—How many silk gowns have thee got, Dame?

Dame. Three, Tummus—and sell them all, and I'll go to church in a stuff one, and let Mrs Grundy turn up her nose as much as she pleases.

By a well-nigh miraculous intervention the tide turns, and a wealthy suitor asks the farmer's daughter in marriage.

Ash. Drabbit, I shall walk in the road all day to zee Sue ride by in her own coach.

Susan. You must ride with me, father.

Dame. I say, Tummus, what will Mrs Grundy say then?

And a little farther on:

Ash. Bless her, how nicely she do trip it away with the gentry!

Dame. And then, Tummus, think of the wedding.

Ash. [Reflecting.] I declare I shall be just the same ever—maybe, I may buy a smartish bridle, or a silver backy-stopper, or the like o' that.

Dame. [Apart.] And then, when we come out of church, Mrs Grundy will be standing about there.

Ash. I shall shake hands agreeably wi' all my friends. [Apart.]

Dame. [Apart.] Then I just look at her in this manner.

Ash. [Apart, and bowing towards centre.] How dost do, Peter? Ah, Dick! glad to zee thee, wi' all my zoul!

Dame. [Apart.] Then, with a kind of half curtsy, I shall— [They bump against each other.]

Ash. What an wold fool thee beest, dame! Come along, and behave pratty, do'e. [Exeunt.]

Frederic Reynolds (1764–1841), produced about a hundred plays, tragic or comic, of which some twenty were popular for a time at least. He was the son of a London merchant, and was educated at Westminster School; but he left law for dramatic work, Werter (1785), based on Goethe, being his first piece. But the bulk of his work was in comedy, and his most successful play was The Dramatist (1789). In The Caravan, produced by Sheridan at Drury Lane, a live dog was made to save a child from drowning in real water, and, as Sheridan said, saved the theatre too, when at a crisis, by its success. Reynolds published an Autobiography in 1826.

John Tobin (1770–1804) was an unlucky dramatist, who spent weary years in trying to get his plays accepted, and seeing them successively rejected till the very year of his death, when his Honey Moon, his fourteenth piece, was not merely accepted at Drury Lane, but secured a success it maintained for twenty years. Tobin, born in Salisbury, was articled to a solicitor in Lincoln's Inn, and practised law there while producing his plays. The Honey Moon, a comedy mostly in verse, was translated into French by Charles Nodier; other comedies, in prose or verse, were The Curfew, The Connoisseur, and The Fair Table. A volume of his plays was published in 1820, with a Life by Miss Benger.

William Barnes Rhodes (1772–1826), born in Leeds, became a chief teller in the Bank of England, and is barely remembered in literature as the author of a once popular burlesque, Bombastes Furioso; for of the many who know the title of the piece and have some notion of the character of the mouthing braggart who is its hero, comparatively few know anything about the author. The title is obviously a play on Orlando Furioso, and the design is similar to that of Carey's Chronologicalhotonhologos, though the plot is, if possible, sillier.

—of course designedly so. Artaxominous (sic) is king of Utopia, Fusbos his minister, and Bombastes his victorious general. The king makes love to the sweetheart of Bombastes, who after thinking on suicide resolves rather to make war with the whole world. • The principal personages are all slain, but rise again to sing a song with the simple but not too melodious refrain—

Tu ral, lu ral, la,
Tu ral, lu ral, laddi.

Thus Bombastes soliloquises in the crisis of his affairs :

Bombas. Gentle musician, let thy dulcet strain Proceed—play 'Michael Wiggins' once again. [Hedoes so.] Music's the food of love; give o'er, give o'er, For I must batten on that food no more. [Exit Fifer.] My happiness is chang'd to doleful dumps, Whilst, merry Michael, all thy cards were trumps. So, should some youth by fortune's blest decrees, Possess at least a pound of Cheshire cheese, And, bent some favour'd party to regale, Lay in a kilderkin, or so, of ale; Lo, angry fate! In one unlucky hour Some hungry rats may all the cheese devour, And the loud thunder turn the liquor sour. [Forms his sash into a noose.] Alas! alack! alack! and well-a-day, That ever man should make himself away! That ever man for woman false should die, As many have, and so, and so [prepares to hang himself, tries the sensation, but disapproves of the result] won't I! No, I'll go mad! 'gainst all I'll vent my rage, [wage! And with this wicked wanton world a woeful war I'll [Hangs his boots to the arm of a tree, and, taking a scrap of paper, with a pencil writes this couplet, which he attaches to them, repeating the words: 'Who dares this pair of boots displace, Must meet Bombastes face to face.'] Thus do I challenge all the human race. [Draws his sword, and retires up the stage, and off.]

The piece, at first anonymous, was produced in 1810. Rhodes published besides a verse translation of Juvenal and some epigrams.

William Henry Ireland (1777–1835) was the name of the forger of Shakespearean MSS., but he sometimes prefixed Samuel, or signed himself 'Samuel Ireland, Junr'. His father, Samuel Ireland, was originally a weaver, but became an etcher, then a dealer in scarce books and prints, and produced a long series of Picturesque Tours, illustrated by aquatints and lithographs. The son (by a housekeeper) was articled to a conveyancer in New Inn, was fond of the stage, and was profoundly impressed by the story of Chatterton. The curio-collecting bookseller was morbidly anxious to discover some scrap of Shakespeare's handwriting, and this set the youth to manufacture a number of documents, which he pretended to have got from a mysterious gentleman of fortune, who preferred not to be known save as 'M. H.' 'Amongst a mass of family papers,' says the elder Ireland of his son's portentous discoveries, 'the contracts between Shakespeare, Lowine, and Condelle, and the lease granted by him and Hemynge to Michael Fraser, which was first found, were discovered; and soon afterwards the deed of gift to William Henry Ireland (described as the friend of Shakespeare, in consequence of his having saved his life on the river Thames), and also the deed of trust to John Hemynge, were discovered. In pursuing this search he was so fortunate as to meet with some deeds very material to the interests of this gentleman. At this house the principal part of the papers, together with a great variety of books, containing his manuscript notes, and three manuscript plays, with part of another, were discovered.' These forged documents included, besides the deeds, a Protestant Confession of Faith by Shakespeare; letters from him to Anne Hathaway, the Earl of Southampton, and others; a letter to Shakespeare from Queen Elizabeth (attested by him); an original version of King Lear; parts of Hamlet; and two professedly Shakespearean dramas, Vortigern and Rowena and Henry II. Such a treasure was pronounced invaluable, and the manuscripts were exhibited at the elder Ireland's house in Norfolk Street. A fierce and tangled controversy arose as to the genuineness of the documents, in which Malone took an energetic part in proving that they were forged; but the productions found many admirers and believers, including James Boswell, Joseph Warton, Dr Parr, and Pye the laureate; though to all who knew anything about the older English, it should have been plain that the writer of these documents knew less about sixteenth century spelling than Chatterton did about the English of the fifteenth—as plain as that whereas Chatterton was a genius and a poet, Ireland was but a smart attorney's clerk. The recipe for restoring Shakespeare was mainly the systematic doubling of final consonants and adding an e, the substitution of y for i, the omission of all punctuation, the derangement of capitals, &c., with a few arbitrary alterations here and there, as will be seen from a few lines of Ireland's Kyng Lear :

Enterre Kent Gloster and Edmund

Kent I thoughte oure kinge had more affectedde the Duke of Albanye than Cornewalle

Glo So didde itte everre feeme to use Butte nowe inne the divyfyonne of the Kyngedomme itte appeares notte whiche of these Dukes he Values moſte forre Qualytyes arre fo weyghd thatte curyofytye inne neytherre canne make choyce of thothers Moietye

All the MSS. but those of Vortigern and of Henry II. were published by subscription and in fac-simile in a large and splendid volume. Vortigern was brought out by Sheridan at Drury Lane Theatre in 1796, John Kemble acting the principal character. Kemble, however, was not duped by the young forger; Mrs Siddons threw up her part; and the representation completely broke up the imposture. The structure and language of the piece were at once so feeble and extravagant that no intelligent audience could believe it to have been Shakespeare's. As the play proceeded, the torrent of ridiculous bombast overtaxed the endurance of the audience; and when Kemble gravely declaimed—

And when this solemn mockery is o'er,

the pit rose and closed the scene with shrieks of laughter. So impudent a fabrication—made the subject of James Payn's The Talk of the Town in 1885—was perhaps never before thrust upon public notice. The young adventurer, foiled in this effort, attempted to earn distinction as a novelist and dramatist, but utterly failed. In 1796 he published a confession of the Shakespearean forgery, An Authentic Account of the Shaksperian MSS., expanded in 1805 into Confessions, in which he makes this declaration: 'I solemnly declare, first, that my father was perfectly unacquainted with the whole affair, believing the papers most firmly the productions of Shakespeare. Secondly, that I am myself both the author and writer, and had no aid from any soul living, and that I should never have gone so far, but that the world praised the papers so much, and thereby flattered my vanity. Thirdly, that any publication which may appear tending to prove the manuscripts genuine, or to contradict what is here stated, is false; this being the true account.' The old man, whose credit was seriously compromised by the impostures, plaintively professed till his death in 1800 to believe in the whole of the documents, and to deny that his son could have written the plays. Of the half-dozen novels (The Woman of Feeling, Gonzex the Monk, Rizzio, &c.), ballads and narrative poems, satires and political squibs, and dramas such as Mutius Scaevola, it may at least be said that they showed sufficient facility and faculty to prove that he had all the mental equipment necessary to produce the forgeries. He wrote a Life of Napoleon, translated Voltaire's Pucelle, and did a vast amount of precarious and miscellaneous hack-work; but his work brought him little credit and no success, and never attracted a tittle of the notice that attended his youthful exploits.

Samuel Ireland, still believing in their authenticity, published Vortigern and Henry II., but not in the 'original' spelling, in 1799. The following speech by the hero was considered the 'most sublime passage' in Vortigern:

Vortigern. Time was, alas! I needed not this spur.
But here 's a secret and a stinging thorn, [science!
That wounds my troubl'd nerves. O! conscience! con-
When thou didst cry, I strove to stop thy mouth,
By boldly thrusting on thee dire ambition:
Then did I think myself, indeed, a god!
But I was sore deceiv'd; for as I pass'd,
And travers'd in proud triumph the Basse-court,
There I saw death, clad in most hideous colours:
A sight it was, that did appal my soul;
Yea, curdled thick this mass of blood within me.
Full fifty breathless bodies struck my sight;
And some, with gaping mouths, did seem to mock me;
While others, smiling in cold death itself,

Scoffingly bade me look on that, which soon
Would wrench from off my brow this sacred crown,
And make me, too, a subject like themselves:
Subject! to whom? To thee, O! sovereign death!
That hast for thy domain this world immense;
Churchyards and charnel-houses are thy haunts,
And hospitals thy sumptuous palaces;
And when thou wouldst be merry, thou dost choose
The gaudy chamber of a dying king.
Oh, then thou dost wide ope thy bony jaws,
And with rude laughter and fantastic tricks,
Thou clapp'st thy rattling fingers to thy sides;
With icy hand thou tak'st him by the feet,
And upward so till thou dost reach his heart,
And wrap'st him in the cloak of lasting night.

John Taylor (1750-1826), founder of the literary family of 'the Taylors of Norwich,' was in no wise connected with William Taylor, also 'of Norwich,' the promoter of German studies in England. John Taylor was a yarn-factor in Norwich, a writer of many hymns used in the Unitarian churches, and an advanced Liberal, who wrote one famous song, 'The Trumpet of Liberty.' His wife, Susanna Cook, was also a woman of strong character and many accomplishments, the friend of many eminent men and women. Among their seven children were several authors—one of them, Sarah, John Austin's wife. This John Taylor was descended from the famous John Taylor (1694-1761), a Dissenting clergyman who taught a modified form of Trinitarianism, and as an opponent of Calvinism and the orthodox doctrine of the atonement, exercised a wide and permanent influence in England, Scotland, and New England. From 1733 he was a pastor in Norwich; from 1757 a lecturer in the Warrington Academy. [Isaac Taylor and his family were of 'the Taylors of Ongar.']

William Taylor, 'of Norwich' (1765-1836), is credited with having given a great impulse to the study of German literature in England, before his time hardly known save in connection with some dramas such as Kotzebue's, and some little read translations from Klopstock and Gessner. Taylor did much to show his countrymen that German was a great literature, made the study of it incumbent on the learned, and so became the spiritual midwife of Scott and his contemporaries. He was the son of a Unitarian merchant, entered his father's counting-house in 1779, and, sent next year to the Continent, mastered French, Italian, and German (1780-88). The French Revolution indoctrinated him with democratic ideas and began the ruin of his father's business—completed by the American troubles and other disasters; and Taylor turned to literature. He introduced to English readers the poetry and drama of Germany, mainly through criticisms and translations in periodicals, collected in his Historic Survey of German Poetry (1828-30). The first fruits were his verse translations of Bürger's Lenore, Lessing's Nathan, and Goethe's Iphigenia in Tauris, all written in 1790.

Pye had already translated Lenore in 1782, but this version was not published till 1795; and it was Taylor's translation, read by Mrs Barbauld in Edinburgh and repeated to him by a friend who had been present, that so stirred Scott—'made him a poet,' Scott said—and sent him too to Bürger. Tales of Yore was another book of translations, mainly stories; and another outcome of this miscellaneous work was English Synonyms Discriminated (1813), where, for example, he draws between Fancy and Imagination the distinction Wordsworth adopted and worked out. The mannerisms of his prose and his word-coining led Mackintosh to speak of the 'Taylorian language.' He was advanced in politics, more advanced or even paradoxical in theology. Borrow's Lavengro describes his philosophy, his scepticism, and his inveterate smoking.

His correspondence with Southey, Scott, Mackintosh, Godwin, and others is given in the Life of him by Robberds (1842); and see Georg Herzfeld, Taylor von Norwich, eine Studie (1897).

Vicesimus Knox (1752–1821) earned a title to commemoration in this work as compiler of the long-famous Elegant Extracts; his sermons, his essays, his treatises on Liberal Education and on The Lord's Supper, and his aggressive Whig Spirit of Despotism, 'dedicated to' and levelled at Castlereagh, are all equally forgotten. The son of a master in Merchant Taylors' School, afterwards headmaster of Tunbridge School, he was educated at Merchant Taylors' and St John's, Oxford, and from 1778 to 1812 held the post at Tunbridge vacated by his father. He was also rector of two small livings in Essex, but from 1812 lived mainly in London. The first Elegant Extracts bore to be 'useful and entertaining passages in prose selected for the improvement of scholars at classical and other schools in the art of speaking, in reading, thinking, composing, and the conduct of life,' and appeared in a quarto in 1783; the poetical series appeared in 1789, and the Elegant Epistles, a 'selection of familiar and amusing letters,' followed in 1790. The three series were constantly reprinted, separately or jointly (often in six volumes; sometimes with a select series of sermons appended), on till about the middle of the nineteenth century. In spite of the name, the selections constituted a valuable and most serviceable work. Even in their own day they must have been regarded as on the whole more improving than amusing; one of the things that entertains a modern reader is the way in which he finds, amidst extracts from Dr Johnson, Dr Parr, Mr Gibbon, &c., others described simpliciter as being by Moses, David, and Job—Knox's plan comprising passages from the authorised version of Scripture.

Francis Douce (1757–1834), an eccentric and learned antiquary, born in London, was some time keeper of the British Museum MSS.; he deserves mention here mainly for his Illustrations of Shakespeare (1807) and a book on The Dance of Death (1833). He bequeathed his splendid collection of books, MSS., prints, and coins to the Bodleian; his curiosities to Sir Samuel R. Meyrick; and his letters and commonplace-books to the British Museum in a chest not to be opened till 1900. When the seal on the latter was solemnly broken and the papers examined in May of 1900, the documents were found to contain no important mysteries and to have little interest or value of any kind.

William Sotheby (1757–1833), son of an officer of good family, was born in London and bred at Harrow and the Military Academy of Angers. When stationed with his regiment at Edinburgh he became Sir Walter Scott's friend, and when he retired from the army, welcomed Scott to his house in London, and made him known to many of his intimates, who included Wordsworth, Coleridge, Byron, Rogers, Moore, and all the brilliant literary circles they represented. Byron afterwards called Sotheby's works trash, and said he 'imitated everybody, and occasionally surpassed his models.' Sotheby published Poems in 1790, secured the esteem of Wieland by a translation of Oberon (1798), and when his version of Virgil's Georgics appeared, was acclaimed by Jeffrey and Christopher North as author of the best translation in the language. None of his dramas, Oberon, Julian and Agnes, or The Confession, Llewelyn the Great, and the rest (some nine in all, in blank verse), were successful; and his odes, epics, poetical epistles, &c., 'On the Battle of the Nile,' on 'Saul,' 'Constance of Castille' (in imitation of the Lady of the Lake), met with little public favour. His last considerable enterprise, a translation of the Iliad and the Odyssey in rhyming couplets, followed Pope's model, but was perhaps less Homeric.

Richard Sharp (1759–1835), commonly called 'Conversation Sharp,' was born in Newfoundland, and made a fortune in London as a West India merchant and hat manufacturer. After mingling in the distinguished society of London, from the days of Johnson and Burke to those of Byron, Rogers, and Moore, in 1834 he published—at first anonymously—a volume of Letters and Essays in Prose and Verse. Rogers thought it hardly equal to Sharp's reputation; Mackintosh, however, termed Sharp the best critic he had ever known. Sharp was in Parliament off and on from 1806 to 1827, and left £250,000 realised in business. The Essays show knowledge of the world and sound sense, as may be seen from these maxims and reflections:

Satirical writers and talkers are not half so clever as they think themselves, nor as they ought to be. They do winnow the corn, 'tis true, but 'tis to feed upon the chaff. I am sorry to add that they who are always speaking ill of others are also very apt to be doing ill to them. It requires some talent and some generosity to find out talent and generosity in others; though nothing but self-conceit and malice are needed to discover or to imagine faults. The most gifted men that I have known have been the least addicted to depreciate either friends or foes. Dr Johnson, Mr Burke, and Mr Fox were always more inclined to overrate them. Your shrewd, sly, evil-speaking fellow is generally a shallow personage, and frequently he is as venomous and as false when he flatters as when he reviles—he seldom praises John but to vex Thomas.

Trifling precautions will often prevent great mischiefs; as a slight turn of the wrist parries a mortal thrust.

Untoward accidents will sometimes happen; but after many, many years of thoughtful experience, I can truly say that nearly all those who began life with me have succeeded or failed as they deserved.

Even sensible men are too commonly satisfied with tracing their thoughts a little way backwards; and they are, of course, soon perplexed by a profounder adversary. In this respect, most people's minds are too like a child's garden, where the flowers are planted without their roots. It may be said of morals and of literature as truly as of sculpture and painting, that to understand the outside of human nature we should be well acquainted with the inside.

Sir Samuel Egerton Brydges (1762–1837), born at Wooton House in Kent, and educated at Maidstone, Canterbury, and Queen's College, Cambridge, was called to the Bar in 1787, but retired five years later to his books at his country house in Kent. He published poetry and novels of much less value than his edition of Edward Philip's Theatrum Poetarum Anglicanorum (1800), his Censura Literaria, containing Titles and Opinions of old English Books (10 vols. 1805–9), and his edition of Collins' Peerage of England (9 vols. 1812). The claim of his family to the barony of Chandos broke down, but Brydges was gratified with a Swedish knighthood in 1808 and an English baronetcy in 1814. He represented Maidstone in 1812–18, and printed privately at the 'Lee Priory Press' small editions of many rare Elizabethan books. After 1818 he lived abroad, and he died near Geneva. See his Autobiography (1834).

Edward Daniel Clarke (1769–1822), born at Willingdon vicarage, Sussex, passed from Tunbridge School to Jesus College, Cambridge, and from 1790 to 1799 was tutor and travelling companion in noblemen's families, making the tour of Britain, France, Italy, Switzerland, and Germany. In 1799–1802 he thus traversed Finland, Russia, Scandinavia, Tartary, Asia Minor, Syria, Egypt, and Greece. Ordained in 1805, he held two livings, and was (from 1808) first Professor of Mineralogy at Cambridge. His Travels (6 vols. 1810–23) were received with extraordinary favour, and became a kind of standard by which records of travel were judged; his other works were chiefly on antiquarian subjects and mineralogy. There is a Life of him by Bishop Otter (1825).

Thomas Hartwell Horne (1780–1860), distinguished as an early Biblical critic, born in London, and educated at Christ's Hospital, became clerk to a barrister, and then held a post in the Record Office. In 1818 he published his Introduction to the Holy Scriptures, a work which procured him admission to orders, a London rectory, a prebend of St Paul's, and an assistant librarianship at the British Museum. His other theological works numbered over a score. The Introduction became the standard English work on the subject, and passed through many editions: in the tenth (1856), in which the point of view was changed, and 'advanced' views startled old-fashioned readers, he was assisted by Dr Samuel Davidson and Dr Tregelles. His Reminiscences were issued by his daughter (1862).

Rudolf Erich Raspe (1737–94) was nearly forty years of age when, fleeing in disgrace from Germany, he first reached the shores of England; but by his Surprising Adventures of Baron Munchausen, published ten years later, he established his claim to be considered a minor English classic. Born in Hanover, Raspe studied at Göttingen and Leipzig, and already in his student days was familiar with English. He was an early translator of Macpherson's Ossian, discussing its authenticity, and seems to have been the very first to call the attention of Germany to Percy's Reliques—a work which was to exercise such a remarkable influence on Bürger and Herder, and on romanticism on the Continent as well as at home. The indefatigable and versatile Raspe had acquired special mineralogical learning, had helped to edit Leibniz, and had written an allegorical poem of chivalrous derring-do, when in 1767 he was appointed a lecturer at Cassel and keeper of the Landgrave's coins, gems, and medals. He soon became librarian at Cassel, wrote on mineralogy and natural history, and in 1769, for a paper on the fossil remains of the mammoth, was made an honorary F.R.S. of London. He wrote also on lithography and music; but when he was travelling in Italy in 1775 he was discovered to have made away with valuable coins from the collection under his charge. He was apprehended, but escaped from the police, and was soon busy publishing in London works on German and Hungarian geology and mineralogy. In 1781 he translated Lessing's Nathan, and by other translations helped to make German literature known in England. An Essay on the Origin of Oil-Painting (1781) secured Horace Walpole's favour, and was published under his auspices; and in 1782 the refugee held a post as a mining expert at Dolcoath in Cornwall. Here he produced the original Munchausen, published in 1785; and was next engaged by James Tassie to prepare in English and French a Descriptive Catalogue of his collection of 'ancient and modern gems, cameos, &c.' (mainly pastes or impressions), published in two volumes in 1791. About this time he cheered the heart of Sir John Sinclair of Ulster by finding valuable ores in his Caithness territories; but, alas! it was found he had 'salted' the shafts with rich metal from Cornwall—thus doubtless giving Scott a hint for Dousterswivel. He was engaged in presumably more honest mining enterprises in the wild west of Donegal when fever carried him off in 1794.

He had known the veritable Freiherr Karl Friedrich Hieronymus von Münchhausen (1720-97), a veteran who had in the Russian service made several campaigns against the Turks, and at his castle of Bodenwerder, in Hanover, had entertained relays of friends with such marvellous tales of his single-handed prowess that 'Münchhausiaden' became a name for exploits of a fabulous height of achievement. Some few actual reminiscences of Münchhausen's talk—for the swindling mineralogist had been the garrulous old gentleman's guest—Raspe mixed with old crusted facetiæ from time-honoured German jest-books of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, tales of wholly impossible and frankly incredible feats of ingenuity, dexterity, valour, and eccentricity, and so produced a 'potboiler' of fifty small pages in 1785, which, like the second edition next year, contained but five (II.-VI.)—but by far the best—of the thirty-four chapters which appear in later editions—the rest, later added, being by quite other and English penmen unknown. The original stories are pure extravaganza, without direct or intentional satire, and are written in English which has no distinction or charm, but is so good as to suggest a native reviser. Of the additional chapters, those down to Chapter XX. appeared in a third edition in 1786; these, with a later supplement and a sequel constituting a second volume (1793), are largely deliberate burlesque, and introduce reminiscences of Lucian's Vera Historia, and satirical parodies or allusions to Bruce's Travels, Johnson's Tour in the Hebrides, Cook's Voyages, and numerous books of travel and adventure, with more or less facetious references to Montgolfier's and Lunardi's ballooning and other contemporary events of public notoriety. In these successive additions Raspe seems to have had no part or responsibility.

The book has passed through innumerable editions, and has been illustrated by Rowlandson, Crowquill, Cruikshank, Strang, and others. The fifth edition had the honour of being done into German, with additions, by no less a person than the author of Lenore; and for long Bürger was supposed to be the original author. Another assumption, long current, was that Raspe was the author, but had written the work at first in German. A special German continuation in three volumes was published in 1800; there have also been French, Spanish, Portuguese, Dutch, Danish, Russian, and Magyar translations. Indeed, few books of its sort or of any sort have been more industriously circulated and made known. And flattering imitations of the manner have from time to time been produced in England and America, down to the days of Artemus Ward and Mark Twain.

See the admirable edition with elaborate introduction by Mr Seccombe (1895); and for fuller details as to the origin of the original tales, see Ellissen's (11th) German edition (1873; reprinted 1890), and Müller-Fraureuth's Die Deutschen Lügendichtungen bis auf Münchhausen (1881).

Isaac D'Israeli was born at Enfield in May 1766. His ancestors had come from the East to North Italy in the seventeenth century; his wife's were persecuted out of Portugal into England. His father, Benjamin D'Israeli (1730-1816), coming from Venice to England in 1748, made a fortune at first as an agent for the Leghorn straw hat trade and subsequently as a banker in

ISAAC D'ISRAELI.

From an Engraving by Graves after Denning.

London, and was naturalised as an English citizen in 1801. Isaac was educated for two years at Amsterdam under a freethinking tutor, and spent some time in Paris. He was wholly devoted to literature; and his parents, who considered him moonstruck, after various attempts to make him a business man, acquiesced in his determination to become a man of letters. After some abortive poetical efforts, he in 1791 published the first volume of his Curiosities of Literature; a second was added in 1793, and a third in 1817. A second series in three volumes was published in 1823-34. During the progress of this magnum opus of the author, he issued essays on Anecdotes, on the Manners and Genius of the Literary Character, a volume of Miscellanies or Literary Recreations, and several volumes of novels and romances long since forgotten. At length he struck into his natural vein with Calamities of Authors (1813) and Quarrels of Authors (1814), followed by the Literary and Political Character of James I. (1816); Commentaries on the Life and Reign of Charles I. (1828-31); Eliot, Hampden, and Pym (1832). Though labouring under partial blindness, he in 1840 issued three volumes entitled The Amenities of Literature, consisting, like the Curiosities and Miscellanies, of detached papers and dissertations on literary and historical subjects, written in a pleasant but somewhat slipshod style, which present the fruits of much curious and miscellaneous research, though verified accuracy is not their strong point (as was insisted on in a sarcastic volume of Illustrations by Bolton Corney in 1837). The observant and suggestive compiler was apt to magnify overmuch the importance of small literary discoveries. His most systematic and elaborate work—that on Charles I.—secured him the D.C.L. of Oxford. Byron admired the work of 'that most entertaining and researching writer,' Scott knew some of his poems by heart, and Southey and Rogers were his intimate friends. D'Israeli died at his seat of Bradenham House, Bucks, in 1848, aged eighty-two. His fortune was sufficient for his wants, his literary reputation was considerable, and he possessed a happy equanimity of character. 'His feelings,' says his famous son, 'though always amiable, were not painfully deep, and amid joy or sorrow, the philosophic vein was ever evident.' His thoughts centred in his library. Always lax in his attitude towards Jewish belief and ritual, he broke with the Synagogue in 1817 and had all his children baptised—a daughter and four sons, of whom Benjamin, Earl of Beaconsfield, illustrious both in literature and in statesmanship, was the eldest. The following extract is from an essay in the second series of the Curiosities of Literature, referred to by Wordsworth in support of an argument on the timidity of authors (in the 'Essay Supplementary to the Preface' of 1815).

Shenstone's 'School-Mistress.'

The inimitable 'School-Mistress' of Shenstone is one of the felicities of genius; but the purpose of this poem has been entirely misconceived. Johnson, acknowledging this charming effusion to be 'the most pleasing of Shenstone's productions,' observes, 'I know not what claim it has to stand among the moral works.' The truth is, that it was intended for quite a different class by the author, and Dodsley, the editor of his works, must have strangely blundered in designating it 'a moral poem.' It may be classed with a species of poetry till recently rare in our language, and which we sometimes find among the Italians, in their rime piacevoli, or poesie burlesche, which do not always consist of low humour in a facetious style with jingling rhymes, to which we attach our idea of a burlesque poem. There is a refined species of ludicrous poetry, which is comic yet tender, luscious yet elegant, and with such a blending of the serious and the facetious that the result of such a poem may often, among its other pleasures, produce a sort of ambiguity; so that we do not always know whether the writer is laughing at his subject, or whether he is to be laughed at. Our admirable Whistlecraft met this fate! 'The School-Mistress' of Shenstone has been admired for its simplicity and tenderness, not for its exquisitely ludicrous turn.

This discovery I owe to the good fortune of possessing the original edition of 'The School-Mistress,' which the author printed under his own directions, and to his own fancy. To this piece of 'ludicrous poetry,' as he calls it, 'lest it should be mistaken,' he added a ludicrous index, 'purely to show fools that I am in jest.' But the fool, his subsequent editor, thought proper to suppress this amusing 'ludicrous index,' and the consequence is, as the poet foresaw, that his aim has been 'mistaken.'

The whole history of this poem, and this edition, may be traced in the printed correspondence of Shenstone. Our poet had pleased himself by ornamenting 'A six-penny pamphlet' with certain 'seemly' designs of his, and for which he came to town to direct the engraver; he appears also to have intended accompanying it with 'The deformed portrait of my old school-dame, Sarah Lloyd.' The frontispiece to this first edition represents the 'Thatched house' of his old school-mistress, and before it is the 'birch tree,' with 'the sun setting and gilding the scene.' He writes on this, 'I have the first sheet to correct upon the table. I have laid aside the thoughts of fame a good deal in this unpromising scheme; and fix them upon the landscape which is engraving, the red letter which I propose, and the fruit-piece which you see, being the most seemly ornaments of the first sixpenny pamphlet that was ever so highly honoured. I shall incur the same reflection with Ogilby, of having nothing good but my decorations. I expect that in your neighbourhood and in Warwickshire there should be twenty of my poems sold. I print it myself. I am pleased with Mynde's engravings.'

On the publication Shenstone has opened his idea on its poetical characteristic. 'I dare say it must be very incorrect; for I have added eight or ten stanzas within this fortnight. But inaccuracy is more excusable in ludicrous poetry than in any other. If it strikes any, it must be merely people of taste; for people of wit without taste, which comprehends the larger part of the critical tribe, will unavoidably despise it. I have been at some pains to recover myself from A. Phillips' misfortune of mere childishness, "Little charm of placid mien," &c. I have added a ludicrous index purely to show (fools) that I am in jest; and my motto, "O, quæ sol habitabiles illustrat oras, maxime principum!" is calculated for the same purpose. You cannot conceive how large the number is of those that mistake burlesque for the very foolishness it exposes; which observation I made once at the rehearsal, at Tom Thumb, at Chronophotonthologos, all which are pieces of elegant humour. I have some mind to pursue this caution further, and advertise it "The School-Mistress, &c., a very childish performance everybody knows" (novorum more). But if a person seriously calls this, or rather burlesque, a childish or low species of poetry, he says wrong. For the most regular and formal poetry may be called trifling, folly, and weakness, in comparison of what is written with a more manly spirit in ridicule of it.'

This first edition is now lying before me, with its splendid 'red-letter,' its 'seemly designs,' and, what is more precious, its 'Index.'

Lord Beaconsfield prefixed a memoir of his father to an edition of the Curiosities in 1849; see also Beaconsfield's own Letters, and the books about the statesman-novelist.

William Blake,

poet, painter, and mystic, was born at 28 Broad Street, Golden Square, London, on 28th November 1757. He was of Irish extraction, according to one account; a certain John O'Neil married Ellen Blake, a shebeen-keeper at Rathmines, Dublin, and adopted her name, whereupon his son James (the offspring of a previous union) also took the name of Blake. James Blake had married and settled as a hosier in London when William was born. He was an imaginative child, but his visionary bent escaped the schoolmaster, and he dreamed through his boyhood in a mystical rapture, screaming when 'God put His head to the window,' seeing angels in a tree at Peckham Rye, and being beaten by his mother for having encountered Ezekiel sitting under a green bough. No poet or prophet ever saw the pageantry of subjective vision more objectively than Blake. A natural seer, his life was one luminous symbol from birth to death. To him nothing was real but the unreal, nothing unreal but the real. 'Behind, the sea of time and space roars and follows swiftly. He who keeps not right onward is lost.' From youth to age Blake heard the roar of that sea and kept right onward, a 'mental traveller' clothed with supernatural toil.

At ten the impulse of utterance drove him to the study of drawing. He haunted print-shops and saleroms, instinctively preferring Raphael, Michelangelo, and Dürer to the elegant mediocrities then admired. In his twelfth year he began to grope after utterance in poetry as well as in painting, and thenceforward raged in him a fierce duel between the two arts. In his fourteenth year he was apprenticed to Basire, an engraver, at whose shop he caught a glimpse of Oliver Goldsmith. Basire sent him to make drawings in Westminster Abbey, where Gothic art fed his hungering imagination with its 'living form.' His apprenticeship ended in 1778, and for a while he studied at the Royal Academy; but soon rebelling against academic fetters, he began to earn his livelihood by engraving for booksellers, a pursuit which won for him the friendship of Stothard and Flaxman.

In 1782 he married Catherine Sophia Boucher, a comely brunette, then in her twenty-first year. Of humble station, she was so illiterate that she could not sign the Parish Register; but she had rarer qualities which made her, in Swinburne's phrase, 'about the most perfect wife on record.' The young couple took lodgings at 23 Green Street, Leicester Fields. About this time Flaxman introduced Blake to Mrs Mathew, a bluestocking and patroness of youthful artists. At her house, 27 Rathbone Place, Blake found himself in a pinchbeck Philistia; but Mrs Mathew had some power of recognising genius, and persuaded her husband to join Flaxman in bearing the cost of privately printing the thin octavo volume, Poetical

Sketches, which was the first blast blown against the Jericho of eighteenth-century materialism. In such lyrics as 'My silks and fine array' and the 'Mad Song' Blake recaptured the lost Elizabethan music. The lines 'To the Evening Star' foreshadowed the renaissance of verbal glamour in twelve magical words:

Speak silence with thy glimmering eyes
And wash the dusk with silver.

In that great dramatic fragment, 'Edward the Third,' Blake soared into prophecy, foretelling in majestic images the imperial destiny of England a hundred years before the imperial idea fired the popular imagination:

The flowing waves
Of Time come rolling o'er my breast, he said,
And my heart labours with futurity.
Our sons shall rule the empire of the sea,
Their mighty wings shall stretch from east to west;
Their nest is in the sea, but they shall roam
Like eagles for their prey . . .

Our sons shall rise from thrones in joy, each one
Buckling his armour on; Morning shall be Prevented by the gleaming of their swords,
And Evening hear their songs of victory. . . .
Freedom shall stand upon the cliffs of Albion,
Casting her blue eyes over the green ocean;
Or, towering, stand upon the roaring waves,
Stretching her mighty spear o'er distant lands,
While with her eagle wings she covereth
Fair Albion's shore and all her families.

The book is dated 1783, but apparently was never published, the whole impression having been presented to Blake. What he did with it is a mystery. That a copy found its way to Coleridge, Wordsworth, Cowper, or Burns seems improbable, but there is no doubt that Blake was 'the first that ever burst into that silent sea' on which our poetry has voyaged ever since. The Poetical Sketches were all written between 1768 and 1777. Cowper's Poems were published in 1782. Burns issued his Poems in the Scottish Dialect in 1786. Wordsworth and Coleridge published the Lyrical Ballads in 1798, fifteen years after Blake's Poetical Sketches, nine years after his Songs of Innocence, and four years after his Songs of Experience. It is possible that Coleridge and Wordsworth had seen the Songs of Innocence and Experience before they wrote the Lyrical Ballads, for Blake was not unknown, and his poems were purchased and prized by literary and artistic connoisseurs. In 1784 Nollekens Smith heard Blake 'read and sing several of his poems' to airs composed by himself. These tunes were sometimes 'most singularly beautiful,' and were 'noted down by musical professors.' Charles Lamb may well have been the link that united Blake and Coleridge. Crabb Robinson, writing in 1825 to Miss Wordsworth, says: 'Coleridge has visited Blake, and I am told talks finely about him.' But Coleridge may have known the poetry long before he visited the poet

Whatever may have been the precise moment of their meeting, there is no doubt that the three stars of the romantic renaissance mingled their radiance. Blake's poems 'excited great interest in Wordsworth,' who finely said that they were 'undoubtedly the production of insane genius, but there is something in the madness of this man that interests me more than the sanity of Lord Byron and Walter Scott.' When Crabb Robinson in 1825 read to Blake Wordsworth's Intimations of Immortality, the stanza ending with the lines,

Whither is fled the visionary gleam?
Where is it now, the glory and the dream?

'threw him almost into an hysterical rapture.' It is significant that in Wordsworth's Evening Walk

WILLIAM BLAKE.

From the Portrait by Thomas Phillips, R.A., in the National Portrait Gallery.

and Descriptive Sketches (1793), and in Coleridge's Borderers (1795), there is no trace of the romantic wonder that revealed itself in the Lyrical Ballads (1798). Was it Blake's poetry that wrought the transfiguration? On the whole, it seems possible, although decisive evidence on the point is not available.

In 1784, his father having died, and his eldest brother having succeeded to the hosier's business at 28 Broad Street, Blake set up shop next door (No. 27) as printseller and engraver, in partnership with James Parker; Blake's youngest brother, Robert, living with him as an apprentice. In 1787 Robert died, the partnership was dissolved, and Blake went to lodge at 28 Poland Street. While pondering over the problem of finding a publisher for his poems, his beloved brother appeared to him in a dream, and revealed a somewhat obvious solution of the difficulty. The process was a kind of relief etching. The poems and designs were outlined on copper with an impervious liquid. The rest of the plate was then eaten away with an acid, so that the outline was left in relief. After the impressions had been tinted, they were done up in boards by Mrs Blake. Thus with their own hands the poet and his wife made every part of that lyrical missal, the Songs of Innocence. In the same year (1789) Blake engraved in like fashion The Book of Thel, the first of his prophetic books. A year later he produced The Marriage of Heaven and Hell. In 1791 the first book of The French Revolution was issued by Johnson the bookseller, at whose shop Blake forgathered with Godwin, Tom Paine, and Fuseli, his republican zeal leading him to flaunt the bonnet rouge in the streets.

In 1793 he left Poland Street for 13 Hercules Buildings, Lambeth, where he passed seven busy years, designing, engraving, and issuing further prophetic books, The Gates of Paradise, Visions of the Daughters of Albion, and America. At this time began his long friendship with Thomas Butts, for nearly thirty years a regular purchaser of his drawings, temperas, and 'frescoes.' In 1794 he issued the Songs of Experience and the prophetic books Europe and The Book of Urizen, followed next year by The Song of Los and The Book of Ahania. In 1800 Flaxman introduced Blake to Hayley, a popular poetaster who posed as 'the Hermit of Earham.' Hayley induced Blake to settle at Felpham while engraving the illustrations for his Life of Cowper. There he remained three years; but Hayley's vapid triviality vexed his ethereal spirit, and in 1804 he returned to London, taking a first floor at 17 South Molton Street, where he lived nearly seventeen years. Here he produced the prophetic books Jerusalem and Milton, and fell into the unscrupulous hands of Cromek, who, after buying his designs for Blair's Grave, cheated him out of the copyright. Cromek crowned this treachery by plagiarising Blake's design for the 'Canterbury Pilgrimage,' which he persuaded Stothard to forestall, thus bringing about a permanent estrangement between the two friends. Blake vindicated himself by opening an exhibition for which he wrote a brilliant Descriptive Catalogue, containing the famous study of Chaucer that delighted Lamb. But the public remained deaf and blind, and the poet sank into laborious poverty, indomitably toiling over innumerable designs and scores of manuscripts, never resting, never taking a holiday, working valiantly whether ill or well. In 1813 he found a new friend and patron in John Linnell, who was the staff and stay of his declining years, and through whom he met others, such as John Varley. It was for Varley that Blake drew the wonderful 'Spiritual Portraits,' or 'Visionary Heads,' the most celebrated of which are the grotesquely satirical 'Man who built the Pyramids' and the fantastically humorous 'Ghost of a Flea.' In 1813 Blake moved, for the last time, to 3 Fountain Court, Strand, where he engraved the most sublime of all his drawings, the 'Inventions to the Book of Job,' and the noble designs for Dante. On 12th August 1827 he died, his last hours being radiant with ecstatic visions and spiritual rapture.

A divinely patient painter and a divinely impatient poet, Blake's impatient poetry is rarer and finer in quality than his patient designs. His revolt against form in poetry, which marched beside his loyalty to form in art, was partly due to his Ossianism and partly to his Swedenborgian mysticism. These things choked his imagination with weedy symbolism and wild rhetoric. Although Blake was not quite sane, neither was he quite insane. He lived in that unexplored region which separates madness from sanity, and in which imagination is supreme. He was too sane to be called mad, and too mad to be called sane. Wordsworth said the last word on this question. The madness of Blake interests us more than the sanity of other men. His swift word flashes out of the clouds, leaping on us like lightning in brief miracles of lyrical beauty. He was the first child to be a poet, the first poet to be a child. He did not merely sing childhood: rather childhood sang in him as it never sang before or since. He was the first evangelist of youth. His songs have influenced our social temper not less than our literature, for to them may be traced the beginnings of that modern reverence for childhood which has followed afar off the modern reverence for womanhood. There are gleams of poetry in the chaotic symbolism of the prophetic books, such as the splendid line that breaks through the mists of Milton:

Time is the mercy of eternity.

But as a whole the prophetic books may be left to the high priests of dogmatic mysticism whose fantastic exegesis lies outside literature.

Song.

My silks and fine array,
My smiles and languished air,
By love are driven away;
And mournful lean Despair
Brings me yew to deck my grave:
Such end true lovers have.

His face is fair as heaven
When springing buds unfold;
Oh, why to him was't given
Whose heart is wintry cold?
His breast is love's all-worshipped tomb,
Where all love's pilgrims come.

Bring me an axe and spade,
Bring me a winding-sheet;
When I my grave have made,
Let winds and tempests beat:
Then down I'll lie, as cold as clay.
True love doth pass away.

'Introduction' to 'Songs of Innocence.'

Piping down the valleys wild,
Piping songs of pleasant glee,
On a cloud I saw a child,
And he laughing said to me:
'Pipe a song about a lamb!'
So I piped with merry cheer.
'Piper, pipe that song again!'
So I piped: he wept to hear.
'Drop thy pipe, thy happy pipe;
Sing thy songs of happy cheer!'
So I sang the same again,
While he wept with joy to hear.
'Piper, sit thee down and write
In a book, that all may read:'
So he vanished from my sight,
And I plucked a hollow reed,
And I made a rural pen,
And I stained the water clear,
And I wrote my happy songs
Every child may joy to hear.

The Chimney-Sweeper.

A little black thing among the snow,
Crying, 'Weep! weep!' in notes of woe:
Where are thy father and mother, say?
'They are both gone up to the church to pray.
'Because I was happy upon the heath,
And smiled among the winter's snow,
They clothed me in the clothes of death
And taught me to sing the notes of woe:
'And because I am happy and dance and sing,
They think they have done me no injury,
And are gone to praise God and His Priest and King
Who make up a heaven of our misery.'

Infant Joy.

'I have no name,
I am but two days old.'
What shall I call thee?
'I happy am,
Joy is my name.'
Sweet joy befall thee!
Pretty joy,
Sweet joy, but two days old,
Sweet joy I call thee;
Thou dost smile,
I sing the while,
Sweet joy befall thee!

Infant Sorrow.

My mother groaned, my father wept,
Into the dangerous world I leapt,
Helpless, naked, piping loud,
Like a fiend hid in a cloud.
Struggling in my father's hands,
Striving against my swaddling bands,
Bound and weary, I thought best
To sulk upon my mother's breast.

The Blossom.

Merry, merry sparrow!
Under leaves so green
A happy blossom

Sees you, swift as arrow,
Seek your cradle narrow
Near my bosom.

Pretty, pretty robin!
Under leaves so green
A happy blossom
Hears you sobbing, sobbing,
Pretty, pretty robin,
Near my bosom.

Holy Thursday.

'Twas on a Holy Thursday, their innocent faces clean, Came children walking two and two, in red and blue and green:

Grey-headed beadles walked before, with wands as white
as snow,

Till into the high dome of Paul's they like Thames waters flow.

O what a multitude they seemed, these flowers of London town,
Seated in companies they were, with radiance all their own:

The hum of multitudes was there, but multitudes of lambs,

Thousands of little boys and girls raising their innocent hands.

Now like a mighty wind they raise to heaven the voice of song,

Or like harmonious thunderings the seats of heaven
among:

Beneath them sit the aged men, wise guardians of the poor.

Then cherish pity, lest you drive an angel from the door.

Nurse's Song.

When the voices of children are heard on the green,
And laughing is heard on the hill,
My heart is at rest within my breast,
And everything else is still.

'Then come home, my children, the sun is gone down,
And the dews of night arise;
Come, come, leave off play, and let us away,
Till the morning appears in the skies.'

'No, no, let us play, for it is yet day,
And we cannot go to sleep;
Besides, in the sky the little birds fly
And the hills are all covered with sheep.'

'Well, well, go and play till the light fades away,
And then go home to bed.'
The little ones leaped and shouted and laughed
And all the hills echoed.

The Tiger.

Tiger, tiger, burning bright
In the forests of the night,
What immortal hand or eye
Dare frame thy fearful symmetry?

In what distant deeps or skies,
Burnt the fire of thine eyes?
On what wings dare he aspire?
What the hand dare seize thy fire?

And what shoulder and what art
Could twist the sinews of thy heart?
And when thy heart began to beat,
What dread hand framed thy dread feet?

What the hammer? what the chain?
In what furnace was thy brain?
What the anvil? what dread grasp
Dared thy deadly terrors clasp?

When the stars threw down their spears,
And watered heaven with their tears,
Did He smile His work to see?
Did He who made the lamb make thee?

Tiger, tiger, burning bright
In the forests of the night,
What immortal hand or eye
Dare frame thy fearful symmetry?

'Introduction' to 'Songs of Experience.'

Hear the voice of the bard,
Who present, past, and future sees,
Whose ears have heard
The Holy Word
That walked among the ancient trees,

Calling the lapsed soul,
And weeping in the evening dew,
That might control
The starry pole
And fallen fallen light renew.

O Earth, O Earth, return!
Arise from out the dewy grass:
Night is worn,
And the morn
Rises from the slumbrous mass.

Turn away no more:
Why wilt thou turn away?
The starry floor,
The watery shore,
Are given thee till the break of day.

Ah! Sunflower!

Ah! Sunflower! weary of time,
Who countest the steps of the sun,
Seeking after that sweet, golden clime,
Where the traveller's journey is done,

Where the youth pined away with desire,
And the pale virgin shrouded in snow,
Arise from their graves and aspire
Where my sunflower wishes to go.

A Cradle Song.

Sleep, sleep, beauty bright,
Dreaming in the joys of night;
Sleep, sleep, in thy sleep,
Little sorrows sit and weep.

Sweet babe, in thy face
Soft desires I can trace,
Secret joys and secret smiles,
Little pretty infant wiles.

As thy softest limbs I feel,
Smiles as of the morning steal
O'er thy cheek, and o'er thy breast
Where thy little heart doth rest.

Oh, the cunning wiles that creep
 In thy little heart asleep !
 When thy little heart doth wake,
 Then the dreadful light shall break.

Gilchrist's Life of Blake (2nd ed. 1880) has additions by D. G. Rossetti; there are studies by Swinburne (1868, 1906), Symonds (1907), Berger (Paris, 1907), B. de Selincourt (1909), G. K. Chesterton (1913), T. Wright (1929), Middleton Murry (1933). See also his Letters (1906), and a Bibliography by Keynes (1921). His works were edited by Ellis and Yeats (1893); by Sampson (who first printed the poems verbatim from the MS., 1905, 1921); and by Keynes (3 vols. 1925).

JAMES DOUGLAS.

William Lisle Bowles (1762-1850), 'the restorer of natural poetry,' born at King's Sutton vicarage, Northamptonshire, was educated at Winchester and Trinity College, Oxford, and in 1804 became rector of Bremhill in Wiltshire and a prebendary of Salisbury (from 1828 a canon residentiary). His first publication was a little volume of Fourteen Sonnets published anonymously at Bath in 1789, to which additions were made from time to time, and which in 1805 had reached a ninth edition. Meanwhile he had not been idle; other poetical works were Coombe Ellen and St Michael's Mount (1798), The Battle of the Nile (1799), The Sorrows of Switzerland (1801), The Spirit of Discovery (1805), The Missionary of the Andes (1815), Days Departed (1828), St John in Patmos (1833), and The Village Verse Book (1837). None of these can be said to have been popular, though all contain passages of fine descriptive and meditative verse. The 1789 sonnets had the extraordinary distinction of doing Coleridge's 'heart more good than all the other books he ever read excepting the Bible,' in serving the metaphysician—then only seventeen—as an authentic revelation of the poetic spirit, and deepening his aversion to the poetic theories and artificial didacticism of Pope's imitators and successors. Coleridge in his sonnet to Bowles thanks him

For those soft strains
 Whose sadness soothes me like the murmuring
 Of wild bees in the sunny showers of spring ;

and praises their 'mild and manliest melancholy' as having relieved the 'thought-bewildered man' torn by the 'mightier throes of mind.' It was fortunate for Bowles's fame—as it was for Crabbe's—that he began to publish when there was in England a signal dearth of true poetry, and that his best work was before the world ere the great poetic revival found its greater exponents. Now we find in the sonnets grace and tenderness, a gentle melancholy, a sweet and native simplicity sufficient to distinguish their author from his contemporaries, but not enough of power, passion, or magic to lead a movement or mark an epoch. But when in his edition of Pope (1806) he criticised, severely and somewhat unjustly, his character, and attacked his claim to be ranked amongst the great poets—Pope was only at the head of the second rank, he said—he initiated a long-continued and bitter controversy that had a profound historic significance and influence. Bowles insisted that images for what is beautiful and sublime in nature are as such nobler and more expressive and more poetical than images derived from art. As usual in such controversies, each party vehemently affirmed facts that their opponents did not deny explicitly or implicitly. Thus Campbell retorted on Bowles, what he did not really dispute, that an exquisite description of artificial objects and manners may be equally characteristic of genius with the disciple of external nature. He further protested against pre-Raphaelite elaboration of detail in description—'every rock, every leaf, every diversity of hue in nature's variety'—which Bowles actually did demand. Byron became the most fervid and thorough-going defender of Pope; his stinging sarcasms at Bowles's expense—'Stick to thy sonnets, Bowles—at least they pay'—were more effective than his serious arguments; and Bowles, an absent-minded, eccentric, amiable, musicianly High-Church divine, was no match in the arts of effective polemics for Byron. But, contrary to what might have been expected from his poetry, Bowles was both vehement and fierce in the great controversy, defending his contention in a series of 'letters' or pamphlets—to Campbell, Byron, Roscoe, a 'Quarterly Reviewer,' and the public. Bowles was no mean antiquary, and wrote a parochial history, the annals of an abbey, and other historical and antiquarian researches; and besides a Life of Bishop Ken and some sermons, he published occasional pamphlets on education, the poor-laws, and Church politics. The first three specimens are from the Sonnets, which in the later editions were some of them a good deal altered in wording; the fourth is from the opening of the Missionary; the sixth from the Spirit of Discovery; the seventh from Childe Harold's last Pilgrimage; the seventh as well as the eighth being contained in the Miscellaneous Poems ultimately appended to the Sonnets.

The Influence of Time on Grief.

O Time ! who know'st a lenient hand to lay
 Softest on sorrow's wound, and slowly thence,
 Lulling to sad repose the weary sense,
 The faint pang stealest, unperceived, away ;
 On thee I rest my only hope at last,
 And think when thou hast dried the bitter tear
 That flows in vain o'er all my soul held dear,
 I may look back on every sorrow past,
 And meet life's peaceful evening with a smile :
 As some lone bird, at day's departing hour,
 Sings in the sunbeam, of the transient shower
 Forgetful, though its wings are wet the while :
 Yet, ah ! how much must that poor heart endure
 Which hopes from thee, and thee alone, a cure.

Hope.

As one who, long by wasting sickness worn,
 Weary has watched the lingering night, and heard,
 Heartless, the carol of the matin bird
 Salute his lonely porch, now first at morn

Goes forth, leaving his melancholy bed ;
 He the green slope and level meadow views,
 Delightful bathed in slow-ascending dews ;
 Or marks the clouds that o'er the mountain's head,
 In varying forms fantastic wander white ;
 Or turns his ear to every random song
 Heard the green river's winding marge along,
 The whilst each sense is steeped in still delight :
 So o'er my breast young summer's breath I feel,
 Sweet Hope ! thy fragrance pure and healing incense steal.

Bamborough Castle.

Ye holy towers that shade the wave-worn steep,
 Long may ye rear your aged brows sublime,
 Though hurrying silent by, relentless time
 Assail you, and the winds of winter sweep
 Round your dark battlements ; for far from halls
 Of Pride, here Charity hath fixed her seat ;
 Oft listening tearful when the wild winds beat
 With hollow bodings round your ancient walls ;
 And Pity, at the dark and stormy hour
 Of midnight, when the moon is hid on high,
 Keeps her lone watch upon the topmost tower,
 And turns her ear to each expiring cry,
 Blest if her aid some fainting wretch may save,
 And snatch him cold and speechless from the wave.

In South America.

Beneath aerial cliffs and glittering snows,
 The rush-roof of an aged warrior rose,
 Chief of the mountain tribes ; high overhead,
 The Andes, wild and desolate, were spread,
 Where cold Sierras shot their icy spires,
 And Chillan trailed its smoke and mouldering fires.
 A glen beneath—a lonely spot of rest—
 Hung, scarce discovered, like an eagle's nest.
 Summer was in its prime ; the parrot flocks
 Darkened the passing sunshine on the rocks ;
 The chrysolomel and purple butterfly
 Amid the clear blue light are wandering by ;
 The humming-bird along the myrtle bowers,
 With twinkling wing is spinning o'er the flowers ;
 The woodpecker is heard with busy bill,
 The mock-bird sings—and all beside is still.
 And look ! the cataract that bursts so high,
 As not to mar the deep tranquillity,
 The tumult of its dashing fall suspends,
 And, stealing drop by drop, in mist descends ;
 Through whose illumined spray and sprinkling dews,
 Shine to the adverse sun the broken rainbow hues.
 Chequering with partial shade the beams of noon,
 And arching the gray rock with wild festoon,
 Here, its gay network and fantastic twine
 The purple cogul threads from pine to pine,
 And oft, as the fresh airs of morning breathe,
 Dips its long tendrils in the stream beneath.
 There, through the trunks with moss and lichens white,
 The sunshine darts its interrupted light,
 And 'mid the cedar's darksome bough, illumed,
 With instant touch, the lori's scarlet plumes.

Winter Evening at Home.

Fair Moon ! that at the chilly day's decline
 Of sharp December, through my cottage pane
 Dost lovely look, smiling, though in thy wane ;
 In thought, to scenes serene and still as thine,

Wanders my heart, whilst I by turns survey
 Thee slowly wheeling on thy evening way ;
 And this my fire, whose dim, unequal light,
 Just glimmering, bids each shadowy image fall
 Sombrous and strange upon the darkening wall,
 Ere the clear tapers chase the deepening night !
 Yet thy still orb, seen through the freezing haze,
 Shines calm and clear without ; and whilst I gaze,
 I think around me in this twilight gloom,
 I but remark mortality's sad doom ;
 Whilst hope and joy, cloudless and soft, appear,
 In the sweet beam that lights thy distant sphere.

The Andes.

Andes sweeping the horizon's tract,
 Mightiest of mountains ! whose eternal snows
 Feel not the nearer sun ; whose umbrage chills
 The murmuring ocean ; whose volcanic fires
 A thousand nations view, hung like the moon
 High in the middle waste of heaven.

From 'Byron's Death.'

So ends Childe Harold his last pilgrimage !
 Ends in the region, in that land renowned,
 Whose mighty genius lives in Glory's page,
 And in the Muses' consecrated ground ;
 His pale cheek fading where his brows were bound
 With their unfading wreath ! I will not call
 The nymphs from Pindus' piny shades profound,
 But strew some flowers upon thy sable pall,
 And follow to the grave a Briton's funeral.

Sun-dial in the Churchyard of Bremhill.

So passes silent o'er the dead thy shade,
 Brief Time ; and hour by hour, and day by day,
 The pleasing pictures of the present fade,
 And like a summer vapour steal away.
 And have not they, who here forgotten lie
 (Say, hoary chronicler of ages past),
 Once marked thy shadow with delighted eye,
 Nor thought it fled, how certain and how fast ?
 Since thou hast stood, and thus thy vigil kept,
 Noting each hour, o'er mouldering stones beneath ;
 The pastor and his flock alike have slept,
 And 'dust to dust' proclaimed the stride of death.
 Another race succeeds, and counts the hour,
 Careless alike ; the hour still seems to smile,
 As hope, and youth, and life were in our power ;
 So smiling, and so perishing the while.
 I heard the village-bells, with gladsome sound,
 When to these scenes a stranger I drew near,
 Proclaim the tidings of the village round,
 While memory wept upon the good man's<sup>1</sup> bier.
 Even so, when I am dead, shall the same bells
 Ring merrily when my brief days are gone ;
 While still the lapse of time thy shadow tells,
 And strangers gaze upon thy humble stone !
 Enough, if we may wait in calm content
 The hour that bears us to the silent sod ;
 Blameless improve the time that Heaven has lent,
 And leave the issue to thy will, O God.

<sup>1</sup> Bowles's predecessor in the living at Bremhill.
 See A Wiltshire Parson and his Friends (1926).

Samuel Rogers

was born at the suburban village of Stoke Newington, on the 30th of July 1763. His father, a City banker, was a Whig and Dissenter; his mother was a great-granddaughter of Philip Henry. After a careful private education, at sixteen or seventeen he entered the bank, in 1784 was admitted to partnership, and on his father's death in 1793 became head of the firm. His taste for literature and for literary society awoke early; once with a friend he went to call on Dr Johnson in Bolt Court, but his courage failed him when his hand was already on the knocker. In 1781 he contributed eight short essays to the Gentleman's Magazine; next year a comic opera (never acted); and in 1786, the year that witnessed the advent of Burns, an Ode to Superstition, with some other Poems. In 1792 he produced The Pleasures of Memory; in 1798 his Epistle to a Friend, with other Poems; in 1812 the fragmentary Voyage of Columbus; and in 1814 Jacqueline, bound up with Byron's Lara. In 1819 appeared Human Life, and in 1822 the first part of Italy, a descriptive poem in blank verse. Rogers, a true poet if not a great one, had little originality or power or passion, but had exquisite taste and much sweetness, grace, and tenderness; all his work proves that he was a careful and fastidious writer. In his Table-Talk, published by Dyce, he gives details: 'I was engaged on the Pleasures of Memory for nine years; on Human Life for nearly the same space of time; and Italy was not completed in less than sixteen years.' Not unnaturally we find deeper feelings and greater wealth of experience in Human Life than in the earlier Pleasures of Memory; and Italy gives delightful glimpses of Italian life and scenery and tradition. The Pleasures of Memory had passed through fifteen editions before 1806; Rogers had his vogue and, was famous before the greater of his younger contemporaries made their mark; but though Byron regarded him as a pillar of good taste in contrast to the Lake poets, some of his late poems show that he too was touched with the new spirit. His collected poems were published in various forms—one of them brought out at a cost of £15,000 (2 vols. 1830-34), with 114 vignette engravings by Stothard and Turner. The wealthy banker was well able to cultivate his favourite tastes; to enrich his house at 22 St James's Place with some of the finest and rarest pictures, busts, books, gems, and other articles of virtu; and to entertain his friends with a generous though unostentatious hospitality. His conversation overflowed with shrewd observation, pungent criticism, and personal anecdote, rather too often spiced with sarcasm. He soothed the last hours of Sheridan, and his generosity was largely exerted on behalf of suffering or unfriended talent. 'Genius languishing for want of patronage,' recorded Dyce, 'was sure to find in Mr Rogers a generous patron. His purse was ever open to the distressed: of the prompt assistance which he rendered in the hour of need to various well-known individuals there is ample record; but of his many acts of kindness and charity to the wholly obscure there is no memorial—at least on earth. . . . When more than ninety, and a close prisoner to his chair, he still delighted to watch the changing colours of the evening sky, to repeat passages of his favourite poets, or to dwell on the merits of the great painters whose works adorned his walls. By slow decay, and without any suffering, he died in St James's Place, 18th December 1855.' Five years before he had declined the laureateship. His art collections fetched £50,000, and three of his pictures—a Titian, a Guido, and a Giorgione—he bequeathed to the National Gallery.

SAMUEL ROGERS.

From the Portrait by George Richmond, R.A., in the National Portrait Gallery.

It was as a man of taste and letters, as a patron of artists and authors, and as the friend of almost every illustrious man that graced our annals for half a century and more that Rogers chiefly engaged the public attention. At his celebrated breakfast-parties persons of almost all classes and pursuits were found. He made the morning meal famous as a literary rallying-point; and during the London season there was scarcely a day that did not see from four to six guests at the hospitable board in St James's Place. Discussions as to books or pictures; anecdotes of the great of old; racy sayings of Sheridan, Erskine, or Horne Tooke; social traits of Fox; apt quotations or fine passages read aloud; incidents of foreign travel recounted, charmed the hours till midday. Many of his own pointed sayings circulated in society and got into print. Some one said that Gally Knight was getting deaf: 'It is from want of practice,' remarked Rogers, Mr Knight being a great speaker and bad listener. Lord Dudley (Ward) had been free in his criticisms on Rogers, who retaliated with an epigrammatic couplet:

Ward has no heart, they say; but I deny it;
He has a heart—he gets his speeches by it.

When he tried to extort a confession from his neighbour, Sir Philip Francis, that he was the author of Junius, Francis gave a surly rebuff; whereupon Rogers concluded that if he was not Junius, he was at least Brutus. The gifts of the gods to himself he thus enumerated:

Nature denied him much,
But gave him at his birth what most he values:
A passionate love for music, sculpture, painting,
For poetry, the language of the gods,
For all things here, or grand or beautiful,
A setting sun, a lake among the mountains,
The light of an ingenuous countenance,
And, what transcends them all, a noble action.

(From Italy.)

From 'The Pleasures of Memory.'

Twilight's soft dews steal o'er the village green,
With magic tints to harmonise the scene.
Stilled is the hum that through the hamlet broke,
When round the ruins of their ancient oak
The peasants flocked to hear the minstrel play,
And games and carols closed the busy day.
Her wheel at rest, the matron thrills no more
With treasured tales and legendary lore.
All, all are fled; nor mirth nor music flows
To chase the dreams of innocent repose.
All, all are fled; yet still I linger here!
What secret charms this silent spot endear?
Mark yon old mansion frowning through the trees,
Whose hollow turret woos the whistling breeze.
That casement, arched with ivy's brownest shade,
First to these eyes the light of heaven conveyed.
The mouldering gateway strews the grass-grown court,
Once the calm scene of many a simple sport,
When all things pleased, for life itself was new,
And the heart promised what the fancy drew. . . .
Childhood's loved group revisits every scene,
The tangled wood-walk and the tufted green!

Indulgent Memory wakes, and lo, they live!
Clothed with far softer hues than light can give.
Thou first, best friend that Heaven assigns below,
To soothe and sweeten all the cares we know;
Whose glad suggestions still each vain alarm,
When Nature fades and life forgets to charm;
Thee would the Muse invoke!—to thee belong
The sage's precept and the poet's song.
What softened views thy magic glass reveals,
When o'er the landscape Time's meek twilight steals!
As when in ocean sinks the orb of day,
Long on the wave reflected lustres play;
Thy tempered gleams of happiness resigned,
Glance on the darkened mirror of the mind.
The school's lone porch, with reverend mosses gray,
Just tells the pensive pilgrim where it lay.
Mute is the bell that rung at peep of dawn,
Quickening my truant feet across the lawn:
Unheard the shout that rent the noonday air
When the slow dial gave a pause to care.
Up springs, at every step, to claim a tear,
Some little friendship formed and cherished here;
And not the lightest leaf but trembling teems
With golden visions and romantic dreams.

Down by yon hazel copse, at evening, blazed
The gipsy's fagot—there we stood and gazed;
Gazed on her sunburnt face with silent awe,
Her tattered mantle and her hood of straw;
Her moving lips, her caldron brimming o'er;
The drowsy brood that on her back she bore,
Imps in the barn with mousing owlets bred,
From rifled roost at nightly revel fed;
Whose dark eyes flashed through locks of blackest shade,
When in the breeze the distant watch-dog bayed:
And heroes fled the sibyl's muttered call,
Whose elfin prowess scaled the orchard wall.
As o'er my palm the silver piece she drew,
And traced the line of life with searching view,
How throbb'd my fluttering pulse with hopes and fears,
To learn the colour of my future years!

Ah, then, what honest triumph flushed my breast;
This truth once known—to bless is to be blest!
We led the bending beggar on his way—
Bare were his feet, his tresses silver-gray—
Soothed the keen pangs his aged spirit felt,
And on his tale with mute attention dwelt:
As in his scrip we dropt our little store,
And sighed to think that little was no more,
He breathed his prayer, 'Long may such goodness live!
'Twas all he gave—'twas all he had to give. . . .

The adventurous boy that asks his little share,
And hies from home with many a gossip's prayer,
Turns on the neighbouring hill, once more to see
The dear abode of peace and privacy;
And as he turns, the thatch among the trees,
The smoke's blue wreaths ascending with the breeze,
The village-common spotted white with sheep,
The churchyard yews round which his fathers sleep;
All rouse Reflection's sadly pleasing train,
And oft he looks and weeps, and looks again.

So, when the mild Tupia dared explore
Arts yet untaught, and worlds unknown before,
And, with the sons of Science, wooed the gale
That, rising, swelled their strange expanse of sail;
So, when he breathed his firm yet fond adieu,
Borne from his leafy hut, his carved canoe,

And all his soul best loved—such tears he shed,
While each soft scene of summer-beauty fled.
Long o'er the wave a wistful look he cast,
Long watched the streaming signal from the mast,
Till Twilight's dewy tints deceived his eye,
And fairy forests fringed the evening sky.

So Scotia's queen, as slowly dawned the day,
Rose on her couch, and gazed her soul away.
Her eyes had blessed the beacon's glimmering height,
That faintly tipped the feathery surge with light :
But now the morn with orient hues portrayed
Each castled cliff and brown monastic shade :
All touched the talisman's resistless spring,
And lo, what busy tribes were instant on the wing !

Thus kindred objects kindred thoughts inspire,
As summer-clouds flash forth electric fire.
And hence this spot gives back the joys of youth,
Warm as the life, and with the mirror's truth.
Hence home-felt pleasure prompts the patriot's sigh ;
This makes him wish to live, and dare to die.
For this young Foscari, whose hapless fate
Venice should blush to hear the Muse relate,
When exile wore his blooming years away,
To sorrow's long soliloquies a prey,
When reason, justice, vainly urged his cause,
For this he roused her sanguinary laws ;
Glad to return, though hope could grant no more,
And chains and torture hailed him to the shore.

And hence the charm historic scenes impart ;
Hence Tiber awes, and Avon melts the heart.
Aërial forms in Tempe's classic vale
Glance through the gloom and whisper in the gale ;
In wild Vaucluse with love and Laura dwell,
And watch and weep in Eloisa's cell.
'Twas ever thus. Young Ammon, when he sought
Where Ilium stood, and where Pelides fought,
Sat at the helm himself. No meaner hand
Steered through the waves, and when he struck the land,
Such in his soul the ardour to explore,
Pelides-like, he leaped the first ashore.

'Twas ever thus. As now at Virgil's tomb
We bless the shade, and bid the verdure bloom :
So Tully paused, amid the wrecks of Time,
On the rude stone to trace the truth sublime ;
When at his feet in honoured dust disclosed,
The immortal sage of Syracuse reposed. Archimedes
And as he long in sweet delusion hung
Where once a Plato taught, a Pindar sung ;
Who now but meets him musing, when he roves
His ruined Tusculan's romantic groves ?
In Rome's great Forum, who but hears him roll
His moral thunders o'er the subject soul ? . . .

Hail, Memory, hail ! in thy exhaustless mine
From age to age unnumbered treasures shine !
Thought and her shadowy brood thy call obey,
And Place and Time are subject to thy sway !
Thy pleasures most we feel when most alone ;
The only pleasures we can call our own.
Lighter than air, Hope's summer-visions die,
If but a fleeting cloud obscure the sky ;
If but a beam of sober Reason play,
Lo, Fancy's fairy frost-work melts away !
But can the wiles of Art, the grasp of Power,
Snatch the rich relics of a well-spent hour ?
These, when the trembling spirit wings her flight,
Pour round her path a stream of living light ;

And gild those pure and perfect realms of rest,
Where Virtue triumphs, and her sons are blest !

Tupia, a Tahitian brought off by Captain Cook in 1769.

From 'Human Life.'

The lark has sung his carol in the sky,
The bees have hummed their noontide harmony ;
Still in the vale the village bells ring round,
Still in Llewellyn hall the jests resound ;
For now the caudle-cup is circling there,
Now, glad at heart, the gossips breathe their prayer,
And, crowding, stop the cradle to admire
The babe, the sleeping image of his sire.
A few short years, and then these sounds shall hail
The day again, and gladness fill the vale ;
So soon the child a youth, the youth a man,
Eager to run the race his fathers ran.
Then the huge ox shall yield the broad sirloin ;
The ale, now brewed, in floods of amber shine ;
And basking in the chimney's ample blaze,
'Mid many a tale told of his boyish days,
The nurse shall cry, of all her ills beguiled,
''Twas on her knees he sat so oft and smiled.'

And soon again shall music swell the breeze ;
Soon, issuing forth, shall glitter through the trees
Vestures of nuptial white ; and hymns be sung,
And violets scattered round ; and old and young,
In every cottage-porch with garlands green,
Stand still to gaze, and, gazing, bless the scene,
While, her dark eyes declining, by his side,
Moves in her virgin veil the gentle bride.

And once, alas ! nor in a distant hour,
Another voice shall come from yonder tower ;
When in dim chambers long black weeds are seen,
And weeping heard where only joy has been ;
When, by his children borne, and from his door,
Slowly departing to return no more,
He rests in holy earth with them that went before.

And such is human life ; so gliding on,
It glimmers like a meteor, and is gone !
Yet is the tale, brief though it be, as strange,
As full, methinks, of wild and wondrous change,
As any that the wandering tribes require,
Stretched in the desert round their evening fire ;
As any sung of old, in hall or bower,
To minstrel-harps at midnight's witching hour ! . . .

The day arrives, the moment wished and feared ;
The child is born, by many a pang endeared,
And now the mother's ear has caught his cry ;
O grant the cherub to her asking eye !
He comes—she clasps him. To her bosom pressed,
He drinks the balm of life, and drops to rest.

Her by her smile how soon the stranger knows !
How soon by his the glad discovery shews !
As to her lips she lifts the lovely boy,
What answering looks of sympathy and joy !
He walks, he speaks. In many a broken word
His wants, his wishes, and his griefs are heard.
And ever, ever to her lap he flies,
When rosy Sleep comes on with sweet surprise.
Locked in her arms, his arms across her flung
(That name most dear for ever on his tongue),
As with soft accents round her neck he clings,
And, cheek to cheek, her lulling song she sings,
How blest to feel the beatings of his heart,
Breathe his sweet breath, and kiss for kiss impart ;

Watch o'er his slumbers like the brooding dove,
And, if she can, exhaust a mother's love!

Ginevra.

If thou shouldst ever come by choice or chance
To Modena, where still religiously
Among her ancient trophies is preserved
Bologna's bucket—in its chain it hangs
Within that reverend tower, the Guirlandine—
Stop at a palace near the Reggio-gate,
Dwelt in of old by one of the Orsini.
Its noble gardens, terrace above terrace,
And rich in fountains, statues, cypresses,
Will long detain thee; through their arched walks,
Dim at noonday, discovering many a glimpse
Of knights and dames, such as in old romance,
And lovers, such as in heroic song;
Perhaps the two, for groves were their delight,
That in the spring-time, as alone they sat,
Venturing together on a tale of love,
Read only part that day. A summer sun,
Sets ere one half is seen; but, ere thou go,
Enter the house—prithce, forget it not—
And look a while upon a picture there.

'Tis of a lady in her earliest youth,
The very last of that illustrious race,
Done by Zampieri—but by whom I care not.
He who observes it, ere he passes on,
Gazes his fill, and comes and comes again,
That he may call it up when far away.
She sits, inclining forward as to speak,
Her lips half-open, and her finger up,
As though she said 'Beware!' Her vest of gold
'Broidered with flowers, and clasped from head to foot,
An emerald-stone in every golden clasp;
And on her brow, fairer than alabaster,
A coronet of pearls. But then her face,
So lovely, yet so arch, so full of mirth,
The overflowings of an innocent heart—
It haunts me still, though many a year has fled,
Like some wild melody!

Alone it hangs

Over a mouldering heir-loom, its companion,
An oak chest, half-eaten by the worm,
But richly carved by Antony of Trent
With Scripture-stories from the life of Christ;
A chest that came from Venice, and had held
The ducal robes of some old ancestor.
That by the way—it may be true or false—
But don't forget the picture; and thou wilt not,
When thou hast heard the tale they told me there.

She was an only child; from infancy
The joy, the pride of an indulgent sire.
Her mother dying of the gift she gave,
That precious gift, what else remained to him?
The young Ginevra was his all in life,
Still as she grew, for ever in his sight;
And in her fifteenth year became a bride,
Marrying an only son, Francesco Doria,
Her playmate from her birth, and her first love.

Just as she looks there in her bridal-dress,
She was all gentleness, all gaiety,
Her pranks the favourite theme of every tongue.
But now the day was come, the day, the hour;
Now, frowning, smiling, for the hundredth time,
The nurse, that ancient lady, preached decorum;

And, in the lustre of her youth, she gave
Her hand, with her heart in it, to Francesco.

Great was the joy; but at the bridal-feast,
When all sat down, the bride was wanting there.
Nor was she to be found! Her father cried,
''Tis but to make a trial of our love!'
And filled his glass to all; but his hand shook,
And soon from guest to guest the panic spread.
'Twas but that instant she had left Francesco,
Laughing and looking back, and flying still,
Her ivory-tooth imprinted on his finger.
But now, alas! she was not to be found;
Nor from that hour could anything be guessed
But that she was not! Weary of his life,
Francesco flew to Venice, and forthwith
Flung it away in battle with the Turk.
Orsini lived; and long mightst thou have seen
An old man wandering as in quest of something,
Something he could not find—he knew not what.
When he was gone, the house remained a while
Silent and tenantless—then went to strangers.

Full fifty years were past, and all forgot,
When on an idle day, a day of search
'Mid the old lumber in the gallery,
That mouldering chest was noticed; and 'twas said
By one as young, as thoughtless as Ginevra,
'Why not remove it from its lurking-place?'
'Twas done as soon as said; but on the way
It burst, it fell; and lo, a skeleton,
With here and there a pearl, an emerald stone,
A golden clasp, clasping a shred of gold!
All else had perished—save a nuptial-ring,
And a small seal, her mother's legacy,
Engraven with a name, the name of both,
'Ginevra.' There then had she found a grave!
Within that chest had she concealed herself,
Fluttering with joy the happiest of the happy;
When a spring-lock that lay in ambush there,
Fastened her down for ever!

(From Italy.)

An Italian Song.

Dear is my little native vale,
The ring-dove builds and murmurs there;
Close by my cot she tells her tale
To every passing villager.
The squirrel leaps from tree to tree,
And shells his nuts at liberty.

In orange groves and myrtle bowers,
That breathe a gale of fragrance round,
I charm the fairy-footed hours
With my loved lute's romantic sound;
Or crowns of living laurel weave
For those that win the race at eve.

The shepherd's horn at break of day,
The ballet danced in twilight glade,
The canzonet and roundelay
Sung in the silent greenwood shade;
These simple joys that never fail,
Shall bind me to my native vale.

Written in the Highlands of Scotland—1812.

Blue was the loch, the clouds were gone,
Ben Lomond in his glory shone,
When, Luss, I left thee; when the breeze
Bore me from thy silver sands,

Thy kirkyard wall among the trees,
Where, gray with age, the dial stands ;
That dial so well known to me !
Though many a shadow it had shed,
Beloved sister, since with thee
The legend on the stone was read.

The fairy isles fled far away ;
That with its woods and uplands green,
Where shepherd-huts are dimly seen,
And songs are heard at close of day ;
That, too, the deer's wild covert fled,
And that, the asylum of the dead :
While as the boat went merrily,
Much of Rob Roy the boatman told ;
His arm that fell below his knee,
His cattle ford and mountain hold.

Tarbet, thy shore I climbed at last ;
And, thy shady region past,
Upon another shore I stood,
And looked upon another flood ;
Great Ocean's self ! ('Tis he who fills
That vast and awful depth of hills) ;
Where many an elf was playing round,
Who treads unshod his classic ground ;
And speaks, his native rocks among,
As Fingal spoke, and Ossian sung.

Loch Long

Night fell, and dark and darker grew
That narrow sea, that narrow sky,
As o'er the glimmering waves we flew,
The sea-bird rustling, wailing by.
And now the grampus, half-described,
Black and huge above the tide ;
The cliffs and promontories there,
Front to front, and broad and bare ;
Each beyond each, with giant feet
Advancing as in haste to meet ;
The shattered fortress, whence the Dane
Blew his shrill blast, nor rushed in vain,
Tyrant of the drear domain ;
All into midnight shadow sweep
When day springs upward from the deep !
Kindling the waters in its flight,
The prow wakes splendour, and the oar,
That rose and fell unseen before,
Flashes in a sea of light ;
Glad sign and sure, for now we hail
Thy flowers, Glenfinnart, in the gale ;
And bright indeed the path should be
That leads to friendship and to thee !

O blest retreat, and sacred too !
Sacred as when the bell of prayer
Tolled duly on the desert air,
And crosses decked thy summits blue.
Oft like some loved romantic tale,
Oft shall my weary mind recall,
Amid the hum and stir of men,
Thy beechen grove and water-fall,
Thy ferry with its gliding sail,
And her—the lady of the Glen !

Præstum.

They stand between the mountains and the sea ;
Awful memorials, but of whom we know not.
The seaman passing, gazes from the deck,
The buffalo-driver, in his shaggy cloak,

Points to the work of magic, and moves on.
Time was they stood along the crowded street,
Temples of gods, and on their ample steps
What various habits, various tongues beset
The brazen gates for prayer and sacrifice !
Time was perhaps the third was sought for justice ;
And here the accuser stood, and there the accused,
And here the judges sat, and heard, and judged.
All silent now, as in the ages past,
Trodden under foot, and mingled dust with dust.

How many centuries did the sun go round
From Mount Alburnus to the Tyrrhene sea,
While, by some spell rendered invisible,
Or, if approached, approached by him alone
Who saw as though he saw not, they remained
As in the darkness of a sepulchre,
Waiting the appointed time ! All, all within Proclaims that nature had resumed her right,
And taken to herself what man renounced ;
No cornice, triglyph, or worn abacus,
But with thick ivy hung, or branching fern,
Their iron-brown o'erspread with brightest verdure !
From my youth upward have I longed to tread
This classic ground ; and am I here at last ?
Wandering at will through the long porticoes,
And catching, as through some majestic grove,
Now the blue ocean, and now, chaos-like,
Mountains and mountain-gulfs, and, half-way up,
Towns like the living rock from which they grew ?
A cloudy region, black and desolate,
Where once a slave withstood a world in arms. Spartacus

The air is sweet with violets, running wild
Mid broken friezes and fallen capitals ;
Sweet as when Tully, writing down his thoughts,
Those thoughts so precious and so lately lost—
Turning to thee, divine philosophy,
Ever at hand to calm his troubled soul—
Sailed slowly by, two thousand years ago,
For Athens ; when a ship, if north-east winds
Blew from the Pæstan gardens, slackened her course.

On as he moved along the level shore,
These temples, in their splendour eminent
Mid arcs and obelisks, and domes and towers,
Reflecting back the radiance of the west,
Well might he dream of glory ! Now, coiled up,
The serpent sleeps within them ; the she-wolf
Suckles her young ; and as alone I stand
In this, the nobler pile, the elements
Of earth and air its only floor and roof,
How solemn is the stillness ! Nothing stirs
Save the shrill-voiced cicala flitting round
On the rough pediment to sit and sing ;
Or the green lizard rustling through the grass,
And up the fluted shaft with short quick spring,
To vanish in the chinks that time has made.

In such an hour as this, the sun's broad disk
Seen at his setting, and a flood of light
Filling the courts of these old sanctuaries—
Gigantic shadows, broken and confused,
Athwart the innumerable columns flung—
In such an hour he came, who saw and told,
Led by the mighty genius of the place.

Walls of some capital city first appeared,
Half razed, half sunk, or scattered as in scorn ;
And what within them ? What but in the midst
These three in more than their original grandeur,

And, round about, no stone upon another?
As if the spoiler had fallen back in fear,
And, turning, left them to the elements.

(From Italy.)

On a Tear.

O that the chemist's magic art
Could crystallise this sacred treasure!
Long should it glitter near my heart,
A secret source of pensive pleasure.

The little brilliant, ere it fell,
Its lustre caught from Chloe's eye;
Then, trembling, left its coral cell—
The spring of Sensibility!

Sweet drop of pure and pearly light,
In thee the rays of Virtue shine;
More calmly clear, more mildly bright,
Than any gem that gilds the mine.

Benign restorer of the soul!
Who ever fliest to bring relief,
When first we feel the rude control
Of Love or Pity, Joy or Grief.

The sage's and the poet's theme,
In every clime, in every age:
Thou charm'st in Fancy's idle dream,
In Reason's philosophic page.

That very law which moulds a tear,
And bids it trickle from its source,
That law preserves the earth a sphere,
And guides the planets in their course.

See Alexander Dyce's Recollections of the Table-talk of Samuel Rogers (1856); Recollections by Rogers, edited by his nephew, William Sharpe (1859); P. W. Clayden's Early Life of Rogers (1887) and Rogers and his Contemporaries (2 vols. 1889); and Samuel Rogers and his Circle, by R. E. Roberts (1930).

Henry Kirke White (1785-1806) was born at Nottingham, a butcher's son. A rhymer and a student from boyhood, he assisted his father in the family business until in his fourteenth year he was put apprentice to a stocking-weaver. But he hated 'the thought of spending seven years of his life in showing and folding up stockings; he wanted something to occupy his brain, and he felt that he should be wretched if he continued longer at this trade, or indeed in anything except one of the learned professions.' He was at length placed in an attorney's office, and applying his leisure hours to the study of Latin and Greek, Italian and Spanish, in ten months could read Horace. While only in his fifteenth year, he obtained a silver medal for a translation from Horace, a prize-theme proposed by the Monthly Preceptor. He became a correspondent in the Monthly Mirror, and was introduced to the acquaintance of its proprietor, Mr Hill, and of Capel Lofft. Their encouragement induced him to prepare a volume of poems for the press (1803). The longest piece in the collection, a descriptive poem in the style of Goldsmith, showed a gift of smooth and elegant versification; but the volume was contemptuously noticed in the Monthly Review. Happily the volume fell into the hands of Southey, who wrote to the young poet to encourage him; and other friends were found to procure for him admission to the University of Cambridge. Moved to new Christian earnestness by Scott's Force of Truth, he resolved to devote himself to Church work, and the Rev. Charles Simeon of Cambridge procured for him a sizarship at St John's College, and Wilberforce helped to assist his family in supporting him during his university course. He competed for a scholarship, and at the end of the term was pronounced the first man of his year. But this distinction was purchased at the sacrifice of health and life; he died 19th October 1806. Southey wrote a sketch of his life and edited his Remains. A tablet to his memory, with a medallion by Chantrey, was placed in All Saints' Church at Cambridge by a young American. Even Byron consecrated some kindly lines to his memory, and, in prose, ranked him 'next Chatterton.' His poetry was all written before he was twenty, and is accordingly quite immature. But it is also lacking in originality, power, or the promise of future achievement. The tenderness of his verse, the amiability of his character, and the pathos of his story have hardly saved his verse from oblivion. But some of his hymns are still in use, including 'Much in sorrow, oft in woe,' of which, however, only the first part (two verses and a half) is his.

To an Early Primrose.

Mild offspring of a dark and sullen sire!
Whose modest form, so delicately fine,
Was nursed in whirling storms,
And cradled in the winds.

Thee, when young Spring first questioned Winter's way,
And dared the sturdy blusterer to the fight,
Thee on this bank he threw
To mark his victory.

In this low vale, the promise of the year,
Serene, thou openest to the nipping gale,
Unnoticed and alone,
Thy tender elegance.

So Virtue blooms, brought forth amid the storms
Of chill adversity; in some lone walk
Of life she rears her head,
Obscure and unobserved;

While every bleaching breeze that on her blows,
Chastens her spotless purity of breast,
And hardens her to bear
Serene the ills of life.

Sonnet.

What art thou, Mighty One! and where thy seat?
Thou broodest on the calm that cheers the lands,
And thou dost bear within thine awful hands
The rolling thunders and the lightning's fleet;
Stern on thy dark-wrought car of cloud and wind,
Thou guid'st the northern storm at night's dead noon,
Or, on the red wing of the fierce monsoon,
Disturb'st the sleeping giant of the Ind.
In the drear silence of the polar span
Dost thou repose? or in the solitude
Of sultry tracts, where the lone caravan
Hears nightly howl the tiger's hungry brood?
Vain thought! the confines of his throne to trace
Who glows through all the fields of boundless space.

The Star of Bethlehem.

When marshalled on the nightly plain,
 The glittering host bestud the sky ;
 One star alone, of all the train,
 Can fix the sinner's wandering eye.
 Mark! hark! to God the chorus breaks,
 From every host, from every gem ;
 But one alone the Saviour speaks,
 It is the Star of Bethlehem.

Once on the raging seas I rode,
 The storm was loud—the night was dark ;
 The ocean yawned—and rudely blowed
 The wind that tossed my foundering bark.
 Deep horror then my vitals froze,
 Death-struck, I ceased the tide to stem ;
 When suddenly a star arose,
 It was the Star of Bethlehem.

It was my guide, my light, my all,
 It bade my dark forebodings cease ;
 And through the storm and dangers' thrall,
 It led me to the port of peace.
 Now safely moored—my perils o'er,
 I'll sing, first in night's diadem,
 For ever and for evermore,
 The Star—the Star of Bethlehem.

Britain a Thousand Years Hence.

Where now is Britain?—Where her laurelled names,
 Her palaces and halls? Dashed in the dust.
 Some second Vandal hath reduced her pride,
 And with one big recoil hath thrown her back
 To primitive barbarity.—Again,
 Through her depopulated vales, the scream
 Of bloody superstition hollow rings,
 And the scared native to the tempest howls
 The yell of deprecation. O'er her marts,
 Her crowded ports, broods Silence ; and the cry
 Of the low curlew, and the pensive dash
 Of distant billows, breaks alone the void.
 Even as the savage sits upon the stone
 That marks where stood her capitols, and hears
 The bitter booming in the weeds, he shrinks
 From the dismaying solitude.—Her bards
 Sing in a language that hath perished ;
 And their wild harps, suspended o'er their graves,
 Sigh to the desert winds a dying strain.

Meanwhile the arts, in second infancy,
 Rise in some distant clime, and then perchance
 Some bold adventurer, filled with golden dreams,
 Steering his bark through trackless solitudes,
 Where, to his wandering thoughts, no daring prow
 Hath ever ploughed before—espies the cliffs
 Of fallen Albion.—To the land unknown
 He journeys joyful ; and perhaps descries
 Some vestige of her ancient stateliness ;
 Then he, with vain conjecture, fills his mind
 Of the unheard-of race, which had arrived
 At science in that solitary nook,
 Far from the civil world ; and sagely sighs
 And moralises on the state of man.

From 'The Christiad.'

Thus far have I pursued my solemn theme,
 With self-rewarding toil ; thus far have sung
 Of godlike deeds, far loftier than bescem
 The lyre which I in early days have strung ;

And now my spirits faint, and I have hung
 The shell, that solaced me in saddest hour,
 On the dark cypress ; and the strings which rung
 With Jesus' praise, their harpings now are o'er,
 Or, when the breeze comes by, moan, and are heard no more.

And must the harp of Judah sleep again?
 Shall I no more reanimate the lay?
 Oh ! Thou who visitest the sons of men,
 Thou who dost listen when the humble pray,
 One little space prolong my mournful day ;
 One little lapse suspend thy last decree !
 I am a youthful traveller in the way,
 And this slight boon would consecrate to thee,
 Ere I with Death shake hands, and smile that I am free.

These were the last stanzas of the uncompleted epic, and were written shortly before White's death.

Joanna Baillie (1762–1851) was born in the manse of Bothwell in Lanarkshire ; in 1776 her father became Professor of Divinity at Glasgow. In this household, 'repression of all emotions, even the gentlest and those most honourable to human nature, seems to have been the constant lesson.' Joanna's sister, Agnes, told Lucy Aikin that their father was an excellent parent : 'When she had once been bitten by a dog thought to be mad, he had sucked the wound, at the hazard, as was supposed, of his own life, but he had never given her a kiss. Joanna spoke of her yearning to be caressed when a child. She would sometimes venture to clasp her little arms about her mother's knees, who would seem to chide her, but the child knew she liked it.' In 1784 Joanna went to live in London, where her brother, Matthew Baillie, had established himself as a physician ; in 1806 she and Agnes took a house for themselves at Hampstead, and there she died, Agnes surviving her till 1861. No authoress ever enjoyed a larger share than the 'immortal Joanna' of the esteem and affection of her contemporaries. She was one of the friends whose society Sir Walter looked forward to as one of the chief pleasures a visit to London had in store for him ; even America sent its votaries to her shrine at Hampstead. Her greatest achievement lay in her Plays on the Passions (1798–1836), which, though ineffective as acting plays, contain much impressive poetry and often show true dramatic power. In 1804 she produced a volume of miscellaneous dramas, and in 1810 The Family Legend, a tragedy founded on a Highland tradition, was successfully staged at Edinburgh with a prologue by Scott. De Montfort was brought out by Kemble shortly after its appearance, and was acted eleven nights. It was revived in 1821, with Kean as De Montfort ; Kean admitted that, though a fine poem, it would never be an acting play. Scott, on the other hand, extravagantly eulogised 'Basil's love and Montfort's hate' as something like a renewal of Shakespeare's inspired strain ; for Count Basil and De Montfort are much liker the works of Shirley or Massinger than anything of Shakespeare's.

Miss Baillie's style is smooth and regular, but without distinction; her carefully constructed dramas have few commanding situations, and—partly from the restrictions imposed by her working theory—are deficient in variety and fullness of passion, the mainspring of human life and of dramatic action; the tragic scenes are too exclusively connected with the crime of murder, one of the easiest resources of a tragedian. Scott said that fear was the most dramatic passion touched by her. The plot is too often obvious almost from the first act—a defect fatal to success in representation. Some of the poems in her Fugitive Pieces were written when she was over eighty years of age. Of the songs, her versions of 'Woo'd an' married an' a' and 'Saw ye Johnnie comin' are the best known; there is another with the old refrain, 'Poverty parts good company;' 'Tam o' the Lin,' 'Up, quit thy Bower,' and 'Good-night' are often cited; and there are new sets of words to many well-known Scottish and Irish tunes and rhythms, with or without the old refrains—'The Boatie Rows,' 'The Weary Pund o' Tow,' 'Hooly and Fairly,' 'Fy, let us a' to the Bridal,' &c.

JOANNA BAILLIE.

From an Engraving after Newton.

From 'The Kitten.'

Wanton droll, whose harmless play
Beguiles the rustic's closing day,
When, drawn the evening fire about,
Sit aged crone and thoughtless lout,
And child upon his three-foot stool,
Waiting until his supper cool,
And maid, whose cheek outblooms the rose,
As bright the blazing fagot glows,
Who, bending to the friendly light,
Plies her task with busy sleight;
Come, show thy tricks and sportive graces,
Thus circled round with merry faces!

Backward coiled, and crouching low,
With glaring eyeballs watch thy foe,
The housewife's spindle whirling round,
Or thread or straw that on the ground
Its shadow throws, by urchin sly
Held out to lure thy roving eye;
Then stealing onward, fiercely spring
Upon the tempting, faithless thing.
Now, wheeling round with bootless skill,
Thy ho-peep tail provokes thee still,
As still beyond thy curving side
Its jetty tip is seen to glide;
Till from thy centre starting far,
Thou sidelong veerst with rump in air
Erected stiff, and gait awry,
Like madam in her tantrums high;
Though ne'er a madam of them all,
Whose silken kirtle sweeps the hall,
More varied trick and whim displays
To catch the admiring stranger's gaze. . . .

The featest tumbler, stage bedight,
To thee is but a clumsy wight,
Who every limb and sinew strains
To do what costs thee little pains;
For which, I trow, the gaping crowd
Requite him oft with plaudits loud.

But, stopped the while thy wanton play,
Applauses too thy pains repay:
For then, beneath some urchin's hand,
With modest pride thou tak'st thy stand,
While many a stroke of kindness glides
Along thy back and tabby sides.
Dilated swells thy glossy fur,
And loudly croons thy busy pur,
As, timing well the equal sound,
Thy clutching feet bepat the ground,
And all their harmless claws disclose
Like prickles of an early rose,
While softly from thy whiskered cheek
Thy half-closed eyes peer, mild and meek.

But not alone by cottage fire
Do rustics rude thy feats admire.
The learned sage, whose thoughts explore
The widest range of human lore,
Or with unfettered fancy fly
Through airy heights of poesy,
Pausing smiles with altered air
To see thee climb his elbow-chair,
Or, struggling on the mat below,
Hold warfare with his slipped toe.
The widowed dame or lonely maid,
Who, in the still but cheerless shade
Of home unsocial, spends her age,
And rarely turns a lettered page,
Upon her hearth for thee lets fall
The rounded cork or paper ball,
Nor chides thee on thy wicked watch,
The ends of ravelled skein to catch,
But lets thee have thy wayward will,
Perplexing oft her letter skill.

E'en he, whose mind of gloomy bent,
In lonely tower or prison pent,
Reviews the coil of former days,
And loathes the world and all its ways.

What time the lamp's unsteady gleam
Hath roused him from his moody dream,
Feels, as thou gambol'st round his seat,
His heart with pride less fiercely beat,
And smiles, a link in thee to find,
That joins it still to living kind.

From the Birthday 'Address' to her Sister.

Dear Agnes, gleamed with joy and dashed with tears,
O'er us have glided almost sixty years
Since we on Bothwell's bonny braes were seen,
By those whose eyes long closed in death have been,
Two tiny imps, who scarcely stooped to gather
The slender harebell or the purple heather;
No taller than the foxglove's spiky stem,
That dew of morning studs with silvery gem.
Then every butterfly that crossed our view
With joyful shout was greeted as it flew,
And moth and lady-bird and beetle bright
In sheeny gold were each a wondrous sight.
Then as we paddled barefoot, side by side,
Among the sunny shallows of the Clyde,
Minnows or spotted parr with twinkling fin,
Swimming in mazy rings the pool within,
A thrill of gladness through our bosom sent,
Seen in the power of early wonderment.

A long perspective to my mind appears,
Looking behind me to that line of years,
And yet through every stage I still can trace
Thy visioned form, from childhood's morning grace
To woman's early bloom, changing how soon!
To the expressive glow of woman's noon;
And now to what thou art, in comely age,
Active and ardent. Let what will engage
Thy present moment, whether hopeful seeds
In garden-plat thou sow, or noxious weeds
From the fair flower remove, or ancient lore
In chronicle or legend rare explore,
Or on the parlour hearth with kitten play,
Stroking its tabby sides, or take thy way
To gain with hasty steps some cottage door,
On helpful errand to the neighbouring poor,
Active and ardent, to my fancy's eye
Thou still art young in spite of time gone by.
Though oft of patience brief and temper keen,
Well may it please me, in life's latter scene,
To think what now thou art, and long to me hast been.

'Twas thou who woo'dst me first to look
Upon the page of printed book,
That thing by me abhorred, and with address
Didst win me from my thoughtless idleness,
When all too old become with bootless haste
In fitful sports the precious time to waste.
Thy love of tale and story was the stroke
At which my dormant fancy first awoke,
And ghosts and witches in my busy brain
Arose in sombre show, a motley train.
This new-found path attempting, proud was I,
Lurking approval on thy face to spy,
Or hear thee say, as grew thy roused attention,
'What! is this story all thine own invention?'

Then, as advancing through this mortal span,
Our intercourse with the mixed world began,
Thy fairer face and sprightlier courtesy
(A truth that from my youthful vanity

Lay not concealed) did for the sisters twain,
Where'er we went, the greater favour gain;
While, but for thee, vexed with its tossing tide,
I from the busy world had shrunk aside.
And now in later years, with better grace
Thou helpst me still to hold a welcome place
With those, whom nearer neighbourhood has made
The friendly cheerers of our evening shade. . . .

The change of good and evil to abide,
As partners linked, long have we side by side
Our earthly journey held, and who can say
How near the end of our united way?
By nature's course not distant; sad and 'reft
Will she remain,—the lonely pilgrim left.
If thou be taken first, who can to me
Like sister, friend, and home-companion be?
Or who, of wonted daily kindness shorn,
Shall feel such loss, or mourn as I shall mourn?
And if I should be fated first to leave
This earthly house, though gentle friends may grieve,
And he above them all, so truly proved
A friend and brother, long and justly loved,
There is no living wight, of woman born,
Who then shall mourn for me as thou wilt mourn.

Thou ardent, liberal spirit! quickly feeling
The touch of sympathy and kindly dealing
With sorrow or distress, for ever sharing
The unhoarded mite, nor for to-morrow caring,—
Accept, dear Agnes, on thy natal day,
An unadorned but not a careless lay.
Nor think this tribute to thy virtues paid
From tardy love proceeds, though long delayed.
Words of affection, howsoever expressed,
The latest spoken still are deemed the best:
Few are the measured rhymes I now may write;
These are, perhaps, the last I shall indite.

The Shepherd's Song.

The gowan glitters on the sward,
The lavrock's in the sky,
And Collie on my plaid keeps ward,
And time is passing by.
Oh no! sad and slow,
And lengthened on the ground,
The shadow of our trysting bush,
It wears so slowly round!

My sheep-bell tinkles frae the west,
My lambs are bleating near,
But still the sound that I lo'e best,
Alack! I canna' hear.
Oh no! sad and slow,
The shadow lingers still,
And like a lanely ghaist I stand
And croon upon the hill.

I hear below the water roar,
The mill wi' clacking din,
And Lucky scolding frae her door,
To ca' the bairnies in.
Oh no! sad and slow,
These are na' sounds for me,
The shadow of our trysting bush,
It creeps sae drearily!

I coft yestreen, frae chapman Tam, bought
 A snood of bonnie blue, a maiden's head-band
 And promised when our trysting cam',
 To tie it round her brow.
 Oh no ! sad and slow,
 The mark it winna' pass,
 The shadow of that weary thorn
 Is tethered on the grass.

Oh now I see her on the way,
 She's past the witch's knowe,
 She's climbing up the Brown's brae,
 My heart is in a lowe ! blaze
 Oh no ! 'tis no' so,
 'Tis glam'rie I have seen,
 The shadow of that hawthorn bush
 Will move na' mair till e'en.

My book o' grace I'll try to read,
 Though conned wi' little skill,
 When Collie barks I'll raise my head,
 And find her on the hill ;
 Oh no ! sad and slow,
 The time will ne'er be gane,
 The shadow of the trysting bush
 Is fixed like ony stane.

From 'De Montfort.'

De Montfort. No more, my sister ; urge me not again ;
 My secret troubles cannot be revealed.

From all participation of its thoughts
 My heart recoils : I pray thee be contented.

Jane. What ! must I, like a distant humble friend,
 Observe thy restless eye and gait disturbed
 In timid silence, whilst with yearning heart
 I turn aside to weep ? O no, De Montfort !
 A nobler task thy nobler mind will give ;
 Thy true intrusted friend I still shall be.

De Mon. Ah, Jane, forbear ! I cannot e'en to thee.

Jane. Then, fie upon it ! fie upon it, Montfort !
 There was a time when e'en with murder stained,
 Had it been possible that such dire deed
 Could e'er have been the crime of one so piteous,
 Thou wouldst have told it me.

De Mon. So would I now—but ask of this no more.
 All other trouble but the one I feel
 I had disclosed to thee. I pray thee spare me.
 It is the secret weakness of my nature.

Jane. Then secret let it be ; I urge no further.
 The eldest of our valiant father's hopes,
 So sadly orphaned, side by side we stood,
 Like two young trees, whose boughs in early strength
 Screen the weak saplings of the rising grove,
 And brave the storm together—

I have so long, as if by nature's right,
 Thy bosom's inmate and adviser been,
 I thought through life I should have so remained,
 Nor ever known a change. Forgive me, Montfort ;
 A humbler station will I take by thee :
 The close attendant of thy wandering steps,
 The cheerer of this home, with strangers sought ;
 The soother of those griefs I must not know :
 This is mine office now : I ask no more.

De Mon. O Jane, thou dost constrain me with thy love !
 Would I could tell it thee !

Jane. Thou shalt not tell me. Nay, I'll stop mine ears.
 Nor from the yearnings of affection wring

What shrinks from utterance. Let it pass, my brother,
 I'll stay by thee ; I'll cheer thee, comfort thee ;
 Pursue with thee the study of some art,
 Or nobler science, that compels the mind
 To steady thought progressive, driving forth
 All floating, wild, unhappy fantasies,
 Till thou, with brow unclouded, smil'st again ;
 Like one who, from dark visions of the night,
 When th' active soul within its lifeless cell
 Holds its own world, with dreadful fancy pressed
 Of some dire, terrible, or murderous deed,
 Wakes to the dawning morn, and blesses Heaven.

De Mon. It will not pass away ; 'twill haunt me still.

Jane. Ah ! say not so, for I will haunt thee too,
 And be to it so close an adversary,
 That, though I wrestle darkling with the fiend,
 I shall o'ercome it.

De Mon. Thou most generous woman !
 Why do I treat thee thus ? It should not be—
 And yet I cannot—O that cursed villain !
 He will not let me be the man I would. [these ?

Jane. What say'st thou, brother ? Oh ! what words are
 They have awaked my soul to dreadful thoughts.
 I do beseech thee, speak !

By the affection thou didst ever bear me ;
 By the dear memory of our infant days ;
 By kindred living ties, ay, and by those
 Who sleep in the tomb, and cannot call to thee,
 I do conjure thee, speak ! . . .

Ah ! wilt thou not ?

Then, if affection, most unwearied love,
 Tried early, long, and never wanting found,
 O'er generous man hath more authority,
 More rightful power than crown or sceptre give,
 I do command thee ! . . .

De Montfort, do not thus resist my love.
 Here I entreat thee on my bended knees.
 Alas, my brother !

De Mon. [Raising her, and kneeling.]

Thus let him kneel who should the abased be,
 And at thine honoured feet confession make !
 I'll tell thee all—but, oh ! thou wilt despise me.
 For in my breast a raging passion burns,
 To which thy soul no sympathy will own—
 A passion which hath made my nightly cough
 A place of torment ; and the light of day,
 With the gay intercourse of social man,
 Feel like th' oppressive, airless pestilence.
 O Jane ! thou wilt despise me.

Jane. Say not so :

I never can despise thee, gentle brother.
 A lover's jealousy and hopeless pangs
 No kindly heart contemns.

De Mon. A lover, sayst thou ?

No, it is hate ! black, lasting, deadly hate !
 Which thus has driven me forth from kindred peace,
 From social pleasure, from my native home,
 To be a sullen wanderer on the earth,
 Avoiding all men, cursing and accursed !

Jane. De Montfort, this is fiend-like, frightful, terrible !
 What being, by th' Almighty Father formed
 Of flesh and blood, created even as thou,
 Could in thy breast such horrid tempest wake,
 Who art thyself his fellow ?

Unknit thy brows, and spread those wrath-clenched hands
 Some sprite accursed within thy bosom mates

To work thy ruin. Strive with it, my brother!
Strive bravely with it; drive it from thy breast;
'Tis the degrader of a noble heart:
Curse it, and bid it part.

De Mon. It will not part. [His hand on his breast.]

I've lodged it here too long:
With my first cares I felt its rankling touch;
I loathed him when a boy.

Jane. Whom didst thou say?

De Mon. Oh! that detested Rezenvelt!

E'en in our early sports, like two young whelps
Of hostile breed, instinctively reverse,
Each 'gainst the other pitched his ready pledge,
And frowned defiance. As we onward passed
From youth to man's estate, his narrow art
And envious gilding malice, poorly veiled
In the affected carelessness of mirth,
Still more detestable and odious grew.
There is no living being on this earth
Who can conceive the malice of his soul,
With all his gay and damned merriment,
To those by fortune or by merit placed
Above his paltry self. When, low in fortune,
He looked upon the state of prosperous men,
As nightly birds, roused from their murky holes,
Do scowl and chatter at the light of day,
I could endure it; even as we bear
Th' impotent bite of some half-trodden worm,
I could endure it. But when honours came,
And wealth and new-got titles fed his pride;
Whilst flattering knaves did trumpet forth his praise,
And grovelling idiots grinned applauses on him;
Oh, then I could no longer suffer it!
It drove me frantic.—What, what would I give!
What would I give to crush the bloated toad,
So rankly do I loathe him!

Jane. And would thy hatred crush the very man
Who gave to thee that life he might have taken?
That life which thou so rashly didst expose
To aim at his? Oh, this is horrible!

De Mon. Ha! thou hast heard it, then? From all the world,

But most of all from thee, I thought it hid.

Jane. I heard a secret whisper, and resolved
Upon the instant to return to thee.
Didst thou receive my letter?

De Mon. I did! I did! 'Twas that which drove me hither.

I could not bear to meet thine eye again.

Jane. Alas! that, tempted by a sister's tears,
I ever left thy house! These few past months,
These absent months, have brought us all this woe.
Had I remained with thee, it had not been.
And yet, methinks, it should not move you thus.
You dared him to the field; both bravely fought;
He, more adroit, disarmed you; courteously
Returned the forfeit sword, which, so returned,
You did refuse to use against him more;
And then, as says report, you parted friends.

De Mon. When he disarmed this cursed, this worthless hand

Of its most worthless weapon, he but spared
From devilish pride, which now derives a bliss
In seeing me thus fettered, shamed, subjected
With the vile favour of his poor forbearance;
While he securely sits with glibbing brow,

And basely baits me like a muzzled cur
Who cannot turn again.—
Until that day, till that accursed day,
I knew not half the torment of this hell
Which burns within my breast. Heaven's lightnings blast him!

Jane. Oh, this is horrible! Forbear, forbear!
Lest Heaven's vengeance light upon thy head
For this most impious wish.

De Mon. Then let it light.
Torments more fell than I have felt already
It cannot send. To be annihilated,
What all men shrink from; to be dust, be nothing,
Were bliss to me, compared to what I am!

Jane. Oh! wouldst thou kill me with these dreadful words?

De Mon. Let me but once upon his ruin look,
Then close mine eyes for ever!
Ha! how is this? Thou'rt ill; thou'rt very pale.
What have I done to thee? Alas, alas!
I meant not to distress thee.—O my sister!

Jane. I cannot speak to thee.

De Mon. I have killed thee.
Turn, turn thee not away! Look on me still!
Oh! droop not thus, my life, my pride, my sister;
Look on me yet again.

Jane. Thou too, De Montfort,
In better days wert wont to be my pride.

De Mon. I am a wretch, most wretched in myself,
And still more wretched in the pain I give.
Oh, curse that villain, that detested villain!
He has spread misery o'er my fated life;
He will undo us all.

Jane. I've held my warfare through a troubled world,
And borne with steady mind my share of ill;
For thou wert then the helpmate of my toil.
But now the wane of life comes darkly on,
And hideous passion tears me from thy heart,
Blasting thy worth.—I cannot strive with this.

De Mon. What shall I do?

A Country Life.

E'en now, methinks,
Each little cottage of my native vale
Swells out its earthen sides, upheaves its roof,
Like to a hillock moved by labouring mole,
And with green trail-weeds clambering up its walls,
Roses and every gay and fragrant plant
Before my fancy stands, a fairy bower:
Ay, and within it too do fairies dwell.
Peep through its wreathed window, if indeed
The flowers grow not too close; and there within Thou'lt see some half-a-dozen rosy brats
Eating from wooden bowls their dainty milk—
Those are my mountain elves. Seest thou not
Their very forms distinctly? . . .

I'll gather round my board
All that Heaven sends to me of way-worn folks,
And noble travellers, and neighbouring friends,
Both young and old. Within my ample hall,
The worn-out man of arms shall o'ertoe tread,
Tossing his gray locks from his wrinkled brow
With cheerful freedom, as he boasts his feats
Of days gone by.—Music we'll have; and oft
The bickering dance upon our oaken floors
Shall, thundering loud, strike on the distant ear

Of 'nighted travellers, who shall gladly bend
Their doubtful footsteps towards the cheering din.
Solemn, and grave, and cloistered, and demure
We shall not be. Will this content ye, damsels? . . .

Every season
Shall have its suited pastime: even winter
In its deep noon, when mountains piled with snow,
And choked-up valleys from our mansion bar
All entrance, and nor guest nor traveller
Sounds at our gate; the empty hall forsaken,
In some warm chamber, by the crackling fire
We'll hold our little, snug, domestic court,
Plying our work with song and tale between.

(From Orra.)

Prince Edward in his Dungeon.

Doth the bright sun from the high arch of heaven,
In all his beauteous robes of fleckered clouds,
And ruddy vapours, and deep-glowing flames,
And softly varied shades, look gloriously?
Do the green woods dance to the wind? the lakes
Cast up their sparkling waters to the light?
Do the sweet hamlets in their bushy dells
Send winding up to heaven their curling smoke
On the soft morning air?
Do the flocks bleat, and the wild creatures bound
In antic happiness? and mazy birds
Wing the mid air in lightly skimming bands?
Ay, all this is; all this men do behold;
The poorest man. Even in this lonely vault,
My dark and narrow world, oft do I hear
The crowing of the cock so near my walls,
And sadly think how small a space divides me
From all this fair creation.

(From Ethwald.)

Jane De Montfort.

Page. Madam, there is a lady in your hall
Who begs to be admitted to your presence.
Lady. Is it not one of our invited friends?
Page. No; far unlike to them. It is a stranger.
Lady. How looks her countenance?
Page. So queenly, so commanding, and so noble,
I shrunk at first in awe; but when she smiled,
For so she did to see me thus abashed,
Methought I could have compassed sea and land
To do her bidding.
Lady. Is she young or old?
Page. Neither, if right I guess; but she is fair:
For Time hath laid his hand so gently on her,
As he too had been awed.
Lady. The foolish stripling!
She has bewitched thee. Is she large in stature?
Page. So stately and so graceful is her form,
I thought at first her stature was gigantic;
But on a near approach I found, in truth,
She scarcely does surpass the middle size.
Lady. What is her garb?
Page. I cannot well describe the fashion of it:
She is not decked in any gallant trim,
But seems to me clad in the usual weeds
Of high habitual state; for as she moves
Wide flows her robe in many a waving fold,
As I have seen unfurled banners play
With the soft breeze.
Lady. Thine eyes deceive thee, boy;
It is an apparition thou hast seen.

Freberg [Starting up]. It is an apparition he has seen,
Or it is Jane de Montfort.

(From De Montfort.)

The characterisation in the last extract was regarded as a picture of Mrs Siddons. Of the Plays on the Passions, four are comedies and one is a tragedy in prose. Of fourteen miscellaneous plays, one is on Constantine Palaeologus and one (in prose) on Witchcraft; the Metrical Legends include poems on William Wallace, Columbus, and Grizel Baillie. And in the collected one-volume edition of her Dramatic and Poetical Works (1851), her other works are distributed into Fugitive Verses, Miscellaneous Poetry, and Verses on Sacred Subjects. See The Life and Work of Joanna Baillie, by Margaret S. Cathart (1923); and Lady Ritchie's Book of Sibylls (1882).

Richard Lovell Edgeworth (1744-1817)

was born at Bath, and came of a family that for a hundred and sixty years had been settled in Ireland, latterly at Edgeworthstown in County Longford. After nine years' schooling at Warwick, Drogheda, and Longford, and five months of dissipation at Trinity College, Dublin, in 1761 he was removed to Oxford, where, as a gentleman-commoner of Corpus, he passed two 'delightful, profitable' years. At Blackbourton, fourteen miles off, lived a friend of his father's, Paul Elers, a squire whose quiver was fuller than his purse: with one of his daughters Edgeworth eloped to Scotland (1763). The young couple spent a twelve-month at Edgeworthstown, and finally settled at Hare Hatch near Reading, Edgeworth meanwhile keeping terms in the Temple, till his father's death (1769) allowed him to give up all thought of the Bar. As a boy of seven he had become 'irrecoverably a mechanic' through the sight of an electrical machine; and his whole life long he was always inventing something—a semaphore, a velocipede, a pedometer. One of his inventions brought him across Dr Darwin; and at Lichfield, during the Christmas of 1770, he conceived a passion for lovely Honora Sneyd. His wife was away in Berkshire ('she was not of a cheerful temper'); but Thomas Day was with him, and urged him to flight. So with Day and his eldest boy, whom he was educating on Rousseau's system, he did fly to France, and at Lyons diverted himself and the course of the Rhone. Then his wife died, and four months afterwards he wedded Honora (1773), to lose her in 1780, and the same year marry her sister Elizabeth. She too died of consumption (1797); but the next wife, Miss Beaufort (1798), survived him by many years. In all he had nineteen children. 'I am not,' he observed, 'a man of prejudices. I have had four wives. The second and third were sisters, and I was in love with the second in the lifetime of the first.' He advocated parliamentary reform and Catholic emancipation; his house was spared by the rebels (1798); and in the last Irish Parliament (1798-99) he spoke for the Union, but voted against it, as a measure 'forced down the throats of the Irish, though five-sixths of the nation were against it.' Masterful, versatile, brilliant, enlightened, he stands as a type of the Superior Being; 'cocksureness' his principal foible. He was the idol of his own womankind, the friend of many better and greater than himself. His Memoirs (1820; 3rd ed. 1844) are autobiographical up to 1782; the completion, less interesting, is by his daughter Maria. See also The Black Book of Edgeworthstown (1927).

A Penitent.

The family at Black-Bourton at this time consisted of Mrs Elers, her mother Mrs Hungerford, and four grown-up young ladies, besides several children. The eldest son, an officer, was absent. The young ladies, though far from being beauties, were handsome; and though destitute of accomplishments, they were notwithstanding agreeable, from an air of youth and simplicity, and from unaffected good nature and gaiety. The person who struck me most at my introduction to this family group was Mrs Hungerford. She was near eighty, tall and majestic, with eyes that still retained uncommon lustre. She was not able to rise from her chair without the assistance of one of her granddaughters; but when she had risen, and stood leaning on her tortoise-shell cane, she received my father, as the friend of the family, with so much politeness and with so much grace as to eclipse all the young people by whom she was surrounded. Mrs Hungerford was a Blake, connected with the Norfolk family. She had formerly been the wife of Sir Alexander Kennedy, whom Mr Hungerford killed in a duel in Blenheim Park. Why she dropped her title in marrying Mr Hungerford I know not, nor can I tell how he persuaded the beautiful widow to marry him after he had killed her husband. Mr Hungerford brought her into the retirement of Black-Bourton, the ancient seat of his family, an excellent but antiquated house, with casement windows, divided by stone framework, the principal rooms wainscoted with oak, of which the antiquity might be guessed from the varnish it had acquired from time. In the large hall were hung spears, and hunting tackle, and armour, and trophies of war and of the chase, and a portrait, not of exquisite painting, of the gallant Sir Edward Hungerford. This portrait had been removed hither from Farley Castle, the principal seat of the family. In the history of Mrs Hungerford there was something mysterious, which was not, as I perceived, known to the younger part of the family. I made no enquiries from Mrs Elers, but I observed that she was for a certain time in the day invisible. She had an apartment to herself above stairs, containing three or four rooms; when she was below stairs, we used to make a short way from one side of the house to the other, through her rooms, which occupied nearly one side of a quadrangle, of which the house consisted. One day, forgetting that she was in her room, and her door by accident not having been locked, I suddenly entered: I saw her kneeling before a crucifix, which was placed upon her toilette; her beautiful eyes streaming with tears, and cast up to Heaven with the most fervent devotion; her silver locks flowing down her shoulders; the remains of exquisite beauty, grace, and dignity in her whole figure. I had not, till I saw her at these her private devotions, known that she was a Catholic; nor had I, till I saw her tears of contrition, any reason to suppose that she thought herself a penitent. The scene struck me, young as I was, and more gay than young—her tears seemed to comfort, not to depress her—and for the first time since my childhood I was convinced that the consolations of religion are fully equal to its terrors. She was so much in earnest that she did not perceive me; and I fortunately had time to withdraw without having disturbed her devotions.

Maria Edgeworth (1767–1849), daughter of the eccentric Richard Lovell Edgeworth, was born at Blackbourton on New-year's Day 1767, and in 1775 was sent to a school at Derby, in 1780 to a fashionable establishment in London. When still a child she was famed for her story-telling powers, and at thirteen she wrote a tale on Generosity. She accompanied her father to Ireland in 1782, and thenceforth till his death the two were never separate. For his sake mainly she sacrificed her one romance, refusing the hand of the Swedish Count Edelcrantz in 1802 at Paris, where, as again in 1820, and during frequent visits to London, she was greatly lionised. She was at Bowood (Lord Lansdowne's) in 1818, and at Abbotsford in 1823, Scott two years later returning the visit at Edgeworthstown. For the rest, her home life was busy and beneficent, if uneventful. Her eyesight often troubled her; but, active to the last, at seventy she began to learn Spanish, and at eighty-two could thoroughly enjoy Macaulay's History. She died in her stepmother's arms.

MARIA EDGEWORTH.

From a Drawing by Joseph Slater.

To the literary partnership between father and daughter we are directly indebted for Practical Education (2 vols. 1798) and the Essay on Irish Bulls (1802). But most of her other works, though they do not bear the joint names, were inspired by her father, and gained or (it may be) lost by his revision. Published between 1795 and 1847, they filled upwards of twenty volumes (1893 reprint in 10 vols.). Besides the Moral Tales, the Popular Tales, and Tales from Fashionable Life (Ennui, The Dun, &c.), and Harrington (an apology for the Jews), there are her three Irish masterpieces, Castle Rackrent (1800), The Absentee (1812), and Ormond

(1817). These, Scott says, 'have gone so far to make the English familiar with the character of their gay and kind-hearted neighbours of Ireland, that she may be truly said to have done more towards completing the Union than perhaps all the legislative enactments by which it has been followed up. Without being so presumptuous as to hope to emulate the rich humour, pathetic tenderness, and admirable taste which pervade the works of my accomplished friend, I felt that something might be attempted for my own country of the same kind with that which she has so fortunately achieved for Ireland.' The praise from Scott is extravagant; but Turgenief has put it on record that he 'was an unconscious disciple of Miss Edgeworth in setting out on his literary career. . . . It is possible, nay probable, that if Maria Edgeworth had not written about the poor Irish of County Longford and the squires and squires, it would not have occurred to me to give a literary form to my impressions about the classes parallel to them in Russia.' Her novels are doubtless too didactic; the plots may be poor, the dramatis personæ sometimes wooden; but for wit and pathos, for lively dialogue and simple directness, for bright vivacity and healthy realism, and for their vivid presentation of their times and of that 'most distressful country' in which their best scenes are laid, they well deserve still to be read. And her children's stories—'Lazy Laurence,' and 'Simple Susan,' and the other delightful old friends—are worth all the unchildish books about children which mawkish sentimentality has brought into recent vogue.

Irish Landlord and Scottish Agent.

'I was quite angry,' says Lord Glenthorn, 'with Mr M'Leod, my agent, and considered him as a selfish, hard-hearted miser, because he did not seem to sympathise with me, or to applaud my generosity. I was so much irritated by his cold silence that I could not forbear pressing him to say something. "I doubt, then," said he, "since you desire me to speak my mind, my lord—I doubt whether the best way of encouraging the industrious is to give premiums to the idle." But, idle or not, these poor wretches are so miserable that I cannot refuse to give them something; and surely, when one can do it so easily, it is right to relieve misery, is it not? "Undoubtedly, my lord; but the difficulty is to relieve present misery without creating more in future. Pity for one class of beings sometimes makes us cruel to others. I am told that there are some Indian Brahmins so very compassionate that they hire beggars to let fleas feed upon them; I doubt whether it might not be better to let the fleas starve."

'I did not in the least understand what Mr M'Leod meant; but I was soon made to comprehend it by crowds of eloquent beggars who soon surrounded me; many who had been resolutely struggling with their difficulties slackened their exertions, and left their labour for the easier trade of imposing upon my credulity. The money I had bestowed was wasted at the dram-shop, or it became the subject of family quarrels; and those whom I had relieved returned to my honour with fresh and insatiable expectations. All this time my industrious tenants grumbled because no encouragement was given to them; and looking upon me as a weak, good-natured fool, they combined in a resolution to ask me for long leases or a reduction of rent.

'The rhetoric of my tenants succeeded in some instances; and again, I was mortified by Mr M'Leod's silence. I was too proud to ask his opinion. I ordered, and was obeyed. A few leases for long terms were signed and sealed; and when I had thus my own way completely, I could not refrain from recurring to Mr M'Leod's opinion. "I doubt, my lord," said he, "whether this measure may be as advantageous as you hope. These fellows, these middle-men, will underset the land, and live in idleness, whilst they rack a parcel of wretched under-tenants." But they said they would keep the land in their own hands and improve it; and that the reason why they could not afford to improve before was, that they had not long leases. "It may be doubted whether long leases alone will make improving tenants; for in the next county to us there are many farms of the Dowager-lady Ormsby's land, let at ten shillings an acre, and her tenantry are beggars; and the land now at the end of the leases is worn out, and worse than at their commencement."

'I was weary of listening to this cold reasoning, and resolved to apply no more for explanations to Mr M'Leod; yet I did not long keep this resolution: infirm of purpose, I wanted the support of his approbation, at the very time I was jealous of his interference.

'At one time I had a mind to raise the wages of labour; but Mr M'Leod said: "It might be doubted whether the people would not work less, when they could with less work have money enough to support them."

'I was puzzled, and then I had a mind to lower the wages of labour, to force them to work or starve. Still provoking, Mr M'Leod said: "It might be doubted whether it would not be better to leave them alone."

'I gave marriage-portions to the daughters of my tenants, and rewards to those who had children; for I had always heard that legislators should encourage population. Still Mr M'Leod hesitated to approve: he observed "that my estate was so populous that the complaint in each family was that they had not land for the sons. It might be doubted whether, if a farm could support but ten people, it were wise to encourage the birth of twenty. It might be doubted whether it were not better for ten to live and be well fed, than for twenty to be born and to be half-starved."

'To encourage manufactures in my town of Glenthorn, I proposed putting a clause in my leases compelling my tenants to buy stuffs and linens manufactured at Glenthorn, and nowhere else. Stubborn M'Leod, as usual, began with: "I doubt whether that will not encourage the manufacturers at Glenthorn to make bad stuffs and bad linen, since they are sure of a sale, and without danger of competition."

'At all events I thought my tenants would grow rich and independent if they made everything at home that they wanted; yet Mr M'Leod perplexed me by his "doubt whether it would not be better for a man to buy shoes, if he could buy them cheaper than he could make them." He added something about the division of labour and Smith's Wealth of Nations. To which I could only answer, "Smith's a Scotchman." I cannot express how much I dreaded Mr M'Leod's I doubt and it may be doubted.' (From Ennui.)

An Irish Postillion.

From the inn-yard came a hackney chaise, in a most deplorably crazy state; the body mounted up to a prodigious height, on unbending springs, nodding forward, one door swinging open, three blinds up, because they could not be let down, the perch tied in two places, the iron of the wheels half off, half loose, wooden pegs for linch-pins, and ropes for harness. The horses were worthy of the harness; wretched little dog-tired creatures, that looked as if they had been driven to the last gasp, and as if they had never been rubbed down in their lives; their bones starting through their skin; one lame, the other blind; one with a raw back, the other with a galled breast; one with his neck poking down over his collar, and the other with his head dragged forward by a bit of a broken bridle, held at arm's-length by a man dressed like a mad beggar, in half a hat and half a wig, both awry in opposite directions; a long tattered coat, tied round his waist by a hay-rope; the jagged rents in the skirts of this coat shewing his bare legs, marbled of many colours; while something like stockings hung loose about his ankles. The noises he made, by way of threatening or encouraging his steeds, I pretend not to describe. In an indignant voice I called to the landlord: 'I hope these are not the horses—I hope this is not the chaise intended for my servants.' The innkeeper, and the pauper who was preparing to officiate as postillion, both in the same instant exclaimed: 'Sorrow better chaise in the county!' 'Sorrow!' said I—'what do you mean by sorrow?' 'That there's no better, please your honour, can be seen. We have two more, to be sure; but one has no top, and the other no bottom. Any way, there's no better can be seen than this same.' 'And these horses!' cried I: 'why, this horse is so lame he can hardly stand.' 'Oh, please your honour, though he can't stand, he'll go fast enough. He has a great deal of the rogue in him, please your honour. He's always that way at first setting out.' 'And that wretched animal with the galled breast!' 'He's all the better for it when once he warms; it's he that will go with the speed of light, please your honour. Sure, is not he Knockecroghery? and didn't I give fifteen guineas for him, barring the luckpenny, at the fair of Knockecroghery, and he rising four year old at the same time?'

Then seizing his whip and reins in one hand, he clawed up his stockings with the other; so with one easy step he got into his place, and seated himself, coachman-like, upon a well-worn bar of wood, that served as a coach-box. 'Throw me the loan of a trusty, Bartly, for a cushion,' said he. A frieze-coat was thrown up over the horses' heads. Paddy caught it. 'Where are you, Hosey?' cried he to a lad in charge of the leaders. 'Sure I'm only rowling a wisp of straw on my leg,' replied Hosey. 'Throw me up,' added this pangon of postillions, turning to one of the crowd of idle by-standers. 'Arrah, push me up, can't ye?' A man took hold of his knee, and threw him upon the horse. He was in his seat in a trice. Then clinging by the mane of his horse, he scrambled for the bridle, which was under the other horse's feet, reached it, and, well satisfied with himself, looked round at Paddy, who looked back to the chaise-door at my angry servants, 'secure in the last event of things.' In vain the Englishman, in monotonous anger, and the Frenchman in every note of the gamut, abused Paddy. Necessity and wit were on Paddy's side. He parried all that was said against his chaise, his horses, himself, and his country with invincible comic dexterity; till at last both his adversaries, dumfounded, clambered into the vehicle, where they were instantly shut up in straw and darkness. Paddy, in a triumphant tone, called to my postillions, bidding them 'get on, and not be stopping the way any longer.' [One of the horses becomes restive.] 'Never fear,' reiterated Paddy. 'I'll engage I'll be up wid him. Now for it, Knockecroghery! O the rogue, he thinks he has me at a nonplush; but I'll shew him the differ.'

After this brag of war, Paddy whipped, Knockecroghery kicked, and Paddy, seemingly unconscious of danger, sat within reach of the kicking horse, twitching up first one of his legs, then the other, and shifting as the animal aimed his hoofs, escaping every time as it were by miracle. With a mixture of temerity and presence of mind, which made us alternately look upon him as a madman and a hero, he gloried in the danger, secure of success, and of the sympathy of the spectators.

'Ah! didn't I compass him cleverly then? O the villain, to be browbating me! I'm too 'cute for him yet. See there, now; he's come to; and I'll be his bail he'll go asy enough wid me. Ogh! he has a fine spirit of his own; but it's I that can match him. 'Twould be a poor case if a man like me couldn't match a horse any way, let alone a mare, which this is, or it never would be so vicious.' (From Ennui.)

English Shyness, or 'Mauvaise Honte.'

Lord William had excellent abilities, knowledge, and superior qualities of every sort, all depressed by excessive timidity, to such a degree as to be almost useless to himself and to others. Whenever he was, either for the business or pleasure of life, to meet or mix with numbers, the whole man was, as it were, snatched from himself. He was subject to that nightmare of the soul who seats himself upon the human breast, oppresses the heart, palsies the will, and raises spectres of dismay which the sufferer combats in vain—that cruel enchantress who hurls her spell even upon childhood, and when she makes youth her victim, pronounces: Henceforward you shall never appear in your natural character. Innocent, you shall look guilty; wise, you shall look silly; never shall you have the use of your natural faculties. That which you wish to say, you shall not say; that which you wish to do, you shall not do. You shall appear reserved when you are enthusiastic—insensible, when your heart sinks into melting tenderness. In the presence of those whom you most wish to please, you shall be most awkward; and when approached by her you love, you shall become lifeless as a statue, and under the irresistible spell of 'mauvaise honte.' Strange that France should give name to that malady of mind which she never knew, or of which she knows less than any other nation upon the surface of the civilised globe!

Besides the Memoir of Miss Edgeworth (privately printed, 3 vols. 1867; edited by Hare, 2 vols. 1894), there are Lives by Helen Zimmern (1883) and Hon. Emily Lawless ('English Men of Letters,' 1904). See also Constance Hill's Maria Edgeworth and her Circle (1909); Paterson's The Edgeworths (1914); Lady Ritchie's Book of Sibylla (1883), and her introductions to the excellent reprints of Castle Rackrent, &c. (1895-97); and the autobiographical Memoir of her father, completed by Miss Edgeworth.

Thomas Day (1748–89), the author of Sandford and Merton, was born in London, and, when thirteen months old, by his father's death came into £900 a year. From the Charterhouse he passed to Corpus College, Oxford, and presently struck up a close friendship with Richard Lovell Edgeworth. In 1765 he entered the Middle Temple, in 1775 was called to the Bar, but he never practised. A good, clever eccentric, a disciple of Rousseau, he brought up two girls, an orphan blonde and a foundling brunette, one of whom should become his wife. That scheme miscarried; and, admitted to the Lichfield coterie, he proposed first to Honora Sneyd, and next to her sister Elizabeth. She sent him to France to acquire the French graces; as acquired by him, they but moved her to laughter. Finally in 1778 he married an appreciative heiress, and spent with her eleven happy years, farming on philanthropic and costly principles in Essex and Surrey, till in 1789 he was killed by a fall from a colt he was breaking in. His wife died broken-hearted two years afterwards, and they both lie in Wargrave churchyard, near Henley. Two only of Day's eleven works call for mention—The Dying Negro, partly by his friend James Bicknell, a barrister (1773), and the History of Sandford and Merton (3 vols. 1783–89). The poem struck the keynote of the anti-slavery movement; the child's book, like its author, is sometimes ridiculous but always excellent. See Lives of Day by Keir (1791) and Blackman (1862), the Memoirs of R. L. Edgeworth (1820), and Lady Ritchie's Book of Sibyls (1883).

Sir Nathanael William Wraxall (1751–1831), born at Bristol, was for three years in the East India Company's service, travelled over Europe (1772–79), and discharged various confidential and diplomatic missions. He published his Cursory Remarks made in a Tour in 1775, his Memoirs of the Valois Kings in 1777, entered Parliament in 1780 as a follower of Lord North, but went over to Pitt, and was made a baronet in 1813. His next books were the History of France from Henry III. to Louis XIV. (1795); Memoirs of the Courts of Berlin, Dresden, Warsaw, and Vienna (1799); and the famous Historical Memoirs of my own Time, 1772–84, not published, however, till 1815. For a libel there made on Count Woronzov, Russian envoy to England, he was fined £500 and sentenced to six months' imprisonment. Violent attacks on his veracity were made by the reviews, the Quarterly and the Edinburgh being, strange to say, equally denunciatory; Macaulay unkindly discovered and named a new scientific species 'Mendacium Wraxallianum;' but Wraxall's Answers were accounted sufficient to re-establish his credit on the whole, though not perhaps to authenticate all his anecdotes. A continuation of the Memoirs (1784–90) was published in 1836. See Wheatley's edition of the whole work (5 vols. 1884).

Robert Hall (1764–1831), born at Arnsby near Leicester, was educated at a Baptist academy at Bristol and at Aberdeen, and was appointed assistant minister at Bristol and tutor in the academy. Even at Bristol his eloquent preaching attracted overflowing audiences; and at Cambridge, whither he went in 1790, he rose to the highest rank of British pulpit orators. Among his writings are an Apology for the Freedom of the Press (1793) and On Terms of Communion (1815). For twenty years he laboured in Leicester, but he returned in 1826 to Bristol. His most famous sermon was that on the death of the Princess Charlotte in 1817. His works, with a Memoir by Dr O. Gregory, were published in 1831–33 (11th ed. 1853). It cannot be said that they give an adequate notion of the fascination he produced on his audiences by his fervid eloquence. Dugald Stewart praised his style as 'the English language in its perfection.' There is a short Life of him by Paxton Hood (1881).

John Foster (1770–1843), 'the essayist,' was born in the parish of Halifax, Yorkshire, the elder son of a yeoman-weaver, and was trained for the ministry at Brierly Hall and the Baptist College in Bristol; but, after preaching for twenty-five years with indifferent success to various small congregations, lived by literature from 1817 on. His Essays, in a series of Letters (1805), were only four in number—the best-known that 'On Decision of Character.' In 1819 appeared his Essay on the Evils of Popular Ignorance, urging the necessity of national education. In 1806–39 he contributed one hundred and eighty-four articles to the Eclectic Review, some of which were republished in two volumes in 1844, and, in extracts, in Fosteriana. He died at Stapleton, Bristol, his home for twenty-two years. Mackintosh regarded him as 'one of the most profound and eloquent writers England had produced.' His Life and Correspondence was edited by J. E. Ryland (1846; new ed. 1852).

From the Essay 'On the Epithet Romantic.'

If they chose, for their own and others' amusement, to dismiss a sound judgment awhile from its office, to stimulate their imagination to the wildest extravagances, and to depicture the fantastic career in writing, the book might be partly the same thing as if produced by a mind in which sound judgment had no place; it would exhibit imagination actually ascendant by the writer's voluntary indulgence, though not necessarily so by the constitution of his mind. It was a different case if a writer kept his judgment active amidst these very extravagances, with the intention of shaping and directing them to some particular end, of satire or sober truth. But, however, the romances of the ages of chivalry and the preceding times were composed under neither of these intellectual conditions. They were not the productions either of men who, possessing a sound judgment, chose formally to suspend its exercise, in order to riot awhile in scenes of extravagant fancy, only keeping that judgment so far awake as to retain a continual consciousness in what degree they were extravagant; or of men designing to give effect to truth or malice under the disguise of a fantastic exhibition. It is evident that the authors were under the real ascendancy of imagination; so that, though they must at times have been conscious of committing great excesses, yet they were on the whole wonderfully little sensible of the enormous extravagance of their fictions. They could drive on their career through monstrous absurdities of description and narration, without, apparently, any check from a sense of inconsistency, improbability, or impossibility; and with an air as if they really reckoned on being taken for the veritable describers of something that could exist or happen within the mundane system. And the general state of intellect of the age in which they lived seems to have been well fitted to allow them the utmost license. The irrationality of the romancers, and of the age, provoked the observing and powerful mind of Cervantes to expose it by means of a parallel and still more extravagant representation of the prevalence of imagination over reason, drawn in a ludicrous form, by which he rendered the folly palpable even to the sense of that age. From that time the delirium abated; the works which inspirited its ravings have been blown away beyond the knowledge and curiosity of any but bibliomaniacs; and the fabrication of such is gone among the lost branches of manufacturing art.

Yet romance was in some form to be retained, as indispensable to the craving of the human mind for something more vivid, more elated, more wonderful, than the plain realities of life; as a kind of mental balloon, for mounting into the air from the ground of ordinary experience. To afford this extra-rational kind of luxury, it was requisite that the fictions should still partake, in a limited degree, of the quality of the earlier romance. The writers were not to be the dupes of wild fancy; they were not to feign marvels in such a manner as if they knew no better; they were not wholly to lose sight of the actual system of things, but to keep within some measures of relation and proportion to it; and yet they were required to disregard the strict laws of verisimilitude in shaping their inventions, and to magnify and diversify them with an indulgence of fancy very considerably beyond the bounds of probability. Without this their fictions would have lost what was regarded as the essential quality of romance.

If, therefore, the epithet Romantic, as now employed for description and censure of character, sentiments, and schemes, is to be understood as expressive of the quality which is characteristic of that class of fictions, it imputes, in substance, a great excess of imagination in proportion to judgment; and it imputes, in particulars, such errors as naturally result from that excess. . . .

It is not strange that a faculty of which the exercise is so easy and bewitching, and the scope infinite, should obtain a predominance over judgment, especially in young persons, and in such as may have been brought up, like Rasselas and his companions, in great seclusion from the sight and experience of the world. Indeed, a considerable vigour of imagination, though it be at the expense of a frequent predominance over juvenile understanding, seems necessary, in early life, to cause a generous expansion of the passions, by giving the most lively aspect to the objects which must attract them in order to draw forth into activity the faculties of our nature. It may also contribute to prepare the mind for the exercise of that faith which converses with things unseen, but converses with them through the medium of those ideal forms in which imagination presents them, and in which only a strong imagination can present them impressively. And I should deem it the indication of a character not destined to excel in the liberal, the energetic, or the devout qualities, if I observed in the youthful age a close confinement of thought to bare truth and minute accuracy, with an entire aversion to the splendours, amplifications, and excursions of fancy. The opinion is warranted by instances of persons so distinguished in youth, who have become subsequently very intelligent indeed, in a certain way, but dry, cold, precise, devoted to detail, and incapable of being carried away one moment by any inspiration of the beautiful or the sublime. They seem to have only the bare intellectual mechanism of the human mind, without the addition of what is to give it life and sentiment. They give one an impression analogous to that of the leafless trees observed in winter, admirable for the distinct exhibition of their branches and minute ramifications so clearly defined on the sky, but destitute of all the green soft luxury of foliage which is requisite to make a perfect tree. And the affections which may exist in such minds seem to have a bleak abode, somewhat like those bare deserted nests which you have often seen in such trees.

If, indeed, the signs of this exclusive understanding indicated also such an extraordinary vigour of the faculty as to promise a very great mathematician or metaphysician, one would perhaps be content to forgo some of the properties which form a complete mind, for the sake of this pre-eminence of one of its endowments; even though the person were to be so defective in sentiment and fancy that, as the story goes of an eminent mathematician, he could read through a most animated and splendid epic poem, and on being asked what he thought of it, gravely reply, 'What does it prove?' But the want of imagination is never an evidence, and perhaps but rarely a concomitant, of superior understanding.

Catherine Maria Fanshawe (1765-1834), the deformed and sickly daughter of a Surrey squire, was, like the two sisters with whom she lived in London, an accomplished drafts-woman; and, though her poems were not printed till much later, was famous as a poetess towards the end of the eighteenth century. Her best-known poem is the famous 'Riddle on the Letter H,' commonly credited to Lord Byron, of which the first line was altered—apparently by Horace Smith—to the form now current, 'Twas whispered in heaven, 'twas muttered in hell;' though some of her serious poems are equally noteworthy. The serio-comic Elegy on the Birth-night Ball is also famous; it begins:

Now cease the exulting strain,
And bid the warbling lyre complain;
Heave the soft sigh and drop the tuneful tear,
And mingle notes far other than of mirth,
E'en with the song that greets the new-born year,
Or hails the day that gave a monarch birth.

A Riddle on the Letter H.

'Twas in heaven pronounced—it was muttered in hell,
And echo caught faintly the sound as it fell;
On the confines of earth 'twas permitted to rest,
And the depth of the ocean its presence confessed.

'Twill be found in the sphere when 'tis riven asunder,
 Be seen in the lightning, and heard in the thunder.
 'Twas allotted to man with his earliest breath,
 Attends at his birth and awaits him in death :
 Presides o'er his happiness, honour, and health,
 Is the prop of his house, and the end of his wealth.
 In the heaps of the miser 'tis hoarded with care,
 But is sure to be lost on his prodigal heir.
 It begins every hope, every wish it must bound,
 With the husbandman toils, and with monarchs is crowned.
 Without it the soldier, the seaman may roam,
 But woe to the wretch who expels it from home !
 In the whispers of conscience its voice will be found,
 Nor e'en in the whirlwind of passion is drowned.
 'Twill not soften the heart ; and tho' deaf be the ear,
 It will make it acutely and instantly hear.
 Yet in shade let it rest like a delicate flower,
 Ah, breathe on it softly—it dies in an hour.

James Beresford (1764-1820), born at Upham in Hampshire, was educated at the Charterhouse and at Merton College, Oxford, and died rector of Kibworth Beauchamp in Leicestershire. He wrote verse translations, religious works, and, in humorous dialogues, The Miseries of Human Life (1806-7), which scored a great success and found numerous imitators. It went through nine editions in a twelvemonth—largely because it formed the subject of an amusing critique in the Edinburgh Review from the pen of Sir Walter Scott. 'It is the English only,' Scott declared, 'who submit to the same tyranny, from all the incidental annoyances and petty vexations of the day, as from the serious calamities of life ;' and it is these petty miseries which in this work form the subject of dialogues between the imaginary interlocutors, Timothy Testy and Samuel Sensitive. The jokes are frequently artificial, overstrained, and trifling, and the classical quotations far-fetched, but the author's aim was doubtless attained—the book gave him éclat, and its readers laughed. These are two of the briefer 'groans' :

After having left a company in which you have been galled by the raillery of some wag by profession, thinking at your leisure of a repartee which, if discharged at the proper moment, would have blown him to atoms.

Rashly confessing that you have a slight cold in the hearing of certain elderly ladies 'of the faculty,' who instantly form themselves into a consultation upon your case, and assail you with a volley of nostrums, all of which, if you would have a moment's peace, you must solemnly promise to take off before night—though well satisfied that they would retaliate by 'taking you off' before morning.

William Robert Spencer (1769-1834), a grandson of the third Duke of Marlborough, was educated at Harrow and Christ Church, Oxford, and from 1797 to 1826 was a commissioner of stamps. He wrote many vers de société, somewhat exaggerated in compliment and adulation, and wittily parodied in Rejected Addresses. Falling into pecuniary difficulties, he migrated in 1825 to Paris, and there he died. He was one of several

English authors (H. J. Pye, Taylor of Norwich, Sir Walter Scott amongst them) who about the same date translated Bürger's Lenore. Spencer's (1796) had many excellences, though the swift movement of Bürger's varied measure is but imperfectly reproduced in monotonous verses of this kind :

The fiend horse snorts ; blue fiery snakes
 Collected roll his nostrils round ;
 High reared his bristling mane he shakes,
 And sinks beneath the rending ground.
 Demons the thundering clouds bestride,
 Ghosts yell the yawning tombs beneath ;
 Leonora's heart, its life-blood dried,
 Heaves heavy in the grasp of death.

Of his original poems, 'Too late I stayed' has been often quoted ; but by far the best-known (based on the Welsh form of the widespread and greatly varying folk-tale) was his ballad of

Beth Gélert, or the Grave of the Greyhound.

The spearmen heard the bugle sound,
 And cheerly smiled the morn ;
 And many a brach and many a hound
 Obeyed Llewelyn's horn.
 And still he blew a louder blast,
 And gave a lustier cheer :
 'Come, Gélert, come, wert never last
 Llewelyn's horn to hear.
 'Oh, where does faithful Gélert roam,
 The flower of all his race ;
 So true, so brave—a lamb at home,
 A lion in the chase ?'
 'Twas only at Llewelyn's board
 The faithful Gélert fed ;
 He watched, he served, he cheered his lord,
 And sentinelled his bed.
 In sooth he was a peerless hound,
 The gift of royal John ;
 But now no Gélert could be found,
 And all the chace rode on.
 And now, as o'er the rocks and dells
 The gallant chidings rise,
 All Snowden's craggy chaos yells
 The many-mingled cries !
 That day Llewelyn little loved
 The chace of hart and hare ;
 And scant and small the booty proved,
 For Gélert was not there.
 Unpleased, Llewelyn homeward hied,
 When, near the portal seat,
 His truant Gélert he espied,
 Bounding his lord to greet.
 But when he gained his castle-door,
 Aghast the chieftain stood ;
 The hound all o'er was smeared with gore ;
 His lips, his fangs, ran blood.
 Llewelyn gazed with fierce surprise ;
 Unused such looks to meet,
 His favourite checked his joyful guise,
 And crouched, and licked his feet.

Onward, in haste, Llewelyn passed,
 And on went Gélert too ;
 And still, where'er his eyes he cast,
 Fresh blood-gouts shocked his view.
 O'erturned his infant's bed he found,
 With blood-stained covert rent ;
 And all around, the walls and ground
 With recent blood besprent.
 He called his child—no voice replied—
 He searched with terror wild ;
 Blood, blood he found on every side,
 But nowhere found his child.
 'Hell-hound ! my child's by thee devoured,'
 The frantic father cried ;
 And to the hilt his vengeful sword
 He plunged in Gélert's side.
 His suppliant looks, as prone he fell,
 No pity could impart ;
 But still his Gélert's dying yell
 Passed heavy o'er his heart.
 Aroused by Gélert's dying yell,
 Some slumberer awakened nigh :
 What words the parent's joy could tell
 To hear his infant's cry ?
 Concealed beneath a tumbled heap
 His hurried search had missed,
 All glowing from his rosy sleep,
 The cherub boy he kissed.
 Nor scathe had he, nor harm, nor dread,
 But, the same couch beneath,
 Lay a gaunt wolf, all torn and dead,
 Tremendous still in death.
 Ah, what was then Llewelyn's pain !
 For now the truth was clear ;
 His gallant hound the wolf had slain
 To save Llewelyn's heir.
 Vain, vain was all Llewelyn's woe ;
 'Best of thy kind, adieu !
 The frantic blow which laid thee low
 This heart shall ever rue.'
 And now a gallant tomb they raise,
 With costly sculpture decked ;
 And marbles storied with his praise
 Poor Gélert's bones protect.
 There, never could the spearman pass,
 Or forester unmoved ;
 There, oft the tear-besprinkled grass
 Llewelyn's sorrow proved.
 And there he hung his horn and spear,
 And there, as evening fell,
 In fancy's ear he oft would hear
 Poor Gélert's dying yell.
 And, till great Snowden's rocks grow old,
 And cease the storm to brave,
 The consecrated spot shall hold
 The name of Gélert's Grave.

The Visionary.

When midnight o'er the moonless skies
 Her pall of transient death has spread,
 When mortals sleep, when spectres rise,
 And nought is wakeful but the dead :

No bloodless shape my way pursues,
 No sheeted ghost my couch annoys ;
 Visions more sad my fancy views,
 Visions of long-departed joys !

The shade of youthful hope is there,
 That lingered long, and latest died ;
 Ambition all dissolved to air,
 With phantom honours by his side.

What empty shadows glimmer nigh ?
 They once were Friendship, Truth, and Love !
 Oh, die to thought, to memory die,
 Since lifeless to my heart ye prove !

These last two verses Sir Walter Scott, who knew and esteemed Spencer, quotes in his diary as 'fine lines' expressing his own feelings amidst the wreck of his fortunes at Abbotsford. A Memoir of Spencer was prefixed to a volume of his poems reprinted in 1835.

Francis Wrangham (1769-1842), son of a Yorkshire farmer, studied at Cambridge, and became an accomplished classic, English poet, and miscellaneous writer. With Basil Montagu's assistance he took in pupils at his Surrey curacy, issuing an elaborate scheme of study which led Sir James Mackintosh to say: 'A boy thus educated will be a walking encyclopædia;' he was ultimately Archdeacon of the East Riding of Yorkshire and Prebendary of Chester. The thirty-six publications by him named in the Dictionary of National Biography comprise Latin poems, English poems, songs; translations from Aristophanes, Virgil, Horace, Petrarch; sermons, books on the evidences of Christianity, and the English version commonly printed of Milton's second Defensio.

Sir John Malcolm (1769-1833) was born at Burnfoot near Langholm, and at thirteen entered the Madras army; distinguished himself at Seringapatam (1799) and in the wars with the Pindaris and Holkar; and besides holding minor political appointments in Mysore, the Deccan, &c., was thrice ambassador to Persia in 1800-10, and Governor of Bombay (1827-30). In 1812-17 and again in 1822-30 he was in England, being knighted in 1812; in due time he became G.C.B.; and having entered Parliament in 1831, opposed the Reform Bill. Several of his works became standard authorities: A History of Persia (1815), Memoir of Central India (1823), Political History of India, 1784-1823 (1826), Sketches in Persia (1827), and Life of Clive (1836). A Life of him was written by Kaye (1856).

James Montgomery (1771-1854) was born at Irvine in Ayrshire, the son of a Moravian pastor, who from Ireland went to Barbadoes in 1783, and there died. The boy had in 1777 been sent to the Moravian school at Fulneck near Leeds, and, after ten dreamy years there, was put apprentice to a grocer at Mirfield. In his sixteenth year, with 3s. 6d. in his pocket, he ran away from Mirfield, and, after some suffering, became a shop-boy in the village of Wath. He next tried London, carrying with him a collection of his poems, but failed to obtain a publisher. In 1792 he was clerk in a newspaper office in Sheffield; four years later he became editor of the Sheffield Iris, a weekly journal, which he conducted on Liberal lines and in a kindly spirit till 1825. But his course did not always run smooth. In January 1795 he was tried for having struck off a broadsheet ballad by a Belfast clergyman on the demolition of the Bastille; it was really his predecessor who had printed it, but Montgomery was sentenced to three months' imprisonment in York Castle, and a fine of £20. In January 1796, tried for a paragraph in his paper on the conduct of a magistrate in quelling a riot at Sheffield, he was again convicted, and sentenced to six months' imprisonment and a fine of £30.

The Wanderer of Switzerland, and other Poems

JAMES MONTGOMERY.

From an Engraving after Chantrey.

(1806), dealing with the French occupation, was his first poem to catch the public ear, and speedily went through two editions; his publishers had just issued a third, when the Edinburgh Review of January 1807 'denounced the unfortunate volume in a style of such authoritative reprobation as no mortal verse could be expected to survive,' and prophesied immediate oblivion for the author and all his works. Nevertheless a score of editions of what is admittedly a feeble poem appeared: a lyric in it, 'The Grave,' has been always recognised as one of his best things; both Blackwood and Byron commended it. The West Indies (1809), written (in heroic couplets) in honour of the abolition of the slave-trade, is an eloquent, sincere, and tender expression of the kindlier sentiment of the time. Prison Amusements he had written during his nine months' confinement in York Castle. The World before the Flood, a more elaborate poem in ten cantos, describes with much energy and with frequent touches of real human interest the antediluvian patriarchs in their happy valley, the invasion of Eden by the descendants of Cain, the loves of Javan and Zillah, the translation of Enoch, and the final deliverance of the little band of patriarchal families from the giants. Thoughts on Wheels (1817) was a verse denunciation of State lotteries; and The Climbing Boy's Soliloquies, also in verse, was levelled by him and others against the cruel practice of sending boys up chimneys. Greenland (1819), a poem in five cantos, dealing with the Ancient Moravian Church, its revival in the eighteenth century, and its missions to Greenland, secured favour even outside devout circles both by descriptive power and narrative interest. Montgomery's only other long poem, The Pelican Island, in nine cantos of blank verse, was suggested by a passage in Captain Flinders's voyage to Terra Australis, describing the ancient haunts of the pelican on the small islands off the Australian coast.

He wrote also a number of short pieces published in periodicals, short translations from Dante and Petrarch, and many hymns which have found wide acceptance, such as 'Go to dark Gethsemane,' 'For ever with the Lord,' 'Songs of praise the angels sang,' 'Hail to the Lord's anointed,' 'According to thy gracious word,' and 'Pour out thy spirit from on high.' Dr John Julian computes that about a hundred of his hymns are still in common use. His selection of hymns, with introduction and notes, called The Christian Psalmist (1825), has been said to have laid the foundation of scientific hymnology. In 1830 and 1831 he delivered a course of lectures at the Royal Institution on Poetry and General Literature, published in 1833. A pension of £150, conferred at the instance of Sir Robert Peel in 1835, he enjoyed till his death, at eighty-three, in 1854. Montgomery was a warm-hearted, earnest, good man, a philanthropist universally esteemed, but was great neither as a thinker nor as a poet. His later poems, just touched by Shelley's influence instead of Campbell's, are decidedly better than his earlier. The longer ones are too long, and tediously didactic, though relieved here and there by admirable descriptive passages. 'Conscience, the bosom-hell of guilty man;' 'Where justice reigns, 'tis freedom to obey;' and the like fragments quoted from him, are rather ethical maxims than poetical thoughts. Many of his shorter pieces and lyrics are really fine, but his following was always mainly amongst those who sympathised most heartily with his theological views and prized his works for their religious tone and ethical teaching. He did not overestimate his own powers as a poet, and frankly anticipated that none of his poems would live—'except perhaps a few of my hymns.' He was apparently a true prophet; save for the hymns and a few selections, he is even now hardly read or remembered.

From 'Greenland.'

'Tis sunset ; to the firmament serene
 The Atlantic wave reflects a gorgeous scene ;
 Broad in the cloudless west, a belt of gold
 Girds the blue hemisphere ; above unrolled
 The keen clear air grows palpable to sight,
 Embodied in a flush of crimson light,
 Through which the evening-star, with milder gleam,
 Descends to meet her image in the stream.
 Far in the east, what spectacle unknown
 Allures the eye to gaze on it alone ?
 Amidst black rocks, that lift on either hand
 Their countless peaks, and mark receding land ;
 Amidst a tortuous labyrinth of seas,
 That shine around the Arctic Cyclades ;
 Amidst a coast of dreariest continent,
 In many a shapeless promontory rent ;
 O'er rocks, seas, islands, promontories spread,
 The ice-blink rears its undulated head,
 On which the sun, beyond the horizon shrined,
 Hath left his richest garniture behind ;
 Piled on a hundred arches, ridge by ridge,
 O'er fixed and fluid strides the alpine bridge,
 Whose blocks of sapphire seem to mortal eye
 Hewn from cerulean quarries in the sky ;
 With glacier battlements that crowd the spheres,
 The slow creation of six thousand years,
 Amidst immensity it towers sublime,
 Winter's eternal palace, built by Time :
 All human structures by his touch are borne
 Down to the dust ; mountains themselves are worn
 With his light footsteps ; here for ever grows,
 Amid the region of unmelting snows,
 A monument ; where every flake that falls
 Gives adamantine firmness to the walls.
 The sun beholds no mirror in his race,
 That shews a brighter image of his face ;
 The stars, in their nocturnal vigils, rest
 Like signal-fires on its illumined crest ;
 The gliding moon around the ramparts wheels,
 And all its magic lights and shades reveals ;
 Beneath, the tide with equal fury raves,
 To undermine it through a thousand caves ;
 Rent from its roof, though thundering fragments oft
 Plunge to the gulf, immovable aloft,
 From age to age, in air, o'er sea, on land,
 Its turrets heighten and its piers expand. . . .

Hark ! through the calm and silence of the scene,
 Slow, solemn, sweet, with many a pause between,
 Celestial music swells along the air !
 No ! 'tis the evening-hymn of praise and prayer
 From yonder deck, where, on the stern retired,
 Three humble voyagers, with looks inspired,
 And hearts enkindled with a holier flame
 Than ever lit to empire or to fame,
 Devoutly stand : their choral accents rise
 On wings of harmony beyond the skies ;
 And, 'midst the songs that seraph-minstrels sing,
 Day without night, to their immortal king,
 These simple strains, which erst Bohemian hills
 Echoed to pathless woods and desert rills,
 Now heard from Shetland's azure bound—are known
 In heaven ; and He who sits upon the throne
 In human form, with mediatorial power,
 Remembers Calvary, and hails the hour

When, by the Almighty Father's high decree,
 The utmost north to him shall bow the knee,
 And, won by love, an untamed rebel-race
 Kiss the victorious sceptre of his grace.
 Then to his eye, whose instant glance pervades
 Heaven's heights, earth's circle, hell's profoundest shades,
 Is there a group more lovely than those three
 Night-watching pilgrims on the lonely sea ?
 Or to his ear, that gathers in one sound
 The voices of adoring worlds around,
 Comes there a breath of more delightful praise
 Than the faint notes his poor disciples raise,
 Ere on the treacherous main they sink to rest,
 Secure as leaning on their Master's breast ?

They sleep ; but memory wakes ; and dreams array
 Night in a lively masquerade of day ;
 The land they seek, the land they leave behind,
 Meet on mid-ocean in the plastic mind ;
 One brings forsaken home and friends so nigh,
 That tears in slumber swell the unconscious eye :
 The other opens, with prophetic view,
 Perils which e'en their fathers never knew
 (Though schooled by suffering, long inured to toil, Outcasts and exiles from their natal soil) ;
 Strange scenes, strange men ; untold, untried distress ;
 Pain, hardships, famine, cold, and nakedness,
 Diseases ; death in every hideous form,
 On shore, at sea, by fire, by flood, by storm ;
 Wild beasts, and wilder men—unmoved with fear,
 Health, comfort, safety, life, they count not dear,
 May they but hope a Saviour's love to shew,
 And warn one spirit from eternal woe :
 Nor will they faint, nor can they strive in vain,
 Since thus to live is Christ, to die is gain.

'Tis morn : the bathing moon her lustre shrouds ;
 Wide o'er the east impends an arch of clouds
 That spans the ocean ; while the infant dawn
 Peeps through the portal o'er the liquid lawn,
 That ruffled by an April gale appears,
 Between the gloom and splendour of the spheres,
 Dark-purple as the moorland heath, when rain
 Hangs in low vapours over the autumnal plain :
 Till the full sun, resurgent from the flood,
 Looks on the waves, and turns them into blood ;
 But quickly kindling, as his beams aspire,
 The lambent billows play in forms of fire.
 Where is the vessel ? shining through the light,
 Like the white sea-fowl's horizontal flight,
 Yonder she wings, and skims, and cleaves her way
 Through reflux foam and iridescent spray.

Night.

Night is the time for rest ;
 How sweet, when labours close,
 To gather round an aching breast
 The curtain of repose,
 Stretch the tired limbs, and lay the head
 Upon our own delightful bed !

Night is the time for dreams ;
 The gay romance of life,
 When truth that is, and truth that seems,
 Blend in fantastic strife ;
 Ah ! visions less beguiling far
 Than waking dreams by daylight are ! . . .

Night is the time to weep ;
 To wet with unseen tears
 Those graves of memory where sleep
 The joys of other years ;
 Hopes that were angels in their birth,
 But perished young like things on earth. . . .

Night is the time to think ;
 Then from the eye the soul
 Takes flight, and on the utmost brink
 Of yonder starry pole,
 Discerns beyond the abyss of night
 The dawn of uncreated light.

Night is the time to pray ;
 Our Saviour oft withdrew
 To desert mountains far away ;
 So will his followers do ;
 Steal from the throng to haunts untrod,
 And commune there alone with God.

Night is the time for death ;
 When all around is peace,
 Calmly to yield the weary breath,
 From sin and suffering cease :
 Think of heaven's bliss, and give the sign
 To parting friends—such death be mine !

From 'The Pelican Island.'

Light as a flake of foam upon the wind,
 Keel-upward from the deep emerged a shell,
 Shaped like the moon ere half her horn is filled ;
 Fraught with young life, it righted as it rose,
 And moved at will along the yielding water.
 The native pilot of this little bark
 Put out a tier of oars on either side,
 Spread on the wafting breeze a twofold sail,
 And mounted up and glided down the billow
 In happy freedom, pleased to feel the air,
 And wander in the luxury of light.
 Worth all the dead creation, in that hour,
 To me appeared this lonely Nautilus,
 My fellow-being, like myself alive.
 Entranced in contemplation, vague yet sweet,
 I watched its vagrant course and rippling wake,
 Till I forgot the sun amidst the heavens.

It closed, sunk, dwindled to a point, then nothing ;
 While the last bubble crowned the dimpling eddy,
 Through which mine eye still giddily pursued it,
 A joyous creature vaulted through the air—
 The aspiring fish that fain would be a bird,
 On long, light wings, that flung a diamond-shower
 Of dew-drops round its evanescent form,
 Sprang into light, and instantly descended.
 Ere I could greet the stranger as a friend,
 Or mourn his quick departure, on the surge
 A shoal of dolphins, tumbling in wild glee,
 Glowed with such orient tints, they might have been
 The rainbow's offspring, when it met the ocean
 In that resplendent vision I had seen.
 While yet in ecstasy I hung o'er these,
 With every motion pouring out fresh beauties,
 As though the conscious colours came and went
 At pleasure, glorying in their subtle changes
 Enormous o'er the flood, Leviathan
 Looked forth, and from his roaring nostrils sent
 Two fountains to the sky, then plunged amain
 In headlong pasture through the closing gulf.

Aspirations of Youth.

Higher, higher, will we climb,
 Up the mount of glory,
 That our names may live through time
 In our country's story ;
 Happy, when her welfare calls,
 He who conquers, he who falls !

Deeper, deeper, let us toil
 In the mines of knowledge ;
 Nature's wealth and learning's spoil,
 Win from school and college ;
 Delve we there for richer gems
 Than the stars of diadems.

Onward, onward, will we press
 Through the path of duty ;
 Virtue is true happiness,
 Excellence true beauty.
 Minds are of supernal birth,
 Let us make a heaven of earth.

Closer, closer, then we knit
 Hearts and hands together,
 Where our fireside comforts sit,
 In the wildest weather ;
 Oh, they wander wide who roam,
 For the joys of life, from home.

Nearer, dearer bands of love
 Draw our souls in union,
 To our Father's house above,
 To the saints' communion ;
 Thither every hope ascend,
 There may all our labours end.

The Common Lot.

Once, in the flight of ages past,
 There lived a man : and who was he ?
 Mortal ! howe'er thy lot be cast,
 That man resembled thee.

Unknown the region of his birth,
 The land in which he died unknown ;
 His name has perished from the earth,
 This truth survives alone :

That joy, and grief, and hope, and fear,
 Alternate triumphed in his breast ;
 His bliss and woe—a smile, a tear !
 Oblivion hides the rest.

The bounding pulse, the languid limb,
 The changing spirits' rise and fall ;
 We know that these were felt by him,
 For these are felt by all.

He suffered—but his pangs are o'er ;
 Enjoyed—but his delights are fled ;
 Had friends—his friends are now no more ;
 And foes—his foes are dead.

He loved—but whom he loved the grave
 Hath lost in its unconscious womb :
 Oh, she was fair ! but nought could save
 Her beauty from the tomb.

He saw whatever thou hast seen ;
 Encountered all that troubles thee :
 He was—whatever thou hast been :
 He is—what thou shalt be.

The rolling seasons, day and night,
Sun, moon, and stars, the earth and main,
Erewhile his portion, life, and light,
To him exist in vain.

The clouds and sunbeams, o'er his eye
That once their shades and glory threw,
Have left in yonder silent sky
No vestige where they flew.

The annals of the human race,
Their ruins, since the world began,
Of him afford no other trace
Than this—there lived a man!

Prayer.

Prayer is the soul's sincere desire
Uttered or unexpressed;
The motion of a hidden fire
That trembles in the breast.

Prayer is the burden of a sigh,
The falling of a tear;
The upward glancing of an eye,
When none but God is near.

Prayer is the simplest form of speech
That infant lips can try;
Prayer the sublimest strains that reach
The Majesty on high.

Prayer is the Christian's vital breath,
The Christian's native air;
His watchword at the gates of death:
He enters heaven by prayer.

Prayer is the contrite sinner's voice
Returning from his ways;
While angels in their songs rejoice,
And say, 'Behold, he prays!'

The saints in prayer appear as one
In word, and deed, and mind,
When with the Father and his Son
Their fellowship they find.

Nor prayer is made on earth alone:
The Holy Spirit pleads;
And Jesus, on the eternal throne,
For sinners intercedes.

O Thou, by whom we come to God,
The Life, the Truth, the Way,
The path of prayer thyself hast trod:
Lord, teach us how to pray!

Home.

There is a land, of every land the pride,
Beloved by heaven o'er all the world beside;
Where brighter suns dispense serener light,
And milder moons emparadise the night;
A land of beauty, virtue, valour, truth,
Time-tutored age, and love-exalted youth.
The wandering mariner, whose eye explores
The wealthiest isles, the most enchanting shores,
Views not a realm so bountiful and fair,
Nor breathes the spirit of a purer air;
In every clime the magnet of his soul,
Touched by remembrance, trembles to that pole;
For in this land of heaven's peculiar grace,
The heritage of nature's noblest race,

There is a spot of earth supremely blest,
A dearer, sweeter spot than all the rest,
Where man, creation's tyrant, casts aside
His sword and sceptre, pageantry and pride,
While in his softened looks benignly blend
The sire, the son, the husband, brother, friend.
Here woman reigns; the mother, daughter, wife,
Strew with fresh flowers the narrow way of life!
In the clear heaven of her delightful eye,
An angel-guard of loves and graces lie;
Around her knees domestic duties meet,
And fireside pleasures gambol at her feet.
Where shall that land, that spot of earth be found?
Art thou a man?—a patriot?—look around;
Oh, thou shalt find, howe'er thy footsteps roam,
That land thy country, and that spot thy home!

Montgomery's works, in four volumes, were published in 1851, and continued to be occasionally reprinted; and portentous Memoirs were published by his friends Holland and Everett (7 vols. 1854-56).

Thomas Hope (1770?–1831), the author of Anastasis, was one of three brothers, merchant-princes of Amsterdam, whose Scottish ancestor settled in Holland in the seventeenth century. When a young man he studied architecture as a profession, and spent some years sketching buildings in Egypt, Greece, Syria, Turkey, Sicily, and Spain. On the French occupation of Holland, he settled in London, purchased a town house and a country mansion (Deepdene, near Dorking), which he decorated with magnificence; and in his splendid galleries he collected sculptures, vases, antiques, and pictures. In 1807 he published a folio volume of drawings and descriptions of Household Furniture and Decorations. The ambitious style, and the author's then quite eccentric devotion to the forms of chairs, sofas, couches, and tables, provoked a witty piece of ridicule in the Edinburgh Review; Byron jeered at him as a house-furnisher. But Hope had his revenge; through his efforts a change of taste observably gained ground. Two other splendid publications, The Costume of the Ancients (1809) and Designs of Modern Costumes (1812) show wide knowledge and curious research. In 1819 Hope dawned on society as a novelist of the first order. He had studied human nature as well as architecture and costume, and his travels had brought him into close contact with men of various creed and race. The result was Anastasis, or Memoirs of a Modern Greek, written at the close of the Eighteenth Century, in three volumes, anonymously published as a veritable history. It was credited to Byron and others, and the idea of Hope's authorship was ridiculed till he expressly announced in Blackwood that it was his. And then Hope, from being reputed a learned upholsterer or clever draftsman, was at once elevated into a rivalry with Byron as a painter of foreign scenery and manners, and with Le Sage and the other masters of the picaresque novel. The author, turning from fiction to philosophy, wrote next On the Origin and Prospects of Man; and amidst his paradoxes, unorthodox conceits, and abstruse speculations are many original suggestions and eloquent disquisitions. He was author also of an Essay on Architecture, published in 1835, which went through several editions. At his death probate was granted for £180,000 worth of personal property. Parallels have been instituted between Hope and Anastasius and Beckford and Vathek.

The hero of Hope's very original romance is, like Zeluco, a villain spoiled by early indulgence; he becomes a renegade to his faith, a mercenary, a robber, and an assassin; but the elements of his better nature show themselves at times. To avoid the consequences of an amour with a consul's daughter, he runs off to sea in a Venetian vessel, which is captured by pirates. The pirates are in turn taken by a Turkish frigate; and Anastasius, released, fights with the Turks in the war against the Arnaouts, and accompanies the Greek dragoman to Constantinople. Disgrace and beggary reduce him to various shifts and adventures. He follows a Jew quack-doctor selling nostrums; is thrown into the Bagnio, the state-prison; embraces the Turkish faith; revisits Greece; proceeds to Egypt; ranges over Arabia; and visits Malta, Sicily, and Italy. In the story of his innumerable intrigues, adventures, and disasters, every aspect of Greek and Turkish society is depicted; sarcasm, piquant allusion, pathos and passion, and descriptions of scenery being strangely intermingled. Epigram and rhetorical amplification occupy too much space; but the constantly shifting scene adds the variety of a book of travels to the fascination of a romance. The story-teller, gifted with keen insight into human weakness, describes his adventures without hypocrisy or reserve. If the picaresque elements are the most sprightly and entertaining, the most powerful passages are perhaps the pathetic—the scenes with Euphrosyne, whom Anastasius has basely dishonoured; his sensations on revisiting Greece and the tomb of Helena; his reflections on the dead Arnaout soldier whom he had slain; the horrors of the plague and famine; and the death of Alexis, in whom were centred the only remains of his love and hope.

Anastasius begins Life.

My family came originally from Epirus; my father settled at Chios. His parentage was neither exalted nor yet low. In his own opinion he could boast of purer blood than any of the Palæologi, the Cantacuzenes, or the Comneni of the present day. 'These mongrel descendants,' he used to observe, 'of Greeks, Venetians, and Genoese, had only picked up the fine names of former ages when the real owners dropped off: he wore his own;' and Signor Sotiri saw no reason why he should not, when he went forth into public, toss his head, swing his jubbee like a pendulum, from side to side, and shuffle along in his papooshes, with all the airs of quality.

This worthy man combined in his single person the various characters of diplomatist, husbandman, merchant, manufacturer, and master of a privateer. To be more explicit—he was drogueman to the French consul at Chios; in town he kept a silk loom at work; in the country he had a plantation of agrumi; he exported his stuffs and fruits to the principal seaports in the Archipelago, and, in the first Russian war, he employed all his spare money in fitting out a small vessel to cruise against the enemy—for so he chose to consider the Russians, in spite of all their amicable professions towards the Greeks. As a loyal subject of the Porte, and an old servant of the French Government, he felt no sort of wish to be delivered from the yoke of the Turks; and he looked upon those barbarians of the north, who cared no more for the patriarch of Constantinople than for the Pope of Rome, as little better than rank heretics, not worthy of being treated even like his silk-worms, which he got every year carefully exorcised before their spinning-time. I however remember, when a child, some buzz in the family about my father's partner in the privateer—an Ipsariote reis—having one day made a mistake, in capturing under the rocks of Jura a rich Turkish vessel, which he went and sold to the Russians themselves, then stationed at Paros. Signor Sotiri shook his head at this intelligence as if he did not approve of the transaction, and observed, 'The less that was said about it the better.'—I suppose therefore it was out of sheer humanity that he preferred receiving his share of the prize money, to the sterile and barbarous satisfaction of hanging his associate.

Much improved in his circumstances by this untoward accident, my father would now willingly have given up his interpretership. Besides rendering him more or less dependent, it was uncomfortable in as far as, being very deaf, he never heard what it was his business to repeat. But my mother liked the title of droguemaness. She had never heard of the necessity of a drogueman reporting speeches as he received them; and she reminded her husband how essential the protection of the French mission might be to some of his Greek speculations.

My mother was a native of Naxos, and esteemed a great heiress in her country. She possessed an estate of three hundred piastres a year clear, managed by a relation of her own, Marco Politi—very wealthy himself, primate of all the Greek villages of the island, and a very great rogue.

My brothers and sisters—and there came, one by one, just three of each—all contrived to take precedence of me at their birth, and consequently throughout the whole of their subsequent lives. The punctilio of the thing I should not have minded; but, among my countrymen, a foolish family pride exhausts people's fortunes in their lifetime in portioning their daughters: the elder sons ran away with what remained, and poor Anastasius brought up the rear with but an indifferent prospect. My kind parents, however, determined to make up for leaving me destitute at their death, by spoiling me as much as possible during their lives. . . .

After all the rest of the brood had taken wing, I remained alone at home to solace my parents. Too fond of their favourite to damp my youthful spirits by fitting me for a profession, they kindly put off from day to day every species of instruction—probably till I should beg for it; which my discretion forbade. Unfortunately nature chose not, in the meantime, to be equally dilatory with my parents; and from an angel of an infant, I became by degrees a great lubberly boy, without any other accomplishment but that of flogging my top with the left hand, while with the right I despatched my sign of the cross—for in some things I understood the value of time. My parents, as may be supposed, were great sticklers for punctuality in every sort of devout practice; mass-going, confession, Lent observance, &c. Of moral duties—less tangible in their nature—they had, poor souls! but a vague and confused notion; and the criminality of actions, in reference to one's neighbour, they taught me chiefly to estimate according to the greater or smaller risk connected with them of incurring the hastinado from the Turks. As to manual correction at the hands of my own father, it seemed so desirable a circumstance, from the ample amends my mother never failed to shake her 'poor, dear, ill-used boy,' that my only regret on the subject arose from being able to obtain it so seldom.

These good people having contented themselves for a reasonable number of years with wistfully contemplating—the drogueman my active make and well-set limbs, and the droguemaness my dark eyes, ruddy cheeks, and raven locks—they at last began to ponder how they might turn these gifts to the best advantage. Both agreed that something should be done, but neither knew exactly what; and the one never proposed a profession which the other did not immediately object to,—till an old relation stepped in between, and recommended the church, as a never-failing resource to those who can think of no other. My cousin had set the example by making his own son a little caloyer at twelve. Prohibited by the Turks from the trade of a soldier, and by my parents from that of a sailor, I myself saw nothing better, and agreed to the proposal. It now became necessary to give me a smattering of learning, and I was put under the tuition of a teacher of the Hellenic language, who assumed the title of Logiotatos, and only averred himself inferior to Demosthenes out of sheer modesty. My idleness got the better of my preceptor's learning and diligence. All the gold that flowed from the lips of his favourite St Chrysostom could not, to my taste, gild the bitter pill of his own tiresome comments; and even Homer, much as I liked fighting out of doors, found but an indifferent welcome in the study. The truth is, I had a dislike to reading in the abstract:—but when away from my books I affected a great admiration for Achilles; called him in reference to Epirus, the land of my ancestors, 'my countryman,' and regretted that I was not born two thousand years ago, for no other purpose but to be his Patroclus. In my fits of heroism I swore to treat the Turks as he had done the Trojans, and for a time dreamt of nothing but putting to the sword the whole Seraglio—dwarfs, eunuchs, and all. These dreams my parents highly admired, but advised me not to disclose in common. 'Just rancour,' they said, 'gathers strength by being repressed.'—Upon this principle they cringed to the ground to every Moslem in their met.

The inclinations of the little future papas for the church militant began, meantime, to appear more prominently. I had collected a troop of ragamuffins of my own age, of whom I got myself dubbed captain; and, having purloined from my uncle, the painter, one of his most smirking Madonnas for a banner, took the field under the auspices of the Panagia, and set about robbing orchards, and laying under contribution the villagers, with all the devotion imaginable. So great was the terror which our crusades inspired, that the sufferers durst not even complain, except in a body. Whenever as chief of the band I became the marked object of animadversion, I kept out of the way till my father had paid the damage, and had moreover sued my pardon for his backwardness in doing so. Once, indeed, when, tired of my pranks, he swore I would be his ruin, I suggested to him an effectual mode of quieting his fears, by granting me an unlimited leave of absence; and pledged myself not to return till doomsday. This was too much for a doting parent. Sooner than part with his Anastasius, Dimitri Sotiri would have bribed the peasants beforehand to suffer all my future depredations.

Thus early disposed and trained to the business of tithing, my father felt a little surprised when, on the eve of taking orders, I begged to be excused. For the first time in his life Signor Sotiri insisted on implicit obedience; but that first time came too late. I made it the last, by swearing that if he forced me to take the mitre, I would hide it under a turban. He yielded, and contented himself with quietly asking what I finally meant to do. 'Nothing,' was the answer of my heart: but the profession of doing nothing requires ample means. I therefore pretended a wish to learn trade. My father assented, and forthwith wrote to a Smyrna merchant of his acquaintance to receive me into his counting-house.

Meantime I found an employment for my leisure hours which put an end to all childish pastimes. Signor Sotiri, though, as before mentioned, a little hard of hearing, wanted not fluency of speech. His oratory had chiefly been exerted to render his patron dumb. He constantly represented to him how absolutely the dignity of his station forbade his having the least conversation with the natives; and how incumbent upon him it was, though born and bred in the Levant, to appear not to understand a single word of its idioms. By this device he kept all the speechifying to himself; and in truth, with the Turks in office, at all times more prone than strict politeness permits to compliment the representatives of Christian powers with the titles of 'infidel, yaoor, and Christian dog;' and at this particular juncture more than usually out of humour in consequence of the Russian war, this was often the only way to save the consular pride from some little rubs, otherwise unavoidable in the necessary intercourse with the local government. Hence Mr de M—— not only never stirred from home without his interpreter by his side, but had him constantly at his elbow within doors, and made him the sole channel of his official transactions: a circumstance which my father perfectly knew how to turn to the best advantage.

I too, in my capacity as the drogueman's chief assistant and messenger, was in daily attendance at the consular mansion; which proved useful to me in one respect, as it gave me an opportunity of learning the French language,—and that with the greater fluency, from the circumstance of no one offering expressly to teach me. The old consul had, between his dignity with the Greeks and his punctilio with the Turks, but little society, and I therefore soon became by the sprightliness of my repartees a very great favourite. Mr de M—— not only encouraged me to take a part in conversation, but would even condescend to laugh most heartily both at my witticisms and my practical jokes, whenever neither himself, nor his servants, nor his relations, nor his friends, nor his protégés, were made to smart from their keenness, or involved in their consequences.

Jubbe, flowing gown; drogueman (Ar. tarjuman), interpreter, dragoman; agrumi, oranges and lemons; Ipsariote reis, ship-master of the island of Ipsara; caloyer, friar; Logiotatos, most learned; Chrysostomos means 'golden-mouthed'; Moslem, professor of Islam, true believer; papas, priest, pope; Panagia, 'all-holy,' the Virgin Mary; yaoor, ginour, infidel.

Matthew Gregory Lewis (1775-1818)—'Monk Lewis'—was born in London, his father being deputy-secretary in the War Office, and owner of large estates in Jamaica. Mat was educated at Westminster and Christ Church College, Oxford, and, at Weimar in 1792-93, was introduced to Goethe. As a child he had pored over Glanvill on Witchcraft and other books of diablerie; in Germany romance and the drama were his favourite studies; and whilst resident at the Hague he composed in ten weeks his novel of Ambrosio, or the Monk (1795), which makes extravagant use of supernatural machinery, and in many passages frankly panders to lubricity. A prosecution was not unnaturally threatened on account of some of the luxurious scenes and more than risky descriptions; and to avert trouble Lewis pledged himself to recall the printed copies and recast the work—though how opposition could be silenced without stultifying the whole plot it is not easy to conceive. But throughout life he adhered to the same strain of marvellous and terrific composition—now clothing it in verse, now moulding it into a drama, and at other times contenting himself with the story form. His Tales of Terror (1799), Tales of Wonder (1801)—to which Scott and Southey contributed—Romantic Tales (1808), The Bravo of Venice and Feudal Tyrants (both translated from the German), and the tragedies Alphonso (1801), Adelgitha (1807), &c., appeal to a temporary taste nurtured on Mrs Radcliffe. The East Indian (1799) was a comedy, Timour the Tartar a melodrama, and One o'clock a 'musical romance.' Crazy Jane (1797), a once popular poem, was based on an encounter with an actual maniac, and The Captive, a Monodrama, exploited the ravings of a lunatic. In his first novel are found several of the poems, the love-ditties, drinking-songs, or anecdotes in rhyme he had the knack of throwing off; and his ballads of 'Alonzo the Brave' and 'Durandarte' proved to his contemporaries as attractive as Ambrosio's own adventures. He brings in weird tales 'from the Danish' of the Erl King or Oak King, of the Fire King, and the Water King, translating the latter in verse; and he refers familiarly to the old romances of Amadis, Perceforest, Palmerin of England, and the Loves of Tristan and Queen Iseult. Flushed with the brilliant success of his romance, and fond of prominence and distinguished society, Lewis in 1796 procured a seat in Parliament for the borough of Hindon, as Beckford had done before him; but he never attempted to address the House, and sat for only six years. The theatres offered a more attractive arena for his talents; and his play of The Castle Spectre, produced in 1797, was applauded as enthusiastically as his romance.

While on a visit to Edinburgh in 1798 he met young Walter Scott, who had recently published his translations from Bürger, and who thirty years afterwards told Allan Cunningham that he never felt such elation as when Lewis asked him to dine with him at his hotel! Lewis schooled the great poet on his incorrect verses, and proved himself, as Scott says, 'a martinet in the accuracy of rhymes and numbers.' Furthermore, "he had always dukes and duchesses in his mouth, and was pathetically fond of any one that had a title; you would have sworn he had been a parvenu of yesterday.' Yet Scott, though like Byron he admitted Lewis was at length tiresome, recognised his good qualities: 'He was one of the kindest and best creatures that ever lived. His father and mother lived separately. Mr Lewis allowed his son a handsome income, but reduced it by more than one-half when he found that he paid his mother a moiety of it. Mat restricted himself in all his expenses, and shared the diminished income with her as before. He did much good by stealth, and was a most generous creature.' The publication of his correspondence twenty years after his death proved that much good sense, discretion, and kind feeling had been too completely hidden by the exaggerated romance of his writings, by his lax morals and frivolous manners. The death of his father in 1812 made him a man of independent fortune. He succeeded to plantations in the West Indies, besides a large fortune in money; and to better the condition of his slaves there, good-hearted, loquacious, clever little 'Mat' forsook the society of the Prince Regent and all his other great friends, and sailed for the West Indies in 1815. Of this and a subsequent voyage he wrote a narrative, the Journal of a West India Proprietor (1834), which Coleridge pronounced 'delightful'; it is valuable still if only for its wealth of negro folklore, and is, perhaps, his best work.

Lewis returned to England in 1816, but after a visit to Byron and Shelley at Geneva, went on to Naples, and in 1817 sailed again for Jamaica, where he found that his attorney had grossly mismanaged his property. Having adjusted his affairs, the 'Monk' embarked on his homeward voyage; but the climate had impaired his health, and he died of yellow fever while the ship was passing through the Gulf of Florida (1818).

The main plot of the Monk is taken from the tale of the Santon or dervish Barsisa in Steele's Guardian, as that came from the Turkish Tales, translated from Petis de la Croix's version of Shaikh Zadah. Ambrosio, the hero, is abbot of the Capuchins at Madrid, and talled from his reputed sanctity and his eloquent preaching the Man of Holiness. Severe in his saintly judgments, full of religious pride, he thinks himself proof against all temptation; but tempted to his fall by a young and beautiful she-demon, he proceeds from crime to crime, his female Mephistopheles, Matilda, aiding him by her unexpected powers of sorcery, till, detected in a deed of murder, he is tried, tortured, and convicted by the Inquisition. While trembling at the approaching auto da fe, his evil genius brings him a mysterious book, by help of which he may summon Lucife. The Evil One appears with thunder and earthquake; and the wretched monk, having sold his hope of salvation to recover his liberty, is borne aloft and afar, only to be dashed to pieces on a rock. Lewis relieved a story which never shrinks from the supernatural machinery Mrs Radcliffe adopted only in semblance, by episodes and love-scenes, one of which—the Bleeding Nun—is told with exceptional narrative power, though it tends to embarrass the progress of the main tale. As a whole the story is ill put together, and shows neither skill in character-painting nor graces of style. Men and women alike melodramatic, almost Byronic, are completely subject to their passions; temptation and opportunity justify any fall from virtue; it is difficult to remember which character is at any moment talking or acting. Incredible conjunctures and manifest impossibilities constantly occur even when supernatural aid has not been invoked. Convent life is represented from the point of view not of an ultra-Protestant but a Voltairian freethinker; a truly pious Spanish lady had carefully to expurgate the Bible before submitting it to a pure-minded girl's reading. Vraisemblance is little regarded, and 'local colour' defied; the 'Monk' is no monk but a Franciscan friar, an abbot of Capuchins; and though the scene is Madrid, the characters address one another as 'signor' and 'signora,' and ejaculate scraps, not of Spanish, but of stage Italian. The famous scene at a robber's hut in a forest was evidently suggested by Smollett's Count Fathom. Besides his copious use of magic, incantations, and spirits to carry on his story, and his wanton gloating over scenes of luxury and license (hideously complicated by matricide and unconscious incest), Lewis resorted to an even more revolting category of horrors—loathsome images of mortal corruption and decay, the festering relics of death and the grave. But even when its startling defects and blemishes are fully admitted, the Monk remains in every way a marvellous production for a boy of twenty. The Bravo of Venice has enough and to spare of banditti, disguises, plots, and mysterious adventures, daggers and bows, but nothing to match the best parts of the Monk, though the style is simpler. In none of his works does Lewis show any sense of humour.

A Conjunction by the Wandering Jew.

Raymond, in the Monk, is pursued by a spectre representing a bleeding nun, which appears at one o'clock in the morning, repeating a blood-curdling chant, and pressing her lips to his. Every succeeding visit inspires him with greater horror, and he becomes excessively ill. His servant, Theodore, meets with a stranger, ultimately ascertained to be the Wandering Jew, who tells him to bid his master wish for him when the clock strikes one; and Raymond tells what befell when the summons was obeyed.

He was a man of majestic presence; his countenance was strongly marked, and his eyes were large, black, and sparkling; yet there was a something in his look which, the moment that I saw him, inspired me with a secret awe, not to say horror. He was dressed plainly, his hair was unpowdered, and a band of black velvet, which encircled his forehead, spread over his features an additional gloom. His countenance wore the marks of profound melancholy, his step was slow, and his manner grave, stately, and solemn. He saluted me with politeness, and having replied to the usual compliments of introduction, he motioned to Theodore to quit the chamber. The page instantly withdrew. 'I know your business,' said he, without giving me time to speak. 'I have the power of releasing you from your nightly visitor; but this cannot be done before Sunday. On the hour when the Sabbath morning breaks, spirits of darkness have least influence over mortals. After Saturday, the nun shall visit you no more.' 'May I not inquire,' said I, 'by what means you are in possession of a secret which I have carefully concealed from the knowledge of every one?' 'How can I be ignorant of your distresses, when their cause at this moment stands before you?' I started. The stranger continued: 'Though to you only visible for one hour in the twenty-four, neither day nor night does she ever quit you; nor will she ever quit you till you have granted her request.' 'And what is that request?' 'That she must herself explain; it lies not in my knowledge. Wait with patience for the night of Saturday; all shall be then cleared up.' I dared not press him further. He soon after changed the conversation, and talked of various matters. He named people who had ceased to exist for many centuries, and yet with whom he appeared to have been personally acquainted. I could not mention a country, however distant, which he had not visited; nor could I sufficiently admire the extent and variety of his information. I remarked to him, that having travelled, seen, and known so much, must have given him infinite pleasure. He shook his head mournfully. 'No one,' he replied, 'is adequate to comprehending the misery of my lot! Fate obliges me to be constantly in movement; I am not permitted to pass more than a fortnight in the same place. I have no friend in the world, and, from the restlessness of my destiny, I never can acquire one. Fain would I lay down my miserable life, for I envy those who enjoy the quiet of the grave; but death eludes me, and flies from my embrace. In vain do I throw myself in the way of danger. I plunge into the ocean—the waves throw me back with abhorrence upon the shore; I rush into fire—the flames recoil at my approach; I oppose myself to the fury of banditti—their swords become blunted, and break against my breast. The hungry tiger shudders at my approach, and the alligator flies from a monster more horrible than itself. God has set his seal upon me, and all his creatures respect this fatal mark.' He put his hand to the velvet which was bound round his forehead. There was in his eyes an expression of fury, despair, and malevolence, that struck horror to my very soul. An involuntary convulsion made me shudder. The stranger perceived it. 'Such is the curse imposed on me,' he continued; 'I am doomed to inspire all who look on me with terror and detestation. You already feel the influence of the charm, and with every succeeding moment will feel it more. I will not add to your sufferings by my presence. Farewell till Saturday. As soon as the clock strikes twelve, expect me at your chamber.'

Having said this, he departed, leaving me in astonishment at the mysterious turn of his manner and conversation. His assurances that I should soon be relieved from the apparition's visits produced a good effect upon my constitution. Theodore, whom I rather treated as an adopted child than a domestic, was surprised, at his return, to observe the amendment in my looks. He congratulated me on this symptom of returning health, and declared himself delighted at my having received so much benefit from my conference with the Great Mogul (so called; really the Wandering Jew). Upon inquiry I found that the stranger had already passed eight days in Ratisbon. According to his own account, therefore, he was only to remain there six days longer. Saturday was still at a distance of three. Oh, with what impatience did I expect its arrival! In the interim, the bleeding nun continued her nocturnal visits; but hoping soon to be released from them altogether, the effects which they produced on me became less violent than before.

MATTHEW GREGORY LEWIS.

From the Portrait by H. W. Pickersgill, R.A., in the National Portrait Gallery.

The wished-for night arrived. To avoid creating suspicion, I retired to bed at my usual hour; but as soon as my attendants had left me, I dressed myself again, and prepared for the stranger's reception. He entered my room upon the turn of midnight. A small chest was in his hand, which he placed near the stove. He saluted me without speaking; I returned the compliment, observing an equal silence. He then opened the chest. The first thing which he produced was a small wooden crucifix; he sank upon his knees, gazed upon it mournfully, and cast his eyes towards heaven. He seemed to be praying devoutly. At length he bowed his head respectfully, kissed the crucifix thrice, and quitted his kneeling posture. He next drew from the chest a covered goblet; with the liquor which it contained, and which appeared to be blood, he sprinkled the floor; and then dipping in it one end of the crucifix, he described a circle in the middle of the room. Round about this he placed various reliques, skulls, thigh-bones, &c. I observed that he disposed them all in the form of crosses. Lastly, he took out a large Bible, and beckoned me to follow him into the circle. I obeyed.

'Be cautious not to utter a syllable!' whispered the stranger: 'step not out of the circle, and as you love yourself, dare not to look upon my face.' Holding the crucifix in one hand, the Bible in the other, he seemed to read with profound attention. The clock struck one; as usual, I heard the spectre's steps upon the staircase, but I was not seized with the accustomed shivering. I waited her approach with confidence. She entered the room, drew near the circle, and stopped. The stranger muttered some words, to me unintelligible. Then raising his head from the book, and extending the crucifix towards the ghost, he pronounced in a voice distinct and solemn: 'Beatrice! Beatrice! Beatrice!' 'What wouldst thou?' replied the apparition in a hollow faltering tone. 'What disturbs thy sleep? Why dost thou afflict and torture this youth? How can rest be restored to thy unquiet spirit?' 'I dare not tell; I must not tell. Fain would I repose in my grave, but stern commands force me to prolong my punishment!' 'Knowest thou this blood? Knowest thou in whose veins it flowed? Beatrice! Beatrice! in his name I charge thee to answer me.' 'I dare not disobey my taskers.' 'Darest thou disobey me?' He spoke in a commanding tone, and drew the sable band from his forehead. In spite of his injunction to the contrary, curiosity would not suffer me to keep my eyes off his face: I raised them, and beheld a burning cross impressed upon his brow. For the horror with which this object inspired me I cannot account, but I never felt its equal. My senses left me for some moments; a mysterious dread overcame my courage; and had not the exorciser caught my hand, I should have fallen out of the circle. When I recovered myself, I perceived that the burning cross had produced an effect no less violent upon the spectre. Her countenance expressed reverence and horror, and her visionary limbs were shaken by fear. 'Yes,' she said at length, 'I tremble at that mark! I respect it! I obey you! Know, then, that my bones lie still unburied—they rot in the obscurity of Lindenbergh-hole. None but this youth has the right of consigning them to the grave. His own lips have made over to me his body and his soul; never will I give back his promise; never shall he know a night devoid of terror unless he engages to collect my mouldering bones, and deposit them in the family vault of his Andalusian castle. Then let thirty masses be said for the repose of my spirit, and I trouble this world no more. Now let me depart; those flames are scorching.'

He let the hand drop slowly which held the crucifix, and which till then he had pointed towards her. The apparition bowed her head, and her form melted into air.

A Welcome from his Negroes.

As soon as the carriage entered my gates, the uproar and confusion which ensued sets all description at defiance. The works were instantly all abandoned; everything that had life came flocking to the house from all quarters; and not only the men, and the women, and the children, but, 'by a bland assimilation,' the hogs, and the dogs, and the geese, and the fowls, and the turkeys, all came hurrying along, by instinct, to see what could possibly be the matter, and seemed to be afraid of arriving too late. Whether the pleasure of the negroes was sincere may be doubted; but, certainly, it was the loudest that I ever witnessed; they all talked together, sang, danced, shouted, and, in the violence of their gesticulations, tumbled over each other, and rolled about upon the ground. Twenty voices at once inquired after uncles and aunts, and grandfathers and great-grandmothers of mine, who had been buried long before I was in existence, and whom, I verily believe, most of them only knew by tradition. One woman held up her little naked black child to me, grinning from ear to ear—'Look, massa, look here! him nice lilly neger for massa!' Another complained—'So long since none come see we, massa; good massa come at last.' As for the old people, they were all in one and the same story: now they had lived once to see massa, they were ready for dying to-morrow—'them no care.' The shouts, the gaiety, the wild laughter, their strange and sudden bursts of singing and dancing, and several old women, wrapped up in large cloaks, their heads bound round with different-coloured handkerchiefs, leaning on a staff, and standing motionless in the middle of the hubbub, with their eyes fixed upon the portico which I occupied, formed an exact counterpart of the festivity of the witches in Macbeth. Nothing could be more odd or more novel than the whole scene; and yet there was something in it by which I could not help being affected. Perhaps it was the consciousness that all these human beings were my slaves.

Durandarte and Belerma.

Sad and fearful is the story
Of the Roncevalles fight:
On those fatal plains of glory
Perished many a gallant knight.

There fell Durandarte; never
Verse a nobler chieftain named;
He, before his lips for ever
Closed in silence, thus exclaimed:

'Oh, Belerma! oh, my dear one,
For my pain and pleasure born;
Seven long years I served thee, fair one,
Seven long years my fee was scorn.

'And when now thy heart, replying
To my wishes, burns like mine,
Cruel fate, my bliss denying,
Bids me every hope resign.

'Ah! though young I fall, believe me,
Death would never claim a sigh;
'Tis to lose thee, 'tis to leave thee,
Makes me think it hard to die!

'Oh! my cousin, Montesinos,
By that friendship firm and dear
Which from youth has lived between us,
Now my last petition hear.

'When my soul, these limbs forsaking,
Eager seeks a purer air,
From my breast the cold heart taking,
Give it to Belerma's care.

'Say, I of my lands possessor
Named her with my dying breath;
Say, my lips I oped to bless her,
Ere they closed for aye in death:

'Twice a week, too, how sincerely
I adored her, cousin, say;
Twice a week, for one who dearly
Loved her, cousin, bid her pray.

'Montesinos, now the hour
Marked by fate is near at hand;
Lo! my arm has lost its power;
Lo! I drop my trusty brand.

'Eyes, which forth beheld me going,
Homewards ne'er shall see me hie;
Cousin, stop those tears o'erflowing,
Let me on thy bosom die.

'Thy kind hand my eyelids closing,
Yet one favour I implore—
Pray thou for my soul's reposing,
When my heart shall throb no more.

'So shall Jesus, still attending,
Gracious to a Christian's vow,
Pleased accept my ghost ascending,
And a seat in heaven allow.'

Thus spoke gallant Durandarte;
Soon his brave heart broke in twain.
Greatly joyed the Moorish party
That the gallant knight was slain.

Bitter weeping, Montesinos
Took from him his helm and glaive;
Bitter weeping, Montesinos
Dug his gallant cousin's grave.

To perform his promise made, he
Cut the heart from out the breast,
That Belerma, wretched lady!
Might receive the last bequest.

Sad was Montesinos' heart, he Felt distress his bosom rend.
'Oh! my cousin, Durandarte,
Woe is me to view thy end!

'Sweet in manners, fair in favour,
Mild in temper, fierce in fight,
Warrior nobler, gentler, braver,
Never shall behold the light.

'Cousin, lo! my tears bedew thee;
How shall I thy loss survive?
Durandarte, he who slew thee,
Wherefore left he me alive?'

Matilda fascinates Ambrosio by singing this ballad to him, accompanying herself on the harp; that which follows is read, not without qualms of discomfort, in a lonely room at dead of night, out of an old book of Spanish ballads, by Antonia, another of Ambrosio's victims, whom Matilda, after he tired of her, obligingly put in her power by sorcery.

Alonzo the Brave and the Fair Imogene.

A warrior so bold, and a virgin so bright,
Conversed as they sat on the green;
They gazed on each other with tender delight:
Alonzo the brave was the name of the knight—
The maiden's, the Fair Imogene.

'And, oh!' said the youth, 'since to-morrow I go
To fight in a far-distant land,
Your tears for my absence soon ceasing to flow,
Some other will court you, and you will bestow
On a wealthier suitor your hand!'

'Oh! hush these suspicions,' Fair Imogene said,
 'Offensive to love and to me;
 For, if you be living, or if you be dead,
 I swear by the Virgin that none in your stead
 Shall husband of Imogene be.

'If e'er I, by lust or by wealth led aside,
 Forget my Alonzo the Brave,
 God grant that, to punish my falsehood and pride,
 Your ghost at the marriage may sit by my side,
 May tax me with perjury, claim me as bride,
 And bear me away to the grave!'

To Palestine hastened the hero so bold,
 His love she lamented him sore;
 But scarce had a twelvemonth elapsed, when, behold!
 A baron, all covered with jewels and gold,
 Arrived at Fair Imogene's door.

His treasures, his presents, his spacious domain,
 Soon made her untrue to her vows;
 He dazzled her eyes, he bewildered her brain;
 He caught her affections, so light and so vain,
 And carried her home as his spouse.

And now had the marriage been blest by the priest;
 The revelry now was begun;
 The tables they groaned with the weight of the feast,
 Nor yet had the laughter and merriment ceased,
 When the bell at the castle told—one.

Then first with amazement Fair Imogene found
 A stranger was placed by her side:
 His air was terrific; he uttered no sound—
 He spake not, he moved not, he looked not around—
 But earnestly gazed on the bride.

His vizzor was closed, and gigantic his height,
 His armour was sable to view;
 All pleasure and laughter were hushed at his sight;
 The dogs, as they eyed him, drew back in affright;
 The lights in the chamber burned blue!

His presence all bosoms appeared to dismay;
 The guests sat in silence and fear:
 At length spake the bride, while she trembled: 'I pray,
 Sir knight, that your helmet aside you would lay,
 And deign to partake of our cheer.'

The lady is silent; the stranger complies—
 His vizzor he slowly unclosed;
 O God! what a sight met Fair Imogene's eyes!
 What words can express her dismay and surprise
 When a skeleton's head was exposed!

All present then uttered a terrified shout,
 All turned with disgust from the scene;
 The worms they crept in, and the worms they crept out,
 And sported his eyes and his temples about,
 While the spectre addressed Imogene:

'Behold me, thou false one, behold me!' he cried;
 'Remember Alonzo the Brave!
 God grants that, to punish thy falsehood and pride,
 My ghost at thy marriage should sit by thy side;
 Should tax thee with perjury, claim thee as bride,
 And bear thee away to the grave!'

Thus saying, his arms round the lady he wound,
 While loudly she shrieked in dismay;
 Then sank with his prey through the wide-yawning ground.
 Nor ever again was Fair Imogene found,
 Or the spectre that bore her away.

Not long lived the baron; and none, since that time,
 To inhabit the castle presume;
 For chronicles tell that, by order sublime,
 There Imogene suffers the pain of her crime,
 And mourns her deplorable doom.

At midnight, four times in each year, does her sprite,
 When mortals in slumber are bound,
 Arrayed in her bridal apparel of white,
 Appear in the hall with the skeleton knight,
 And shriek as he whirls her around.

While they drink out of skulls newly torn from the grave,
 Dancing round them the spectres are seen;
 Their liquor is blood, and this horrible stave
 They howl: 'To the health of Alonzo the Brave,
 And his consort, the Fair Imogene.'

Lewis's Journal of a West Indian Proprietor and the Life and Correspondence, published in 1839, are the biographical authorities. See also Miss Birkhead's The Tale of Terror, A Study of the Gothic Romance (1921). The Monk was edited by E. A. Baker in 1906.

Charles Robert Maturin (1782-1824), born in Dublin of Huguenot ancestry, at fifteen entered Trinity College, and became curate first of Loughrea and then of St Peter's, Dublin. He came forward in 1807 as an imitator of the blood-curdling and nightmarish style of novel-writing, of which 'Monk' Lewis was the modern master. The style, as Maturin afterwards confessed, was out of date when he was a boy, and he had not power to revive it. The Fatal Revenge, or the Family of Montorio (1807), his first effort, was soon in high favour in the circulating libraries, and seems to have been liked the better because imagination and elaborated diction were carried to the height of extravagance and bombast. To it succeeded The Wild Irish Boy (1808), The Milesian Chief (1812), Women, or Pour et Contre (1818), and Melmoth the Wanderer (1820)—all romances in three or four volumes. In Women Maturin aimed at depicting real life and manners, and we have pictures of Calvinistic Methodists, an Irish Meg Merrilies, and an Irish hero, De Courcy, compounded of contradictions and improbabilities. Eva Wentworth and Zaira, a brilliant Italian—who afterwards turns out to be Eva's mother—are drawn with some skill. De Courcy is in love with both, and both are blighted by his inconstancy. Eva, who is purity itself, dies calmly and tranquilly, elevated by religious hope; Zaira meditates suicide, but lives on, as if spell-bound to the death-place of her daughter and lover; and De Courcy very properly perishes of remorse. Maturin's tragedy, Bertram, had a success at Drury Lane in 1816; his next, Manuel and Fredolpho, were both promptly damned. Melmoth is the most hyperbolic of Maturin's romances. The hero, a compound of Faust, Mephistopheles, the Wandering Jew, and the Prisoner of Chillon, 'gleams with demon light,' and, owing to a compact with Satan, lives a century and a half, meeting with all manner of preposterous adventures, which might be gruesome were they less tedious and puerile; some of the details are absolutely sickening.

and loathsome, and suggest the last convulsive efforts and perversities of the 'Monk' Lewis school of romance. There are two real mysteries about Melmoth—one that it should have fascinated Balzac and Rossetti; the other that in 1892 it should have been deemed worthy of republication, with a memoir, a bibliography, and a 'Note on Maturin,' whom the nameless editors seem to rank above Goethe, Byron, Calderon, Marlowe, and Milton. In 1824—the year of his premature death by accidentally swallowing an embrocation—Maturin published The Albigenses, intended as one of a series of romances illustrative of European feelings and manners in ancient, mediæval, and modern times. Laying the scene of his story in France, in the thirteenth century, the author connected it with the wars between the Catholics and the Albigenses, the latter being the earliest of the reformers of the faith. Such a time was well adapted for the purposes of romance, as has been proved both before and since. Maturin produced lively but fanciful pictures of the Crusaders, and eloquent descriptions of the Albigenses in their lonely worship among rocks and mountains; but he had not the power of portraying or creating living characters, and his attempts at humour were dismal failures. The following, from Melmoth, shows Maturin at his best or worst, according as one takes him:

The Victim of the Inquisition.

The reptiles, who filled the hole into which I had been thrust, gave me opportunity for a kind of constant, miserable, ridiculous hostility. My mat had been placed in the very seat of warfare;—I shifted it,—still they pursued me;—I placed it against the wall,—the cold crawling of their bloated limbs often awoke me from my sleep, and still oftener made me shudder when awake. I struck at them;—I tried to terrify them by my voice, to arm myself against them by the help of my mat; but, above all, my anxiety was ceaseless to defend my head from their loathsome incursions, and my pitcher of water from their dropping into it. I adopted a thousand precautions, trivial as they were inefficacious, but still there was occupation. I do assure you, Sir, I had more to do in my dungeon than in my cell. To be fighting with reptiles in the dark appears the most horrible struggle that can be assigned to man; but what is it compared to his combat with those reptiles which his own heart hourly engenders in a cell, and of which, if his heart be the mother, solitude is the father? I had another employment,—I cannot call it occupation. I had calculated with myself that sixty minutes made an hour, and sixty seconds a minute. I began to think I could keep time as accurately as any clock in a convent, and measure the hours of my confinement or—my release. So I sat and counted sixty; a doubt always occurred to me that I was counting them faster than the clock. Then I wished to be the clock, that I might have no feeling, no motive for hurrying on the approach of time. Then I reckoned slower. Sleep sometimes overtook me in this exercise (perhaps I adopted it from that hope); but when I awoke, I applied to it again instantly. Thus I oscillated, reckoned, and measured time, on my mat, while time withheld its delicious diary of rising and setting suns,—of the dews of dawn and of twilight,—of the glow of morning and the shades of the evening. When my reckoning was broken by my sleep (and I knew not whether I slept by day or by night), I tried to eke it out by my incessant repetition of minutes and seconds, and I succeeded; for I always consoled myself, that whatever hour it was, sixty minutes must go to an hour. Had I led this life much longer, I might have been converted into the idiot who, as I have read, from the habit of watching a clock, imitated its mechanism so well that when it was dawn, he sounded the hour as faithfully as ear could desire. Such was my life.

Thomas Bowdler (1754–1825) has, as editor of the 'Family Shakespeare,' been made to furnish the English language with a series of words with unjustly suspicious associations. Born of wealthy parents at Ashley near Bath, he went at sixteen to St Andrews to study medicine, but graduated M.D. of Edinburgh in 1776. After some years of travel in France, Germany, Italy, and Sicily (twice climbing Mount Etna), he settled in London, but did not practise his profession; devoting himself rather to charitable work in connection with prisons, penitentiaries, and Magdalen asylums, he became the continuator of John Howard's good work. He was a friend of Howard's, an intimate of the circle to which Mrs Montagu, Mrs Chapone, and Hannah More belonged, and remembered Dr Johnson vividly. For ten years he lived at St Boniface in the Isle of Wight, and for the last fifteen years of his life at Rhyddings near Swansea. His Letters Written in Holland (1788) give an account of the revolutionary movement of the previous year, and in 1815 he published one or two minor biographical works. But it was in 1818 that he produced 'The Family Shakespeare, in 10 vols.; in which nothing is added to the original text; but those words and expressions are omitted which cannot with propriety be read aloud in a family.' The work had a large sale, ran through more than half-a-dozen editions, and was long popular, spite of the ridicule it brought down upon the head of its editor. The last years of Bowdler's life were given to the task of preparing an expurgated edition of Gibbon's History, which was published in six volumes the year after his death, edited by his nephew, and described as being 'for the use of Families and Young Persons, reprinted from the original text, with the careful omissions of all passages of an irreligious or immoral tendency.' And the editor congratulated his uncle on 'the peculiar happiness' of having so purified Shakespeare and Gibbon that they could no longer 'raise a blush on the cheek of modest innocence, nor plant a pang in the heart of the devout Christian.' It would be unfair to say that he also Bowdlerized the Old Testament; but he prepared for a Sunday-school Society Select Chapters from the Old Testament, with Short Introductions, issued in 1822.

The word Bowdlerize, first used apparently in 1836, became common (usually as Bowdlerise) from about 1870, with a whole train of derivatives—Bowdlerism, Bowdlerization, Bowdlerizer, &c.—and is rarely used save with sovereign contempt for the process, the theory, and the man, even by those who would unhesitatingly refuse to read aloud every and any passage of Shakespeare to boys and girls just old enough to understand and appreciate the jests and allusions Bowdler excised. If the work was to be done, it is doubtful if it could have been done much more judiciously. It is one thing to Bowdlerize for a special purpose; quite another to Bowdlerize by omissions what is meant to be a standard text (as Dr Mitchell for the Scottish Text Society Bowdlerized in 1897 some of the Gude and Godlie Ballads); and a third thing to substitute as the author's considerable passages which the original writer never wrote or imagined. Bowdler was by no means the first or most prudish preparer of expurgated editions; he was, indeed, considerably less precise than many more recent expurgators of Shakespeare for schools. Castrated editions of the classics are an old-established institution, and the castration of Shakespeare had long been a familiar art. Garrick Bowdlerized him remorselessly, both on the stage and in print; modern stage-managers carefully cut most of the passages Bowdler excised; and it is something for the typical English Expurgator to have Swinburne's strong support and hearty commendation: 'More nauseous or foolish cant was never chattered than that which would deride the memory or depreciate the merits of Bowdler. No man ever did better service to Shakespeare than the man who made it possible to put him into the hands of intelligent and imaginative children' (Studies in Prose and Poetry, page 98). Bowdler himself defended his Shakespearean enterprise in a temperately argued pamphlet called A Letter to 'the British Critic', which he said was occasioned by the censure pronounced in the work on 'Johnson, Pope, Bowdler, Warburton, Theobald, Steevens, Reed, Malone, et Hoc Genus Omne.'

It is a really curious fact that, as has been pointed out in Vol. I. p. 433, the name Bowdler was associated with Elizabethan dramatic literature as the cognomen of the very free-spoken and 'amorous gallant' (of all things in the world!) in Heywood's Fair Maid of the Exchange.

Sir John Barrow (1764–1848), born in a thatched cottage in the village of Dragley Beck in North Lancashire, learnt mathematics at Ulverston, was timekeeper in a foundry, and made a voyage in a Greenland whaler before he became mathematical teacher at Greenwich. Thence he was taken by Lord Macartney as his secretary to China and to the Cape. In South Africa (1797–1802) he was even more eminently serviceable than in China as explorer, map-maker, and administrator; he was sent on missions to reconcile Boers and Kaffirs, and explored many outlying parts of the colony. He had bought a house near Table Mountain, where he meant to settle as a South African country-gentleman, when the Peace of Amiens restored the Cape (temporarily) to the Dutch (1802), and Barrow came home to serve his country for forty years as secretary to the Admiralty under fourteen administrations. His zeal in promoting Arctic exploration is indicated by the way his name figures on the map of the Arctic regions—Barrow Straits, Cape Barrow, &c. He was all his life an indefatigable worker and an inexhaustible writer. Among his publications are to be counted some two hundred articles in the Quarterly Review and a series in the Encyclopædia Britannica; Lives of Lord Macartney, Lord Howe, and Peter the Great; accounts of his travels in China and in South Africa—long standard works; books on voyages to Cochin-China and the Arctic regions; and a very interesting Autobiography (1847). There is also a Memoir of him by Staunton (1852).

Robert Plumer Ward (1765–1846) was born in London and bred at Oxford, went to the Bar, and was successively a judge, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, a lord of admiralty, and auditor of the civil list. He wrote a history of the law of nations, several books on the law of belligerents, contraband, and the like, and in 1825 he published anonymously a discursively metaphysical and religious romance, Tremaine, or the Man of Refinement. As the author alluded to his intimacy with English statesmen and political events, and seemed to belong to the Evangelical party in the Church, much speculation took place as to the authorship of the novel. The prolixity of some of the dissertations and dialogues, where the story stood still for half a volume that the parties might converse and dispute, rendered Tremaine heavy and tedious, in spite of some originality. But it was, as Blackwood thought, 'extravagantly overrated,' and ran through four editions in one year. In De Vere, or the Man of Independence (1827), the public dwelt with keen interest on a portraiture of Canning, whose career was then about to close in his premature death; and this desultory roman à clef used to be cited as a kind of authority on Canning's views and manner of speech, the Wentworth of the story being a close study of the statesman. De Clifford, or the Constant Man (1841), is also a tale of actual life; its hero is secretary to a Cabinet Minister, and the author revels in official details, social rivalries, and political intrigue. Canning sarcastically said that Ward's law-books were as pleasant as novels, and his novels as dull as law-books. Now it but rarely happens that a volume either of the one set or the other is disturbed out of its dust-covered repose in old libraries.

Henry Luttrell (c. 1765–1851), a man of wit and fashion, and a clever and graceful versifier, was author of Advice to Julia: a Letter in Rhyme (1820); of Crockford House (1827), a satire against gambling; and of some elegiacs and shorter pieces. He was a natural son of the Lord Carhampton who as Colonel Luttrell had been the defeated Government candidate in opposition to Wilkes, but had by Parliament been declared duly elected; he afterwards became notorious by his severities upon the Irish rebels of 1798. The son sat in the last Irish Parliament 1798–1800, and spent some years managing his father's West Indian plantations, but came back to London to be a society lion and a favourite in the circle of Holland House: 'None of the talkers whom I meet in London society,' said Rogers, 'can slide in a brilliant thing with such readiness as he does.' As with other brilliant conversationists, his printed works hardly justify his fame, though they have happy descriptive passages, frequent touches of bright social satire, and couplets of epigrammatic inevitableness. Byron, Moore, and Christopher North were at one in praising his Advice to Julia, from which these are short extracts:

London in Autumn.

'Tis August. Rays of fiercer heat
Full on the scorching pavement beat.
As o'er it the faint breeze, by fits
Alternate, blows and intermits.
For short-lived green, a russet brown
Stains every withering shrub in town.
Darkening the air, in clouds arise
Th' Egyptian plagues of dust and flies;
At rest, in motion—forced to roam
Abroad, or to remain at home,
Nature proclaims one common lot
For all conditions—'Be ye hot!'
Day is intolerable—Night
As close and suffocating quite;
And still the mercury mounts higher,
Till London seems again on fire.

November Fog.

First, at the dawn of lingering day,
It rises of an ashy gray;
Then deepening with a sordid stain
Of yellow, like a lion's mane.
Vapour importunate and dense,
It wars at once with every sense.
The cars escape not. All around
Returns a dull unwonted sound.
Loath to stand still, afraid to stir,
The chilled and puzzled passenger,
Oft blundering from the pavement, fails
To feel his way along the rails;
Or at the crossings, in the roll
Of every carriage dreads the pole.
Scarce an eclipse, with pall so dun,
Blots from the face of heaven the sun.
But soon a thicker, darker cloak
Wraps all the town, behold, in smoke,
Which steam-compelling trade disgorges
From all her furnaces and forges

In pitchy clouds, too dense to rise,
Descends rejected from the skies;
Till struggling day, extinguished quite,
At noon gives place to candle-light.
O Chemistry, attractive maid,
Descend, in pity, to our aid:
Come with thy all-pervading gases,
Thy crucibles, retorts, and glasses,
Thy fearful energies and wonders,
Thy dazzling lights and mimic thunders;
Let Carbon in thy train be seen,
Dark Azote and fair Oxygen,
And Wollaston and Davy guide
The car that bears thee, at thy side.
If any power can, any how,
Abate these nuisances, 'tis thou;
And see, to aid thee, in the blow,
The bill of Michael Angelo;
Oh join—success a thing of course is—
Thy heavenly to his mortal forces;
Make all chimneys chew the cud
Like hungry cows, as chimneys should!
And since 'tis only smoke we draw
Within our lungs at common law,
Into their thirsty tubes be sent
Fresh air, by act of parliament.

John Hoole (1727–1803), born at Moorfields in London, was from 1744 to 1783 employed in the East India House, and earned the name of 'the translator' by his English versions of the Jerusalem Delivered (1763) and Rinaldo (1792) of Tasso, the dramas of Metastasio (1767), and the Orlando Furioso of Ariosto (1773–83). Scott describes the translator of the Ariosto as 'a noble transmuted of gold into lead.' His dramas Cyrus (1768), Timanthes (1770), and Cleoneice (1775) were failures.

William Herbert (1778–1847), honourable and reverend, was third son of the first Earl of Carnarvon, and studied at Eton and Christ Church. He sat in Parliament from 1806 to 1812, took orders in 1814, and from 1840 was Dean of Manchester. He had begun to publish poetry in the first year of the century, and became especially famous for his translations from Scandinavian and his own poems on Scandinavian subjects, inasmuch that Byron in English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, speaking of his 'rugged rhymes,' talks of him as 'wielding Thor's hammer.' He translated also from German and from Portuguese, contributed to the Edinburgh Review, and wrote much on natural history. His chief original poems were Helga (1815); Hedin, or the Spectre of the Tomb (1820); and Attila, or the Triumph of Christianity (1838).

Henry Francis Cary (1772–1844), translator of Dante, was born at Gibraltar, and educated at Rugby, Sutton Coldfield, Birmingham, and Christ Church, Oxford. He took orders in 1796, became vicar of Abbot's Bromley in Staffordshire and Kingsbury in Warwickshire, but from 1807 lived in London, being assistant-librarian at the British Museum from 1826 to 1837. He was buried in Westminster Abbey. Cary, who at sixteen published poetry, was very widely read in Italian and French, as well as in the classics and English literature. In 1805 he published the Inferno of Dante in blank verse, and an entire translation of the Divina Commedia in the same measure in 1814. He afterwards translated the Birds of Aristophanes and the Odes of Pindar, and wrote a series of short memoirs in continuation of Johnson's Lives of the Poets, which, with Lives of the early French poets, appeared anonymously in the London Magazine. First brought into notice by Coleridge, whom Cary had met on the sea-shore at Littlehampton, the English Dante passed through four editions during the life of the translator, and it still ranks as one of the principal translations. It has some of the inevitable defects of a foreign tongue and an alien measure, but has many merits, and is more English and more easily read than the metrical translations that endeavour, by terza rima or otherwise, more closely to imitate the rhythm of the original.

Francesca of Rimini.

I began: 'Bard! willingly

I would address those two together coming,
Which seem so light before the wind.' He thus:
'Note thou, when nearer they to us approach,
Then by that love which carries them along,
Entreat; and they will come.' Soon as the wind
Swayed them toward us, I thus framed my speech:
'O wearied spirits! come and hold discourse
With us, if by none else restrained.' As doves,
By fond desire invited, on wide wings
And firm, to their sweet nest returning home,
Cleave the air, wafted by their will along;
Thus issued, from that troop where Dido ranks,
They, through the ill air speeding, with such force
My cry prevailed, by strong affection urged.

'O gracious creature, and benign! who goest
Visiting, through this element obscure,
Us, who the world with bloody stain imbrued;
If for a friend the King of all we owned,
Our prayer to him should for thy peace arise,
Since thou hast pity on our evil plight.
Of whatsoever to hear or to discourse
It pleases thee, that will we hear, of that
Freely with thee discourse, while e'er the wind,
As now, is mute. The land that gave me birth
Is situate on the coast, where Po descends
To rest in ocean with his sequent streams.

'Love, that in gentle art is quickly learnt,
Entangled him by that fair form, from me
Ta'en in such cruel sort, as grieves me still:
Love, that denial takes from none beloved,
Caught me with pleasing him so passing well,
That, as thou see'st, he yet deserts me not.
Love brought us to one death: Caina waits
The soul who spilt our life.' Such were their words;
At hearing which downward I bent my looks,
And held them there so long that the bard cried:
'What art thou pondering?' I, in answer, thus:
'Alas! by what sweet thoughts, what fond desire,
Must they at length to that ill pass have reached!
Then turning, I to them my speech addressed,

And thus began: 'Francesca! your sad fate,
Even to tears, my grief and pity moves.
But tell me; in the time of your sweet sighs,
By what and how Love granted, that ye knew
Your yet uncertain wishes.' She replied:
'No greater grief than to remember days
Of joy, when misery is at hand! That kens
Thy learned instructor. Yet so eagerly
If thou art bent to know the primal root,
From whence our love gat being, I will do
As one who weeps and tells his tale. One day,
For our delight, we read of Lancelot,
How him love thrall'd. Alone we were, and no
Suspicion near us. Ofttimes by that reading
Our eyes were drawn together, and the hue
Fled from our altered cheek. But at one point
Alone we fell. When of that smile we read,
The wish'd smile, so rapturously kissed
By one so deep in love, then he, who ne'er
From me shall separate, at once my lips
All trembling kissed. The book and writer both
Were love's purveyors. In its leaves that day
We read no more.' While thus one spirit spake,
The other wailed so sorely that, heart-struck,
I, through compassion fainting, seemed not far
From death; and like a corpse fell to the ground.

Caina, in the Inferno, is the place to which murderers are doomed.

Ugolino and his Sons.

A small grate

Within that mew, which for my sake the name
Of famine bears, where others yet must pine,
Already through its opening several moons
Had shewn me, when I slept the evil sleep
That from the future tore the curtain off.
This one, methought, as master of the sport,
Rode forth to chase the gaunt wolf and his whelps,
Unto the mountain which forbids the sight
Of Lucca to the Pisans. With lean brachs,
Inquisitive and keen, before him ranged Lanfranchi with Sismondi and Gualandi.
After short course the father and the sons
Seemed tired and lagging, and methought I saw
The sharp tusks gore their sides. When I awoke,
Before the dawn, amid their sleep I heard
My sons—for they were with me—weep and ask
For bread. . . .
Now had they wakened; and the hour drew near
When they were wont to bring us food; the mind
Of each misgave him through his dream, and I
Heard, at its outlet underneath, locked up
The horrible tower: whence, uttering not a word,
I looked upon the visage of my sons.
I wept not: so all stone I felt within.
They wept: and one, my little Anselm, cried:
'Thou lookest so! father, what ails thee?' Yet
I shed no tear, nor answered all that day
Nor the next night, until another sun
Came out upon the world. When a faint beam
Had to our doleful prison made its way,
And in four countenances I descried
The image of my own, on either hand
Through agony I bit; and they who thought
I did it through desire of feeding, rose
O' the sudden, and cried: 'Father, we should grieve
Far less if thou wouldst eat of us: thou gavest

These weeds of miserable flesh we wear ;
 And do thou strip them off from us again.
 Then, not to make them sadder, I kept down
 My spirit in stillness. That day and the next
 We were all silent. Ah, obdurate earth !
 Why open'dst not upon us ? When we came
 To the fourth day, then Gaddo at my feet
 Outstretched did fling him, crying, ' Hast no help
 For me, my father ? ' There he died ; and e'en
 Plainly, as thou seest me, saw I the three
 Fall off by one 'twixt the fifth day and sixth :
 Whence I betook me, now grown blind, to grope
 Over them all, and for three days aloud
 Called on them who were dead. Then fasting got
 The mastery of grief.

The story is told by Ugolino's ghost. During the contests between Guelphs and Ghibellines in 1290, Count Ugolino della Gherardesca, with two sons and two grandsons, was shut up by Archbishop Ruggiero, and left to perish of starvation in what has since been called the Tower of Hunger at Pisa. Ugolino, who had repeatedly allied himself with the Guelphic cities, and had for a time suppressed the Ghibelline party in Pisa in the hope of becoming despot of the city, was finally overthrown by his enemies, headed by the archbishop. Dante describes the count and the archbishop as being deservedly tormented together, 'pent in one hollow of the ice.'

This is how Cary renders the passage of Dante that was in Gray's mind when he wrote the first stanza of his Elegy, and was imitated by Byron in the third canto of Don Juan :

Now was the hour that wakens fond desire
 In men at sea, and melts their thoughtful heart
 Who in the morn have bid sweet friends farewell ;
 And pilgrim newly on his road with love
 Thrills, if he hear the vesper-bell from far,
 That seems to mourn for the expiring day.
 There are Lives of Cary by his son (1847) and by King (1925).

David Ricardo (1772-1823), author of several original treatises on economics, was bred to his own business by his father, a Jewish stockbroker originally from Holland, but through reading Smith's Wealth of Nations in 1799 was stirred to think and write on political economy. His first works were on The High Price of Bullion (1810), Proposals for an Economical and Secure Currency (1816), and Principles of Political Economy and Taxation (1817). The last work, that on which his reputation rests, is remarkable for its close logical argument and its acumen rather than for any literary merit ; it is indeed very hard reading. But it was justly considered the most important treatise on that science, with the single exception of Smith's Wealth of Nations. As such it made an epoch in the science of political economy, and became the text-book of the classical or abstract economic school. His special aim and achievement was to expound the theory of rent as the excess of the produce of the land over the cost of production of that land. And from this thesis came new statements as to wages and value, and as to the incidence of taxation. Ricardo afterwards wrote pamphlets on the Funding System and on Protection to Agriculture. He had amassed great wealth as a stockbroker, and, retiring from business, he entered Parliament as representative for the borough of Portarlington ; but he seldom spoke in the House, and only on subjects connected with his favourite studies. He died at his seat of Gatcombe Park in Gloucestershire.

His works were edited with a Life by M'Culloch (1846) ; his letters to Malthus, M'Culloch, Trower, &c., by Bonar and Hollander (1887-99). See Hollander's Centenary Estimate (1910).

James Mill (1773-1836), born a shoemaker's son near Montrose, studied for the ministry at Edinburgh, but in 1802 settled in London as a literary man. He edited and wrote for various periodicals, and in 1806 commenced his History of British India (1817-18). In 1819 the directors of the East India Company made him (though a Radical) assistant-examiner with charge of the revenue department, and in 1832 head of the examiner's office, where he had the control of all the departments of Indian administration. Many of his articles (on government, jurisprudence, colonies, &c.) for the Encyclopædia Britannica were reprinted. In 1821-22 he published his Elements of Political Economy, in 1829 an Analysis of the Human Mind, and in 1835 the Fragment on Mackintosh. He was no mere disciple of Bentham, but a man of profound and original thought, as well as of great reading. In psychology and ethics he carried the association principle further than it had yet been applied. In political economy he followed Ricardo. His mind was eminently logical ; he was a special enemy to all vagueness in thought and argument, to all looseness in statement. He was an unsparing critic, and Mackintosh's credit suffered from Mill's attack. His conversation gave a powerful stimulus to many young men like his own son and Grote ; he ranked as one of the main moulders of philosophical radicalism, as his views and Grote's came to be called ; and he took a leading part in founding University College, London. Throughout life he cherished high ideals for himself and others, and he was a strenuous and unselfish reformer. Clearness and precision are the main merits of his literary style. It was to Mill's disadvantage that when he wrote he had no direct knowledge of India, its peoples and customs ; he applied his own precise political principles as a standard for judging men dealing with a civilisation he imperfectly understood. But, as is generally admitted, his History of India remains a great work in spite of the technical blunders specialists have pointed out, and in spite of his somewhat pronounced prejudices. The book dwelt perhaps overmuch on abuses, but it helped to bring about changes in administration ; as might be expected, Mill summed up strongly against Warren Hastings. This is his account of

The Case of Nuncomar.

A few days after this suspicious but ineffectual proceeding, a new prosecution was instituted against Nuncomar. At the suit of a native, he was taken up on a charge of forgery, and committed to the common gaol. He was tried before the Supreme Court, by a jury of Englishmen, convicted, and hanged. No transaction, perhaps, of this whole administration more deeply tainted the reputation of Hastings than the tragedy of Nuncomar. At the moment when he stood forth as the accuser of the Governor-general, he was charged with a crime alleged to have been committed five years before, tried, and executed; a proceeding which could not fail to generate the suspicion of guilt, and of an inability to encounter the weight of his testimony, in the man whose power to have prevented, or to have stopped (if he did not cause), the prosecution, it is not easy to deny. As Hastings, aware of the sinister interpretations to which the destruction of an accuser, in circumstances so extraordinary, would assuredly expose him, chose rather to sustain the weight of those suspicions than to meet the charges by preventing or suspending the fate of the accuser, it is a fair inference, though mere resentment and spite might hurry some men to as great an indiscretion, that from the accusations he dreaded something worse than those suspicions. Mr Francis, in his examination before the House of Commons on the 16th of April 1788, declared that the effect of this transaction upon the inquiries carried on by the Board into the accusations against the Governor was 'to defeat them; that it impressed a general terror on the natives with respect to preferring accusations against men in great power; and that he and his coadjutors were unwilling to expose them to what appeared to him and these coadjutors, as well as themselves, a manifest danger.'

The severest censures were very generally passed upon this trial and execution; and it was afterwards exhibited as matter of impeachment against both Mr Hastings, and the Judge who presided in the tribunal. The crime for which Nuncomar was made to suffer was not a capital offence by the laws of Hindustan, either Moslem or Hindu; and it was represented as a procedure full of cruelty and injustice, to render a people amenable to the most grievous severities of a law with which they were unacquainted, and from which, by their habits and associations, their minds were totally estranged. It was affirmed that this atrocious condemnation and execution were upon an ex post-facto law, as the statute which created the Supreme Court and its powers was not published till 1774, and the date of the supposed forgery was in 1770; that the law which rendered forgery capital did not extend to India, as no English statute included the colonies, unless where it was expressly stated in the law; that Nuncomar, as a native Indian, for a crime committed against another Indian, not an Englishman, or even a European, was amenable to the native, not the English tribunals; that the evidence adduced was not sufficient to warrant condemnation; and that, although the situation in which the prisoner was placed with regard to a man of so much power as the Governor-general should have suggested to the Judge peculiar circumspection and tenderness, there was every appearance of precipitation, and of a predetermination to find him guilty and to cut him off. In the defence which was set up by Sir Elijah Impey, the Chief Judge, in his answer at the bar of the House of Commons on the 12th of December 1787, he admitted that a native inhabitant of the provinces at large was not amenable to the English laws or to the English tribunals; and it was not as such, he affirmed, that Nuncomar was tried. But he maintained that a native inhabitant of the English town of Calcutta, which was English property, which had long been governed by Englishmen and English laws, was amenable to the English tribunals, and justly, because he made it his voluntary choice to live under their protection; and that it was in this capacity, namely, that of an inhabitant of Calcutta, that Nuncomar suffered the penalties of the English laws. If the competency of the jurisdiction was admitted, the question of evidence, where evidence was complicated and contradictory, could not admit of any very clear and certain decision; and the Judge opposed the affirmation of its insufficiency by that of the contrary. He denied the doctrine that an English penal statute extended to the colonies only when that extension was expressed. The allegation of precipitation and unfairness, still further of corruption, in the treatment of the accused, he not only denied with strong expressions of abhorrence, but by a specification of circumstances endeavoured to disprove. . . . Of the evidence it may fairly be observed, that though the forgery was completely proved by the oaths of the witnesses to the prosecution, it was as completely disproved by the oaths of the witnesses to the defence; that there was no such difference in the character of the parties or their witnesses as to throw the balance greatly to either of the sides; and that the preponderance, if any, was too weak to support an act of so much importance and delicacy as the condemnation of Nuncomar. Even after the judgment, the case was not without a remedy; the execution might have been stayed till the pleasure of the King was known, and a pardon might have been obtained. This too the Court absolutely refused, and proceeded with unrelenting determination to the execution of Nuncomar; who, on the 5th of August, with a tranquillity and firmness that never were surpassed, submitted to his fate, not only amid the tears and lamentations, but the cries and shrieks of an extraordinary assemblage of his countrymen.

See his son John Stuart Mill's Autobiography; Bain's James Mill (1882); and Sir L. Stephen's English Utilitarians (vol. ii. 1900).

Andrew Cherry (1762-1812), actor, dramatist, and author of 'The Bay of Biscay,' was the son of a Limerick printer and bookseller. Having at seventeen abandoned his father's business for the stage, he attained some eminence as an actor at Drury Lane, and managed theatres in Swansea and Monmouth. Of his nine or ten plays several were fairly successful, but only The Soldier's Daughter can be said to have 'held the stage.' On the other hand, at least three of his songs bid fair to prove imperishable—'The Bay of Biscay,' 'The Green little Shamrock of Ireland,' and 'Tom Moody, the Whipper-in.' There is probably no piece in English literature so familiar to everybody as 'The Bay of Biscay' whose author's name is so utterly unknown; not one in ten thousand who know the song by heart have any idea who wrote it (as is the case with not a few of our most popular songs), or ever heard of Andrew Cherry or his works. Nor is it always easy to see why some songs have attained and maintained their exceptional popularity, though doubtless it depends well-nigh as often on the music as on the words. In this case the composer, John Davy, is also little known. 'Tom Moody' ends with the following characteristic stanza:

Thus Tom spoke his friends ere he gave up his breath:
 'Since I see you're resolved to be in at the death,
 One favour bestow—'tis the last I shall crave—
 Give a rattling view-hollow thrice over my grave;
 And unless at that warning I lift up my head,
 My boys, you may fairly conclude I am dead.'
 Honest Tom was obeyed, and the shout rent the sky,
 For every one joined in the tally-ho cry,
 Tally-ho! Hark forward!
 Tally-ho! Tally-ho!

Edward Lysaght (1763-1811), wit and songwriter, was the son of a proprietor at Brickhill in County Clare; graduated B.A. at Trinity College, Dublin, and M.A. at Oxford; studied law at the Middle Temple; and was called both to the Irish and to the English Bar. Ultimately he practised in Dublin only, where he was a commissioner of bankruptcy, was a successful political pamphleteer, and had a brilliant reputation in literary and social circles. He died in poverty. Among his songs are 'Our Ireland,' 'The man who led the van Of the Irish Volunteers,' and 'Kate of Garnavilla.' 'Kitty of Coleraine' has been claimed for him on doubtful grounds; and 'The Sprig of Shillelah,' usually printed as his, appears to have been by another hand. Some of his best verses were addressed to his godchild Lady Morgan (see page 780).

Theobald Wolfe Tone, born a coach-maker's son in Dublin, 20th June 1763, studied there at Trinity College and at the Middle Temple in London, and was called to the Irish Bar in 1789, but acted as secretary of the Catholic Committee, helped to organise the United Irishmen in 1791, and four years later had to flee to America and thence to France. He laboured there incessantly to induce the Directory to invade Ireland, and held a command in Hoche's expedition to Bantry Bay in 1796. In 1798 he again embarked in a small French squadron, which was captured after a fierce fight at the mouth of Lough Swilly. Tone was taken to Dublin, tried, and condemned to be hanged as a traitor, but cut his throat in prison, 19th November 1798. His fragmentary autobiography and journals describing the greater part of his career were edited by his son and published in America in 1826. Written with considerable spirit and vividness, their revelation of an adventurer and a character of reckless audacity has largely helped to make Tone the chief popular hero of rebellious Nationalism in Ireland. They are reprinted in Barry O'Brien's Autobiography of Wolfe Tone (1893). Contrasted estimates of Tone may be found in Madden's United Irishmen (3rd series, 1846), and the Duke of Argyll's article in the Nineteenth Century for 1890.

George Nugent Reynolds (1770?-1802), author of many songs ('Kathleen O'More' one of them), of a long epic, and of a musical-dramatic piece on the French invasion of Ireland in 1796, was the son of a proprietor at Letterfyan in County Leitrim. His loyalty was suspected by the Government, so that he was removed from his magistracy, and he had come to England to study law a year before his death. He has had the misfortune to have credited to him a number of pieces demonstrably by other authors; thus from 1830 on his friends persistently asserted that Campbell's 'Exile of Erin' was his production.

Thomas Dermody (1775-1802), who has been called 'the Irish Chatterton' rather from his sad fate than from the originality of his poetry, was the son of a schoolmaster at Ennis in County Clare. He showed extraordinary aptitude for the classics and a precocious facility in writing English verses of all kinds; but having run away to Dublin, he lost the friends his abilities conciliated by irrepressible idleness and drunkenness, and threw away several chances of a good education. Having enlisted, he behaved well during a spell of foreign service, but, back in England, he swiftly sank into ruinous dissipation, and died in misery. The two or three collections of poems published in his lifetime were after his death collected as The Harp of Erin (2 vols. 1807) by J. G. Raymond, who also published his Life (2 vols. 1806).

William Hone (1780-1842), famous as 'infidel' author, publisher, and Radical reformer, was born at Bath the son of strictly religious parents, at ten became a London lawyer's clerk, and at twenty started a book and print shop which soon failed. Already a pronounced democrat, he struggled to make a living by writing for various papers, started The Traveller (1815), and next The Reformist's Register (1817); and made himself notorious by a series of squibs and satires against the Government, some of which, such as The Political Litany, unmistakably contained parodies of the Catechism, the Athanasian Creed, and the litany. He was accordingly prosecuted, but in December 1817 he was acquitted after three separate trials for publishing things calculated to injure public morals and bring the Prayer-book into contempt. Among his later satires, illustrated by George Cruikshank (long his most intimate friend), were The Political House that Jack built, The Queen's Matrimonial Ladder, The Man in the Moon, and The Political Showman. The Apocryphal New Testament (1820) was not designed to promote the reverent study of Scripture; and the Quarterly Review denounced him as 'a poor illiterate creature' and 'a wretch as contemptible as he is wicked'—unjustly, as the sequel showed. Ancient Mysteries dealt largely with the old miracle-plays, and showed some curious reading. But his Miscellanies, The Every-day

Book (1826), The Table-book (1827-28), and The Year-book (1829) were recommended by Southey to all interested in our national and local customs as having rendered good service in an important department of literature; they constitute a calendar of popular English amusements, sports, pastimes, ceremonies, manners, customs, and events incident especially to several days of the year. Charles Lamb was as commendatory—'I like you and your book, ingenious Hone,' was the beginning of verses to him; the Every-day Book was, indeed, dedicated to Lamb. Scott and Christopher North were also hearty in praise of these miscellanies, filled with curious lore. Yet in the end Hone found himself in a debtor's prison, from which his friends extricated him to start him in a coffee-house—also a predestined failure. In 1830 he edited Strutt's Sports and Pastimes, and he contributed to the Penny Magazine and the Patriot. By this time he had become a generally popular personage, old grudges having been forgotten; in the later years of his life he became devout, and used, indeed, to preach for orthodox independent ministers. Among the sixty-four publications given under his name in the Dictionary of National Biography (most of them written, compiled, or edited by himself) are two autobiographical works on his early life and conversion in later years. There is a Life by Hackwood (1912).

William Stewart Rose (1775-1843), the translator of Ariosto, was the second son of the Treasurer of the Navy. Educated at Eton, he sat in Parliament 1796-1800, and then till 1824 was reading-clerk of the House of Lords; but his tastes were wholly literary. To gratify his father, he began A Naval History of the Late War (vol. i. 1802), which he never completed. Later works were verse translations from the French of the first part of Amadis de Gaul (1803) and of Le Grand's text of Partenopex de Blois (1807); Letters to Henry Hallam, Esq., from the North of Italy (2 vols. 1819), and a free metrical version of Casti's Animali Parlanti (1819), to whose cantos he prefixed introductory addresses to his friends Ugo Foscolo, Hookham Frere, Sir Walter Scott, and others. In 1823 he published a condensed translation of Boiardo's Orlando Innamorato, and commenced his famous version of the Orlando Furioso (vol. viii. 1831). This is not merely Rose's best work—it is still the best extant English translation of Ariosto, the only one which preserves much of the spirit of the original. It was finished at Sir Walter Scott's request. Rose was also author of a poem on The Crusade of St Louis (1810), Rhymes (1837), of epistles to his friends, and of tales and sonnets; and he was an occasional contributor to the Edinburgh and Quarterly Reviews. Ill-health latterly compelled him to withdraw from society. Hoole in his translation of Ariosto had adopted the heroic couplet, whereas the original ottava rima was reproduced by Rose with some success, as may be seen from these stanzas:

Let him make haste his feet to disengage,
Nor lime his wings, whom Love has made a prize:
For love, in fine, is nought but frepziad rage,
By universal suffrage of the wise:
And albeit some may shew themselves more sage
Than Roland, they but sin in other guise.
For what proves folly more than on this shelf,
Thus for another to destroy one's self?

Various are love's effects; but from one source
All issue, though they lead a different way.
He is, as 'twere, a forest where, perforce,
Who enter its recesses go astray,
And here and there pursue their devious course:
In sum, to you I, for conclusion, say,
He who grows old in love, besides all pain
Which wait such passion, well deserves a chain.

Noel Thomas Carrington (1777-1830) was the son of a Plymouth grocer, who served in the navy, taught a school at Maidstone, and for ten years managed successfully a private academy at Plymouth Dock. From his youth he wrote poems, mainly in praise of Devonshire, its scenery, customs, and traditions. His best-known pieces were The Banks of Tamar (1820) and Dartmoor (1826). His collected poems, with a Life, were published in 1830. The extract is on the disappearance from earth of the pixies:

They are flown,
Beautiful fictions of our fathers, wove
In Superstition's web when Time was young,
And fondly loved and cherished: they are flown
Before the wand of Science! Hills and vales,
Mountains and moors of Devon, ye have lost
The enchantments, the delights, the visions all,
The elfin visions that so blessed the sight
In the old days romantic. Nought is heard
Now in the leafy world but earthly strains—
Voices, yet sweet, of breeze, and bird, and brook,
And water-fall; the day is silent else,
And night is strangely mute! the hymnings high—
The immortal music men of ancient times
Heard, ravished, oft, are flown! Oh ye have lost,
Mountains, and moors, and meads, the radiant throngs
That dwelt in your green solitudes, and filled
The air, the fields, with beauty and with joy
Intense; with a rich mystery that awed
The mind, and flung around a thousand hearths
Divinest tales, that through the enchanted year
Found passionate listeners! The very streams
Brightened with visitings of these so sweet
Ethereal creatures! They were seen to rise
From the charmed waters, which still brighter grew
As the pomp passed to land, until the eye
Scarce bore the unearthly glory. Where they trod,
Young flowers, but not of this world's growth, arose,
And fragrance as of amaranthine bowers
Floated upon the breeze. And mortal eyes
Looked on their revels all the luscious night;
And, unreprieved, upon their ravishing forms
Gazed wistfully, as in the dance they moved,
Voluptuous to the thrilling touch of harp
Elysian!

Thomas Brown (1778–1820), writer on philosophy, was son of the minister of Kirkmabreck in Galloway, and was trained a physician. He appeared as an author before his twentieth year, his first work being a review of Dr Darwin's Zoonomia. On the establishment of the Edinburgh Review he became one of the contributors on philosophical subjects; and when Leslie's fitness for the Mathematical chair in the university was disputed by the orthodox because he had approved of Hume's theory of causation, Brown, who still practised medicine, warmly espoused Leslie's cause, and vindicated his opinions in an Inquiry into the Relation of Cause and Effect. By modifying Hume's doctrine in one or two points he sought to show that it does not necessarily lead to scepticism in theology. In 1810 the philosophical physician was appointed colleague and successor to Dugald Stewart in the chair of Moral Philosophy, and he discharged the duties amidst universal respect till his death. Part of his leisure was devoted to the cultivation of a taste for poetry, and he published The Paradise of Coquettes (1814), The Wanderer of Norway (1815); and The Bower of Spring (1816). Though not without fine thoughts and images, his verse wanted force and passion, and is now utterly forgotten. In philosophy, his exposition was relieved by passages of old-fashioned eloquence; he quoted largely from the poets, especially Akenside, and was too flowery in his illustrations. His Lectures on the Philosophy of the Human Mind were long popular as a textbook, but were never original nor profound, and are now antiquated. He departed from Reid and Stewart and the Scottish school in the direction of the English associationism, under the influence of French sensationalism. Mackintosh held that he had rendered an important service to mental science by his 'secondary laws of suggestion or association—circumstances which modify the action of the general law, and must be distinctly considered in order to explain its connection with the phenomena.'

Sir Humphry Davy (1778–1829) was a great original investigator in chemistry and physics, a brilliant lecturer, and an author who expounded scientific verities in a wonderfully popular style. He was born at Penzance, where his father was a wood-carver. Both at school there and at Truro he developed a taste for story-telling, poetry, and angling, and for experimental science; and in virtue of several rather pleasing poems was regarded as a poetical genius. Apprenticed to a Penzance surgeon in 1795, he made chemical experiments and entered on an encyclopædic course of study, and in 1797 seriously took up chemistry. At Clifton, where in 1798 he became assistant to Dr Beddoes in his Pneumatic Institute, he met Coleridge and Southey, experimented on the respiration of gases (more than once nearly losing his life), and discovered the effect of laughing-gas. The account he gave of this in his Researches, Chemical and Philosophical (1799), led to his appointment as lecturer to the Royal Institution, where he delivered his first lecture in 1801; and his eloquence and the novelty of his experiments soon attracted brilliant audiences. In 1803 he began those researches in agriculture in connection with which were delivered his epoch-making lectures, published as Elements of Agricultural Chemistry (1813). His fame chiefly rests on the views originated in his Bakerian lecture On Some Chemical Agencies of Electricity (1806), followed up by the grand discovery that the alkalis and earths are compound substances formed by oxygen united with metallic bases. He first decomposed potash in 1807; when he saw the globules of the new metal, potassium, his delight was ecstatic. He next decomposed soda, baryta, strontia, lime, and magnesia; discovered the new metals sodium, barium, strontium, calcium, and magnesium; and proved the earths proper to consist of metals united to oxygen. In 1812 Davy was knighted, and married a lady of wealth; in 1813 he resigned the Chemical chair of the Royal Institution. To investigate his new theory of volcanic action he visited the Continent with Faraday, and was received with the greatest distinction by the French savants, though Britain and France were at war. In 1815 he investigated fire-damp and invented the safety-lamp. He was created a baronet in 1818, and had succeeded Sir Joseph Banks as President of the Royal Society, when in 1820-23 his researches on electro-magnetism were communicated to the society. After an apoplectic attack in 1826, he twice wintered in Italy, and he died at Geneva on his way homeward. Among his writings were Elements of Chemical Philosophy (1812); a disquisition On the Safety-lamp (1818); Salmonia, or Days of Fly-fishing (1828), an entertaining and popular volume modelled on Izaak Walton, but of considerable scientific interest—for Davy was not merely an enthusiastic angler but a patient student of the natural history problems suggested by the pastime. The interlocutors are Halieus, an accomplished angler; Ornither, a country gentleman interested in sports generally; Poietes, an enthusiast for nature; and Physicus, a naturalist—all mainly imaginary characters, though the substance of actual conversations is sometimes given, and notes from Davy's journal were systematically worked in. In his Consolations in Travel (written at Rome in his last winter there, and posthumously published in 1830), we have a series of speculations on moral and ethical questions, with descriptions of Italian scenery, mainly in conversations between Ambrosio, an enlightened Roman Catholic; Onuphrio, an English patrician verging on scepticism; and a third interlocutor, Philaethes, who may generally be taken as representing Davy himself, though sometimes his views are put in the mouth of 'The Unknown.' Eubathes, who occasionally appears, was Dr Wollaston. Davy, though a member of no communion but 'the Church of Christ' in the widest sense, was keenly interested in the defence of spiritual religion and the belief in immortality and God against materialism or the more radical forms of scepticism.

Salmon and Sea Trout.

SCENE—Loch Maree. TIME—July.

Poictes. I begin to be tired. This is really a long day's journey; and these last ten miles through bogs, with no other view than that of mountains half hid in mists, and brown waters that can hardly be called lakes; and with no other trees than a few stunted birches, that look so little alive that they might be supposed immediately descended from the bog-wood, everywhere scattered beneath our feet. This is the most barren part of one of the most desolate countries I have ever passed through in Europe; and though the inn at Strathgarve is tolerable, that of Auchnasheen is certainly the worst I have ever seen,—and I hope the worst I shall ever see. We ought to have good amusement at Pool Ewe, to compensate us for this uncomfortable day's journey.

Halien. I trust we shall have sport, as far as salmon and sea trout can furnish sport. But the difficulties of our journey are almost over. See, Loch Maree is stretched at our feet, and a good boat with four oars will carry us in four or five hours to our fishing ground; and that time will not be misspent, for this lake is not devoid of beautiful and even grand scenery.

Poict. The scenery begins to improve; and that cloud-breasted mountain on the left is of the best character of Scotch mountains: these woods, likewise, are respectable for this northern country. I think I see islands also in the distance: and the quantity of cloud always gives effect to this kind of view; and perhaps, without such assistance to the imagination, there would be nothing even approaching to the sublime in these countries; but cloud and mist, by creating obscurity and offering a substitute for greatness and distance, give something of an Alpine and majestic character to this region.

Ornither. As we are now fixed in our places in the boat, you will surely put out a rod or two with a set of flies, or try the tail of the par for a large trout or salmon: our fishing will not hinder our progress.

Hal. In most other lakes I should do so; here I have often tried the experiment, but never with success. This lake is extremely deep, and there are very few fish which haunt it generally except char; and salmon seldom rest but in particular parts along the shore, which we shall not touch. Our voyage will be a picturesque rather than an angling one. I see we shall have little occasion for the oars, for a strong breeze is rising, and blowing directly down the lake; we shall be in it in a minute. Hoist the sails! On we go!—we shall make our voyage in half the number of hours I had calculated upon; and I hope to catch a salmon in time for dinner.

Poict. The scenery improves as we advance nearer the lower parts of the lake. The mountains become higher, and that small island or peninsula presents a bold craggy outline; and the birch wood below it, and the pines above, make a scene somewhat Alpine in character. But what is that large bird soaring above the pointed rock, towards the end of the lake? Syrelly it is an eagle!

Hal. You are right, it is an eagle, and of a rare and peculiar species—the grey or silver eagle, a noble bird! From the size of the animal, it must be the female; and her aery is in that high rock. I dare say the male is not far off.

Physicus. I think I see another bird of a smaller size, perched on the rock below, which is similar in form.

Hal. You do: it is the consort of that beautiful and powerful bird; and I have no doubt their young ones are not far off.

Poict. Look at the bird! She dashes into the water falling like a rock, and raising a column of spray; she has fallen from a great height. And now she rises again into the air; what an extraordinary sight!

Hal. She is pursuing her prey, and is one of our fraternity,—a catcher of fish. She has missed her quarry this time, and has moved further down towards the river, and falls again from a great height. There! You see her rise with a fish in her talons.

Poict. She gives an interest which I hardly expected to have found to this scene. Pray are there many of these animals in this country?

Hal. Of this species, I have seen but these two, and I believe the young ones migrate as soon as they can provide for themselves; for this solitary bird requires a large space to move and feed in, and does not allow its offspring to partake its reign, or to live near it. Of other species of the eagle, there are some in different parts of the mountains, particularly of the Osprey; and of the great fishing or brown eagle; and I once saw a very fine and interesting sight in one of the Crags of Ben Weevis, near Strathgarve, as I was going, on the 20th of August, in pursuit of black game. Two parent eagles were teaching their offspring—two young birds—the manœuvres of flight. They began by rising from the top of a mountain in the eye of the sun (it was about midday, and bright for this climate). They at first made small circles, and the young birds imitated them; they paused on their wings, waiting till they had made their first flight, and then took a second and larger gyration,—always rising towards the sun, and enlarging their circle of flight so as to make a gradually extending spiral. The young ones still slowly followed, apparently flying better as they mounted; and they continued this sublime kind of exercise, always rising till they became mere points in the air, and the young ones were lost, and afterwards their parents, to our aching sight. But we have touched the shore, and the lake has terminated: you are now on the river Ewe.

Poict. Are we to fish here? It is a broad clear stream, but I see no fish, and cannot think it a good angling river.

Hal. We are nearly a mile above our fishing station, and we must first see our quarters and provide for our lodging before we begin our fishing: we must walk a little way before we find the inn.

Poict. Why, this inn is a second edition of Auchnasheen.

Hal. The interior is better than the exterior, thanks to the Laird of Brahan: we shall find one tolerable room and bed; and we must put up our cots and provide our food. What is our store, Mr Purveyor?

Phys. I know we have good bread, tea, and sugar.

Then there is the quarter of roebuck we got at Gordon Castle; and Ornither has furnished us with a brace of wild ducks, three leash of snipes, and a brace of golden plovers, by his mountain expedition of yesterday; and for fish we depend on you. Yet our host says there are fresh ferriags to be had, and small cod-fish, and salmon and trout in any quantity, and the claret and the Ferintosh are safe.

Hal. Why, we shall fare sumptuously. As it is not time yet for shooting grouse, we must divide our spoil for the few days we shall stay here. Yet there are young snipes and plovers on the mountains above, and I have no doubt we might obtain the Laird's permission to kill a roebuck in the woods or a hart in the mountains; but this is always an uncertain event, and I advise you, Ornither, to become a fisherman.

Orn. I shall wait till I see the results of your skill. At all events, in this country I can never want amusement, and I dare say there are plenty of seals at the mouth of the river, and killing them is more useful to other fishermen than catching fish.

Hal. Let there be a kettle of water with salt ready boiling in an hour, mine host, for the fish we catch or buy; and see that the potatoes are well dressed: the servants will look to the rest of our fare. Now for our rods.

(From Salmonia.)

The Future State.

Ambrosio. Revelation has not disclosed to us the nature of this state, but only fixed its certainty. We are sure from geological facts, as well as from sacred history, that man is a recent animal on the globe, and that this globe has undergone one considerable revolution, since the creation, by water; and we are taught that it is to undergo another, by fire, preparatory to a new and glorified state of existence of man; but this is all we are permitted to know, and as this state is to be entirely different from the present one of misery and probation, any knowledge respecting it would be useless, and indeed almost impossible.

Philalethes. My genius has placed the more exalted spiritual natures in cometary worlds, and this last fiery revolution may be produced by the appulse of a comet.

Amb. Human fancy may imagine a thousand ways in which it may be produced; but upon such notions it is absurd to dwell. I will not allow your genius the slightest approach to inspiration, and I can admit no verisimilitude in a reverie which is fixed on a foundation you now allow to be so weak. But see, the twilight is beginning to appear in the orient sky, and there are some dark clouds on the horizon opposite to the crater of Vesuvius, the lower edges of which transmit a bright light, shewing the sun is already risen in the country beneath them. I would say that they may serve as an image of the hopes of immortality derived from revelation; for we are sure from the light reflected in those clouds that the lands below us are in the brightest sunshine, but we are entirely ignorant of the surface and the scenery; so, by revelation, the light of an imperishable and glorious world is disclosed to us; but it is in eternity, and its objects cannot be seen by mortal eye or imaged by mortal imagination.

Phil. I am not so well read in the Scriptures as I hope I shall be at no very distant time; but I believe the pleasures of heaven are mentioned more distinctly than you allow in the sacred writings. I think I remember that the saints are said to be crowned with palms and amaranths, and that they are described as perpetually hymning and praising God.

Amb. This is evidently only metaphorical; music is the sensual pleasure which approaches nearest to an intellectual one, and probably may represent the delight resulting from the perception of the harmony of things and of truth seen in God. The palm as an evergreen tree, and the amaranth a perdurable flower, are emblems of immortality. If I am allowed to give a metaphorical allusion to the future state of the blessed, I should image it by the orange-grove in that sheltered glen, on which the sun is now beginning to shine, and of which the trees are at the same time loaded with sweet golden fruit and balmy silver flowers. Such objects may well portray a state in which hope and fruition become one eternal feeling.

(From the Consolations.)

There was an edition of Davy's collected works (9 vols.) in 1839-40; and his brother, Dr John Davy, prepared his Memoirs (2 vols.). See also his Fragmentary Remains (1858), and the Lives by Dr Paris (1831) and Dr T. E. Thorpe (1896).

Dr Thomas M'Crie (1772-1835), Scottish historian, biographer, and divine, was born at Duns in Berwickshire, studied at Edinburgh, and was ordained in 1795 pastor of a Secession congregation there belonging to the section known as 'Anti-burgher,' from their refusal to sanction the burgh's oath of allegiance to an uncovenanted king. He also acted as professor of divinity. His works exhibit vast and minute research, and conscientious though they are, are almost inevitably biassed in favour of the high Presbyterian polity and its defenders and heroes. His best-known books are a scholarly Life of Knox (1812), which for the first time gave a substantially historical and not obviously partisan view of a great actor on the national stage; an equally original Life of Andrew Melville (1819); and histories of the 'progress and suppression' of the Reformation in Italy and in Spain (1827-29). In 1817 he published in three successive numbers of the Christian Instructor a trenchant review of The Tales of My Landlord, whose authorship was not yet revealed, as regards their treatment of the Covenanters and their persecutors. M'Crie's aim was to prove that the author showed gross partiality to the persecutors of the Presbyterians by ignoring or glossing over the severities and cruelties they perpetrated, and by making the oppressors, especially Claverhouse, seem admirable, contrary to historical truth; while he unfairly exaggerated the peculiarities of certain extreme Covenanters, and, in defiance of fact, represented the Covenanters generally as mere ignorant, foolish, and violent fanatics. On these matters M'Crie was a much more accurate historian than Scott, and easily convicted him of many misapprehensions and misstatements in general and detail. By his own side he was held as having had a magnificent triumph over 'the Great Unknown.' Scott had at first poooh-pooohed M'Crie's strictures, and resolved not even to read them; but, as Lockhart said, he 'found the impression they were producing so strong that he soon changed his purpose and devoted a very large part of his article for the Quarterly Review to an elaborate defence of his own picture of the Covenanters'—that is, Scott as Scott defended in the Quarterly, in a review of his own unacknowledged works, his own historical representations there set forth. The following extracts are from the earlier part of M'Crie's famous review of The Tales:

The same regard to the truth of history must be observed when fictitious personages are introduced, provided the reader is taught or induced to form a judgment from them of the parties to which they are represented as belonging. If it is permitted to make embellishments on the scene, with the view of giving greater interest to the piece, the utmost care ought to be taken that they do not violate the integrity of character; and they must be impartially distributed, and equally extended to all parties, and to the virtues and vices of each. This is a delicate task, but the undertaker imposes it upon himself, with all its responsibilities. Besides fidelity, impartiality, and judgment, it requires an extensive, and minute, and accurate acquaintance with the history of the period selected, including the history of opinions and habits, as well as of events. And we do not hesitate to say that this is a species of intelligence which is not likely to be possessed by the person who holds in sovereign contempt the opinions which were then deemed of the utmost moment, and turns with disgust from the very exterior manners of the men whose inmost habits he affects to disclose. Nor will the multifarious reading of the dabbler in everything, from the highest affairs of church and state down to the economy of the kitchen and the management of the stable, keep him from blundering here at every step. . . .

The guides of public opinion cannot be too jealous in guarding against the encroachments of the writers of fiction upon the province of true history, nor too faithful in pointing out every transgression, however small it may appear, of the sacred fences by which it is protected. Such writers have it in their power to do much mischief, from the engaging form in which they convey their sentiments to a numerous and, in general, unsuspecting class of readers. When the scene is laid in a remote and fabulous period, or when the merits and conduct of the men who are made to figure in it do not affect the great cause of truth and of public good, the writer may be allowed to exercise his ingenuity, and to amuse his readers, without our narrowly inquiring whether his representations are historically correct or not. But when he speaks of those men who were engaged in the great struggle for national and individual rights, civil and religious, which took place in this country previous to the Revolution, and of all the cruelties of the oppressors, and all the sufferings of the oppressed, he is not to be tolerated in giving a false and distorted view of men and measures, whether this proceed from ignorance or from prejudice. Nor should his misrepresentations be allowed to pass without severe reprehension when their native tendency is to shade the atrocities of persecution, to diminish the horror with which the conduct of a tyrannical and unprincipled government has been so long and so justly regarded, and to traduce and vilify the characters of those men who, while they were made to feel all the weight of its severity, continued to resist, until they succeeded in emancipating themselves, and securing their posterity from the galling yoke. On this supposition, it is not sufficient to atone for such faults that the work in which they are found displays great talents; that it contains scenes which are described with exquisite propriety and truth; that the leading facts in the history of those times are brought forward; that the author has condemned the severities of the government; that he is often in a mirthful and facetious mood; and that some allowances must be made for a desire to amuse his readers, and to impart greater interest to a story which, after all, is for the most part fictitious. . . .

One charge which he frequently brings against the strict Presbyterians is that of a morose and gloomy bigotry, displayed by their censuring of all innocent recreations. This he endeavours to impress on the imagination of his reader in the very first scene, by representing them as refusing, from such scruples, to attend the weaponschaws appointed by government. 'The rigour of the strict Calvinists,' says he, 'increased in proportion to the wishes of the government that it should be relaxed. A supercilious condemnation of all manly pastimes and harmless recreations distinguished those who professed a more than ordinary share of sanctity.' . . . The fact is, that from the Reformation down to the period in which the scene of this tale is laid, such exercises and pastimes were quite common throughout Scotland; children were carefully trained to them when at school; professors in universities attended and joined in them, as well as their students; and the Presbyterian ministers, having practised them at school and at college, instead of condemning them as unlawful, did not scruple to countenance them with their presence. There were some of these precise preachers for whom, we suspect, our author (with all his intimate knowledge of such sports) might not have been quite a match in shooting at the popinjay; and in playing with them at the rapier or small-sword, or in wrestling a fall, we are afraid he might have come off as badly as Sergeant Bothwell did from the brawny arms of John Balfour of Burley. . . .

The second instance which goes to prove that the author's statements respecting the religious sentiments and customs of that period are not to be depended upon relates to the use of the Book of Common Prayer. 'The young at arms,' says he, 'were unable to avoid listening to the prayers read in the churches on these occasions, and thus, in the opinion of their repining parents, meddling with the accursed thing which is an abomination in the sight of the Lord.' Now, though the author had not stood in awe of that 'dreadful name,' which all Christians are taught to venerate, nor been afraid of the threatening, 'The Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain,' we would have thought that he would have at least been careful to save himself from ridicule by ascertaining the truth of the fact which he assumes as the foundation of his irreverent jest. How, then, does the fact stand? Prayers were not read in the parish churches of Scotland at that time, any more than they were in the meeting-houses of the indulged, or in the conventicles of the stricter Presbyterians. The author has taken it for granted that the Prayer-Book was introduced into Scotland along with Episcopal government at the Restoration. We are astonished that any one who professed to be acquainted with the history of that period, and especially one who undertakes to describe its religious manners, should take up this erroneous notion. The English Book of Common Prayer was never introduced into Scotland, and, previous to 1637, was used only in the Chapel Royal, and perhaps occasionally in one or two other places, to please the king. The history of the short-lived Scottish Prayer-Book is well known. At the Restoration neither the one nor the other was imposed, but the public worship was left to be conducted as it had been practised in the Presbyterian Church. Charles II. was not so fond of prayers, whether read or extempore, as to interest himself in that matter; his maxim was, that Presbyterianism was not fit for a gentleman; his dissipated and irreligious courtiers were of the same opinion; and therefore Episcopacy was established. As for the aspiring churchmen who farthered and pressed the change, they were satisfied with seating themselves in their rich bishoprics. Accordingly, the author will not find the Presbyterians 'repining' at this imposition; and had he examined their writings, as he ought to have done, he would have found them repeatedly admitting that they had no such grievance. . . . For the sake of giving effect to a particular scene, the author does not hesitate to violate historic truth and probability, and even to contradict his own statements or admissions. Instances of this occur in some of his best descriptions, and they show that though he has the imagination and feeling of a poet, he is deficient in the judgment and discriminating taste of a historian.

M'Crie's works fill four volumes (1855-57); and there is a Life by his son (1840).

Thomas Campbell

was born in Glasgow on the 27th July 1777. The youngest of eleven, he came of a good Highland family, the Campbells of Kirnan in Argyllshire, who traced their origin to the first lord of Lochawe. The property, however, had passed from the old race, and the poet's father carried on business in Glasgow as a trader with Virginia. The American Revolution brought disaster, and in his latter days Alexander Campbell subsisted on a small income derived from a merchant's society, aided by his industrious wife, who took in young collegians as boarders. Thomas passed in 1791 from the grammar-school to the University of Glasgow, and was particularly distinguished for his translations from the Greek; a translation of part of the Clouds of Aristophanes being specially commended. He had already gained a prize for an English poem, an Essay on the Origin of Evil, modelled on Pope. Other poetical pieces, written between his fourteenth and sixteenth year, show his delicate taste and care of diction. He became tutor to a family in Mull, and about this time met with his 'Caroline of the West,' the daughter of a minister of Inveraray. In 1794 he begged five shillings from his mother, and walked to Edinburgh to attend the trials of Muir and Gerald for sedition—for he was already a stout Reformer and admirer of the French Revolution. The winter of 1795 saw him again at college work in Glasgow, and supporting himself by private tuition. Next year he was again tutor in the Highlands, this time in Appin; thereafter he repaired to Edinburgh, hesitated between the Church and the law, but soon abandoning all hopes of either, employed himself in private teaching and work for the booksellers. Poetry was not neglected, and in April 1799 appeared his Pleasures of Hope. The copyright was sold for £60; but for some years the publishers gave the poet £50 on every new edition of two thousand copies, and allowed him, in 1803, to publish a quarto subscription-copy, from which he realised about £1000. It was in a 'dusky lodging' in Alison Square, Edinburgh, that the Pleasures of Hope was composed; much of it was thought out in walks round Arthur's Seat, and the opening lines were suggested by the Firth of Forth as seen from the Calton Hill. The poem went through four editions in a twelvemonth, having captivated all readers by its varied melody, polished diction, generous sentiment, and touching episodes; and in picturing the horrors of war and the partition of Poland the poet warmed to noble rage:

THOMAS CAMPBELL.

From the Portrait by Sir Thomas Lawrence in the National Portrait Gallery.

Oh, bloodiest picture in the book of Time!
Sarmatia fell, unwept, without a crime;
Found not a generous friend, a pitying foe,
Strength in her arms, nor mercy in her woe!
Dropped from her nerveless grasp the shattered spear,
Closed her bright eye, and curbed her high career:
Hope, for a season, bade the world farewell,
And Freedom shrieked—as Kosciusko fell!
The sun went down, nor ceased the carnage there;
Tumultuous Murder shook the midnight air—
On Prague's proud arch the fires of ruin glow,
His blood-dyed waters murmuring far below;
The storm prevails, the rampart yields a way,
Bursts the wild cry of horror and dismay!
Hark! as the smouldering piles with thunder fall,
A thousand shrieks for hopeless mercy call!

Earth shook, red meteors flashed along the sky,
And conscious Nature shuddered at the cry!

Defects were noted in the Pleasures of Hope—lack of connection between the parts, florid lines, and imperfect metaphors; but such a series of genial pictures, of dignified and suggestive thoughts, in such terse and polished verse had rarely been found in a poem written at the age of twenty-one. More than a hundred and fifty new lines were added after the first edition.

Shortly after its publication Campbell visited the Continent. He sailed from Leith for Hamburg in June 1800, and proceeding thence to Ratisbon, witnessed the action which gave that city to the French. The poet stood with the monks of the Scottish college of St James on the ramparts near the monastery while the Austrian cavalry charged the French. He saw no other battle—Hohenlinden was fought some weeks after he had left Bavaria—but made many excursions and was well received by Moreau and other French officers. The progress of the war drove him north to Hamburg, where he settled for a winter; and here he wrote some of his minor poems, published in the Morning Chronicle. Ye Mariners of England was 'made in Germany'; The Battle of the Baltic too was inspired by the arrival of the British fleet in the Sound. In another vein were some poems in which he imitated Klopstock, whose acquaintance he had made here. And the Exile of Erin was suggested by a meeting at Hamburg with an Irish rebel, Anthony MacCann. For this—so jealous was the British Government of that day—Campbell was suspected of being a spy, and on his arrival in Edinburgh was subjected to an examination by the sheriff, which ended happily in mirth and conviviality. Shortly afterwards the poetical wanderer was received by Lord Minto as secretary and literary companion—a function Campbell's temper and democratic spirit rendered uncongenial, and ere long intolerable. To the year 1802 belong Lochiel's Warning and Hohenlinden—the latter surely a remarkable battle-piece, though it was rejected by the editor of the Greenock Advertiser, and was called by its author a 'mere drum and trumpet thing.' In 1803 he settled in London, making literature his profession, and living with Telford the engineer, who continued his friendship throughout a long life. For the Edinburgh Encyclopaedia Campbell wrote biographies, an account of the drama, and other articles; he compiled three volumes of the Annals of Great Britain from the Accession of George III. to the Peace of Amiens, a continuation of Smollett, and, like Goldsmith, often contrived to brighten mere hack-work with literary grace. In 1805, through Fox's influence, the Government granted him a pension of £200—a well-merited tribute to the author of Ye Mariners of England and the Battle of the Baltic. In 1809 was published his second great poem, Gertrude of Wyoming, a Pennsylvanian Tale, a pathetic story sweetly told in Spenserian stanzas, how 'the junction of European with Indian arms converted a terrestrial paradise into a frightful waste.' The best of his later pieces were contributed to the New Monthly Magazine, which he edited from 1820 to 1831. One of these minor poems, 'The East Man,' is one of his most notable creations. In 1814, with Mrs Siddons and John Kemble, Campbell visited Paris, and so keenly enjoyed the sculpture and other works of art in the Louvre, that they seemed to give his mind a new sense of the harmony of art. In 1818 he revisited Germany, and the year after his return published his Specimens of the British Poets, with biographical and critical notices, in seven volumes—a sound, sensible, and for the time eminently serviceable piece of work, though some of the criticism has now an antiquated air, and the standard is not that of the present day. In 1820 he lectured on poetry at the Surrey Institution; in 1824 he published Theodric, an extravagant tale, pompous and wooden, but containing one fine passage. O'Connor's Child Sir Henry Taylor pronounced to be 'the very soul of song—tragic, romantic, passionate'—and held that some of the other minor poems, The Spectre Boat, Glenara, The Ritter Bann, and Lord Ullin's Daughter, have an almost equal charm. Though busy in establishing the London University, he was in 1827 elected Lord Rector of the university of his native city—a compliment heightened by his re-election the two following years, the last time Sir Walter Scott being the rejected. In 1834 he made a voyage to Algiers, of which he published an account; and in 1842 he appeared again as a poet in a slight narrative piece unworthy of his fame, The Pilgrim of Glencoe. Among the literary engagements of his latter years were Lives of Mrs Siddons and of Petrarch. In the summer of 1843 he fixed his residence at Boulogne, but his health was now much impaired; he died the following summer, on the 15th of June 1844, and was buried in Westminster Abbey.

Campbell's early favourites and models were Milton and Gray, Thomson and Goldsmith, but especially Pope, whom he vehemently and, as Byron said, gloriously defended against Bowles and other critics. He shows the influence of these his masters, as well as of Akenside and Rogers and even Erasmus Darwin. Spite of his long life of literary work, the whole of his poetry fills but a small volume, and his best a very small bulk. 'What a pity it is,' said Sir Walter Scott, 'that Campbell does not write more and oftener, and give full sweep to his genius! He has wings that would bear him to the skies; and he does, now and then, spread them grandly, but folds them up again, and resumes his perch, as if he was afraid to launch away. What a grand idea is that,' said the kindly critic, 'about prophetic boding, or, in common parlance, second sight—

Coming events cast their shadows before!

The fact is,' Scott added, 'Campbell is, in a manner, a bugbear to himself. The brightness of his early success is a detriment to all his further efforts. He is afraid of the shadow that his own fame casts before him.' Most of Campbell's longer poems are didactic and uninspired save in brief passages, felicitous and mellifluous but monotonous. Only in his war songs is he magnificent; and though most of his other work is little read, these are of universal acceptance and imperishable. And he is secure, as a critic said, of an 'immortality of quotation.' Though 'Like angel visits few and far between,' oftenest quoted, was borrowed by Campbell as well as by Blair from Norris of Bemerton (page 259), some of his phrases, lines, and couplets are household words: 'A sunburst in the storm of death;' 'Broken hearts die slow;' 'To live in hearts we leave behind is not to die;' 'With his back to the field, and his feet to the foe;' and 'mortal pleasure' defined as 'the torrent's smoothness ere it dash below.'

'Tis distance lends enchantment to the view,
And robes the mountain in its azure hue.

'Tis the sunset of life gives me mystical lore,
And coming events cast their shadows before.

Elegy written in Mull (June 1795).

The tempest blackens on the dusky moor,
And billows lash the long-resounding shore;
In pensive mood, I roam the desert ground,
And vainly sigh for scenes no longer found.
O whither fled the pleasurable hours
That chased each care and fired the Muse's powers?—
The classic haunts of youth, for ever gay,
Where mirth and friendship cheered the close of day;
The well-known valleys where I wont to roam;
The native sports, the nameless joys of home?
Far different scenes allure my wondering eye—
The white wave foaming to the distant sky;
The cloudy heavens, unblest by summer's smile,
The sounding storm that sweeps the rugged isle—
The chill, bleak summit of eternal snow—
The wide, wild glen—the pathless plains below;
The dark-blue rocks in barren grandeur piled;
The cuckoo sighing to the pensive wild.

Far different these from all that charmed before,
The grassy banks of Clutha's winding shore;
Her sloping yales, with waving forests lined,
Her smooth blue lakes, unruffled by the wind.

Hail, happy Clutha! glad shall I survey
Thy gilded turrets from the distant way!
Thy sight shall cheer the weary traveller's toil,
And joy shall hail me to my native soil.

From the 'Pleasures of Hope.'

Thy pencil traces on the lover's thought
Some cottage-home, from towns and toil remote,
Where love and lore may claim alternate hours,
With peace embosomed in Idalian bowers!
Remote from busy life's bewildered way,
O'er all his heart shall Taste and Beauty sway!

Free on the sunny slope, or winding shore,
With hermit-steps to wander and adore!
There shall he love, when genial morn appears,
Like pensive Beauty smiling in her tears,
To watch the brightening roses of the sky,
And muse on nature with a poet's eye!
And when the sun's last splendour lights the deep,
The woods and waves, and murmuring winds asleep,
When fairy harps the Hesperian planet hail,
And the lone cuckoo sighs along the vale,
His path shall be where streamy mountains swell
Their shadowy grandeur o'er the narrow dell;
Where mouldering piles and forests intervene,
Mingling with darker tints the living green;
No circling hills his ravished eye to bound,
Heaven, earth, and ocean blazing all around!

The moon is up—the watch-tower dimly burns—
And down the vale his sober step returns;
But pauses oft, as winding rocks convey
The still sweet fall of music far away;
And oft he lingers from his home awhile,
To watch the dying notes—and start, and smile!

Let winter come! let polar spirits sweep
The darkening world, and tempest-troubled deep!
Though boundless snows the withered heath deform,
And the dim sun scarce wanders through the storm,
Yet shall the smile of social love repay,
With mental light, the melancholy day!
And, when its short and sullen noon is o'er,
The ice-chained waters slumbering on the shore,
How bright the fagots in his little hall
Blaze on the hearth, and warm the pictured wall!

How blest he names, in love's familiar tone,
The kind fair friend, by nature marked his own;
And, in the waveless mirror of his mind,
Views the fleet years of pleasure left behind,
Since when her empire o'er his heart began—
Since first he called her his before the holy man!

Trim the gay taper in his rustic dome,
And light the wintry paradise of home;
And let the half-uncurtained window hail
Some wayworn man benighted in the vale!
Now, while the moaning night-wind rages high,
As sweep the shot-stars down the troubled sky,
While fiery hosts in heaven's wide circle play,
And bathe in lurid light the Milky-way;
Safe from the storm, the meteor, and the shower,
Some pleasing page shall charm the solemn hour;
With pathos shall command, with wit beguile,
A generous tear of anguish, or a smile!

The Death of Gertrude.

Past was the flight, and welcome seemed the tower,
That like a giant standard-bearer frowned
Defiance on the roving Indian power.
Beneath, each bold and promontory mound
With embrasure embossed and armour crowned,
And arrowy frize, and wedged ravelin,
Wove like a diadem its tracery round
The lofty summit of that mountain green;
Here stood secure the group, and eyed a distant scene.

A scene of death! where fires beneath the sun,
And blended arms, and white pavilions glow;
And for the business of destruction done,
Its requiem the war-horn seemed to blow:

There, sad spectatress of her country's woe !
The lovely Gertrude, save from present harm,
Had laid her cheek, and clasped her hands of snow
On Waldegrave's shoulder, half within his arm
Inclosed, that felt her heart, and hushed its wild alarm !

But short that contemplation—sad and short
The pause to bid each much-loved scene adieu !
Beneath the very shadow of the fort,
Where friendly swords were drawn and banners flew ;
Ah ! who could deem that foot of Indian crew
Was near?—yet there, with lust of murderous deeds,
Gleamed like a basilisk, from woods in view,
The ambushed foemen's eye—his volley speeds,
And Albert, Albert falls ! the dear old father bleeds !

And tranced in giddy horror, Gertrude swooned ;
Yet, while she clasps him lifeless to her zone,
Say, burst they, borrowed from her father's wound,
These drops? Oh, God ! the life-blood is her own !
And faltering, on her Waldegrave's bosom thrown—
' Weep not, O love ! ' she cries, ' to see me bleed ;
Thee, Gertrude's sad survivor, thee alone
Heaven's peace commiserate ; for scarce I heed
These wounds ; yet thee to leave is death, is death indeed !

' Clasp me a little longer on the brink
Of fate ! while I can feel thy dear caress ;
And when this heart hath ceased to beat—oh ! think,
And let it mitigate thy woe's excess,
That thou hast been to me all tenderness,
And friend to more than human friendship just.
Oh ! by that retrospect of happiness,
And by the hopes of an immortal trust,
God shall assuage thy pangs—when I am laid in dust !'

Hushed were his Gertrude's lips ! but still their bland
And beautiful expression seemed to melt
With love that could not die ! and still his hand
She presses to the heart no more that felt.
Ah, heart ! where once each fond affection dwelt,
And features yet that spoke a soul more fair.
Mute, gazing, agonising as he knelt—
Of them that stood encircling his despair [were.
He heard some friendly words, but knew not what they

For now, to mourn their judge and child, arrives
A faithful band. With solemn rites between,
'Twas sung, how they were lovely in their lives,
And in their deaths had not divided been.
Touched by the music and the melting scene,
Was scarce one tearless eye amidst the crowd—
Stern warriors, resting on their swords, were seen
To veil their eyes, as passed each much-loved shroud—
While woman's softer soul in woe dissolved aloud.

Then mournfully the parting bugle bid
Its farewell o'er the grave of worth and truth ;
Prone to the dust, afflicted Waldegrave hid
His face on earth ; him watched, in gloomy rath,
His woodland guide : but words had none to sooth :
The grief that knew not consolation's name ;
Casting his Indian mantle o'er the youth,
He watched, beneath its folds, each burst that came Convulsive, ague-like, across his shuddering frame !

' And I could weep,' the Oneyda chief
His descendant wildly thus begun ;
' But that I may not stain with grief
The death-song of my father's son,

Or bow this head in woe !
For, by my wrongs, and by my wrath,
To-morrow Areouski's breath,
That fires yon heaven with storms of death,
Shall light us to the foe :
And we shall share, my Christian boy,
The foeman's blood, the avenger's joy !

' But thee, my flower, whose breath was given
By milder genii o'er the deep,
The spirits of the white man's heaven
Forbid not thee to weep :
Nor will the Christian host,
Nor will thy father's spirit grieve,
To see thee, on the battle's eve,
Lamenting, take a mournful leave
Of her who loved thee most :
She was the rainbow to thy sight !
Thy sun—thy heaven—of lost delight !

' To-morrow let us do or die.
But when the bolt of death is hurled,
Ah ! whither then with thee to fly,
Shall Outalissi roam the world ?
Seek we thy once-loved home ?
The hand is gone that cropt its flowers ;
Unheard their clock repeats its hours ;
Cold is the hearth within their bowers :
And should we thither roam,
Its echoes and its empty tread
Would sound like voices from the dead !

' Or shall we cross yon mountains blue,
Whose streams my kindred nation quaffed,
And by my side, in battle true,
A thousand warriors drew the shaft ?
Ah ! there, in desolation cold,
The desert serpent dwells alone,
Where grass o'ergrows each mouldering bone,
And stones themselves to ruin grown,
Like me, are death-like old.
Then seek we not their camp ; for there
The silence dwells of my despair !

' But hark, the trump ! to-morrow thou
In glory's fires shalt dry thy tears :
Even from the land of shadows now
My father's awful ghost appears,
Amidst the clouds that round us roll ;
He bids my soul for battle thirst—
He bids me dry the last—the first—
The only tears that ever burst
From Outalissi's soul ;
Because I may not stain with grief
The death-song of an Indian chief !'

(From Gertrude of Wyoming.)

Ye Mariners of England.

Ye mariners of England !
That guard our native seas ;
Whose flag has braved a thousand years
The battle and the breeze !
Your glorious standard launch again
To match another foe !
And sweep through the deep,
While the stormy winds do blow ;
While the battle rages loud and long,
And the stormy winds do blow.

The spirits of your fathers
Shall start from every wave !
For the deck it was their field of fame,
And ocean was their grave ;
Where Blake and mighty Nelson fell,
Your manly hearts shall glow,
As ye sweep through the deep,
While the stormy winds do blow ;
While the battle rages loud and long,
And the stormy winds do blow.

Britannia needs no bulwarks,
No towers along the steep ;
Her march is o'er the mountain-waves,
Her home is on the deep,
With thunders from her native oak,
She quells the floods below,
As they roar on the shore,
When the stormy winds do blow ;
When the battle rages loud and long,
And the stormy winds do blow.

The meteor flag of England
Shall yet terrific burn ;
Till danger's troubled night depart,
And the star of peace return.
Then, then, ye ocean-warriors !
Our song and feast shall flow
To the fame of your name,
When the storm has ceased to blow ;
When the fiery fight is heard no more,
And the storm has ceased to blow !

When the poem was first published in the Naval Chronicle for 1801, the line about Blake and Nelson read 'Where Granvill (boast of freedom) fell;' but after Trafalgar the Georgian hero was substituted for the Elizabethan, Tennyson's Sir Richard Grenville; and Blake the Cromwellian was added—though Blake did not precisely 'fall,' but died of scorbutic fever on board his ship as it entered Plymouth Sound.

The Battle of the Baltic.

Of Nelson and the North,
Sing the glorious day's renown,
When to battle fierce came forth
All the might of Denmark's crown,
And her arms along the deep proudly shone ;
By each gun the lighted brand,
In a bold determined hand,
And the Prince of all the land
Led them on.

Like leviathans afloat,
Lay their bulwarks on the brine ;
While the sign of battle flew
On the lofty British line :
It was ten of April morn by the chime :
As they drifted on their path,
There was silence deep as death ;
And the boldest held his breath
For a time.

But the might of England flushed
To anticipate the scene ;
And her van the fleeter rushed
O'er the deadly space between.
'Hearts of oak !' our captains cried ; when each gun
From its adamant lips
Spread a death-shade round the ships,
Like the hurricane eclipse
Of the sun.

101

Again ! again ! again !
And the havoc did not slack,
Till a feeble cheer the Dane
To our cheering sent us back ;
Their shots along the deep slowly boom,
Then ceased—and all is wail,
As they strike the shattered sail ;
Or, in conflagration pale,
Light the gloom.

Out spoke the victor then,
As he hailed them o'er the wave :
'Ye are brothers ! ye are men !
And we conquer but to save ;
So peace instead of death let us bring ;
But yield, proud foe, thy fleet,
With the crews, at England's feet,
And make submission meet
To our king.'

Then Denmark blessed our chief,
That he gave her wounds repose ;
And the sounds of joy and grief
From her people wildly rose,
As death withdrew his shades from the day.
While the sun looked smiling bright
O'er a wide and woful sight,
Where the fires of funeral light
Died away.

Now joy, Old England, raise !
For the tidings of thy might,
By the festal cities' blaze,
Whilst the wine-cup shines in light ;
And yet amidst that joy and uproar,
Let us think of them that sleep,
Full many a fathom deep,
By thy wild and stormy steep,
Elsinore !

Brave hearts ! to Britain's pride
Once so faithful and so true,
On the deck of fame that died,
With the gallant good Riou ;
Soft sigh the winds of heaven o'er their grave !
While the billow mournful rolls
And the mermaid's song condoles,
Singing glory to the souls
Of the brave !

Captain Riou was praised by Lord Nelson as the gallant and the good. The first draft of this poem, sent to Scott in 1805, consisted of thirty stanzas—all published in Beattie's Life of Campbell. The piece was greatly improved by condensation, but the excision of these verses on English sailors was clearly a loss :

Not such a mind possessed
England's tar ;
'Twas the love of noble game
Set his oaken heart on flame,
For to him 'twas all the same—
Sport and war.

All hands and eyes on watch
As they keep—
By their motion light as wings,
By each step that haughty springs,
You might know them for the kings
Of the deep.

Hohenlinden.

On Linden, when the sun was low,
All bloodless lay the untrodden snow,
And dark as winter was the flow
Of Iser, rolling rapidly.

But Linden saw another sight,
When the drum beat at dead of night,
Commanding fires of death to light
The darkness of her scenery.

By torch and trumpet fast arrayed,
Each horseman drew his battle-blade,
And furious every charger neighed,
To join the dreadful revelry.

Then shook the hills with thunder riven,
Then rushed the steed to battle driven,
And louder than the bolts of heaven
Far flashed the red artillery.

But redder yet that light shall glow
On Linden's hills of stained snow,
And bloodier yet the torrent flow
Of Iser, rolling rapidly.

'Tis morn, but scarce yon level sun
Can pierce the war-clouds, rolling dun,
Where furious Frank and fiery Hun
Shout in their sulphurous canopy.

The combat deepens. On, ye brave,
Who rush to glory, or the grave!
Wave, Munich! all thy banners wave,
And charge with all thy chivalry.

Few, few shall part where many meet!
The snow shall be their winding sheet;
And every turf beneath their feet
Shall be a soldier's sepulchre.

From 'The Last Man.'

All worldly shapes shall melt in gloom—
The sun himself must die,
Before this mortal shall assume
Its immortality!
I saw a vision in my sleep,
That gave my spirit strength to sweep
Adown the gulf of time!
I saw the last of human mould
That shall creation's death behold,
As Adam saw her prime!

The sun's eye had a sickly glare,
The earth with age was wan;
The skeletons of nations were
Around that lonely man!
Some had expired in fight—the brands
Still rusted in their bony hands—
In plague and famine some:
Earth's cities had no sound nor tread;
And ships were drifting with the dead
To shores where all was dumb!

Yet, prophet-like, that lone one stood
With dauntless words and high,
That shook the sere leaves from the wood,
As if a storm passed by;
Saying: 'We are twins in death, proud sun;
Thy face is cold, thy race is run,
'Tis Mercy bids thee go.
For thou, ten thousand thousand years,
Hast seen the tide of human tears,
That shall no longer flow. . . .

'This spirit shall return to Him
That gave its heavenly spark;
Yet think not, sun, it shall be dim,
When thou thyself art dark!
No! it shall live again, and shine
In bliss unknown to beams of thine,
By Him recalled to breath,
Who captive led captivity,
Who robbed the grave of victory,
And took the sting from death!'

From 'O'Connor's Child.'

O'Connor's child, I was the bud
Of Erin's royal tree of glory;
But woe to them that wrapt in blood
The tissue of my story!
Still as I clasp my burning brain,
A death-scene rushes on my sight;
It rises o'er and o'er again,
The bloody feud—the fatal night,
When, chafing Connocht Moran's scorn,
They call'd my hero basely born;
And bade him choose a meaner bride
Than from O'Connor's house of pride.
Their tribe, they said, their high degree,
Was sung in Tara's psaltery;
Witness their Eath's victorious brand,
And Cathal of the bloody hand;
Glory (they said) and power and honour
Were in the mansion of O'Connor:
But he, my loved one, bore in field
A humbler crest, a meaner shield.

Ah, brothers! what did it avail,
That fiercely and triumphantly
Ye fought the English of the Pale,
And stemm'd De Bourgo's chivalry?
And what was it to love and me,
That barons by your standard rode;
Or beal-fires for your jubilee
Upon a hundred mountains glow'd?
What though the lords of tower and dome
From Shannon to the North-sea foam,—
Thought ye your iron hands of pride
Could break the knot that love had tied?
No:—let the eagle change his plume,
The leaf its hue, the flower its bloom;
But ties around this heart were spun,
That could not, would not, be undone!

At bleating of the wild watch-fold
Thus sang my love—'Oh, come with me:
Our bark is on the lake, behold
Our steeds are fasten'd to the tree.
Come far from Castle-Connor's clans:—
Come with thy belted forester!
And I, beside the lake of swans,
Shall hunt for thee the fallow-deer;
And build thy hut, and bring thee home
The wild-fowl and the honey-comb;
And berries from the wood provide,
And play my clarshébh by thy side.
Then come, my love!—How could I stay?
Our nimble stag-hounds track'd the way,
And I pursued, by moonless skies,
The light of Connocht Moran's eyes.

And fast and far, before the star
Of day-spring, rush'd we through the glade,
And saw at dawn the lofty bawn
Of Castle-Connor fade.

Sweet was to us the hermitage
Of this unplough'd, untrodden shore ;
Like birds all joyous from the cage,
For man's neglect we loved it more,
And well he knew, my huntsman dear,
To search the game with hawk and spear ;
While I, his evening food to dress,
Would sing to him in happiness.
But, oh, that midnight of despair !
When I was doom'd to rend my hair :
The night, to me, of shrieking sorrow !
The night, to him, that had no morrow !

When all was hush'd, at even tide,
I heard the baying of their beagle :
Be hush'd ! my Connocht Moran cried,
'Tis but the screaming of the eagle.
Alas ! 'twas not the eyrie's sound ;
Their bloody bands had track'd us out ;
Up-listening starts our couchant hound—
And, hark ! again, that nearer shout
Brings faster on the murderers.
Spare—spare him—Brazil—Desmond fierce !
In vain—no voice the adder charms ;
Their weapons cross'd my sheltering arms :
Another's sword has laid him low—
Another's and another's ;
And every hand that dealt the blow—
Ah me ! it was a brother's !
Yes, when his moanings died away,
Their iron hands had dug the clay,
And o'er his burial turf they trod,
And I behold !—oh God ! oh God !—
His life-blood oozing from the sod !

Warm in his death-wounds sepulchred,
Alas ! my warrior's spirit brave
Nor mass nor ulla-lulla heard,
Lamenting, soothe his grave.
Dragg'd to their hated mansion back,
How long in thralldom's grasp I lay
I knew not, for my soul was black,
And knew no change of night or day.
One night of horror round me grew ;
Or if I saw, or felt, or knew,
'Twas but when those grim visages,
The angry brothers of my race,
Glared on each eye-ball's aching throb,
And check'd my bosom's power to sob,
Or when my heart with pulses drear
Beat like a death-watch to my ear.

But Heaven, at last, my soul's eclipse
Did with a vision bright inspire ;
I woke and felt upon my lips
A prophetess's fire.

Thrice in the east a war-drum beat,
I heard the Saxon's trumpet sound,
And ranged, as to the judgment-seat,
My guilty, trembling brothers round.
Clad in the helm and shield they came ;
For now De Bourgo's sword and flame
Had ravaged Ulster's boundaries,
And lighted up the midnight skies.

The standard of O'Connor's sway
Was in the turret where I lay ;
That standard, with so dire a look,
As ghastly shone the moon and pale,
I gave,—that every bosom shook
Beneath its iron mail.

And go ! (I cried) the combat seek,
Ye hearts that unappalled bore
The anguish of a sister's shriek,
Go !—and return no more !
For sooner guilt the ordeal-brand
Shall grasp unhurt, than ye shall hold
The banner with victorious hand,
Beneath a sister's curse unroll'd.
O stranger ! by my country's loss !
And by my love ! and by the cross !
I swear I never could have spoke
The curse that sever'd nature's yoke ;
But that a spirit o'er me stood,
And fired me with the wrathful mood ;
And frenzy to my heart was given
To speak the malison of heaven.

From 'Ode to the Memory of Burns'

O deem not, 'midst this worldly strife,
An idle art the Poet brings :
Let high Philosophy control,
And sages calm, the stream of life,
'Tis he refines its fountain-springs,
The nobler passions of the soul.

It is the muse that consecrates
The native banner of the brave,
Unfurling, at the trumpet's breath,
Rose, thistle, harp ; 'tis she elates
To sweep the field or ride the wave,
A sunburst in the storm of death.

Farewell, high chief of Scottish song !
That could'st alternately impart
Wisdom and rapture in thy page,
And brand each vice with satire strong ;
Whose lines are mottoes of the heart,
Whose truths electrify the sage.

Farewell ! and ne'er may Envy dare
To wring one baleful poison drop
From the crush'd laurels of thy bust :
But while the lark sings sweet in air,
Still may the grateful pilgrim stop,
To bless the spot that holds thy dust.

The authorities for Campbell's biography are his Life and Letters by W. Beattie (1840), and Cyrus Redding's Literary Reminiscences of him (1859). There is also a monograph by Cuthbert Hadden ('Famous Scots,' 1900; unsympathetic). Popular editions of his poems are the Aldine (1875, 1890; based on that of his nephew, the Rev. W. A. Hill, 1860), with Memoir by Allingham the poet; and Logie Robertson's (1907). Lewis Campbell edited the 'Golden Treasury' selection (1904).

Lady Dacre (1768-1854), one of the most accomplished women of her time, was a daughter of Admiral Ogle, and was married first to Mr Wilmot, an officer in the Guards, and in 1819 to the twenty-first Lord Dacre. She wrote poems and four dramas, of which Ina, on an Anglo-Saxon plot, was produced at Drury Lane by Sheridan; and her translations from Petrarch were published with Ugo Foscolo's Essays on Petrarch (1823). A separate volume of her Translations from the Italian was privately printed in 1836. Her one daughter, the wife of Mr Sullivan, a Hertfordshire clergyman, wrote The Recollections of a Chaperon and Tales of the Peerage and Peasantry, both of which were edited by Lady Dacre.

Lady Charlotte Bury (1775-1861) wrote nearly a score of books (most of them anonymously), including several fashionable novels—Flirtation, Separation, A Marriage in High Life, The Divorced, Family Records, Love, some poems, two books of devotion, and, as was then believed and still seems probable, the Diary illustrative of the Times of George IV., a scandalous chronicle, published in 1838. Born Lady Charlotte Campbell—a daughter of the Duke of Argyll by his duchess, 'the beautiful Miss Gunning,' widow of the Duke of Hamilton—she had for her first husband Colonel John Campbell. During her widowhood and before her marriage to the Rev. E. J. Bury, while holding an appointment in the household of the Princess of Wales, she seems to have kept this Diary, in which she recorded the foibles and failings of the unfortunate princess and other members of the court. The work, strongly condemned by the leading critical journals, met with much professed disapprobation, yet ran swiftly through several editions. See A. F. Steuart's edition (1908).

Mary Brunton (1778-1818), novelist, was born in the small, bare, and wind-swept island of Burray in the Orkneys, the daughter of Colonel Balfour of Elwick and a niece of Lord Ligonier. Mary was carefully educated by her mother, and at Edinburgh thoroughly acquired French and Italian; but while she was only sixteen her mother died, and for four years the cares and duties of the household devolved on her. Then she was married to the minister of Bolton in Haddingtonshire; and when in 1803 Mr Brunton was called to one of the churches in Edinburgh, she had opportunity of meeting cultivated society. 'Till I began Self-control,' she says in one of her letters, 'I had never in my life written anything but a letter or a recipe, excepting a few hundreds of vile rhymes, from which I desisted by the time I had gained the wisdom of fifteen years; therefore I was so ignorant of the art on which I was entering, that I formed scarcely any plan for my tale. I merely intended to show the power of the religious principle in bestowing self-command, and to bear testimony against a maxim as immoral as indelicate, that a reformed rake makes the best husband.' Of Self-control, published anonymously in 1811, the first edition was sold in a month, and a second and third were called for. In 1814 Discipline was also well received. She began a third work, Emmeline, but did not live to finish it. Next year her husband published (1819) the unfinished tale with a memoir. In Self-control the authoress showed acute observation, and attained individuality in her portraits; but the plot is very unskillfully managed, and the style at times conventional and stilted. Hargrave is obviously based on Lovelace, and Laura is the Clarissa of the tale.

Christian Isobel Johnstone (1781-1857) published anonymously Clan Albin (1815), a tale written before the appearance of Waverley, and like Waverley aiming to cast a romantic glow over Highland character and scenery. A second novel, Elizabeth de Bruce, was published in 1827 by Mrs Johnstone, who wrote some interesting tales for children—The Diversions of Hollycot, The Knights of the Round Table, &c.—and was an extensive contributor to the periodical literature of the day. She was for some years editor of Tait's Magazine. But the most notable and successful of her publications was the unromantic Cook and Housewife's Manual, by Mrs Margaret Dods, familiarly known as 'Meg Dods's Cookery' (the pseudonym being taken from St Ronan's Well), which went through ten editions between 1826 and 1854. Born in Fife, she was the wife of a Dunfermline schoolmaster, who became an editor and publisher, latterly in Edinburgh.

Jane Porter (1776-1850) and Anna Maria Porter (1780-1832) were daughters of an Irish army-surgeon, who died in 1779, leaving a widow and five children with but a small patrimony for their support. Mrs Porter removed from Durham to Edinburgh while Anna Maria was still in her nurse-maid's arms, and there the two girls and their brother, Sir Robert Ker Porter, received the rudiments of their education. Sir Walter Scott, when a student at college, was intimate with the family, and as to Jane we are told 'he was very fond of either teasing the little female student when very gravely engaged with her book, or more often fondling her on his knees, and telling her stories of witches and warlocks, till both forgot their former playful merriment in the marvellous interest of the tale.' Chiefly with a view to the education of her children, Mrs Porter left Edinburgh in 1790 for London, settling finally at Esher in Surrey. Anna Maria became an authoress at the age of twelve, with Artless Tales (2 vols. 1793-95). In 1797 she published Walsh Colville, and in 1798 a three-volume novel, Octavia. A numerous series of works of fiction followed—The Lake of Killarney (1804), A Sailor's Friendship and a Soldier's Love (1805), The Hungarian Brothers (1807), Don Sebastian, or the House of Braganza (1809), Ballad Romances and other Poems (1811), The Recluse of Norway (1814), Honor O'Hara (1826), &c. Altogether, Miss Porter's works amount to about fifty volumes. She died at Bristol while on a visit to her brother, Dr Porter of that city, in 1832. The most popular and perhaps the best of Anna Maria Porter's novels is her Don Sebastian. In all of them she portrays with warmth and sympathy the domestic affections, and the charms of benevolence and virtue; but in Don Sebastian we have besides an interesting though melancholy plot and characters vividly sketched. Anna's sister, Jane, was later in developing her literary talent, but had a much greater gift; and her two romances, Thaddeus of Warsaw (1803) and The Scottish Chiefs (1810), were both exceptionally popular in their day. Thaddeus, high-flown and but imperfectly true to Polish character or historical setting, was translated into French and German, delighted Kosciuszko, and brought its authoress an honorary office from the King of Würtemberg. The Chiefs is wonderfully untrue to real history and national manners; it is stilted, conventional, sentimental, and its Wallace is alternately a drawing-room hero and a stagey poseur, not the rough captain of a rougher militia. Yet the story is animated and picturesque, was enormously popular in Scotland, was translated into French, German, and Russian, and had the honour of being proscribed by Napoleon. It used to be credited (contrary to probability) with an even higher honour—that of having suggested to Scott the idea of the Waverley Novels. But Thaddeus and the Chiefs are almost the only historical novels before Scott's time that can be said still to live. The Chiefs was more than a dozen times reprinted before the end of the nineteenth century, and Thaddeus was at least twice reprinted in its last decade. Other novels were The Pastor's Fireside, Duke Christian of Luneburg (the idea of which was suggested by George IV., the materials supplied by Dr Clarke), and The Forty Footsteps. Two or three plays by her were blank failures. Her last considerable enterprise was on a work given out as a record of real experience merely 'edited' by her. Sir Edward Seaward's Shipwreck, as written in his own Diary (1831), although the authorship was long ascribed to her, was probably the work of her eldest brother, Dr William Ogilvie Porter (1774-1850). Another brother, Sir Robert Ker Porter (1777-1842), battle-painter, travelled much, was consul in Venezuela, and wrote books of travel in Russia, Sweden, Spain, Portugal, Georgia, Persia, and Armenia.

JANE PORTER.

From the Drawing by George Henry Harlow in the National Portrait Gallery.

Joanna Baillie borrows freely from Jane Porter's Wallace for her equally non-authentic 'William Wallace' in the Metrical Legends, and cites from the Scottish Chiefs this passage as one of 'terrific sublimity:'

The Burning of the Barns of Ayr.

When all was ready, Wallace, with the mighty spirit of retribution nerving every limb, mounted to the roof, and tearing off part of the tiling, with a flaming brand in his hand, shewed himself glittering in arms to the affrighted revellers beneath, and as he threw it blazing amongst them, he cried aloud, 'The blood of the murdered calls for vengeance, and it comes.' At that instant

ANNA MARIA PORTER.

From the Drawing by George Henry Harlow in the National Portrait Gallery.

the matches were put to the faggots which surrounded the building, and the whole party, springing from their seats, hastened towards the doors: all were fastened, and, retreating again in the midst of the room, they fearfully looked up to the tremendous figure above, which, like a supernatural being, seemed to avenge their crimes and rain down fire on their guilty heads. . . . The rising smoke from within and without the building now obscured his terrific form. The shouts of the Scots as the fire covered its walls, and the streaming flames licking the windows and pouring into every opening of the building, raised such a terror in the breasts of the wretches within that with the most horrible cries they again and again flew to the doors to escape. Not an avenue appeared; almost suffocated with smoke, and scorched with the blazing rafters that fell from the roof, they at last made a desperate attempt to break a passage through the great portal.

Jane Austen

was born 16th December 1775, at Steventon Rectory, near Basingstoke in Hampshire, the seventh of eight children, there being one other daughter, Cassandra, and six sons, of whom two rose to be admirals. Her father, the Rev. George Austen, was a competent scholar, who carefully cherished his daughter's talent; her education was better than that which most girls got towards the close of the eighteenth century; she learnt French and Italian, and had a good acquaintance with English literature, her favourite authors being Richardson, Johnson, Cowper, Crabbe, Fanny Burney, and Scott. In 1801 the family settled at Bath, and after the father's death there in 1805, the widow and two daughters removed to Southampton, and in 1809 to the village of Chawton near Alton. Jane had begun to write at a very early age, and by sixteen had composed a number of tales, mostly ludicrous. Love and Freindship (the spelling is hers), published with other juvenilia in 1792, is a 'rattling burlesque' (in letter form, like Lady Susan and other early writings) of faithless, fainting heroines and persecuted lovers. When twenty-two she began Pride and Prejudice; but, publishers being loth and she herself fastidious and assiduous in revision, all her work was late in appearing. Four of her novels were published anonymously in her lifetime—Sense and Sensibility (1811), Pride and Prejudice (1813), Mansfield Park (1814), and Emma (1816). In May 1817 ill-health rendered it necessary that she should remove to some place where good medical advice could be secured. She went to Winchester, and died there of a decline on the 18th July 1817, her forty-two years of placid existence having been almost undisturbed by any but the gentler emotions. A few months after her death appeared Northanger Abbey and Persuasion, the first written as early as 1798, the latter finished only in 1816. By pretty general consent Pride and Prejudice is ranked as her masterpiece. But as Austin Dobson has recorded: 'There are who swear by Persuasion; there are who prefer Emma and Mansfield Park; . . . and there is even a section which advocates the pre-eminence of Northanger Abbey'—a proof, surely, of the abounding charm of all of them.

Though none of her works was published till the next century, three of her most characteristic ones—Pride and Prejudice, Northanger Abbey, and the first draft of Sense and Sensibility—were finished in the eighteenth, and her manner was fully formed. Her work shows the most characteristic type of the pure domestic novel. She drew her material from what she actually saw around her; her experience of life was somewhat limited, and even mildly monotonous. This and her own temperament, more than any deliberate critical purpose, determined her to a kind of novel-writing completely opposed to what was then in vogue—the Udolpho, St Leon, and Monk type. Northanger Abbey is, partly at least, a deliberate parody of this style; and it was unquestionably her conscious conviction that a true picture of ordinary life could be made as interesting as the tale of lofty romance and overdrawn sentiment, of daggers and bowls, impossible disguises, incredible conjunctions, monstrous crimes, preternatural agonies and remorse. The charm of her work lies in its truth and simplicity. She gives us plain representations of English society in the middle and higher classes—sets us down in country-house and cottage, and introduces us to an entertaining company whose characters are displayed amid the ordinary incidents of daily life, and in marvellously lifelike dialogues and conversations. No doubt the same characters appear under various names, her brightly drawn groups consist of the same or similar persons. There is no attempt to attain to high things, to startle with scenes of surprising daring or distress, to make us forget that we are among commonplace mortals and humdrum existence. The materials she works on would seem to promise little for the novel-reader; in any but the most skilful hands they would not attract; yet Miss Austen's minute circumstantiality, her multiplicity of almost commonplace details, merely exhibit, as Mr W. H. Pollock has said, 'the triumph of the genius which endues commonplace with rarity, which makes of characters that might be met any day in the present time with a difference only of manners, forms of thought and emotion that may be encountered at any moment, a real possession for ever.' How well Miss Austen estimated her own literary powers may be seen from an amusing correspondence which she had with a Mr Clarke, the librarian of the Prince Regent, as a consequence of her dedication of Emma to the 'first gentleman in Europe.' Mr Clarke suggested that she should write a novel depicting 'the habits of life and character and enthusiasm of a clergyman who should pass his time between the metropolis and the country,' and tried to fire her ambition with the suggestion that on such a subject she might beat both Goldsmith and La Fontaine. But Miss Austen was not to be tempted. The comic part, she said, she might do, 'but not the good, the enthusiastic, the literary.' She had not the knowledge to imagine conversations on 'science and philosophy,' or to supply the 'quotations and allusions' that should adorn the talk of a learned divine. Nor was she less decided in her rejection of Mr Clarke's next proposal (in view of the projected marriage of the Princess Charlotte and Prince Leopold) of 'an historical romance illustrative of the august house of Coburg.' 'I could not,' she answered, 'sit seriously down to write a serious romance under any other motive than to save my life; and if it were indispensable for me to, keep it up and never relax into laughing at myself or at other people, I am sure I should be hung before I had finished the first chapter. No, I must keep to my own style, and go on in my own way; and though I may never succeed again in that, I am convinced that I should totally fail in any other.'

The details in Jane Austen's works are not, as in Balzac, multiplied overmuch; they all aid in developing and discriminating her characters, who, if they do not throb and thrill with passion, have amazing vitality and lifelikeness; they are presented with extraordinary dramatic truth and effect; 'every one says the right thing in the right place and in the right way.' 'Of all his successors she is the one who most nearly resembles Richardson in the power of impressing reality upon her characters.' Wherever Miss Austen introduces us, we soon find ourselves amongst friends and neighbours, more familiar to us, in spite of their old-fashioned dresses and old-world phrases, than many of the people amongst whom we actually live. She is amazingly deft in delicate ridicule of womanly foibles and vanity, and is great on mistakes in the education of girls—on family differences, obstinacy, and pride—on the distinctions between the different classes of society, and the nicer shades of feeling and conduct as they ripen into love or friendship or subside into indifference or dislike. We do not find, we do not miss that morbid colouring of the stronger and darker passions which so many novelists of her time affected. The clear daylight of nature as reflected in domestic life is her genial and inexhaustible element. Yet as every work of art, every true story, has its ethical value, a more pointed moral lesson can hardly be conveyed than in the distress of the Bertram family in Mansfield Park, brought about by the vanity and callousness of the two daughters, who had been taught nothing but 'accomplishments.' Such criticisms of life dawn on us in the development of the story, not by thesis or disquisition, and they tell with double force because they are inculcated not in didactic style, but by art skilfully imitating nature. And nature teaches the most unwilling pupils.

The novels were well received from the beginning, but found their warmest admirers after they had been many years before the world. Whately, an enthusiastic critic, compared Jane Austen's method to that of the Dutch painters; she herself to miniature work. Her scope is limited, but within it she is wonderfully perfect. G. H. Lewes declared that no author had a truer sense of proportioning means to ends; and in this Charlotte Brontë, a not too sympathetic critic, agreed. She was marvellously acute in observing, skilful in portraying what she interested herself in, gifted with true humour and a vein of gentle but effective satire; poetry was not her forte, and she deliberately turned her back on romance. Sir Walter Scott, after reading Pride and Prejudice for the third time, thus summed up Jane Austen in his diary with the authority of a master and with an unforgettable contrast: 'That young lady has a talent for describing the involvements of feelings and characters of ordinary life, which is to me the most wonderful I ever met with. The big bow-wow strain I can do myself like any now going; but the exquisite touch which renders ordinary commonplace things and characters interesting from the truth of the description and the sentiment, is denied to me. What a pity such a gifted creature died so early!' Macaulay wrote: 'I have now read once again all Miss Austen's novels; charming they are. There are in the world no compositions which approach nearer to perfection;' and even went so far as to declare that she approached nearest to Shakespeare in character-drawing—an appreciation defended, among others, by Mr Pollock: 'Her place is unique amongst women novelists.' Coleridge, Southey, and Sydney Smith were amongst her admirers, a representative trio. Edward FitzGerald in one of his letters (1860) styles her 'perfect.' In another, eleven years later, he complains that 'she is capital as far as she goes, but she never goes out of the Parlour; if but Magnus Troil, or Jack Bunce, or even one of Fielding's Brutes, would but dash in upon the Gentility, and swear a round Oath or two!' Justin M'Carthy thought Jane Austen 'a disappearing author,' but this view is flatly contradicted by our bibliography and by the interest shown even in her juvenilia (1922; The Watsons, 1923; Lady Susan, 1925) and her unfinished work, Sanditon (began 1817; first published 1925).

Men and Women.

'Your feelings may be the strongest,' replied Anne, 'but ours are the most tender. Man is more robust than woman, but he is not longer lived, which exactly explains my views of the nature of their attachments. Nay, it would be hard upon you if it were otherwise. You have difficulties, and privations, and dangers enough to struggle with. You are always labouring and toiling, exposed to every risk and hardship. Your home, country, friends all quitted. Neither time, nor health, nor life to be called your own. It would be hard indeed' (with a faltering voice) 'if woman's feelings were to be added to all this.'

'We shall never agree upon this point,' Captain Harville said. 'No man and woman would, probably. But let me observe that all histories are against you, all stories, prose and verse. If I had such a memory as Benwick, I could bring you fifty quotations in a moment on my side of the argument, and I do not think I ever opened a book in my life which had not something to say upon woman's inconstancy. Songs and proverbs all talk of woman's fickleness. But perhaps you will say these were all written by men.'

'Perhaps I shall. Yes, yes, if you please, no reference to examples in books. Men have every advantage of us in telling their own story. Education has been theirs in a much higher degree; the pen has been in their hands. I will not allow books to prove anything.'

'But how shall we prove anything?'

'We never shall. We never can expect to prove anything upon such a point. It is a difference of opinion which does not admit of proof. We each begin probably with a little bias towards our own sex, and upon that bias build every circumstance in favour of it which has occurred within our own circle: many of which circumstances (perhaps those very cases which strike us the most) may be precisely such as cannot be brought forward without betraying a confidence, or, in some respect, saying what should not be said.'

JANE AUSTEN.

From a Drawing made at the Age of Fifteen.

'Ah!' cried Captain Harville, in a tone of strong feeling, 'if I could but make you comprehend what a man suffers when he takes a last look at his wife and children, and watches the boat that he has sent them off in, as long as it is in sight, and then turns away and says, "God knows whether we ever meet again!" And then if I could convey to you the glow of his soul when he does see them again; when, coming back after a twelve-month's absence, perhaps, and obliged to put in to another port, he calculates how soon it will be possible to get them there, pretending to deceive himself, and saying, "They cannot be here till such a day," but all the while hoping for them twelve hours sooner, and seeing them arrive at last, as if Heaven had given them wings, by many hours sooner still! If I could explain to you all this, and all that a man can bear and do, and glories to do, for the sake of these treasures of his existence! I speak, you know, only of such men as have hearts!'—pressing his own with emotion.

'Oh,' cried Anne eagerly, 'I hope I do justice to all that is felt by you, and by those who resemble you. God forbid that I should undervalue the warm and faithful feelings of any of my fellow-creatures. I should deserve utter contempt if I dared to suppose that true attachment and constancy were known only by woman. No, I believe you capable of everything great and good in your married lives. I believe you equal to every important exertion, and to every domestic forbearance, so long as—if I may be allowed the expression—so long as you have an object. I mean, while the woman you love lives, and lives for you. All the privilege I claim for my own sex (it is not a very enviable one; you need not covet it) is that of loving longest, when existence or when hope is gone.'

She could not immediately have uttered another sentence. Her heart was too full, her breath too much oppressed.

(From Pertuzion.)

A Family Scene.

It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune must be in want of a wife.

However little known the feelings or views of such a man may be on his first entering a neighbourhood, this truth is so well fixed in the minds of the surrounding families, that he is considered as the rightful property of some one or other of their daughters.

'My dear Mr Bennet,' said his lady to him one day, 'have you heard that Netherfield Park is let at last?'

Mr Bennet replied that he had not.

'But it is,' returned she; 'for Mrs Long has just been here, and she told me all about it.'

Mr Bennet made no answer.

'Do not you want to know who has taken it?' cried his wife impatiently.

'You want to tell me, and I have no objection to hearing it.'

This was invitation enough.

'Why, my dear, you must know, Mrs Long says that Netherfield is taken by a young man of large fortune from the north of England; that he came down on Monday in a chaise and four to see the place, and was so much delighted with it that he agreed with Mr Morris immediately; that he is to take possession before Michaelmas, and some of his servants are to be in the house by the end of next week.

'What is his name?'

'Bingley.'

'Is he married or single?'

'Oh! single, my dear, to be sure! A single man of large fortune; four or five thousand a year. What a fine thing for our girls!'

'How so? How can it affect them?'

'My dear Mr Bennet,' replied his wife, 'how can you be so tiresome? You must know that I am thinking of his marrying one of them.'

'Is that his design in settling here?'

'Design! Nonsense; how can you talk so! But it is very likely he may fall in love with one of them, and therefore you must visit him as soon as he comes.'

'I see no occasion for that. You and the girls may go, or you may send them by themselves, which perhaps will be still better, for as you are as handsome as any of them, Mr Bingley might like you the best of the party.'

'My dear, you flatter me. I certainly have had my share of beauty, but I do not pretend to be anything extraordinary now. When a woman has five grown-up daughters, she ought to give over thinking of her own beauty.'

'In such cases, a woman has not often much beauty to think of.'

'But, my dear, you must indeed go and see Mr Bingley when he comes into the neighbourhood.'

'It is more than I engage for, I assure you.'

'But consider your daughters. Only think what an establishment it would be for one of them. Sir William and Lady Lucas are determined to go, merely on that account, for, in general, you know, they visit no newcomers. Indeed you must go, for it will be impossible for us to visit him if you do not.'

'You are over-scrupulous, surely. I dare say Mr Bingley will be very glad to see you; and I will send a few lines by you to assure him of my hearty consent to his marrying whichever he chooses of the girls; though I must throw in a good word for my little Lizzy.'

'I desire you will do no such thing. Lizzy is not a bit better than the others; and I am sure she is not half so handsome as Jane, nor half so good-humoured as Lydia. But you are always giving her the preference.'

'They have none of them much to recommend them,' replied he; 'they are all silly and ignorant, like other girls; but Lizzy has something more of quickness than her sisters.'

'Mr Bennet, how can you abuse your own children in such a way? You take delight in vexing me. You have no compassion on my poor nerves.'

'You mistake me, my dear. I have a high respect for your nerves. They are my old friends. I have heard you mention them with consideration these twenty years at least.'

'Ah! you do not know what I suffer.'

'But I hope you will get over it, and live to see many young men of four thousand a year come into the neighbourhood.'

'It will be no use to us, if twenty such should come, since you will not visit them.'

'Depend upon it, my dear, that when there are twenty, I will visit them all.'

Mr Bennet was so odd a mixture of quick parts, sarcastic humour, reserve, and caprice, that the experience of three-and-twenty years had been insufficient to make his wife understand his character. Her mind was less difficult to develop. She was a woman of mean understanding, little information, and uncertain temper. When she was discontented, she fancied herself nervous. The business of her life was to get her daughters married; its solace was visiting and news.

(From Pride and Prejudice.)

A Clerical Proposal.

The next day opened a new scene at Longbourn. Mr Collins made his declaration in form. Having resolved to do it without loss of time, as his leave of absence extended only to the following Saturday, and having no feelings of diffidence to make it distressing to himself even at the moment, he set about it in a very orderly manner, with all the observances which he supposed a regular part of the business. On finding Mrs Bennet, Elizabeth, and one of the younger girls together soon after breakfast, he addressed the mother in these words:

'May I hope, madam, for your interest with your fair daughter Elizabeth, when I solicit for the honour of a private audience with her in the course of this morning?'

Before Elizabeth had time for anything but a blush of surprise, Mrs Bennet instantly answered:

'Oh dear! Yes, certainly. I am sure Lizzy will be very happy—I am sure she can have no objection.—Come, Kitty, I want you upstairs.' And gathering her work together, she was hastening away, when Elizabeth called out:

'Dear ma'am, do not go. I beg you will not go. Mr Collins must excuse me. He can have nothing to say to me that anybody need not hear. I am going away myself.'

'No, no, nonsense, Lizzy. I desire you will stay where you are.' And upon Elizabeth's seeming really, with vexed and embarrassed looks, about to escape, she added, 'Lizzy, I insist upon your staying and hearing Mr Collins.'

Elizabeth would not oppose such an injunction; and a moment's consideration making her also sensible that it would be wisest to get it over as soon and as quietly as possible, she sat down again, and tried to conceal, by incessant employment, the feelings which were divided between distress and diversion. Mrs Bennet and Kitty walked off, and as soon as they were gone Mr Collins began:

'Believe me, my dear Miss Elizabeth, that your modesty, so far from doing you any dis-service, rather adds to your other perfections. You would have been less amiable in my eyes had there not been this little unwillingness; but allow me to assure you that I have your respected mother's permission for this address. You can hardly doubt the purport of my discourse, however your natural delicacy may lead you to dissemble; my attentions have been too marked to be mistaken. Almost as soon as I entered the house I singled you out as the companion of my future life. But before I am run away with by my feelings on this subject, perhaps it will be advisable for me to state my reasons for marrying—and, moreover, for coming into Hertfordshire with the design of selecting a wife, as I certainly did.'

The idea of Mr Collins, with all his solemn composure, being run away with by his feelings, made Elizabeth so near laughing that she could not use the short pause he allowed in any attempt to stop him farther, and he continued:

'My reasons for marrying are, first, that I think it a right thing for every clergyman in easy circumstances (like myself) to set the example of matrimony in his parish; secondly, that I am convinced it will add very greatly to my happiness; and, thirdly, which perhaps I ought to have mentioned earlier, that it is the particular advice and recommendation of the very noble lady whom I have the honour of calling patroness. Twice has she condescended to give me her opinion (unasked too!) on this subject; and it was but the very Saturday night before I left Hunsford,—between our pools at quadrille, while Mrs Jenkinson was arranging Miss De Bourgh's footstool,—that she said, "Mr Collins, you must marry. A clergyman like you must marry. Choose properly; choose a gentlewoman for my sake, and for your own; let her be an active, useful sort of person, not brought up high, but able to make a small income go a good way. This is my advice. Find such a woman as soon as you can, bring her to Hunsford, and I will visit her." Allow me, by the way, to observe, my fair cousin, that I do not reckon the notice and kindness of Lady Catherine de Bourgh as among the least of the advantages in my power to offer. You will find her manners beyond anything I can describe; and your wit and vivacity, I think, must be acceptable to her, especially when tempered with the silence and respect which her rank will inevitably excite. Thus much for my general intention in favour of matrimony; it remains to be told why my views were directed to Longbourn instead of my own neighbourhood, where I assure you there are many amiable young women. But the fact is, that being, as I am, to inherit this estate after the death of your honoured father (who, however, may live many years longer), I could not satisfy myself without resolving to choose a wife from among his daughters, that the loss to them might be as little as possible when the melancholy event takes place, which, however, as I have already said, may not be for several years. This has been my motive, my fair cousin, and I flatter myself it will not sink me in your esteem. And now nothing remains for me but to assure you in the most animated language of the violence of my affection. To fortune I am perfectly indifferent, and shall make no demand of that nature on your father, since I am well aware that it could not be complied with; and that one thousand pounds in the four per cents, which will not be yours till after your mother's decease, is all that you may ever be entitled to. On that head, therefore, I shall be uniformly silent; and you may assure yourself that no ungenerous reproach shall ever pass my lips when we are married.'

It was absolutely necessary to interrupt him now.

'You are too hasty, sir,' she cried. 'You forget that I have made no answer. Let me do it without further loss of time. Accept my thanks for the compliment you are paying me. I am very sensible of the honour of your proposals, but it is impossible for me to do otherwise than decline them.'

'I am not now to learn,' replied Mr Collins, with a formal wave of the hand, 'that it is usual with young ladies to reject the addresses of the man whom they secretly mean to accept, when he first applies for their favour; and that sometimes the refusal is repeated a second or even a third time. I am, therefore, by no means discouraged by what you have just said, and shall hope to lead you to the altar ere long.'

'Upon my word, sir,' cried Elizabeth, 'your hope is rather an extraordinary one after my declaration. I do assure you that I am not one of those young ladies (if such young ladies there are) who are so daring as to risk their happiness on the chance of being asked a second time. I am perfectly serious in my refusal. You could not make me happy, and I am convinced that I am the last woman in the world who would make you so. Nay, were your friend Lady Catherine to know me, I am persuaded she would find me in every respect ill qualified for the situation.'

'Were it certain that Lady Catherine would think so,' said Mr Collins, very gravely—'but I cannot imagine that her Ladyship would at all disapprove of you. And you may be certain that when I have the honour of seeing her again I shall speak in the highest terms of your modesty, economy, and other amiable qualifications.'

'Indeed, Mr Collins, all praise of me will be unnecessary. You must give me leave to judge for myself, and pay me the compliment of believing what I say. I wish you very happy and very rich, and by refusing your hand, do all in my power to prevent your being otherwise. In making me the offer, you must have satisfied the delicacy of your feelings with regard to my family, and may take possession of Longbourn estate whenever it falls, without any self-reproach. This matter may be considered, therefore, as finally settled.' And rising as she thus spoke, she would have quitted the room, had not Mr Collins thus addressed her:

'When I do myself the honour of speaking to you next on the subject, I shall hope to receive a more favourable answer than you have now given me; though I am far from accusing you of cruelty at present, because I know it to be the established custom of your sex to reject a man on the first application, and, perhaps, you have even now said as much to encourage my suit as would be consistent with the true delicacy of the female character.'

'Really, Mr Collins,' cried Elizabeth, with some warmth, 'you puzzle me exceedingly. If what I have hitherto said can appear to you in the form of encouragement, I know not how to express my refusal in such a way as may convince you of its being one.'

'You must give me leave to flatter myself, my dear cousin, that your refusal of my addresses are merely words of course. My reasons for believing it are briefly these:—It does not appear to me that my hand is unworthy your acceptance, or that the establishment I can offer would be any other than highly desirable. My situation in life, my connections with the family of De Bourgh, and my relationship to your own are circumstances highly in my favour; and you should take it into further consideration that, in spite of your manifold attractions, it is by no means certain that another offer of marriage may ever be made you. Your portion is unhappily so small that it will in all likelihood undo the effects of your loveliness and amiable qualifications. As I must, therefore, conclude that you are not serious in your rejection of me, I shall choose to attribute it to your wish of increasing my love by suspense, according to the usual practice of elegant females.'

'I do assure you, sir, that I have no pretensions whatever to that kind of elegance which consists in tormenting a respectable man. I would rather be paid the compliment of being believed sincere. I thank you again and again for the honour you have done me in your proposals, but to accept them is absolutely impossible. My feelings in every respect forbid it. Can I speak plainer? Do not consider me now as an elegant female intending to plague you, but as a rational creature speaking the truth from her heart.'

'You are uniformly charming!' cried he, with an air of awkward gallantry; 'and I am persuaded that, when sanctioned by the express authority of both your excellent parents, my proposals will not fail of being acceptable.'

To such perseverance in wilful self-deception Elizabeth would make no reply, and immediately and in silence withdrew; determined, that if he persisted in considering her repeated refusals as flattering encouragement, to apply to her father, whose negative might be uttered in such a manner as must be decisive, and whose behaviour at least could not be mistaken for the affectation and coquetry of an elegant female.

(From Pride and Prejudice.) *

A too kind Half-brother.

Mrs John Dashwood now installed herself mistress of Norland; and her mother and sisters-in-law were degraded to the condition of visitors. As such, however, they were treated by her with quiet civility, and by her husband with as much kindness as he could feel towards anybody beyond himself, his wife, and their child. He really pressed them, with some earnestness, to consider Norland as their home; and, as no plan appeared so eligible to Mrs Dashwood as remaining there till she could accommodate herself with a house in the neighbourhood, his invitation was accepted.

A continuance in a place where everything reminded her of former delight was exactly what suited her mind. In seasons of cheerfulness no temper could be more cheerful than hers, or possess in a greater degree that sanguine expectation of happiness which is happiness itself. But in sorrow she must be equally carried away by her fancy, and as far beyond consolation as in pleasure she was beyond alloy.

Mrs John Dashwood did not at all approve of what her husband intended to do for his sisters. To take three thousand pounds from the fortune of their dear little boy would be impoverishing him to the most dreadful degree. She begged him to think again on the subject. How could he answer it to himself to rob his child, and his only child too, of so large a sum? And what possible claim could the Miss Dashwoods, who were related to him only by half blood, which she considered as no relationship at all, have on his generosity to so large an amount? It was very well known that no affection was ever supposed to exist between the children of any man by different marriages; and why was he to ruin himself and their poor little Harry by giving away all his money to his half-sisters?

'It was my father's last request to me,' replied her husband, 'that I should assist his widow and daughters.'

'He did not know what he was talking of, I dare say; ten to one but he was light-headed at the time. Had he been in his right senses, he could not have thought of such a thing as begging you to give away half your fortune from your own child.'

'He did not stipulate for any particular sum, my dear Fanny; he only requested me, in general terms, to assist them, and make their situation more comfortable than it was in his power to do. Perhaps it would have been as well if he had left it wholly to myself. He could hardly suppose I should neglect them. But as he required the promise, I could not do less than give it: at least I thought so at the time. The promise, therefore, was given, and must be performed. Something must be done for them whenever they leave Norland and settle in a new home.'

'Well, then, let something be done for them; but that something need not be three thousand pounds. Consider,' she added, 'that when the money is once parted with, it never can return. Your sisters will marry, and it will be gone for ever. If, indeed, it could ever be restored to our poor little boy?—'

'Why, to be sure,' said her husband, very gravely, 'that would make a great difference. The time may come when Harry will regret that so large a sum was parted with. If he should have a numerous family, for instance, it would be a very convenient addition.'

'To be sure it would.'

'Perhaps, then, it would be better for all parties if the sum were diminished one-half. Five hundred pounds would be a prodigious increase to their fortunes!'

'Oh! beyond anything great! What brother on earth would do half so much for his sisters, even if really his sisters? And as it is—only half blood! But you have such a generous spirit!'

'I would not wish to do anything mean,' he replied. 'One had rather, on such occasions, do too much than too little. No one, at least, can think I have not done enough for them: even themselves, they can hardly expect more.'

'There is no knowing what they may expect,' said the lady; 'but we are not to think of their expectations: the question is, what you can afford to do.'

'Certainly; and I think I may afford to give them five hundred pounds apiece. As it is, without any addition of mine, they will each have above three thousand pounds on their mother's death—a very comfortable fortune for any young woman.'

'To be sure it is; and, indeed, it strikes me that they can want no addition at all. They will have ten thousand pounds divided amongst them. If they marry, they will be sure of doing well; and if they do not, they may all live very comfortably together on the interest of ten thousand pounds.'

'That is very true, and therefore, I do not know whether, upon the whole, it would not be more advisable to do something for their mother while she lives, rather than for them—something of the annuity kind, I mean. My sisters would feel the good effects of it as well as herself. A hundred a year would make them all perfectly comfortable.'

His wife hesitated a little, however, in giving her consent to this plan.

'To be sure,' said she, 'it is better than parting with fifteen hundred pounds at once. But then, if Mrs Dashwood should live fifteen years, we shall be completely taken in.'

'Fifteen years! my dear Fanny; her life cannot be worth half that purchase.'

'Certainly not; but if you observe, people always live for ever when there is any annuity to be paid them; and she is very stout and healthy, and hardly forty. An annuity is a very serious business; it comes over and over every year, and there is no getting rid of it. You are not aware of what you are doing. I have known a great deal of the trouble of annuities; for my mother was clogged with the payment of three to old superannuated servants by my father's will, and it is amazing how disagreeable she found it. Twice every year these annuities were to be paid; and then there was the trouble of getting it to them; and then one of them was said to have died, and afterwards it turned out to be no such thing. My mother was quite sick of it. Her income was not her own, she said, with such perpetual claims on it; and it was the more unkind in my father, because otherwise the money would have been entirely at my mother's disposal, without any restriction whatever. It has given me such an abhorrence of annuities that I am sure I would not pin myself down to the payment of one for all the world.'

'It is certainly an unpleasant thing,' replied Mr Dashwood, 'to have those kind of yearly drains on one's income. One's fortune, as your mother justly says, is not one's own. To be tied down to the regular payment of such a sum, on every rent-day, is by no means desirable: it takes away one's independence.'

'Undoubtedly; and, after all, you have no thanks for it. They think themselves secure; you do no more than what is expected, and it raises no gratitude at all. If I were you, whatever I did should be done at my own discretion entirely. I would not bind myself to allow them anything yearly. It may be very inconvenient some years to spare a hundred or even fifty pounds from our own expenses.'

'I believe you are right, my love; it will be better that there should be no annuity in the case: whatever I may give them occasionally will be of far greater assistance than a yearly allowance, because they would only enlarge their style of living if they felt sure of a larger income, and would not be sixpence the richer for it at the end of the year. It will certainly be much the best way. A present of fifty pounds now and then will prevent their ever being distressed for money, and will, I think, be amply discharging my promise to my father.'

'To be sure it will. Indeed, to say the truth, I am convinced within myself that your father had no idea of your giving them any money at all. The assistance he thought of, I dare say, was only such as might be reasonably expected of you; for instance, such as looking out for a comfortable small house for them, helping them to move their things, and sending them presents of fish and game, and so forth, whenever they are in season. I'll lay my life that he meant nothing further; indeed, it would be very strange and unreasonable if he did. Do but consider, my dear Mr Dashwood, how excessively comfortable your mother-in-law [step-mother] and her daughters may live on the interest of seven thousand pounds, besides the thousand pounds belonging to each of the girls, which brings them in fifty pounds a year apiece, and of course they will pay their mother for their board out of it. Altogether, they will have five hundred a year amongst them; and what on earth can four women want for more than that?—They will live so cheap! Their housekeeping will be nothing at all. They will have no carriage, no horses, and hardly any servants; they will keep no company, and can have no expenses of any kind! Only conceive how comfortable they will be! Five hundred a year! I am sure I cannot imagine how they will spend half of it; and as to your giving them more, it is quite absurd to think of it. They will be much more able to give you something.'

'Upon my word,' said Mr Dashwood, 'I believe you are perfectly right. My father certainly could mean nothing more by his request to me than what you say. I clearly understand it now, and I will strictly fulfil my engagement by such acts of assistance and kindness to them as you have described. When my mother removes into another house my services shall be readily given to accommodate her as far as I can. Some little present of furniture, too, may be acceptable then.'

'Certainly,' returned Mrs John Dashwood. 'But, however, one thing must be considered. When your father and mother moved to Norland, though the furniture of Stanhill was sold, all the china, plate, and linen was saved, and is now left to your mother. Her house will therefore be almost completely fitted up as soon as she takes it.'

'That is a material consideration undoubtedly. A valuable legacy indeed! And yet some of the plate would have been a very pleasant addition to our own stock here.'

'Yes: and the set of breakfast-china is twice as handsome as what belongs to this house; a great deal too handsome, in my opinion, for any place they can ever afford to live in. But, however, so it is. Your father thought only of them. And I must say this, that you owe no particular gratitude to him, nor attention to his wishes; for we very well know that if he could he would have left almost everything in the world to them.'

This argument was irresistible. It gave to his intentions whatever of decision was wanting before; and he finally resolved that it would be absolutely unnecessary, if not highly indecorous, to do more for the widow and children of his father than such kind of neighbourly acts as his own wife pointed out.

(From Sense and Sensibility.)

See the Memoir of Jane Austen by her nephew, J. E. Austen-Leigh (1870-71; ed. by Chapman, 1927); the disappointing Letters, 1796-1816, chiefly to her sister, Cassandra, edited by their grand-nephew, Lord Brabourne (2 vols. 1884); the Life and Letters (1913) by her grand-nephew and great-grand-nephew, W. and R. A. Austen-Leigh; and monographs by O. F. Adams (Chicago, 1891, 1897), Goldwin Smith (1890), W. H. Pollock (1899), Constance Hill (1902), W. H. Helm (1907), A. C. Bradley (1911), Cornish (1913), Miss M. A. Austen-Leigh (1920), L. Villard (trans. 1923); Lady Ritchie's Book of Sibylla (1883); Austin Dobson's introductions in Macmillan's edition (1895-97); and Chapman's editions (Novels 1923, 1926; Letters 1932; Juvenilia 1933 et seq.). See Keynes's Bibliography (1909).

Lady Caroline Lamb (1785-1828) was the authoress of three works of fiction, utterly worthless in a literary point of view, but from extrinsic circumstances highly popular in their day. The first, Glenarvon, was published in 1816, and the hero was obviously meant to represent—his friends thought to caricature and travesty—Lord Byron. The second, Graham Hamilton (1822), depicted the difficulties and dangers involved in weakness and irresolution of character. In the third, Ada Reis (1823), a fantastic Eastern tale, the hero is the Don Juan of his day, a Georgian by birth, who is sold into slavery, but rises to honours and distinctions. Lady Caroline Lamb, a daughter of the Earl of Bessborough, was married before she was twenty to the Hon. William Lamb (afterwards Lord Melbourne), and from the singularity as well as the grace of her manners, her literary accomplishments, and personal attractions, was long the delight of 'fashionable' circles. On meeting with Lord Byron, she contracted at first sight an unfortunate attachment for him which lasted long enough to provoke much comment, and ended in a rupture. Meeting outside her park-gates the hearse which was conveying the remains of Lord Byron to Newstead Abbey (1824), she was taken home insensible; a severe illness succeeded, and ere long her mind became permanently alienated.

Lady Morgan (c. 1776-1859) was for a dozen years famous under her maiden name of Sydney Owenson; and in poetry, the drama, novels, biography, ethics, politics, and books of travel showed a masculine disregard of common opinion or censure, and (in her own words) a temperament 'as cheery and genial as ever went to that strange medley of pathos and humour—the Irish character.' Her father, Robert Owenson (originally MacOwen), was an actor and manager, a favourite in the society of Dublin, and author of some popular Irish songs. She was born in Dublin on the Christmas Day of 1776 or thereby—'cold, false, erroneous, chronological dates' she protests against—and in 1798 turned governess, to support the failing fortunes of her family. In 1801 she published a small volume of poetical verse, and afterwards The Lay of the Irish Harp and a selection of twelve Irish lyrics, with music—one of them 'Kate Kearney,' which bids fair to outlive all her other achievements. Two rubbishy novels had preceded The Wild Irish Girl (1806), which became exceptionally popular. This success introduced the authoress into some of the higher circles of Irish and English society, and she became attached to the household of the Marquis of Abercorn. She had had 'somewhat mysterious relations' with at least one admirer, Sir Charles Ormsby, when in 1812 she was married, after some capricious delay, to Thomas Charles Morgan, M.D. (1783-1843), whom the Lord-Lieutenant had knighted shortly before. For many years now, excepting two long visits to the Continent, the pair made Dublin their home; but in 1837 Lord Melbourne gave her a pension of £300, and in 1839 they removed to London. Ere this she had published The Missionary, an Indian Tale (1811); O'Donnel (1814); Florence Macarthy (1818; 4th ed. 1819); and The O'Briens and the O'Flahertys (1827), in which, departing from the beaten track of sentimental novels, she ventured, like Miss Edgeworth, to portray national manners. In Sir Walter Scott's opinion, O'Donnel, though deficient as a story, has 'some striking and beautiful passages of situation and description, and in the comic part is very rich and entertaining.' But Lady Morgan's high-toned society is disfigured with grossness and profligacy, and her subordinate characters are often caricatures. The vivacity and variety of these presentations is unquestionable—if not always true, they are lively; 'whether it is a review of volunteers in the Phoenix Park, or a party at the Castle, or a masquerade, a meeting of United Irishmen, a riot in Dublin, or a jug-day at Bog-moy—in every change of scene and situation our authoress wields the pen of a ready writer.' Complaint was made against these Irish sketches that they were so personal romans à clef, it being plainly indicated that some of the portraits of personages at the vice-regal court and in the 'best society' of Dublin represented actual and well-known ladies and gentlemen of the day. Their conversation is often a sad jargon of prurient allusion, comments on dress, and superfluous scraps of French and Italian. The humbler characters—even the rapparees—are infinitely more entertaining than Lady Morgan's representatives of the aristocracy. Her strength lay in describing the broad characteristics of her nation, their boundless mirth, their old customs, their love of frolic, and their wild grief under calamity or in bewailing the death of friends and neighbours. In this department she may fairly be compared with Lever and Banim and Carleton. Other works were France (1817) and Italy (1821), with dissertations on the state of society, manners, literature, and government. Lord Byron bore testimony to the fidelity and excellence of Italy; but unluckily here also she was too 'ambitious of being always fine and striking,' and too anxious to display her curious reading and high company. Lady Morgan wrote also The Princess (a tale founded on the revolution in Belgium); Luxima the Prophetess, an Indian tale; Dramatic Scenes from Real Life (very poor in matter and affected in style); The Life and Times of Salvador Rosa; The Book of the Boudoir (autobiographical sketches and reminiscences); Woman and her Master (a philosophical history of woman down to the fall of the Roman empire); and in 1841, in conjunction with her husband (author of Sketches of the Philosophy of Life and Morals, &c.), two volumes entitled The Book without a Name, pieces collected from the writers' portfolios and from stray sketches which had appeared in periodicals. Lady Morgan's silly but not unamusing Memoirs were edited by Hepworth Dixon (2 vols. 1862); see the Life by L. Stevenson (1936).

The Irish Hedge Schoolmaster.

A bevy of rough-headed students, with books as ragged as their habiliments, rushed forth at the sound of the horse's feet, and with hands shading their uncovered faces from the sun, stood gazing in earnest surprise. Last of this singular group, followed O'Leary himself in learned dishabille, his customary suit—an old great-coat, fastened with a wooden skewer at his breast, the sleeves hanging unoccupied, Spanish-wise, as he termed it; his wig laid aside, the shaven crown of his head resembling the clerical tonsure; a tattered Homer in one hand, and a slip of sallow in the other, with which he had been distributing some well-earned pandies to his pupils; thus exhibiting, in appearance and in the important expression of his countenance, an epitome of that order of persons once so numerous, and still far from extinct in Ireland, the hedge schoolmaster. O'Leary was learned in the antiquities and genealogies of the great Irish families as an ancient Senachy, an order of which he believed himself to be the sole representative; credulous of her fables, and jealous of her ancient glory; ardent in his feelings, fixed in his prejudices; hating the Bodei Sassoni, or English churls, in proportion as he distrusted them; living only in the past, contemptuous of the present, and hopeless of the future, all his national learning and national vanity were employed in his history of the Macarthies More, to whom he deemed himself hereditary Senachy; while all his early associations and affections were occupied with the Fitzadelm family; to an heir of which he had not only been foster-father, but, by a singular chain of occurrences, tutor and host. Thus there existed an incongruity between his prejudices and his affections that added to the natural incoherence of his wild, unregulated, ideal character. He had as much Greek and Latin as generally falls to the lot of the inferior Irish priesthood, an order to which he had been originally destined; he spoke Irish as his native tongue with great fluency, and English, with little variation, as it might have been spoken in the days of James or Elizabeth; for English was with him acquired by study at no early period of life, and principally obtained from such books as came within the black-letter plan of his antiquarian pursuits.

'Words that wise Bacon and grave Raleigh spoke'

were familiarly uttered by O'Leary, conned out of old English tracts, chronicles, presidential instructions, copies of patents, memorials, discourses, and translated remonstrances from the Irish chiefs, of every date since the arrival of the English in the island; and a few French words, not unusually heard among the old Irish Catholics, the descendants of the faithful followers of the Stuarts, completed the stock of his philological riches.

O'Leary now advanced to meet his visitant, with a countenance radiant with the expression of complacency and satisfaction, not unmingled with pride and importance, as he threw his eyes round on his numerous disciples. To one of these the Commodore gave his horse; and drawing his hat over his eyes, as if to shade them from the sun, he placed himself under the shadow of the Saxon arch, observing:

'You see, Mr O'Leary, I very eagerly avail myself of your invitation; but I fear I have interrupted your learned avocation.'

'Not a taste, your honour, and am going to give my classes a holiday, in respect of the turf, sir.—What does yez all crowd the gentleman for? Did never yez see a raal gentleman afore? I'd trouble yez to consider yourselves as temporary.—There's great scholars among them ragged runagates, your honour, poor as they look; for though in these degenerated times you won't get the childre, as formerly, to talk the dead languages afore they can spake, when, says Campion, they had Latin like a vulgar tongue, conning in their schools of leachcraft the aphorisms of Hippocrates, and the civil institutes of the faculties, yet there are as fine scholars and as good philosophers still, sir, to be found in my seminary as in Trinity College, Dublin.—Now, step forward here, you Homers. "Keklute moi, Troes, kai Dardanoi, ed' epikouroi."'

Half-a-dozen overgrown boys, with bare heads and naked feet, hustled forward.

'There's my first class, plaze your honour; sorrow one of them gassoons but would throw you off a page of Homer into Irish while he'd be clamping a turf stack.—Come forward here, Padreen Mahony, you little mitcher, ye. Have you no better courtesy than that, Padreen? Fie upon your manners!—Then for all that, sir, he's my head philosopher, and am getting him up for Maynooth. Och! then, I wouldn't ax better than to pit him against the provost of Trinity College this day, for all his ould small-cloathes, sir, the cratur! Troth, he'd puzzle him, grate as he is, ay, and bate him too; that's at the humanities, sir.—Padreen, my man, if the pig's squü at Dunore market to-morrow, tell your daddy, dear, I'll expect the pinton. Is that your bow, Padreen, with your head under your arm, like a roosting hen? Upon my word, I take shame for your manners.—There, your honour, them's my cordaries, the little leprekauns, with their cathah heads and their burned skins; I think your honour would be divarted to hear them parsing a chapter.—Well, now dismiss, lads, jewel—off with yez, extemplo, like a piper out of a tent; away with yez to the turf; and mind me well, ye Homers, ye, I'll expect Hector and Andromache to-morrow without fail; observe me well; I'll take no excuse for the classics barring the bog, in respect of the weather being dry; dismiss, I say.' The learned disciples of this Irish sage, pulling down the front lock of their hair to designate the bow they would have made if they had possessed hats to move, now scampered off, leaping over tombstones and clearing rocks; while O'Leary observed, shaking his head and looking after them: 'Not one of them but is sharp-witted and has a janius for poethry, if there was any encouragement for larning in these degenerated times.

(From Florence MacCarthy.)

Henry Gally Knight (1786–1846), who wrote Eastern tales in the manner and measure of Byron, was an accomplished man of fortune, born at his father's Yorkshire seat, educated at Eton and Cambridge, familiarised with foreign manners by travels in southern Europe, Egypt, and Palestine. The first of these metrical stories, Ilderim, a Syrian Tale (1816), was followed by Phrosyne, a Grecian Tale, and Alashtar, an Arabian Tale (1817). Knight also wrote a notable dramatic poem, Hannibal in Bithynia. Though showing much taste and truth to Oriental ways, these poems failed to attract much notice; and their author obtained more distinction as an authority on architecture, writing (with expert assistance) An Architectural Tour in Normandy, The Normans in Sicily, Saracenic and Norman Remains in Sicily, The Ecclesiastical Architecture of Italy. He inherited the family property in 1808, and sat in Parliament from 1824 till his death. *

William Knox (1789–1825), born at Lilliesleaf in Roxburghshire, was author of The Lonely Hearth, Songs of Israel, The Harp of Zion, and other poems. Sir Walter Scott in his diary gives this brief note of his life-work: 'His father was a respectable yeoman, and he himself succeeding to good farms under the Duke of Buccleuch, became too soon his own master, and plunged into dissipation and ruin. His talent then showed itself in a fine strain of pensive poetry.' Knox, who from 1820 earned a precarious livelihood as journalist in Edinburgh, thus ended his Songs of Israel:

My song hath closed, the holy dream
That raised my thoughts o'er all below
Hath faded like the lunar beam,
And left me 'mid a night of woe—
'To look and long, and sigh in vain
For friends I ne'er shall meet again.

And yet the earth is green and gay ;
 And yet the skies are pure and bright ;
 But, 'mid each gleam of pleasure gay,
 Some cloud of sorrow dims my sight :
 For weak is now the tenderest tongue
 That might thy simple songs have sung.

And like to Gilead's drops of balm,
 They for a moment soothed my breast ;
 But earth hath not a power to calm
 My spirit in forgetful rest,
 Until I lay me side by side
 With those that loved me, and have died.

They died—and this a world of woe,
 Of anxious doubt and chilling fear ;
 I wander onward to the tomb,
 With scarce a hope to linger here :
 But with a prospect to rejoin
 The friends beloved, that once were mine.

Edward Fitzball (1792-1873), author of a prodigious number of dramas and melodramas—which met with much success though they have no permanent value—and of many popular songs ('My pretty Jane' the best known), was the son of a farmer at Burwell near Mildenhall in Cambridge. The farmer was called Ball, his wife's maiden name was Fitz; hence the nom de guerre, ultimately adopted as a regular surname, under which their son, bred a printer in Norwich, began about 1813 to publish poems. His first melodrama dates from 1819; his Innkeeper of Abbeville was successfully played at Norwich in 1820 and in London in 1821. He dramatised novels like The Fortunes of Nigel, Peveril of the Peak, and Fenimore Cooper's Pilot; found plots in the stories of Joan of Arc and Andreas Hofer, 'the Tell of the Tyrol'; and worked up legends and ballads such as The Flying Dutchman and the Inchncape Rock. He wrote five librettos for Balfe; produced the English versions of La Favorita, Adelaide, and Maritana; and manufactured songs innumerable—patriotic, sentimental, and comic, good, bad, and indifferent. 'My pretty Jane' had the good fortune to be set to music by Bishop; 'Let me like a soldier fall' is inseparable from Vincent Wallace's melody. Fitzball had been doing dramatic and miscellaneous literary work for forty years when in 1859 he published an autobiography, and ceased his indefatigable industry.

The Marquis of Normanby (1797-1863), first of the name, wrote anonymously Matilda (1826); Yes and No, a Tale of the Day (1827); and several other novels, which were well received, as being vastly superior to the ordinary run of fashionable novels. Lord Normanby was the British ambassador at Paris in 1848, and in 1857 he published A Year of Revolution, from the journal he had kept at that stormy period. The work was poorly written, and by its indiscreet allusions to Louis Philippe and others raised unpleasant controversies.

James Justinian Morier (1780-1849), author of Hajji Baba, was the son of Isaac Morier, a member of a refugee Huguenot house settled at Smyrna, who became a British subject and British consul-general at Constantinople. James, born like his father at Smyrna, was educated at Harrow, but by 1800 was back in the Levant. In 1809-16 he served in Persia as secretary of legation and envoy, and wrote a first and a second Journey through Persia, Armenia, and Asia Minor (1812-18). Subsequently, save for a diplomatic mission to Mexico, he lived a literary life in London. His marvellously minute, varied, and accurate knowledge of the East, and especially of Persia, he embodied in a series of novels—The Adventures of Hajji Baba, of Ispahan (1824; with its continuation, Hajji Baba in England, 1828); Zohrab, the Hostage (1832); Ayesha, the Maid of Kars (1834); and The Mirza (1841). The hero of Morier's great picaresque novel—his first and by far his most famous work—is an adventurer like Gil Blas, and is at least as much buffeted about in the world. The son of a barber of Ispahan, he is successively one of a band of raiding Turkomans, a menial servant, a pupil of the physician-royal of Persia, an attendant on the chief executioner, a religious devotee, and a seller of tobacco-pipes in Constantinople. Having by stratagem espoused a rich Turkish widow, he becomes an official to the Shah; and on his further distinguishing himself for his knowledge of the Europeans, he is appointed secretary to the mission of Mirza Firouz, and accompanies the Persian ambassador to the court of England. In the course of his multiplied adventures, misfortunes, and escapes, the light-hearted, unprincipled Hajji mixes with all ranks and conditions of mankind, in regions as various as Teheran, Kurdistan, Georgia, Bagdad, and Constantinople. The work at once secured a hearing. 'The novelty of the style,' said Sir Walter Scott, 'which was at once perceived to be genuinely Oriental by such internal evidence as establishes the value of real old china—the gay and glowing descriptions of Eastern state and pageantry—the character of the poetry occasionally introduced—secured a merited welcome for the Persian picaroon;' and in the Talisman he linked the authors of Anastasis and of Hajji Baba as having depicted Eastern manners with 'the fidelity and humour of Le Sage and the ludicrous power of Fielding himself.' The most accomplished and experienced residents in Persia give as high commendation, and continue to repeat the traditional counsel to intending travellers in Persia: 'Take an English saddle and a copy of Hajji Baba.' Mr E. G. Browne in his edition says that 'considered as a faithful picture of the living East (as opposed to the purely imaginary and unreal East of Moore and Southey) it has no rival. Indeed, I may venture to assert that never has any writer of any nation succeeded in portraying, not merely the manners and forms of speech, but the character and modes of thought of an alien race, as Morier has portrayed the Persians in his immortal pages. To appreciate his incomparable book as it deserves, one must be fairly intimate with both the Persians and their language; the greater the intimacy the greater the appreciation.<sup>7</sup> Dr Wills, who also edited the Hajji, repeated after nearly twenty years' residence in Persia the assurance actually given him when he went thither: 'When you read this you will know more of Persia and the Persians than if you had lived there with your eyes open for twenty years.' Lord Curzon, in his edition, adds his testimony; so does Sir Frederic Goldsmid. And the Persian experts admit themselves their difficulty in discovering more than three or four cases in which Morier seems to have made even a minor slip of any kind in his presentment of Persian life and character. As Persia was in Morier's time, so is it now—there is next to no change; as it was in Morier's time, so was it in the days of the ancient Persian heroes. Nöldeke, the great Orientalist, finds much to learn from Hajji Baba for the better understanding of the Persian princes of the Sassanian dynasty.

As delightful, if not so marvellous as its startling truth to fact and its vividness, is the ever-present rich humour and delicately pointed satire, the racy phrasing and dramatic brightness of a narrative which combines the charm and the power of the Arabian Nights and Montesquieu's Lettres Persanes, of Le Sage, of Sterne, and of Dickens; the book is a genus apart. Mr Browne with much probability regards as a mystification of Morier's the story—treated as a fact in the first edition of this work (1843), and still accepted in the Dictionary of National Biography—of a letter received by the author from a Persian minister of state expressing the displeasure the king felt at the 'very foolish business of the book,' and so showing that the satirical descriptions and allusions had been felt at the court of Persia. Mr Browne also points out that though the characters are created by Morier and not caricatures of actual persons, very many of the incidents (none of which are improbable to those who know Persia) are drawn from Morier's own experiences, and not a few of them are actually described in his two volumes of travels. The Oriental scenes are doubtless the most novel and fascinating portions of the Hajji's experiences; yet his account in the sequel of the constant embarrassment and surprise of the Persians at English manners and customs is only a degree less vraisemblable and entertaining. The ceremonial of the English dinner-table, that seemed to them 'absolutely bristling with instruments of offence,' blades of all sizes and descriptions, sufficient to have ornamented the girdles of the Shah's household, could not but puzzle those who had been accustomed simply to take everything up in their fingers; the mail-coach, the variety of our furniture and accommodation, and other domestic observances, were equally astonishing; but it was the want of ceremonial among our statesmen and public officers that chiefly surprised the embassy.

Zohrab is a historical novel, of the time of Aga Mohammed Shah, the Persian prince described by Sir John Malcolm as having taught the Russians to beat the French by making a desert before the line of the invader's march. In Ayesha Morier was also on familiar ground, as in the slighter Misselmah, a Persian Tale (1847). His other work is of less account—Abel Allnutt, a Novel (1837); The Banished, from the German of Hauff (1839); Tom Spicer, a poem (1840); St Roche, also a romance from the German (1847); and Martin Toutrond (1849), which, professedly translated from the French, is really a satire on English ways and prejudices, conveyed in the farcical adventures of a Frenchman whom he, with an obvious pun, calls Tout-rond—a name which in English books, even the most authoritative, is usually misspelt Tourtond, Tourtrond, Troutrond, and even Troutroud.

In the following extracts from Hajji Baba, the hero is presented at the crisis of his fortunes. Having undergone some all but overwhelming changes of fortune in Constantinople, and being reduced to extremities, he resolves to appeal to the Persian ambassador, then just arrived on a mission to the Sublime Porte, against the Turk who was the cause of his misfortunes. When introduced to the presence of Mirza Firouz, the Hajji had been wearing the Turkish costume, which, like everything Turkish, true Persians detest:

The Hajji makes a Friend.

When we had interchanged our greetings as true believers, he said to me, 'Are you an Irani?'

'Yes,' said I, 'so please you.'

'Then why in looks an Osmanli?' said he. 'Praise be to Allah that we have a king and a country of whom no one need be ashamed.'

'Yes,' answered I, 'your ordonnances are truth, and I am become less than a dog, since I have put on the airs of a Turk. My days have been passed in bitterness, and my liver has melted into water, since I have entangled myself by a connexion with this hated people; and my only refuge is in God and you.'

'How is this?' said he: 'speak.—Has a child of Ispahan (for such you are by your accent) been taken in by a Turk? This is wonderful indeed! We travel all this way to make them feed upon our abomination, not to learn to eat theirs.'

I then related the whole of my adventures from the beginning to the end. As I proceeded he seemed wonderfully interested. When I got to my marriage he became much amused, and roared with laughter at the settlements I had made on my wife. The account I gave of the entertainment, the respect with which I was treated, my magnificence and grandeur, afforded him great delight; and the more I descanted upon the deception which I had practised upon the cows of Turks, as he called them, the more interest he took in my narrative, which he constantly interrupted by his exclamations, 'Ay, well done, oh Ispahani!—Oh! thou bankrupt!—By Allah! you did well!—If I had been there, I could not have done better.' But when I informed him of the manner I had been served by my envious countrymen, of the finishing scene in my own house, of the screams of my women, of the speeches of my wife's relations,—and when I represented the very words, look, and attitude with which I made my exit, far from having produced the sympathy I expected, his mirth was excited to such a degree that I thought the veins in his forehead would have burst; and he actually rolled himself on his sofa in the convulsions of laughter. . . .

'But those Turks, those heavy buffaloes of Turks,' roared he, still screaming with laughter; 'praise be to Allah! I can see them now with their long beards, their great caps, and their empty heads, believing all that the sharp-witted madman of Persia chose to tell them, and they would have gone on believing, had they not been undeceived by a similar species of madman. But what have I to do in the business?' said he to me. 'I am neither your father nor your uncle, to interfere and make it up with your wife's relations; nor am I a cadi, or a mufti, who can judge the case between you.'

'No,' answered I; 'but you are my refuge here, and the representative of God's vicegerent upon earth; and you can see justice done me, and not let a poor unfriended stranger be oppressed.'

The Hajji receives a Commission.

Now that I was thrown into the ambassador's society, my ideas took a new turn, and hearing matters discussed which had never even reached my understanding, I became more inquisitive. He seemed pleased to have found in me one who took interest in his views, and at length let me entirely into his confidence. One morning, having received letters from his court, he called me to him, said that he wished for some private conversation, and accordingly ordered every one to depart from before him except myself. He made me sit, and then in a low voice said, 'Hajji, I have long wished to speak to you. Those who compose my suite, between you and I, do not possess the understanding I require. 'Tis true, they are Persians, and are endowed with more wit than all the world beside; but in affairs of the dowlet (the state) they are nothing, and rather impede than forward the business upon which I have been sent. Now, praise be to Allah! I see that you are not one of them. You are much of a man, one who has seen the world and its business, and something may come from out of your hands. You are a man who can make play under another's beard, and suck the marrow out of an affair without touching its outside. Such I am in want of, and if you will devote yourself to me, and to our Shah, the King of Kings, both my face as well as your own will be duly whitewashed; and, by the blessings of our good destinies, both our heads will touch the skies.'

'Whatever is of my strength,' replied I, 'is at your service. I am your slave and your servant, and I myself will place my own ear into your hand. Order and command me: by my head and eyes, I am ready.' . . .

'But a few months ago an ambassador from Europe arrived at the Gate of Empire, Tehran, and said he was sent by a certain Boonapoort, calling himself Emperor of the French nation, to bring a letter and presents to the Shah. He exhibited full powers, by which his words were to be looked upon as his master's, and his actions as his actions; and he also affirmed that he had full instructions to make a treaty. He held himself very high indeed, and talked of all other nations of Franks as dirt under his feet, and not worth even a name. He promised to make the Russians restore their conquests in Georgia to us, to put the Shah in possession of Teflis, Baadkoo, Derbent, and of all which belonged to Persia in former times. He said that he would conquer India for us, and drive the English from it; and, in short, whatever we asked he promised to be ready to grant. Now, 'tis true, we had heard of the French before, and knew that they made good cloth and rich brocades; but we never heard that they could do all this ambassador proclaimed. . . . However, we were not very long in doubt; for when the English infidels who trade between India and Persia, some of whom reside at Abusheher, heard of the arrival of this ambassador, they immediately sent off messengers, letters, and an agent, to endeavour to impede the reception of this Frenchman, and made such extraordinary efforts to prevent his success that we soon discovered much was to be got between the rival dogs. "By my crown," exclaimed the Shah, "all this cometh from the ascendant of my good stars. Here sit I upon my throne, whilst the curs of uncleanness come from the north and the south, from the east and west, bringing me vast presents for the liberty of fighting and quarrelling at the foot of it. In the name of the Prophet, let them approach!" When I left the imperial gate, an ambassador from the English was expected, and the letters which I have just received are full of the circumstances of his proposed reception, and the negotiations on foot concerning it,—but the Shah cannot well enter upon them before he hears from me; because, having been informed that specimens of all the different European nations were to be seen at Constantinople, each of whom had an ambassador there, he, in his wisdom, has judged it expedient to despatch me hither, to obtain all the information of which we are so much in want, to clear up every doubt that exists in Persia about the French and English, and if possible to find out whether all they say of themselves be true or false. Now, Hajji,' said the ambassador, 'I am only one man, and this is a business, as I have found out, sufficient for fifty. The Franks are composed of many, many nations. As fast as I hear of one hog, another begins to grunt, and then another and another, until I find that there is a whole herd of them. As I told you before, those who compose my suite are not men to help me in research, and I have cast my eyes upon you. From your exertions I expect much. You must become acquainted with some infidels; you understand the Turkish language, and they will be able to inform you of much that we want to know.'

The Hajji becomes an Authority on European Politics.

As soon as the ambassador had furnished me with an extract of his vakayeh nameh, or his instructions, I walked out to an adjacent cemetery to read it over undisturbed. I kept the paper carefully folded in the lining of my cap, and as it was my first initiation into public business, the principal contents of it have remained in my memory through life. The ambassador was, in the first place, enjoined to discover, in truth, and what was the extent of that country called Frangistan; and if the Shah, known in Persia by the name of the Shahi Frank, or King of the Franks, actually existed, and which was his capital. In the second place, he was ordered to discover how many Ils, or tribes of Franks, there were; whether they were divided into Sheharnisheens and Sahranisheens, inhabitants of towns and dwellers in the desert, as in Persia, who were their khans, and how governed. Thirdly, to inquire what was the extent of France, whether it was a tribe of the Franks, or a separate kingdom, and who was the infidel Boonaport calling himself emperor of that country. In the fourth place, his attention was to be turned particularly to what regarded the Ingiliz, who had long been known in Persia, by means of their broadcloth, watches, and pen-knives. He was to inquire what description of infidels they were, whether they lived in an island all the year round, without possessing any kishlak (warm region) to migrate to in the summer, and whether most of them did not inhabit ships and eat fish; and if they did live there, how it happened that they had obtained possession of India; and he was to clear up that question so long agitated in Persia, how England and London were connected, whether England was part of London, or London part of England? . . .

Lastly, he was ordered to write a general history of the Franks, and to inquire what would be the easiest method of making them renounce pork and wine, and converting them to the true and holy faith—that is, to the religion of Islam. Having well pondered over this paper, I considered that it would be easy to get it answered through the means of a katib, or scribe, attached to the then Reis Effendi, and with whom, during the short gleam of splendour and riches which had shone upon me, I had formed a great intimacy. I knew the coffee-house he frequented, and the hour when he was most likely to be found there; and although he was not much addicted to talking, yet I hoped, as he sipped his coffee and smoked his pipe (particularly if I treated him), his heart might expand, and I might obtain his real opinion. Full of this idea, I immediately imparted it to the ambassador, who seemed so delighted that he at once did me the honour to take all the merit of it to himself. . . . I went to the coffee-house at the proper time, and there found my friend. I approached him with great demonstrations of friendship, and calling to the waiting man, ordered some best Yemen coffee, which was served up as we sat one opposite the other. In the course of conversation he pulled out his watch, when I seized the opportunity of introducing my subject.

'That is an European watch,' said I, 'is it not?'

'Yes, truly,' said he; 'there are none in the world beside.'

'Wonderful,' answered I,—'those Franks must be an extraordinary people.'

'Yes,' said he; 'but they are Kafirs' (infidels).

'In the name of Allah,' taking my pipe from my mouth and putting it into his, 'tell me something respecting them. This Frangistan, is it a large country? Where does its king reside?'

'What say you, friend?' answered he; 'a large country, do you ask? A large country indeed it is, not governed by one king alone, but by many kings.'

'But I have heard,' said I, 'it is composed of many tribes, all having different names and different chiefs; still being, in fact, but one nation.'

'You may call them one nation if you choose,' said he, 'and perhaps such is the case, for they all shave their chins, let their hair grow, and wear hats,—they all wear tight clothes,—they all drink wine, eat pork, and do not believe in the blessed Mahomed. But it is plain they are governed by many kings; see the numerous ambassadors who flock here to rub their foreheads against the threshold of our Imperial Gate. So many of these dogs are here that it is necessary to put one's trust in the mercies of Allah, such is the pollution they create.'

'In the name of the Prophet speak on,' said I, 'and I will write.—Praise be to Allah! you are a man of wisdom.' Upon which, whilst I took out my inkstand from my girdle and composed myself to write, he stroked his beard and curled the tips of his mustachios, recollecting within himself which were the principal nations of Europe.

He prefaced his information by saying, 'But why trouble yourself? They are all dogs alike,—all sprung from one dunghill; and if there be truth in Heaven, and we believe our blessed Koran, all will burn hereafter in one common furnace. But, stop,' said he, counting his fingers: 'in the first place, there is the Nemsi Giaour, the Austrian infidel, our neighbours; a quiet, smoking race, who send us cloth, steel, and glassware; and are governed by a Shah springing from the most ancient race of unbelievers: he sends us a representative to be fed and clothed. Then come those heretics of Muscovites, a most unclean and accursed generation. Their country is so large that one extremity is said to be buried in eternal snows, whilst its other is raging with heat. They are truly our enemy; and when we kill them, we cry Mashallah, praise be to God! Men and women govern there by turns; but they resemble us inasmuch as they put their sovereigns to death almost as frequently as we do. Again, there is a Prussian infidel, who sends us an ambassador, Allah only knows why; for we are in no need of such vermin; but you well know that the Imperial Gate is open to the dog as well as the true believer; for the rain of Providence descends equally upon both. Whom shall I say next, in the name of the Prophet? Let us see: there are two northern unbelievers, living at the extremity of all things,—the Danes and Swedes. They are small tribes, scarcely to be accounted among men, although it is said the Shah of Denmark is the most despotic of the kings of Franks, not having even janissaries to dispute his will; whilst the Swedes are famous for a madman, who once waged a desperate war in Europe, caring little in what country he fought, provided only that he did fight; and who, in one of his acts of desperation, made his way into our borders, where, like a wild beast, he was at length brought to bay and taken prisoner. Owing to this circumstance we were introduced to the knowledge of his nation; or otherwise, by the blessing of Allah, we should never have known that it even existed. I will mention one more, called Flemings, infidels, dull, heavy, and boorish; who are amongst the Franks what the Armenians are amongst us,—having no ideas beyond those of thrift, and no ambition beyond that of riches. They used to send us a sleepy ambassador to negotiate the introduction of their cheeses, butter, and salt-fish; but their government has been destroyed since the appearance of a certain Boonaport, who (let them and the patron of all unbelief have their due) is in truth a man; one whom we need not be ashamed to class with the Persian Nadir, and with our own Suleiman.'

Here I stopped the Katib in his narrative, and catching at the name, I exclaimed, 'Boonaport, Boonaport,—that is the word I wanted! Say something concerning him; for I have heard he is a rare and a daring infidel.'

'What can I say,' said my companion, 'except that he once was a man of nothing, a mere soldier; and now he is the Sultan of an immense nation, and gives the law to all the Franks? He did his best endeavours to molest us also, by taking Egypt, and sent innumerable armies to conquer it; but he had omitted to try the edge of a true believer's sword ere he set out, and was obliged to retreat, after having frightened a few Mamelukes and driven the Bedouins into their deserts.'

'But is there not a certain tribe of infidels called Ingliz?' said I, 'the most unaccountable people on earth, who live in an island, and make pen-knives!'

'Yes, truly,' said the Katib, 'they, amongst the Franks, are those who for centuries have most rubbed their heads against the imperial threshold, and who have found most favour in the sight of our great and magnanimous Sultan. They are powerful in ships, and in watches and broadcloth unrivalled.'

'But what have you heard of their government?' said I: 'is it not composed of something besides a king?'

'Yes,' returned he, 'you have been rightly informed; but how can you and I understand the humours of such madmen? They have a Shah, 'tis true; but it is a farce to call him by that title. They feed, clothe, and lodge him; give him a yearly income, surround him by all the state and form of a throne; and mock him with as fine words and with as high-sounding titles as we give our sovereigns; but a common Aga of the Janissaries has more power than he; he does not dare even to give the bastinado to one of his own viziers, be his fault what it may; whereas the Aga, if expedient, would crop the ears of half the city, and still receive nothing but reward and encouragement. Then they have certain houses full of madmen, who meet half the year round for the purposes of quarrelling. If one set says white, the other cries black; and they throw more words away in settling a common question than would suffice one of our muftis during a whole reign. In short, nothing can be settled in the state, be it only whether a rebellious Aga is to have his head cut off and his property confiscated, or some such trifle, until these people have wrangled. Then what are we to believe? Allah, the Almighty and Allwise, to some nations giveth wisdom, and to others folly! Let us bless Him and our Prophet that we are not born to eat the miseries of the poor English infidels, but can smoke our pipes in quiet on the shores of our own peaceful Bosphorus!'. . .

After a pause, 'Now,' said I, 'have I learnt all, or are there more unbelievers? By your beard, tell me; for who would have thought that the world was so composed?'

He reflected for some time, and said, 'O yes, I forgot to mention two or three nations; but, in truth, they are not worthy of notice. There are Spanish, Portuguese, and Italian infidels, who eat their swine, and worship their image after their own manner; but who, in fact, are nothing even amongst the Franks.' . . .

I returned to my ambassador full of the information I had acquired, and all-joyous at the success which had attended my first essay in diplomatic life. He was delighted at the memoir I had drawn up from the materials furnished me by the Katib, and as long as we remained at Constantinople daily sent me in search of further particulars, until we both thought ourselves sufficiently in force to be able to draw up a general History of Europe, which the Centre of the Universe in his instructions to the ambassador had ordered him to present on his return. Most assiduously did I apply myself in composing this precious morsel of history. I made a rough draft, which was submitted to the correction of my chief, and when he had seasoned its contents to the palate of the King of Kings, softening down those parts which might appear improbable, and adding to those not sufficiently strong, he delivered it over to a clerk, who in a fair hand transcribed the whole, until at length a very handsome volume was produced. It was duly bound, ornamented, and inserted in a silk and muslin bag, and then the ambassador conceived it might be fit to be placed in the hands of the Shah.

There were new editions of Hajji Baba in 1828, 1833, 1856, 1863, &c.; and between 1895 and 1897 there were no less than three admirable editions—one by Mr E. G. Howne (1895), one by Lord Curzon (1895), and one by Dr C. J. Wills (1897). Sir Robert Morier, so long British Ambassador at St Petersburg, was Morier's nephew.

James Baillie Fraser (1783-1856) also described the life and manners of the Persians by fictitious as well as true narratives. Born in Inverness-shire, he travelled extensively in India, Persia, and Central Asia, and wrote a series of books of travel and stories of Oriental adventure and romance, The Kuzzilbash, a Tale of Khorasan (1828), and its sequel, The Persian Adventurer. Neither in his travels nor in his tales did he show the marvellous insight and notable literary skill of Morier. Fraser wrote also a Scottish story, The Highland Smugglers.

Herbert Knowles (1798-1817) was humbly born at Gomersal near Leeds, and was sent to Richmond Grammar School by the kindness of three clergymen. In 1816, disappointed in his hopes of a Cambridge career, he sent to Southey his poem of 'The Three Tabernacles,' described as 'written in the churchyard of Richmond, Yorkshire, and suggested by Matt. xvii. 4.' Southey, struck by the exceptional promise of this work by a boy of eighteen, secured patronage for him; and some of his other verses appeared in the magazines of the time. But the young poet died of consumption just after his election to a Cambridge sizarship. His one remembered poem has been praised by Dr Richard Garnett—extravagantly—for its solemn and tender pathos, exquisite diction and melody, and faultless finish; by the omission of the last verse and the transposition of the fifth and sixth, it would, he says, have made the impression of absolute perfection. St Peter talked of building the three tabernacles 'not knowing what he said;' and Knowles was at least as hazy in his ideas when he debated the propriety of building tabernacles to Ambition, Beauty, and Pride in the Yorkshire churchyard. The anapaestic measure is jerky (closely resembling 'The Butterfly's Ball and the Grasshopper's Feast'), and unsuitable to the solemn thoughts which, taken separately, are not far removed from commonplace, though, by reason of their subjects, impressive and otherwise well worded. Yet as a whole the poem has touching suggestions and a certain grave attraction—especially for those who have learnt the poem in youth from a school-book.

The Three Tabernacles.

Methinks it is good to be here,
If thou wilt, let us build—but for whom?
Nor Elias nor Moses appear;
But the shadows of eve that encompass with gloom
The abode of the dead and the place of the tomb.

Shall we build to Ambition? Ah no!
Affrighted, he shrinketh away;
For see, they would pin him below
In a small narrow cave, and, begirt with cold clay,
To the meanest of reptiles a peer and a prey.

To Beauty? Ah no! she forgets
The charms which she wielded before;
Nor knows the foul worm that he frets
The skin which but yesterday fools could adore,
For the smoothness it held or the tint which it wore.

Shall we build to the purple of Pride,
The trappings which dizen the proud?
Alas, they are all laid aside,
And here 's neither dress nor adornments allowed,
But the long winding-sheet and the fringe of the shroud.

To Riches? Alas! 'tis in vain;
Who hid, in their turns have been hid;
The treasures are squandered again;
And here in the grave are all metals forbid
But the tinsel that shines on the dark coffin-lid.

To the pleasures which Mirth can afford,
The revel, the laugh, and the jeer?
Ah! here is a plentiful board!
But the guests are all mute as their pitiful cheer,
And none but the worm is a reveller here.

Shall we build to Affection and Love?
Ah no! they have withered and died,
Or fled with the spirit above.
Friends, brothers, and sisters are laid side by side,
Yet none have saluted, and none have replied.

Unto Sorrow?—the dead cannot grieve;
Not a sob, not a sigh meets mine ear
Which Compassion itself could relieve.
Ah, sweetly they slumber, nor love, hope, or fear;
Peace! peace is the watchword, the only one here.

Unto Death, to whom monarchs must bow?
Ah no! for his empire is known,
And here there are trophies enow!
Beneath the cold dead, and around the dark stone,
Are the signs of a sceptre that none may disown.

The first tabernacle to Hope we will build,
And look for the sleepers around us to rise!
The second to Faith, which insures it fulfilled;
And the third to the Lamb of the great sacrifice,
Who bequeathed us them both when He rose to the skies.

Charles Wolfe (1791–1823) was born at Dublin. On the death of his father, a well-born Kildare landholder, the family came to England, and the boy got his chief education at Winchester. In 1809 he entered Trinity College, Dublin, gained a scholarship, and in 1814 took his B.A. In 1816 his 'Burial of Sir John Moore'—the one short poem that has secured him immortality—was suggested by Southey's impressive narrative in the Edinburgh Annual Register of 1808: 'Sir John Moore had often said that if he was killed in battle, he wished to be buried where he fell. The body was removed at midnight to the citadel of Corunna. A grave was dug for him on the rampart there by a body of the 9th Regiment, the aides-de-camp attending by turns. No coffin could be procured, and the officers of his staff wrapped the body, dressed as it was, in a military cloak and blankets. The interment was hastened; for about eight in the morning some firing was heard, and the officers feared that if a serious attack were made, they should be ordered away, and not suffered to pay him their last duty. The officers of his family bore him to the grave, the funeral-service was read by the chaplain, and the corpse was covered with earth.' When the ode was published anonymously in an Irish newspaper in 1817, and reprinted in the same year in Blackwood and other magazines, it was ascribed to Byron and others of the most notable authors of the day; Shelley considered it not unlike a first draft by Campbell. In 1817 Wolfe took orders, and was curate first of Ballyclog in Tyrone, and then rector of Donoughmore. Symptoms of consumption appearing, he tried in search of health England, the south of France, and finally the sheltered Cove of Cork, and there he died.

In 1841 an otherwise unknown Scottish schoolmaster sought to pluck the laurel from the young author's grave, claiming the 'Burial' as his production. But Wolfe's friends came forward, and heaped up evidence in his favour; and the new claimant was forced to confess his imposture. A still more curious debate as to the authorship of the poem was started in Bentley's Miscellany for 1837 by the ingenious 'Father Prout,' who had produced a Latin original for Campbell's 'Hohenlinden,' and Latin and French originals for many of Tom Moore's best-known (and accordingly plagiarised!) songs. Prout—Mahony, that is—calmly alleged that 'The Burial of Sir John Moore' was but a clever version of French verses by an unknown author on the hurried burial of Colonel de Beaumanoir, killed in the defence of Pondicherry in 1790–91 against Sir Eyre Coote, and in evidence he produced the verses—surprisingly vraisemblable French verses like this:

De minuit c'était l'heure, et solitaire et sombre,
La lune offrait à peine un débile rayon,
La lanterne luisait péniblement dans l'ombre,
Quand de la baïonnette on creusa la gazon.

Mahony's witty mystification was accepted for a while by some sensible persons; and this mare's nest has from time to time been rediscovered. In The Writer of 'The Burial of Sir John Moore' Discovered (1908), R. C. Newick, relying on the Memoirs of Sergeant Paul Swanston, assigns this poem (and 'To Mary') to a soldier, Joseph Wolfe, a member of the burial-party, and perhaps Charles's brother. Charles Wolfe's other poems, if few and negligible, at least show he had in him poetic sensibilities and the gift of utterance.

The Burial of Sir John Moore.

Not a drum was heard, not a funeral note,
As his corpse to the rampart we hurried;
Not a soldier discharged his farewell shot
O'er the grave where our hero we buried.

We buried him darkly at dead of night,
The sods with our bayonets turning,
By the struggling moonbeams' misty light,
And the lantern dimly burning.

No useless coffin inclosed his breast,
Not in sheet nor in shroud we wound him;
But he lay like a warrior taking his rest,
With his martial cloak around him.

Few and short were the prayers we said,
And we spoke not a word of sorrow;
But we steadfastly gazed on the face that was dead,
And we bitterly thought of the morrow.

We thought, as we hollowed his narrow bed,
And smoothed down his lonely pillow,
That the foe and the stranger would tread o'er his head,
And we far away on the billow!

Lightly they'll talk of the spirit that's gone,
And o'er his cold ashes upbraid him—
But little he'll reck, if they let him sleep on
In the grave where a Briton has laid him.

But half of our heavy task was done,
When the clock struck the hour for retiring;
And we heard the distant and random gun
That the foe was sullenly firing.

Slowly and sadly we laid him down,
From the field of his fame fresh and gory;
We carved not a line, and we raised not a stone—
But we left him alone with his glory!

To Mary.

If I had thought thou couldst have died,
I might not weep for thee;
But I forgot, when by thy side,
That thou couldst mortal be:
It never through my mind had passed
The time would e'er be o'er,
And I on thee should smile my last,
And thou shouldst smile no more.

And still upon that face I look,
And think 'twill smile again;
And still the thought I will not brook,
That I must look in vain.
But when I speak—thou dost not say
What thou ne'er left'st unsaid;
And now I feel, as well I may,
Sweet Mary, thou art dead.

If thou wouldst stay e'en as thou art,
All cold and all serene,
I still might press thy silent heart,
And where thy smiles have been.

While e'en thy chill bleak corse I have
Thou seemest still mine own;
But there I lay thee in thy grave—
And I am now alone.

I do not think, where'er thou art,
Thou hast forgotten me;
And I, perhaps, may soothe this heart,
In thinking too of thee:
Yet there was round thee such a dawn
Of light ne'er seen before,
As fancy never could have drawn,
And never can restore.

This touching lyric, to the Irish air 'Gramachree,' was composed by Wolfe, he tells us, after he had sung the air over and over again, till he burst into a flood of tears. Wolfe's literary Remains, mainly sermons and poems, were published with a Memoir in 1815 by Archdeacon Russell. Litton Falkiner edited the poems (1903, 1909).

Thomas Pringle (1789-1834), a pioneer contributor to the colonial literature of South Africa (see Vol. III. p. 733), was born at Blaiklaw in Roxburghshire, studied at Edinburgh University, and in 1811 entered the Register House, the Scottish Record Office, as a transcriber of old documents. He took early to writing, had a share (1817) in the beginnings of Blackwood's Magazine in its first (unsuccessful) stage, before Blackwood assumed the management himself, and was author of Scenes of Teviotdale, Ephemerides, and other poems, which show that he possessed something more than fine feeling and cultivated taste. Although from lameness ill fitted for a life of hardship, Pringle, with his father and several brothers, emigrated to the Cape of Good Hope in 1820, and there established a little township or settlement named Glen Lynden. He afterwards removed to Cape Town, where he became librarian, taught, and tried journalism. The magazine and newspaper he projected and edited were the first things of the kind published at the Cape. But he ventilated colonial grievances and frankly discussed the arbitrary proceedings of the Government; and having had both his papers suppressed by the Governor, and having refused to bind himself to abstain from commenting on governmental policy, he returned to England in 1826, and earned a livelihood by his pen. He was for some time editor of the annual, Friendship's Offering, and in the issue for 1834 published one of John Ruskin's very first poems—that on Salzburg. His services were also engaged by the Anti-Slavery Society, and as its secretary he worked zealously until within a few months of his death. His last work was the reissue of his poems on African subjects, the African Sketches (reprinted in 1902), together with the Narrative of a Residence in South Africa, a graphic record of his sojourn beneath the Southern Cross; already he foresaw in vision a 'British South African Empire' to which the equator might 'prove no ultimate limit.' Of the poem that follows, Coleridge, in an unusually enthusiastic mood, said it was 'among the two or three most perfect lyric poems in our language.'

No critic would now admit such a eulogistic judgment, though the poem has a distinctive note of its own, and it certainly helped to familiarise Pringle's generation of home-keepers with South African words and ideas—vlei, kloof, and karroo, kraal and commando; with Kaffir and Bechuana legends, and the sufferings of all three native races at the hands of the white man.

Afar in the Desert.

Afar in the Desert I love to ride,
With the silent Bush-boy alone by my side;
When the sorrows of life the soul o'ercast,
And, sick of the present, I turn to the past;
When the eye is suffused with regretful tears,
From the fond recollections of former years;
And the shadows of things that have long since fled
Flit over the brain like the ghosts of the dead:
Bright visions of glory—that vanished too soon;
Day-dreams—that departed ere manhood's noon;
Attachments—by fate or by falsehood reft;
Companions of early days—lost or left;
And my Native Land—whose magical name
Thrills to my heart like electric flame;
The home of my childhood—the haunts of my prime;
All the passions and scenes of that rapturous time
When the feelings were young and the world was new,
Like the fresh bowers of Eden unfolding to view!
All—all now forsaken, forgotten, foregone!
And I, a lone exile remembered of none,
My high aims abandoned, my good acts undone—
Aweary of all that is under the sun;
With that sadness of heart which no stranger may scan
I fly to the Desert afar from man.

Afar in the Desert I love to ride,
With the silent Bush-boy alone by my side;
When the wild turmoil of this wearisome life,
With its scenes of oppression, corruption, and strife;
The proud man's frown, and the base man's fear;
And the scorner's laugh, and the sufferer's tear;
And malice and meanness, and falsehood and folly,
Dispose me to musing and dark melancholy;
When my bosom is full, and my thoughts are high,
And my soul is sick with the bondman's sigh—
Oh then, there is freedom, and joy, and pride,
Afar in the Desert alone to ride!
There is rapture to vault on the champing steed,
And to bound away with the eagle's speed,
With the death-fraught firelock in my hand—
The only law of the Desert land.

Afar in the Desert I love to ride,
With the silent Bush-boy alone by my side;
Away—away from the dwellings of men,
By the wild-deer's haunt, by the buffalo's glen;
By valleys remote, where the oribi plays;
Where the gnu, the gazelle, and the hartebeest graze;
And the gemsbok and eland un hunted recline
By the skirts of gray forests o'erhung with wild vine;
And the elephant browses at peace in his wood;
And the river-horse gambols unscared in the flood;
And the mighty rhinoceros wallows at will
In the vley where the wild ass is drinking his fill.

Afar in the Desert I love to ride,
With the silent Bush-boy alone by my side:

O'er the brown karroo where the bleating cry
Of the springbok's fawn sounds plaintively;
And the timorous quagga's shrill whistling neigh
Is heard by the fountain at twilight gay;
Where the zebra wantonly tosses his mane,
With wild hoof scouring the desolate plain;
And the stately koodoo exultingly bounds,
Undisturbed by the bay of the hunter's hounds;
And the fleet-footed ostrich over the waste
Speeds like a horseman who travels in haste;
And the vulture in circles wheels high overhead,
Greedy to scent and to gorge on the dead;
And the grisly wolf, and the shrieking jackal,
Howl for their prey at the evening fall;
And the fiend-like laugh of hyenas grim
Fearfully startles the twilight dim.
Afar in the Desert I love to ride,
With the silent Bush-boy alone by my side:
Away—away in the wilderness vast,
Where the white man's foot hath never passed,
And the quivered Koranna or Bechuan
Hath rarely crossed with his roving clan:
A region of emptiness, howling and drear,
Which man hath abandoned from famine and fear;
Which the snake and the lizard inhabit alone,
With the twilight bat from the yawning stone;
Where grass, nor herb, nor shrub takes root
Save poisonous thorns that pierce the foot:
And the bitter melon, for food and drink,
Is the pilgrim's fare, by the salt lake's brink.
A region of drought, where no river glides,
Nor rippling brook with osiered sides;
Nor reedy pool, nor mossy fountain,
Nor shady tree, nor cloud-capped mountain,
Appears—to refresh the aching eye:
But the barren earth and the burning sky,
And the blank horizon round and round,
Spread—void of living sight or sound,
Tell to the heart, in its pensive mood,
That this is—Nature's solitude.
And here—while the night-winds round me sigh,
And the stars burn bright in the midnight sky,
As I sit apart by the caverned stone,
Like Elijah at Horeb's cave alone,
And feel as a moth in the Mighty Hand
That spread the heavens and heaved the land—
A 'still small voice' comes through the wild
(Like a father consoling his fretful child),
Which banishes bitterness, wrath, and fear—
Saying, 'Man is distant, but God is near!'

'The Bechuana Boy,' 'Makanna's Gathering,'
'The Captive of Camalù,' 'The Lion Hunt,' are also characteristically African. Of the non-African poems, the sonnets are mostly rather mechanical;
the best-known is the song in 'The Emigrants', with the burden—

Farewell to bonnie Teviotdale
And Cheviot's mountains blue.

Pringle's Narrative is distinguished from the travels of explorers, hunters, missionaries, and shipwrecked mariners, of which so many of the books dealing with the early years of South African colonial history consist, and has acquired new interest since the recent reconstitution of British

South Africa. The first of the following passages describes his experience of the Boers after he had learnt Dutch enough to communicate with them and preach to the 'Colonial' Hottentots; the second was added just before the publication of the Narrative in 1834.

Boer Neighbours in 1820.

I thus found myself all at once, and not a little to my own surprise, performing the novel and somewhat incongruous functions of a sort of civil and military officer, of a medical practitioner, religious instructor, engineer, architect, gardener, plasterer, cabinet-maker, and, I might add, tinker! In short, I was driven to do the best I could in the peculiar position in which circumstances had placed me; and when (as was frequently the case) my own knowledge and the experience of others failed me, I was obliged to trust to 'mother-wit.'

About this period we were somewhat teased by Sunday visits from our Dutch-African neighbours of the lower part of the Glen-Lynden valley and the Tarka. Solicitous to keep upon friendly terms with these people, I always made it a point to receive them courteously, and usually asked them to dine with me. But finding that they made a practice of visiting us on Sundays, either to gratify idle curiosity or with a view to commercial dealings, I fell upon a scheme which effectually relieved us from this annoyance. I took care to acquaint them that it was contrary to our principles to transact secular business on the Sunday; and when any of them came, I offered them a seat among my Hottentot audience, and invited them to read along the Sunday service. Few of them, I found, could read even the New Testament without much stammering and spelling; and they considered it, moreover, a shocking degradation to sit down amidst a group of Hottentots. We were therefore speedily relieved altogether from their Sunday visitations. In other respects, we found them generally, however uncultivated, by no means disagreeable neighbours. They were exceedingly shrewd at bargain-making, it is true, and too sharp sometimes even for cautious Scotchmen; but they were also generally civil and good-natured, and, according to the custom of the country, extremely hospitable. On the whole, their demeanour to us, whom they might be supposed naturally to regard with exceeding jealousy, if not dislike, was far more friendly and obliging than could, under all the circumstances, have been anticipated.

Vision of a British South African Empire.

Nay, more; however Utopian such 'visions' may appear to some people, I will venture to predict that if some such system (I speak of the principle, not of the details—which may perhaps require to be greatly altered from this rude outline) shall be now adopted, and judiciously and perseveringly carried into operation, we shall at no remote period see the tribes beyond the frontier earnestly soliciting to be received under the protection of the colony, or to be embraced within its limits and jurisdiction. . . . The native tribes, in short, are ready to throw themselves into our arms. Let us open our arms cordially to embrace them as men and as brothers. Let us enter upon a new and nobler career of conquest. Let us subdue savage Africa by justice, by kindness, by the talisman of Christian truth. Let us thus go forth, in the name and under the blessing of God, gradually to extend the moral influence, and, if it be thought desirable, the territorial boundary also, of our colony, until it shall become an Empire, embracing Southern Africa from the Keisi and the Gareep to Mozambique and Cape Negro—and to which, peradventure, in after days, even the equator shall prove no ultimate limit.

Leitch Ritchie prefixed a Life to Pringle's Poetical Works (1839); W. Hay edited his Works with a Life (Cape Town, 1912).

Francis Egerton, Earl of Ellesmere (1800–57), second son of the first Duke of Sutherland, was born in London, and educated at Eton and Christ Church, Oxford. He sat for Bletchingley, Sutherland, and South Lancashire, and was Irish Secretary (1828–30) and Secretary for War (1830). In 1833, on succeeding to the Bridgewater estates, he assumed the name of Egerton, in lieu of Leveson-Gower, and in 1846 was created Earl of Ellesmere. He translated a large number of books on military history, on subjects Italian, Turkish, and Chinese, and on things in general, in prose and in verse, from French, German, and Italian—from Dumas, Victor Hugo, Goethe, Schiller, and others—his Faust being perhaps his feeblest claim to remembrance, for it was neither vigorous nor faithful. His own poems were graceful; King Alfred and Bluebeard were plays.

Joseph Blanco White (1775–1841), a Spaniard by birth, has the glory of having written what was by Coleridge overpraised as 'the finest and most grandly conceived sonnet in our language'—save for a single unimportant exception, his one poem. He was born at Seville, son of an Irish Catholic merchant settled in Spain who had translated his name of White to Blanco and become practically a Spaniard. Ordained a priest in 1799, he acted for a while as chaplain and confessor, but having lost his faith, he came in 1810 to London, added White to his name, and for four years edited a monthly Spanish paper, subsidised by the English Government and designed to stir up national feeling against the French, then in Spain. He received an English pension of £250, was tutor to Lord Holland's son (1815–16), and was admitted to Anglican orders. Made a member of Oriol College, he became the intimate of Newman and Pusey, who learnt much from his knowledge of Catholic theology. He was for a time tutor in Whately's family at Dublin (1832–35), and became a Protestant champion, but fled to Liverpool when he found himself gradually driven to become a Unitarian. Though he worked diligently at English, he was never thoroughly at home in it; but he published Letters from Spain by Don Leucadio Doblado (1822), Internal Evidences against Catholicism (1825), Second Travels of an Irish Gentleman in Search of a Religion (in answer to Moore's; 1833), and other works both in English and Spanish. His Autobiography (edited by J. H. Thom, 1845) is reviewed in Gladstone's Gleanings. The following (Academy, 12th September 1891) is his latest version of the 'Sonnet on Night':

Mysterious Night! when our first parent knew
Thee from report divine, and heard thy name,
Did he not tremble for this goodly frame,
This glorious canopy of light and blue?
But through a curtain of translucent dew,
Bathed in the rays of the great setting flame,
Hesperus with the host of heaven came:
And lo! Creation broadened to man's view!
Who could have guessed such darkness lay concealed
Within thy beams, O Sun? or who divined,
When bud and flower and insect lay revealed,
Thou to such countless worlds hadst made us blind?
Why should we then shun Death with anxious strife?
If Light conceals so much, wherefore not Life?

The Second Lord Thurlow (EDWARD HOVELL THURLOW, 1781-1829), minor poet, was the son of the Bishop of Durham and nephew and successor (in the peerage) of the Lord Chancellor (see page 634). Born in London and educated at the Charterhouse and Magdalen College, Oxford, from 1810 onwards he published several collections of poems which, amid much affectation and some bad taste—sarcastically dealt with by Moore, Byron, and the critics—contain not a little real poetry. Charles Lamb said of his work: 'A profusion of verbal dainties, with a disproportionate lack of matter and circumstance, is, I think, one reason of the coldness with which the public has received the poetry of a nobleman now living; which, upon the score of exquisite diction alone, is entitled to something better than neglect. I will venture to copy one of his sonnets in this place [the London Magazine], which for quiet sweetness . . . has scarcely its parallel in our language.'

To a Water-bird.

O melancholy bird, a winter's day
Thou standest by the margin of the pool,
And, taught by God, dost thy whole being school
To patience, which all evil can allay.
God has appointed thee the fish thy prey;
And given thyself a lesson to the fool
Unthrifty, to submit to moral rule,
And his unthinking course by thee to weigh.
There need not schools, nor the professor's chair,
Though these be good, true wisdom to impart.
He who has not enough, for these, to spare
Of time, or gold, may yet amend his heart,
And teach his soul, by brooks and rivers fair:
Nature is always wise in every part.

More frequently quoted, and at least equally characteristic, is the following

Song to May.

May! queen of blossoms,
And fulfilling flowers,
With what pretty music
Shall we charm the hours?

Wilt thou have pipe and reed,
Blown in the open mead?
Or to the lute give heed
In the green bowers?

Thou hast no need of us,
Or pipe or wire;
Thou hast the golden bee
Ripened with fire;
And many thousand more
Songsters, that thee adore,
Filling earth's grassy floor
With new desire.

Thou hast thy mighty herds,
Tame, and free livers;
Doubt not, thy music too
In the deep rivers;
And the whole plumy flight,
Warbling the day and night—
Up at the gates of light,
See, the lark quivers!

When with the jacinth
Coy fountains are tressed;
And for the mournful bird
Greenwoods are tressed,
That did for Tereus pine;
Then shall our songs be thine,
To whom our hearts incline:
May, be thou blest!

Robert Pollok (1798-1827), a young licentiate of the United Secession Church, survived only a few months the publication of his most notable work, The Course of Time, which speedily attained great popularity, especially among 'serious' people in Scotland. Many who scarcely ever dipped into modern poetry were tempted to read a work which set forth their theological tenets in this unwonted and impressive form; while for less devout readers the poem had force and originality enough to attract, in spite of its theme. The Course of Time is a long blank-verse poem in ten books, written in a style that sometimes imitates Milton, and at other times resembles the work of Cowper, Blair, and Young. In describing the spiritual life and destiny of man, the seer varies the religious speculations of an unhesitating Calvinist with episodic pictures and narratives. The poem is often harsh, turgid, and antipathetic; its worst fault—all but inseparable from the subject and plan—is its tediousness; whole sections are like a dull sermon in blank verse. But those who welcomed it warmly were more in the right than the moderns who neglect it utterly; there are many suprisingly fine things in it. 'The Course of Time,' said Professor Wilson, 'for so young a man is a vast achievement. . . . He has much to learn in composition. . . . But the soul of poetry is there, though often dimly developed; and many passages there are, and long ones too, that heave and hurry and flow along in a divine enthusiasm.' The encouraging critic of this scriptural poem is, be it remembered, the Kit North who loved cock-fighting, and dealt so severely with Coleridge, Wordsworth, and Keats.

Pollok was born at the farm of North Moorhouse in the parish of Eaglesham in Renfrewshire, and after some schooling at Mearns and Fenwick, and a brief interlude of cabinet-making, was sent to the University of Glasgow. While he was a student of divinity in the Hall of the United Secession Church, he wrote a series of prose Tales of the Covenanters, published anonymously. The Course of Time was all written in the eighteen months between the end of 1824 and the middle of 1826, before his last term at the divinity hall; and was published in the spring of 1827 by Blackwood on the advice of Professor Wilson and 'Delta' Moir, who both gave highly complimentary verdicts on the poem with the somewhat formidable title. Pollok was duly 'licensed to preach the gospel' in May; preached his first sermon after license in the church of Dr John Brown, father of the author of Rab and his Friends; and received kindly courtesy and encouragement from the literary patriarch of a long-past generation, Henry Mackenzie, the 'Man of Feeling,' now over eighty-four years of age. The poet-probationer was fast becoming famous; but pulmonary disease had declared itself, and it was evident that he was doomed to an early grave. The anxiety and effort of composition had aggravated the malady; the milder air of Shirley Common near Southampton brought no improvement; and after lingering a few weeks, the victim died on the 17th of September.

This description of Lord Byron was one of the two passages first read by Wilson that moved him to his unexpectedly friendly and favourable judgment of the Course of Time:

And first in rambling school-boy days,
 Britannia's mountain-walks, and heath-girt lakes,
 And story-telling glens, and founts, and brooks;
 And maids, as dew-drops pure and fair, his soul
 With grandeur filled, and melody, and love.
 Then travel came, and took him where he wished.
 He cities saw, and courts, and princely pomp:
 And mused alone on ancient mountain brows;
 And mused on battle-fields, where valour fought
 In other days; and mused on ruins grey
 With years: and drank from old and fabulous wells;
 And plucked the vine that first-born prophets plucked;
 And mused on famous tombs; and on the wave
 Of ocean mused; and on the desert waste.
 The heavens, and earth of every country saw:
 Where'er the old inspiring Genii dwelt,
 Augh, that could rouse, expand, refine the soul,
 Thither he went, and meditated there.

He touched his harp, and nations heard, entranced.
 As some vast river of unfailing source,
 Rapid, exhaustless, deep, his numbers flowed,
 And oped new fountains in the human heart.
 Where fancy halted, weary in her flight,
 In other men, his fresh as morning rose,
 And soared untrodden heights, and seemed at home,
 Where angels bashful looked. Others, tho' great,

Beneath their argument seemed struggling whales;
 He from above descending, stooped to touch
 The loftiest thought; and proudly stooped, as tho'
 It scarce deserved his verse. With Nature's self
 He seemed an old acquaintance, free to jest
 At will with all her glorious majesty.
 He laid his hand upon 'the Ocean's mane,'
 And played familiar with his hoary locks.
 Stood on the Alps, stood on the Apennines,
 And with the thunder talked, as friend to friend;
 And wove his garland of the lightning's wing,
 In sportive twist—the lightning's fiery wing,
 Which, as the footsteps of the dreadful God,
 Marching upon the storm in vengeance seemed—
 Then turned, and with the grasshopper, who sung
 His evening song, beneath his feet, conversed. . . .

Great man! the nations gazed, and wondered much,
 And praised: and many called his evil good.
 Wits wrote in favour of his wickedness;
 And kings to do him honour took delight.
 Thus full of titles, flattery, honour, fame;
 Beyond desire, beyond ambition full,—
 He died—he died of what? Of wretchedness.
 Drank every cup of joy, heard every trump
 Of fame; drank early, deeply drank; drank draughts
 That common millions might have quenched—then died
 Of thirst, because there was no more to drink.

(From Book IV.)

Love.

Hail love, first love, thou word that sums all bliss!
 The sparkling cream of all Time's blessedness,
 The silken down of happiness complete!
 Discerner of the ripest grapes of joy
 She gathered and selected with her hand,
 All finest relishes, all fairest sights,
 All rarest odours, all divinest sounds,
 All thoughts, all feelings dearest to the soul:
 And brought the holy mixture home, and filled
 The heart with all superlatives of bliss.
 But who would that expound, which words transcend,
 Must talk in vain. Behold a meeting scene
 Of early love, and thence infer its worth.

It was an eve of autumn's holiest mood.
 The corn-fields, bathed in Cynthia's silver light,
 Stood ready for the reaper's gathering hand;
 And all the winds slept soundly. Nature seemed
 In silent contemplation to adore
 Its Maker. Now and then the aged leaf
 Fell from its fellows, rustling to the ground;
 And, as it fell, bade man think on his end.
 On vale and lake, on wood and mountain high,
 With pensive wing outspread, sat heavenly Thought,
 Conversing with itself. Vesper looked forth
 From out her western hermitage, and smiled;
 And up the east, unclouded, rode the moon
 With all her stars, gazing on earth intense,
 As if she saw some wonder working there.

Such was the night, so lovely, still, serene,
 When, by a hermit thorn that on the hill
 Had seen a hundred flowery ages pass,
 A damsel kneeled to offer up her prayer—
 Her prayer nightly offered, nightly heard.
 This ancient thorn had been the meeting-place
 Of love, before his country's voice had called
 The ardent youth to fields of honour far

Beyond the wave : and hither now repaired,
 Nightly, the maid, by God's all-seeing eye
 Seen only, while she sought this boon alone—
 'Her lover's safety, and his quick return.'
 In holy, humble attitude she kneeled,
 And to her bosom, fair as moonbeam, pressed
 One hand, the other lifted up to heaven.
 Her eye, upturned, bright as the star of morn,
 For all are friends in heaven, all faithful friends ;
 And many friendships in the days of time
 Begun, are lasting here, and growing still ;
 So grows ours evermore, both theirs and mine.
 Nor is the hour of lonely walk forgot
 In the wide desert, where the view was large.
 Pleasant were many scenes, but most to me
 The solitude of vast extent, untouched
 By hand of art, where nature sowed herself,
 And reaped her crops ; whose garments were the clouds ;
 Whose minstrels, brooks ; whose lamps, the moon and
 Whose organ-choir, the voice of many waters ; [stars ;
 Whose banquets, morning-dews ; whose heroes, storms ;
 Whose warriors, mighty winds ; whose lovers, flowers ;
 Whose orators, the thunderbolts of God ;
 Whose palaces, the everlasting hills ;
 Whose ceiling, heaven's unfathomable blue ;
 And from whose rocky turrets, battled high,
 Prospect immense spread out on all sides round,
 Lost now beneath the welkin and the main,
 Now walled with hills that slept above the storm.

(From Book V.)

Happiness.

Whether in crowds or solitudes, in streets
 Or shady groves, dwelt Happiness, it seems
 In vain to ask ; her nature makes it vain ;
 Though poets much, and hermits, talked and sung
 Of brooks and crystal founts, and weeping dews,
 And myrtle bowers, and solitary vales,
 And with the nymph made assignations there,
 And wooed her with a love-sick oaten reed ;
 And sages too, although less positive,
 Advised their sons to court her in the shade ?
 Delirious babble all ! Was happiness,
 Was self-approving, God-approving joy,
 In drops of dew, however pure ? in gales,
 However sweet ? in wells, however clear ?
 Or groves, however thick with verdant shade ?
 True, these were of themselves exceeding fair ;
 How fair at morn and even ! worthy the walk
 Of loftiest mind, and gave, when all within
 Was right, a feast of overflowing bliss ;
 But were the occasion, not the cause of joy.
 They waked the native fountains of the soul
 Which slept before, and stirred the holy tides
 Of feeling up, giving the heart to drink
 From its own treasures draughts of perfect sweet.
 The Christian faith, which better knew the heart
 Of man, him thither sent for peace, and thus
 Declared : Who finds it, let him find it there ;
 Who finds it not, for ever let him seek
 In vain ; 'tis God's most holy, changeless will.
 True Happiness had no localities,
 No tones provincial, no peculiar garb.
 Where Duty went, she went, with Justice went,
 And went with Meekness, Charity, and Love.
 Where'er a tear was dried, a wounded heart
 Bound up, a bruised spirit with the dew

Of sympathy anointed, or a pang
 Of honest suffering soothed, or injury
 Repeated oft, as oft by love forgiven ;
 Where'er an evil passion was subdued,
 Or Virtue's feeble embers fanned ; where'er
 A sin was heartily abjured and left ;
 Where'er a pious act was done, or breathed
 A pious prayer, or wished a pious wish,
 There was a high and holy place, a spot
 Of sacred light, a most religious fane,
 Where Happiness, descending, sat and smiled.
 But these apart. In sacred memory lives
 The morn of life, first morn of endless days,
 Most joyful morn ! Nor yet for nought the joy.
 A being of eternal date commenced,
 A young immortal then was born ! And who Shall tell what strange variety of bliss
 Burst on the infant soul, when first it looked Abroad on God's creation fair, and saw
 The glorious earth and glorious heaven, and face
 Of man sublime, and saw all new, and felt
 All new ! when thought awoke, thought never more
 To sleep ! when first it saw, heard, reasoned, willed,
 And triumphed in the warmth of conscious life !
 Nor happy only, but the cause of joy,
 Which those who never tasted always mourned.
 What tongue !—no tongue shall tell what bliss o'erflowed
 The mother's tender heart, while round her hung
 The offspring of her love, and lisped her name ;
 As living jewels dropped unstained from heaven,
 That made her fairer far, and sweeter seem,
 Than every ornament of costliest hue !
 And who hath not been ravished, as she passed
 With all her playful band of little ones,
 Like Luna with her daughters of the sky,
 Walking in matron majesty and grace ?
 All who had hearts here pleasure found : and oft
 Have I, when tired with heavy task, for tasks
 Were heavy in the world below, relaxed
 My weary thoughts among their guiltless sports,
 And led them by their little hands afield,
 And watched them run and crop the tempting flower—
 Which oft, unasked, they brought me, and bestowed
 With smiling face, that waited for a look
 Of praise—and answered curious questions, put
 In much simplicity, but ill to solve ;
 And heard their observations strange and new ;
 And settled whiles their little quarrels, soon
 Ending in peace, and soon forgot in love.
 And still I looked upon their loveliness,
 And sought through nature for similitudes
 Of perfect beauty, innocence, and bliss,
 And fairest imagery around me thronged ;
 Dew-drops at day-spring on a seraph's locks,
 Roses that bathe about the well of life,
 Young Loves, young Hopes, dancing on Morning's cheek,
 Gems leaping in the coronet of Love !

(From Book V.)

A too bulky and detailed Memoir of Pollok by his brother was published in 1843. The pathos of his short life is well brought out in the little book in the 'Scots' series, by Miss Rosaline Masson, on the strangely contrasted pair, Pollok and Aytoun (1899). The Course of Time reached its twenty-fifth edition in 1867 (12,000 copies were sold the first eighteen months). On his tombstone in the Millbrook churchyard at Southampton stands the ominous epitaph : 'His immortal poem is his monument.' For the immortal poem, like the tombstone, is sought after by few, and, save in occasional quotation, all but forgotten.

SCOTTISH VERNACULAR WRITERS UNDER GEORGE III.

IN 1792 Burns wrote in his first letter to George Thomson: 'Apropos, if you are for English verses, there is on my part an end of the matter. Whether in the simplicity of the ballad or the pathos of the song, I can only hope to please myself in being allowed at least a sprinkling of our native tongue.' So that Burns, who fairly represented the practice of his older contemporaries, and who became the standard of all later writers of Scottish verse, followed Ramsay's non-descript and elastic linguistic principle, and with better taste and vastly greater command of his instrument wrote—at times indiscriminately—almost pure English, nearly the broadest surviving vernacular, or a broken English, more or less largely 'sprinkled' with Scots words. Sometimes even the words were not vernacular Scots, but archaisms taken from Ramsay (who, as Lord Hailes proved, in ancient Scots was sadly to seek); sometimes, as Sir James A. H. Murray pointed out, they were not Scots words at all, but 'fancy Scots' made by Scottifying ordinary English words on an assumed analogy. As a rule Burns was most broadly Scottish when he was most jocular, most largely English when the matter was most serious. In the longer poems, as The Cotter's Saturday Night, some verses are pure English, some nearly pure vernacular, and some a curious arbitrary mixture. Only in some of the songs does the (largely Anglicised) Scots of his Ayrshire neighbours form the warp and woof of the whole, with English words thrown in. In some of the songs that are reckoned quite Scottish the blend is still more curious—the diction is substantially English, or even the somewhat stilted 'poetic diction' of contemporary southern verse-writers, with a few of the words translated into imitation Scots. 'My Nannie's awa' is one of Burns's most popular 'Scottish' songs, but nothing is less like the language of Scottish shepherds of any date than:

Now in her green mantle blithe nature arrays,
And listens the lambkins that bleat o'er the braes.

Braes is the only genuine Scots word here; 'nature arraying in a green mantle and listening lambkins bleating' being not ordinary but poetic English, such as was used in many of the song-books current in Burns's time. Most of the phrases actually occur in the songs given in Cecilia (1784), for example. To quote Sir J. A. H. Murray: "'Scots wha hae' is fancy Scots; that is, it is merely the English 'Scots who have' spelled as Scots. Barbour would have written 'Scottis at hes'; Dunbar or Douglas, 'Scottis quhilkis hes'; and even Henry Charteris, in the end of the sixteenth century, 'Scottis quha hes.' . . . 'Scots wha hae w' Wallace bled,' although composed of Scottish words, is not vernacular Scots any more than 'How you carry you?' as a translation of 'Comment vous portez vous?' is vernacular English.' 'Scots at hes,' it may be added, is still the current Scots form, as it was in Burns's time; 'wha hae' appears only as an imitation of Burns's imitation.

North Germans sometimes use Low German words in High German stories, but the stories themselves do not thus become Platt-Deutsch works. And though a southern Frenchman in Paris gives his articles or verses a southern flavouring of words or phrases from his native Nîmes or Avignon, he is not therefore ranked amongst Provençal authors. Nor would Burns have been the greatest of writers in Scottish dialect unless he had in many of his best poems closely followed the Scottish spoken vernacular of his time. But, as we have seen from his own explicit testimony, while refusing to write 'English verses' at all, Burns was content to write 'Scotch verses' in which there was merely a 'sprinkling of his native tongue.' And this whether he was bowdlerising the old Scots songs for Thomson, making new ones to the old tunes and with the old refrains, or inditing his own most spontaneous and original strains. Most of his contemporaries, earlier and later, and almost all his successors have adopted a similarly fluctuating standard of mixed dialect; for many, Burns's very modest minimum of Scotticism has amply sufficed. But when it is remembered that the actually spoken Scots has long been itself a mixed tongue, a patois rather than a dialect, their practice is not so strange as at first it might appear. Most Scottish writers, accepting Beattie's dictum (page 308) that 'to write in the vulgar broad Scotch and yet write seriously had become impossible,' essayed at times to find or construct a dialect which was not vulgar and was not exactly broad Scots.

Father Geddes's remarks, quoted below (page 799), are interesting as coming from a philologist

scholar of great acquirements and thoroughly familiar with the vernacular. In the introduction to one of his own poems, Sir Alexander Boswell, one of Burns's most fervent admirers, and author of some of the most popular and 'broadest' Scots songs since Burns's time, admirably and authoritatively summed up the case as it stood in 1810 with regard to 'the mixed dialects of English and Scotch, which, though they afford so many facilities in measure and rhyme, are, I am told, not quite legitimate. I shall therefore [in this particular poem] endeavour to confine myself to that which, till the Gentle Shepherd once more awoke the Scottish reed, seemed to be for ever the destined dialect of British Poesy. But while our later Bards have wooed the Scottish muse—and even Robert Burns is subject to the criticism—one-half of what has been written, by a slight alteration of vowels and a few consonants added or subtracted, becomes plain English. Doctor Jamieson will tell you it is not Scotch; but it is a pleasing mélange, which carries to the soul the sweetest sentiments, and we care not how we come by them.'

Sir Alexander's pronouncement holds good of the score of Burns's contemporaries, earlier and later, from whom extracts are given below. Some of the minor writers have left a few admirable songs; but whether for songs or total achievement, none of them stands near Burns, and none of them is worthy to be named beside him save Fergusson of those earlier in date, and Tannahill and Lady Nairne amongst those who were born soon after him. Meanwhile the principal writers of Scottish birth and blood were doing their best in book English. What they accomplished may be seen in the preceding pages, and may be recalled here by the names of Beattie, Bruce and Logan, Macpherson and Mickle, the two Blairs, Dugald Stewart, Henry Mackenzie, Mackintosh, Bruce and Mungo Park, Grahame and Leyden, Joanna Baillie and Thomas Campbell.

D. P.

Jean Elliot and Mrs Cockburn.—Two songs, both by women, and both bearing the name of The Flowers of the Forest, still divide the favour of lovers of Scottish song. The first, bewailing the losses sustained at Flodden, was written by Jean Elliot of Minto (1727–1805), daughter of Sir Gilbert Elliot, and sister of the author of the lyric, 'My sheep I neglected, I broke my sheep-hook' (page 423). The second song (1765), which is usually taken to have been on the same subject, was in reality occasioned by the bankruptcy of a number of gentlemen in Selkirkshire; it was written by Alicia Cockburn (1713–95), the daughter of Robert Rutherford of Fernlie, who in 1731 married Patrick Cockburn, advocate, and died in Edinburgh. Most modern Scotsmen agree with Allan Cunningham in preferring Miss Elliot's song; but both have their merits; the second is most usually sung. Sir Walter Scott praises the skill shown by Miss Elliot in imitating the manner of the ancient minstrels.

The Flowers of the Forest.

By Jean Elliot.

I've heard the liltin' at our yowe-milking,
Lasses a-liltin' before the dawn of day;
But now they are moaning on ilka green loaning—
The Flowers of the Forest are a' wede away.

At buchts, in the morning, nae blithe lads are scorning,
The lasses are lonely, and dowie, and wae;
Nae daffin', nae gabbin', but sighing and sabbing,
Ilk ane lifts her leglin and hies her away. (pall)

In hairst, at the shearing, nae youths now are jeering,
The bandsters are lyart, and runkled, and gray;
At fair, or at preaching, nae wooing, nae fleeching—
The Flowers of the Forest are a' wede away.

At e'en, at the gloaming, nae swankies are roaming,
'Bout stacks wi' the lasses at bogle to play,
But ilk ane sits drearie, lamenting her dearie—
The Flowers of the Forest are a' wede away.

Dool and wae for the order sent our lads to the Border!
The English, for ance, by guile wan the day;
The Flowers of the Forest, that foucht aye the foremost,
The prime o' our land, are cauld in the clay.

We hear nae mair liltin' at our yowe-milking,
Women and haims are heartless and wae;
Sighing and moaning on ilka green loaning—
The Flowers of the Forest are a' wede away.

Liltin' is spontaneous singing; yowes are ewes; bandsters are binders of sheaves; lyart is gray-haired, and runkled wrinkled. Fleeching is the importunate beseeching of lovers; swankies, young gallants.

The Flowers of the Forest.

By Mrs Cockburn.

I've seen the smiling
Of fortune beguiling;
I've felt all its favours, and found its decay;
Sweet was its blessing,
Kind its caressing;
But now 'tis fled—fled far away.

I've seen the forest,
Adornèd the foremost
With flowers of the fairest most pleasant and gay;
Sae bonny was their blooming!
Their scent the air perfuming!
But now they are withered and weeded away.

I've seen the morning
With gold the hills adorning,
And loud tempest storming before the mid-day;
I've seen Tweed's silver streams,
Shining in the sunny beams,
Grow drumly and dark as he rowed on his way.

Oh fickle Fortune,
Why this cruel sportin'?
Oh, why still perplex us, poor sons of a day?
Nae mair your smiles can cheer me,
Nae mair your frowns can fear me;
For the Flowers of the Forest are a' wede away.

David Herd (1732-1810) did for Scottish song what Bishop Percy had done for the old English ballads. The son of a farmer in Kincardineshire, he became an accountant's clerk in Edinburgh, and devoted the scanty leisure and savings of a bachelor life to the acquisition of a valuable library and a sound knowledge of the popular lyric poetry of Scotland. Sir Walter Scott, who praises his 'shrewd manly common-sense and antiquarian science,' made use of his rich manuscript collections for the Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border, and recent editors of Burns have been glad to draw illustrations from the same source. His Ancient Scottish Songs, Heroic Ballads, &c., appeared at first anonymously in a single volume in 1769, and afterwards, with his name, in two volumes, in 1776 (the best edition) and 1791. It was, as Scott described it, 'the first classical collection' of the kind, for the earliest Scottish song-books do not count for much as literature; and the Ancient Scottish Poems of Lord Hailes (1770) were not songs, but a more critical reprint of some of the contents of the Bannatyne MS. than Allan Ramsay had presented in his Evergreen (1724-27), called a collection of 'Scots poems wrote by the ingenious before 1600.' Watson's Choice Collection of Scottish Poems (1706-11) contained only a few songs, such as 'Old Long Syne,' 'Lady Anne Bothwell's Lament,' and the verses attributed to Montrose, and these are not Scottish in language at all. More notable in this regard is Allan Ramsay's Tea-Table Miscellany, the first volume of which appeared in 1724. Ramsay printed some of the older songs, and published many from the pens of contemporary verse-writers like Robert Crawford and the Hamiltons of Bangour and Gilbertfield (pages 309, 310). But not a few of these new songs were eighteenth-century English in language and sentiment; too many of the old ones were the spurious imitations produced by Durfey and his school; and nowhere is Ramsay's treatment of his texts to be trusted. Quite as uncritical was the Orpheus Caledonius, a collection of songs (largely appropriated from the Tea-Table Miscellany, which, however, revenged itself by such reprisals as that of Lady Grizel Baillie's famous song) set to music and published by a certain William Thomson in 1725-33. Of the same order were the collection of Scottish melodies by James Oswald, Yair's Charmer (1749-51), and the selection entitled The Lark—the last a Scottish and English medley, blending 'Todlin Hame' and 'The Ewe Bughts,' 'Waly, waly' and 'The Blithesome Bridal,' with 'Chevy Chace,' first issued in London in 1746, and reprinted at Edinburgh in an edition which contained Mrs Cockburn's 'Flowers of the Forest,' and is known to have been possessed by Burns. On such merely popular publications the critical collection of Herd was a great advance. His texts have always enjoyed the reputation of superior accuracy, and his choice of specimens is ample and judicious. Ballads as well as songs were included in his work, and it is noteworthy that when one has made subtraction from it of 'Gil Morice' and 'Sir Patrick Spens' and their like, as well as of Anglicised verses like 'The Bush aboon Traquair' and the 'Broom o' the Cowdenknowes,' very little of what is now recognised as classical Scottish song remains. The majority and assuredly the best of the genuine old Scottish songs printed by Herd are of the bacchanalian, comic-amorous, and not always too decorous kind, exemplified by 'The Tailor,' 'The Bob o' Dumblane,' and 'Todlin Hame.' Songs of passion and pathos, such as are now taken as typical of Scottish minstrelsy, are conspicuously few. They make their appearance first from the master-hand of Burns in James Johnson's Scots Musical Museum (1787-1803) and George Thomson's Collection of Scottish Songs and Airs (1793-1841), which, by grace of the genius of their chief contributor rather than through any editorial scholarship, rank along with Herd's modest anthology as the great books of Scottish song. Pinkerton's rather unreliable Select Scottish Ballads (1783; Pinkerton and some others made a point of spelling Scottish) and Joseph Ritson's scholarly volume of Scottish Songs (1794) also deserve mention. St Cecilia, or the Lady's and Gentleman's Harmonious Companion, also called Wilson's Musical Miscellany, published at Edinburgh 'for C. Wilson' in 1779, was of the Lark type. It complained that all previous collections 'had one general fault—viz. that they abounded too much with obscene songs, that tend to suppress virtue; which proves that the editors thereof have had but a mean taste. . . . Particular care hath been taken in the selection of this collection, and nothing is inserted that can give the least offence to that delicacy of taste for which the present age is so remarkable;' and yet used considerable freedom in this very department. This collection, English and Scottish, contains many of the Scots songs Burns commended and imitated, and was doubtless known to him. The Cheerful Companion (Perth, 1780; 3rd ed. 1790) was one of several provincial song-books. Herd's collection was reprinted in 1869, and re-edited from the MS. by Dr Hans Hecht in 1904.

Robert Graham (c. 1735-97) of Gartmore inherited the family estate (part of it handed on from the last Earl of Menteith) on the death of his brother William in 1774. He assumed the name of Cunninghame before Graham (Cunninghame-Graham) on succeeding to the estates of the Glencairn earldom at the death of his cousin, the fifteenth and last Earl of Glencairn (1796), through his mother, Lady Margaret Cunninghame, daughter of William, twelfth Earl. Graham studied at Glasgow, was for some years Receiver-General of Jamaica, and from 1794 to 1796 was M.P. for Stirlingshire. An advanced Liberal, the friend of Charles James Fox, and an admirer of the French Revolution, he had in 1785 been elected Rector of Glasgow University in opposition to Burke. He gathered about him a large and valuable library and a rich collection of admirable paintings; and when Sir Walter Scott was at Gartmore while writing Rob Roy, Graham lent him many documents and MSS. about the family and the district. Graham—ancestor of a well-known writer of a later day, Mr R. B. Cunninghame-Graham (see Vol. III. p. 717)—wrote songs and lyrics, of which by far the best and the only one known is that printed by Scott in the first edition of the Border Minstrelsy as verses 'taken down from recitation and averred to be of the age of Charles I. They have indeed much of the romantic expression of passion common to poets of that period, whose rays still reflected the setting beams of chivalry.' But in later editions he had to add that he 'was assured they were by the late Mr Graham of Gartmore.' He told Lockhart he had believed them to be the work of a greater Graham—the famous Marquis of Montrose himself (see Vol. I. p. 817).

If Doughty Deeds.

If doughty deeds my ladye please,
Right soon I'll mount my steed,
And strong his arm, and fast his seat,
That bears frae me the meed.
I'll wear thy colours in my cap,
Thy picture at my heart;
And he that bends not to thine eye
Shall rue it to his smart!
Then tell me how to woo thee, Love,
O, tell me how to woo thee!
For thy dear sake nae care I'll take,
Tho' ne'er another trow me.

If gay attire delight thine eye,
I'll dight me in array,
I'll tend thy chamber door all night,
And squire thee all the day.
If sweetest sounds can win thine ear,
These sounds I'll strive to catch:
Thy voice I'll steal to woo thyself,
That voice that nane can match.

But if fond love thy heart can gain,
I never broke a vow,
Nae maiden lays her skaith to me,
I never loved but you.
For you alone I ride the ring,
For you I wear the blue,
For you alone I strive to sing—
O, tell me how to woo!
Then tell me how to woo thee, Love,
O, tell me how to woo thee!
For thy dear sake nae care I'll take,
Tho' ne'er another trow me.

Alexander Geddes (1737–1802), one of the most remarkable and curiously gifted Scotsmen of his time, was born in Rathven parish, Banffshire, of Roman Catholic parentage, and was educated for the priesthood at the seminary of Scaln in Glenlivet and at Paris (1758–64), where he acquired a knowledge of Hebrew, Greek, French, Spanish, German, and Low Dutch, as well as of Latin, but devoted himself specially to school divinity and biblical criticism. In 1769 he took a cure of souls at Auchinhalrig in Banffshire, where his too marked sympathy with the Protestants around him (he sometimes went to the parish church services) led to his dismissal (1780). He then went to London, and, by Lord Petre's help, carried on a new translation of the Bible for the use of English Catholics (3 vols. 1792–1800; including only the earlier books to Ruth, with some of the Psalms)—a work whose 'notes and critical remarks' offended Catholics and Protestants alike by 'higher criticism' of startling boldness. Indeed, the critic rivalled the revolutionary freedom of the most thorough-going German rationalists; and Eichhorn and Paulus were both among his correspondents, as well as Dr Kennicott and Bishop Lowth. Geddes claimed explicitly to apply to the sacred text the very same methods as had been so profitably used in connection with the Greek and Latin classics; doubted or disputed the Mosaic authorship of the Pentateuch; and held that the writer, whoever he was, adorned his narrative of perfectly natural events with marvels and fictitious Divine interferences, and dressed up fables as true history. The story of the creation is a fable, like other cosmogonies; the story of the fall a mythos. The effect of such methods on the doctrine of inspiration was such as to make the Unitarian Priestley (against whom Geddes defended the Trinity) doubt if a man who believed so little and conceded so much as Geddes could be a Christian. Violent controversy followed, and ecclesiastical interdicts. Geddes died without recanting, qualified his acceptance of the Trinity and the Atonement, but received absolution from a French priest. Public mass for his soul was prohibited by the Roman Catholic bishop.

In Professor Sir George Adam Smith's Criticism of the Old Testament (1901) Geddes is treated as a conspicuous representative, if not the originator, of the view that the Pentateuch is composed, not of two or three documents (Elohistic, Jehovistic, &c.) merely, but of a multitude of independent documents or services—the Fragmentary hypothesis, as it is called. And Geddes anticipated Bleek in regard to the book of Joshua forming an indispensable supplement to the Pentateuch.

Besides his memorable contribution to English biblical criticism, Geddes wrote numerous letters, appeals, and pamphlets in his own defence; an apology for the Roman Catholics of Great Britain, disquisitions on the penal laws, and other argumentative treatises; an ironical defence of slavery; and a number of sermons. But he is also known as an indefatigable poet in Latin, English, and vernacular Scots. His 'translation' in spirited Hudibrastic verse of some of Horace's Satires (1778) was rather a lively 'imitation'; it secured a literary success and the praise of Professors

Robertson, Reid, and Beattie, and in 1780 the author was made an LL.D. of Aberdeen. On his being elected a corresponding member of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland, he addressed to the society a poetical epistle in 'geud ald Scolis' phrase, printed in the first volume of their Transactions, along with a dissertation of 'The Scoto-Saxon Dialect' which represents truer views than were then current, and translations of an eclogue of Virgil and an idyl of Theocritus in Scots. His Epistola Macaronica ad Fratrem (1790), on a great public dinner of the English Protestant Dissenters, is a clever and amusing performance; and Bardomachia, on a battle between two rival bards in a bookseller's shop (1800; when 'Peter Pindar' attacked Gifford in a shop in Piccadilly) was also macaronic, with an English version appended.

Linton, a Tweeddale Pastoral (1781), celebrated the birth of an heir to the house of Traquair, where Geddes had been tutor; the Carmen Seculare pro Gallica Gente (1790; followed by two others) praised the French Revolution. There were also A Norfolk Tale (1791), suggested by a journey to visit Lord Petre; L'Avocat du Diable, on a lawsuit against Peter Pindar; a doggerel parody of a Cambridge University sermon; a painfully literal verse translation of the first book of the Iliad; and a mock-heroic poem in nine cantos on an electioneering affair in which the Bishop of Bangor took a conspicuous part, called The Battle of Bangor, or the Church's Triumph. Another of his clever translations in iambs was Vert Vert, or the Parrot of Nevers, from the French of Gresset, a poem afterwards translated by Father Prout. He used to be credited, on no sufficient grounds, with the authorship of the pathetic song Lewie Gordon, and of the broadly and vulgarly humorous Wee Wifukie, more probably the work of Alexander Watson, Lord Byron's Aberdeen tailor. Geddes was companionable and brilliant in conversation, full of anecdote, wit, and epigram; but he was apt to be trying to his friends by his indiscretions in speech and writing, and seemed too willing to startle people by the audacity of his paradoxes.

From the 'Dissertation on the Scoto-Saxon Dialect.'

It is my opinion that those who, for almost a century past, have written in Scots, Allan Ramsay not excepted, have not duly discriminated the genuine Scottish idiom from its vulgarisms. They seem to have acted a similar part with certain pretended imitators of Spenser, Shakespeare, and Milton, who fondly imagine that they are copying from those great models, when they only mimic their antique mode of spelling, their obsolete terms, and their irregular construction. Thus, to write Scottish poetry (for prose has been seldom attempted), nothing more was deemed necessary than to interlard the composition with a number of low words and trite proverbial phrases, in common use among the illiterate; and the more anomalous and farther removed from polite usage those words and phrases were, so much the more apposite and eligible they were accounted. It was enough that they were not found in an English lexicon to give them a preference in the Scottish glossary; nor was it ever once considered that all words truly Anglo-Saxon were as truly Scoto-Saxon words, and that every exotic term which the English have borrowed from other languages, the Scots had an equal right to appropriate.

By the last sentence he claims an antihistoric liberty that allowed him to introduce in his own poems, as most of his contemporaries had done, along with indubitable Scots words, as many English words and spellings as were found convenient—a practice which produces a highly artificial dialect; and like his contemporaries, too, Geddes permitted himself to manufacture Scottish words for English ones, obviously on erroneous analogies. Thus because the English o is in Scots often (not always) a, because the English home is in Scots hame, therefore roam is rame, the city of Rome, Rame, and moment, mament! The two translations from Virgil and Theocritus were printed in a curious phonetic system of his own, which makes them all but unintelligible even to those familiar with old Scots; thus, hame is hém; frae is fre; ease is ez; braid, brád; thou, thú; praise, preis; wha, hua; while, huy!; you, ghú; deein, dian; laughs, lákhs; power, púr; and the Aberdeenshire value of the Scottish u or ui is given by è (= ee in English), muses becoming mèses.

In the Epistle to the Antiquaries he laments the low estate of the Muse of vernacular Scots; surveys her achievements in the past; and pays a tribute to Burns, remarkable even in the year (1792) when it was printed in the Transactions, which could obviously not have formed any part of the epistle as sent to the society immediately on Geddes's election in 1785, before the Kilmarnock edition had appeared and before Burns had been heard of in Edinburgh.

From the Epistle to the Society of Antiquaries.

For tho' 'tis true that Mither-tongue
Has had the melancholy fate
To be neglekit by the great,
She still has fun' an open door
Amang the uncorruptit poor,
Wha be na weent to treat wi' scorn                      woot
A gentewoman bred and born;
Bot bid her, thoeh in tatters drest,
A hearty welcome to their best. . . .

There aft on ben-maist bink she sits,                      bench
And sharps the edge of cuntry wits,
Wi' routh of gabby saws an' says,
An' jokes an' jibes of uther days:
That gi'e si'k gust to rustic sport
And gar the langsome night leuk short.

At uther times in some warm neuk
She to the cutchok ha'ds a beuk,                      blazing fire
And reids in si'k a magic tone
The deeds that our forbeirs ha' done: . . .
Sa here, gif ye attention gi'e.
Si'k ald world wunders ye may see;

May see the maiden stap her wheel,
The mistress cease to turn the reel ;
Lizzie wi' laddle in her hand
Til pot boil over, gapand stand :
Ev'n hungry Gib his speun depose
And for a mament spare his brose ! . . .

An' nou the Muse wi' rapture turns
To Coila's glory, self-taught Burns :
Wha mid the constant avocation
Of a laborious occupation,
Finds time to cull si'k transient flours
As bleum on Galovidean moors ;
And, at the pleugh, or at the team,
Glow with a pure poetic gleam.

Whether, in numbers smooth and easy,
He sing the dirgie of a deasy :
Or in a strain mair free an' frisky
Resoun' the praise of Highland whisky :
Or with a Goldsmith's pencil trace
The virtues o' the cottage race :
Or, wieldan' satire's heavy flail,
The cantan' hypocrite assail :
Or mind a patriot of his duty ;
Or tune a safter pipe to beuty ;
Or, in a frolic wanton teen,
Describe the fun of Hallow-e'en :
Tho' some few notes be harsh an' hard,
Yet still we see the genuine Bard.

Hale be thine heart,—thou wale o' swains,
That grace the Caledonian plains :
May ilka sort o' bliss thee follow,
That suits the vot'ries of Apollo.
A merry heart, a murkless head ;
A conscience pure, an' void o' dread ;
A weil-thak't hut, an' ingle clear ;
A fu' pint-stowp of reaming beer ;
A daily sark, a Sunday coat ;
Thy pocket ne'er without a groat ;
An' for the solace of thy life,
A bonny, braw, belovit wife.

Su'd Fortune, mair outowr, befriend thee ;
An' fouth o' gowd an' gear attend thee :
Bewar of indolence an' pride ;
Nor cast thine aiten reed aside :
Bot trim, an' blaw it mair an' mair ;
An' court the Muses late an' air :
Wi' critic skill explore the groan
An' fan an' fan it owr again
'Till ne'er a bit of caff remain.
So sal thy name be handit down
With uther poets o' renoun ;
An' Burns in gowden cyphers shine
Wi' Inglis, Lindsay, Ballandyne,
Gilbraith, Montgomery ; an' far
Before the laif, ornate Dunbar.

Thy rare example sal inspire
Our rising youth with rival fire :
Wha yet may emulate the lays
Of loftiest bards of ancient days.

From Horace's Satires—I. 4.

Chaucer and Shakespeare, Lydgate, Ben,
And other such old comic men,
Were wont, while poets yet had grace,
To laugh at Folly, to its face. . . .

Butler, tho' in a diff'rent pace,
Pursued the same inviting chase :
Butler, a bard of matchless wit,
Had he in smoother numbers writ.
How could he?—In an hour, he'd bring
Two hundred verses in a strig—
Then pause—and, in another hour,
He'd bring two hundred verses more.
Copious he flow'd, but wanted skill
Or patience to restrain his quill :
Yet in his motley, muddy stream
Full many a pearl is seen to gleam.

'Tis not the number, but the weight
Of lines that we should estimate.
Crispinus challenges to rhyme—
'Appoint a judge—a place—a time—
Give paper, ink—and let us try
Who writes most verses? You or I?'

The Gods did well, that form'd my mind
Of the pacific, gentle kind,
And made me of a temp'rature
Such boist'rous boasting to endure.
Be thou, Crispinus ! and thy fellows,
The emblem of a blacksmith's bellows,
Which, tho' it make a constant din,
Has nought but noisy wind within !

Thrice happy Bays ! He twice a year
Can charm ev'n mighty George's ear ;
And see each dark and dulsome line
In Boyce's deathless music shine :
While—these of mine, scarce one in twenty
Can bear—their palates are so dainty !

Satire, my friend ('twixt me and you),
Can never please but very few.
The reason if you ask—'Tis plain, sir !
The most of mankind merit censure.
Th' ambitious knave, the wealthy fool,
Corruption's tamperer and tool ;
The slave of luxury and lust,
The virtuoso mad for ruse ;
The trader, whose insatiate soul
Drives him like dust from pole to pole—
All these with one accord (you know it)
Dread poetry, and damn the poet.

'Shun, shun (they cry) the dangerous man ;
He'll kick or cuff you, if he can.
Let him but have his darling joke,
He cares not whom he may provoke.
Ev'n sacred friendship vainly tries
To 'scape his wanton railleries :
And, once your name is fairly down,
You're made the sport of all the town.'

The charge is heavy—But agree
To hear, at least, my counter-plea.
And, first, I solemnly disclaim
A poet's venerable name.
For, sure, you cannot think that those,
Who write in verse resembling prose,
Are poets?—He who boldly soars
Above the reach of vulgar pow'rs ;
Whose bosom, if the Muse inspire,
Glow with a more than mortal fire ;

And who, in ev'ry rapt'rous line,
 Displays an energy divine ;
 Commands, not courts, our approbation—
 He, he deserves that appellation !

And hence there are (perhaps you know 'em)
 Who deem ev'n comedy no poem ;
 Because it wants that force and fire
 Which we in poetry require ;
 And, but that numbers interpose,
 Is nothing more than naked prose.

From the 'Epistola Macaronica.'

All in a word qui se oppressos most heavily credunt
 Legibus injustis test-oathibus atque profanis ;
 While high-church homines in ease et luxury vivunt,
 Et placeas, postas, mercedes, munia gras pant !
 Ita cuncti keen were ; fari aut pugnari parati
 Prisca pro causa.

It is a curious commentary on the brevity of Geddes's poetic fame that not one of his poems, save the translations from Horace and the things contained in the first volume of the Antiquarian Transactions, was recently to be found in any public library in Edinburgh. There is a Life of Geddes by Dr Mason Good (1803), a shorter Life in Lives of Scottish Poets (vol. ii. 1822), and one in Dr Robert Chambers's Eminent Scotsmen.

Susanna Blamire (1747-94), the 'Muse of Cumberland,' was, somewhat paradoxically, distinguished for her Scottish songs and poems. She was born of good family in Cumberland, at Cardew Hall near Carlisle, but was brought up by an aunt at Thackwood, endearing herself there to a circle of friends and acquaintance at many a 'merrie neet.' Her elder sister becoming in 1767 the wife of Colonel Graham of Gartmore, Susanna often visited them in Perthshire, where she acquired that taste for Scottish melody and music which prompted her lyrics, The Nabob, And ye shall walk in Silk Attire, The Siller Crown, and others. She knew Allan Ramsay's works, but seems not to have seen anything of Burns's. Besides her Scots songs, she wrote pieces in the Cumbrian dialect, a number of addresses to friends and occasional verses, and a descriptive poem of some length entitled Stoklewath, or the Cumbrian Village. The Scottish lyrics, much more numerous than the Cumbrian ones, are in a rather artificial Scots. Some are partly Cumbrian and partly Scots, and with the Cumbrian words altered (like nobbet in Dinna think, bonnie lassie, I'm gaun to leave thee) appear regularly in Scottish collections. Miss Blamire died unmarried at Carlisle in her forty-seventh year, and her name had almost faded from remembrance, when, in 1842, her poetical works were collected by Dr Lonsdale and published in a small volume, with a memoir and notes by Patrick Maxwell.

The Nabob.

When silent time, wi' lightly foot,
 Had trod on thirty years,
 I sought again my native land
 Wi' many hopes and fears.

Wha kens gin the dear friends I left
 May still continue mine ?
 Or gin I e'er again shall taste
 The joys I left langsyne ?

As I drew near my ancient pile
 My heart beat a' the way ;
 Ilk place I passed seemed yet to speak
 O' some dear former day ;
 Those days that followed me afar,
 Those happy days o' mine,
 Whilk made me think the present joys
 A' naething to langsyne !

The ivied tower now met my eye,
 Where minstrels used to blaw ;
 Nae friend stepped forth wi' open hand,
 Nae weel-kenned face I saw ;
 Till Donald tottered to the door,
 Wham I left in his prime,
 And grat to see the lad return
 He bore about langsyne.

I ran to ilka dear friend's room,
 As if to find them there,
 I knew where ilk ane used to sit,
 And hang o'er mony a chair ;
 Till soft remembrance threw a veil
 Across these een o' mine,
 I closed the door, and sobbed aloud,
 To think on auld langsyne.

Some pency chieks, a new-sprung race,
 Wad next their welcome pay,
 Wha shuddered at my Gothic wa's,
 And wished my groves away.
 'Cut, cut,' they cried, 'those aged elms ;
 Lay low yon mournfu' pine.'
 Na ! na ! our fathers' names grow there,
 Memorials o' langsyne.

To wean me frae these waefu' thoughts,
 They took me to the town ;
 But sair on ilka weel-kenned face
 I missed the youthfu' bloom.
 At balls they pointed to a nymph
 Wham a' declared divine ;
 But sure her mother's blushing cheeks
 Were fairer far langsyne !

In vain I sought in music's sound
 To find that magic art,
 Which oft in Scotland's ancient lays
 Has thrilled through a' my heart.
 The song had mony an artfu' turn ;
 My ear confessed 'twas fine,
 But missed the simple melody
 I listened to langsyne.

Ye sons to comrades o' my youth,
 Forgie an auld man's spleen,
 Wha 'midst your gayest scenes still mourns
 The days he ance has seen.
 When time has passed and seasons fled,
 Your hearts will feel like mine ;
 And aye the sang will maist delight
 That minds ye o' langsyne !

What Ails this Heart o' Mine?

What ails this heart o' mine?
 What ails this watery ee?
 What gars me a' turn pale as death
 When I take leave o' thee?
 When thou art far awa',
 Thou 'lt dearer grow to me;
 But change o' place and change o' folk
 May gar thy fancy jee.

When I gae out at e'en,
 Or walk at morning air,
 Ilk rustling bush will seem to say
 I used to meet thee there.
 Then I 'll sit down and cry,
 And live aneath the tree,
 And when a leaf fa's i' my lap,
 I 'll ca' t' a word frae thee.

I 'll hie me to the bower
 That thou wi' roses tied,
 And where wi' mony a blushing bud
 I strove myself to hide.
 I 'll doat on ilka spot
 Where I hae been wi' thee;
 And ca' to mind some kindly word
 By ilka burn and tree.

Auld Robin Forbes (In Cumbrian).

And auld Robin Forbes hes gien tem a dance,
 I pat on my speckets to see them aw prance;
 I thout o' the days when I was but fifteen,
 And skipped wi' the best upon Forbes's green.
 Of aw things that is I think thout is meast queer,
 It brings that that 's bypast and sets it down here;
 I see Willy as plain as I dui this bit leace,
 When he taik his cwoat lappet and deeghted his feace.

The lasses aw wondered what Willy cud see
 In yen that was dark and hard-featured leyke me;
 And they wondered ay mair when they talked o' my wit,
 And sily telt Willy that cudn't be it.
 But Willy he laughed, and he meade me his weyfe;
 And when was mair happy thro' aw his lang leyfe?
 It's e'en my great comfort, now Willy is geane,
 That he offen said—nea pleace was leyke his awn heame!

I mind when I carried my wark to yon steyle,
 Where Willy was deyken, the time to beguile,
 He wad fling me a daisy to put i' my breast,
 And I hammered my noddle to mek out a jest.
 But merry or grave, Willy often wad tell
 There was nin o' the leave that was leyke my awn sel;
 And he spak what he thout, for I 'd hardly a plack
 When we married, and nobbet ae gown to my back.

When the clock had struck eight, I expected him heame,
 And wheyles went to meet him as far as Dumleane;
 Of aw hours it-telt, eight was dearest to me,
 But now when it streykes there 's a tear i' my ee.
 O Willy! dear Willy! it never can be
 That age, time, or death can divide thee and me!
 For that spot on earth that 's aye dearest to me,
 Is the turf that has covered my Willie frae me.

Hector Macneill (1746–1818), son of an ojd captain of the 42nd who turned farmer in Stirling-shire, spent some years in the West Indies, in 1780–86 was assistant-secretary on an admiral's flagship, and after two visits to Jamaica settled in Edinburgh on an annuity given him by a friend. He wrote several pamphlets, two novels, and some satirical poems denouncing modern changes; a legendary poem, The Harp (1789), and a descriptive poem, The Curse of Forth; but his name is associated with Scotland's Skaith, or the History o' Will and Jean, telling how a husband reduces a happy family to beggary by drinking, and recovers himself after a spell of soldiering and the loss of a leg. But far better known are Macneill's lyrics, several of which—'My boy Tammy,' 'I lo'ed ne'er a laddie but ane,' and 'Come under my plaidie,' for example—are still popular Scottish songs; and 'Mary of Castle-Cary,' in spite of her 'soft rolling ee,' is constantly sung. 'Mary' is appended, as also a verse of each of the two other songs, and part of Scotland's Skaith.

I lo'ed ne'er a laddie but ane,
 He lo'ed ne'er a lassie but me;
 He 's willing to mak me his ain,
 And his ain I am willing to be.
 He has coft me a rocklay o' blue, roque-laure,
short cloak
 And a pair o' mittens o' green;
 The price was a kiss o' my mou',
 And I paid him the debt yestreen.

Come under my plaidie, the night 's gaun to fa';
 Come in frae the cauld blast, the drift, and the snaw;
 Come under my plaidie, and sit down beside me;
 There 's room in 't, dear lassie, believe me, for twa.
 Come under my plaidie, and sit down beside me,
 I 'll hap ye frae every cauld blast that can blaw;
 Oh! come under my plaidie, and sit down beside me;
 There 's room in 't, dear lassie, believe me, for twa.

From 'Scotland's Skaith.'

In a howm, whose bonny burnie
 Whimpering rowed its crystal flood,
 Near the road, where travellers turn aye,
 Neat and beid a cot-house stood: snug

White the wa's, wi' roof new theekit, thatched
 Window broads just painted red; boards
 Lowne 'mang trees and braes it reekit, Sheltered—smoked Haffins seen and haffins hid. Half

Up the gavel-end, thick spreadin', gable
 Crap the clasping ivy green,
 Back ower, firs the high craigs cleadin', Behind—clothing
 Raised a' round a cosy screen.

Down below, a flowery meadow
 Joined the burnie's rambling line;
 Here it was that Howe the widow
 That same day set up her sign.

Brattling down the brae, and near us
 Bottom, Will first sparvelling sees
 'Porter, Ale, and British Sprits,
 Painted bright between twa trees.

'Godsake, Tam! here 's walth for drinking!      wealth
 Wha can this new-comer be?'
 'Hout,' quo' Tam, 'there 's drouth in thinking—      thirst
 Let 's in, Will, an' synce we 'll see.'

Mary of Castle-Cary.

'Saw ye my wee thing, saw ye my ain thing,
 Saw ye my true love down on yon lea?
 Crossed she the meadow yestreen at the gloaming,
 Sought she the burnie where flowers the haw-tree?
 Her hair 't is lint-white, her skin it is milk-white,
 Dark is the blue of her soft rolling ee;
 Red, red are her ripe lips, and sweeter than roses—
 Where could my wee thing wander frae me?'
 'I saw nae your wee thing, I saw nae your ain thing,
 Nor saw I your true love down by yon lea;
 But I met my bonny thing late in the gloaming,
 Down by the burnie where flowers the haw-tree:
 Her hair it was lint-white, her skin it was milk-white,
 Dark was the blue of her soft rolling ee;
 Red were her ripe lips, and sweeter than roses—
 Sweet were the kisses that she gave to me.'
 'It was nae my wee thing, it was nae my ain thing,
 It was nae my true love ye met by the tree:
 Proud is her leal heart, and modest her nature;
 She never loved ony till ance she lo'ed me.
 Her name it is Mary; she 's frae Castle-Cary;
 Aft has she sat when a bairn on my knee;
 Fair as your face is, were 't fifty times fairer,
 Young bragger, she ne'er wad gie kisses to thee.'
 'It was then your Mary; she 's frae Castle-Cary;
 It was then your true love I met by the tree;
 Proud as her heart is, and modest her nature,
 Sweet were the kisses that she gave to me.'
 Sair gloomed his dark brow, blood-red his cheek grew,
 Wild flashed the fire frae his red rolling ee;
 'Ye 'se rue sair this morning your boasts and your scorning;
 Defend ye, fause traitor; fu' loudly ye lie.'
 'Away wi' beguiling,' cried the youth, smiling—
 Off went the bonnet, the lint-white locks flee,      fly
 The belted plaid fa'ing, her white bosom shawing,
 Fair stood the loved maid wi' the dark rolling ee.
 'Is it my wee thing, is it my ain thing,
 Is it my true love here that I see?'
 'O Jamie, forgie me; your heart 's constant to me;
 I 'll never mair wander, dear laddie, frae thee.'

John Lowe (1750-98), son of the gardener at Kenmure Castle in Galloway, studied for the Presbyterian ministry at Edinburgh. His one popular song, Mary's Dream, was written on the drowning of a ship's-doctor named Miller, who was attached to a daughter of the house in which Lowe was tutor. Lowe afterwards emigrated to America, where he taught a while, then took orders as an Episcopal clergyman, but having made an unhappy marriage, became dissipated, and died in great misery near Fredericksburg in Virginia. Only fragments of his other poems have been printed.

Mary's Dream.

The moon had climbed the highest hill
 Which rises o'er the source of Dee,
 And from the eastern summit shed
 Her silver light on tower and tree;

When Mary laid her down to sleep,
 Her thoughts on Sandy far at sea,
 When, soft and low, a voice was heard,
 Saying: 'Mary, weep no more for me!'

She from her pillow gently raised
 Her head, to ask who there might be,
 And saw young Sandy shivering stand,
 With visage pale, and hollow ee.
 'O Mary dear, cold is my clay;
 It lies beneath a stormy sea.
 Far, far from thee I sleep in death;
 So, Mary, weep no more for me!

'Three stormy nights and stormy days
 We tossed upon the raging main;
 And long we strove our bark to save,
 But all our striving was in vain.
 Even then, when horror chilled my blood,
 My heart was filled with love for thee:
 The storm is past, and I at rest;
 So, Mary, weep no more for me!

'O maiden dear, thyself prepare;
 We soon shall meet upon that shore,
 Where love is free from doubt and care,
 And thou and I shall part no more!
 Loud crowed the cock, the shadow fled,
 No more of Sandy could she see;
 But soft the passing spirit said:
 'Sweet Mary, weep no more for me!'

Lady Anne Barnard (1750-1825) was the eldest daughter of James Lindsay, fifth Earl of Balcarres. Her life was divided between Balcarres in East Fife and Edinburgh, till in 1793 she married Andrew Barnard, son of the Bishop of Limerick, and afterwards appointed by Dundas as Colonial Secretary, under Lord Macartney, at the Cape of Good Hope. On his death in 1807 she settled in London. Her Auld Robin Gray, one of the most perfect, tender, and affecting of all our ballads of humble life, was written when she was a girl of twenty-one, published anonymously, and assumed to be an ancient piece. She revealed the secret of its authorship, which till then had been carefully kept, in a letter (8th July 1823) to Sir Walter Scott:

Robin Gray, so called from its being the name of the old herd at Balcarres, was born soon after the close of the year 1771. My sister Margaret had married, and accompanied her husband to London. I was melancholy, and endeavoured to amuse myself by attempting a few poetical trifles. There was an English-Scotch melody of which I was passionately fond. Sophy Johnstone, who lived before your day, used to sing it to us at Balcarres. She did not object to its having improper words, though I did. I longed to sing old Sophy's air to different words, and give its plaintive tones some little history of virtuous distress in humble life, such as might suit it. While attempting to effect this in my closet, I called to my little sister [Elizabeth], now Lady Hardwicke, who was the only person near me, 'I have been writing a ballad, my dear; I am oppressing my heroine with many misfortunes. I have already sent her Jamie to sea, and broken her father's arm, and made her mother fall sick, and given her Auld Robin Gray for a lover; but I wish to load her with a fifth sorrow within the four lines, poor thing! Help me to one! 'Steal the cow, sister Anne,' said the little Elizabeth. The cow was immediately lifted by me, and the song completed. At our fireside and amongst our neighbours 'Auld Robin Gray' was always called for. I was pleased in secret with the approbation it met with; but such was my dread of being suspected of writing anything, perceiving the shyness it created in those who could write nothing, that I carefully kept my own secret.

With this letter Lady Anne sent two continuations of the ballad, which, like most continuations, are greatly inferior to the original. Scott published them, however, in his Auld Robin Gray: a Ballad (Bannatyne Club, 1825), to which reference may be made, as also to Lord Crawford's Lives of the Lindsays (1849). Lady Anne was brought before the public as an authoress once more in 1901, when nineteen interesting letters written home by her from the Cape in 1797-1801 were published as South Africa a Century Ago (new edition, 1925). In these admirable specimens of the eighteenth-century style of letter-writing 'a shrewd, humorous, and widely experienced gentlewoman gives with entire frankness and frequent flashes of wit a clear and instructive account of the state of South Africa when the British flag was first hoisted over Cape Town,' and describes the difficulties that beset attempts 'to conciliate the Dutch as much as possible.' Miss Fairbridge's Lady Anne Barnard at the Cape (1925) contains additional letters, extracts from her unpublished Memoirs, and a series of sketches by this gifted woman.

Auld Robin Gray.

When the sheep are in the fauld, when the kye's come
And a' the weary world to rest are gane, [hame,
The waes o' my heart fa' in showers frae ma ee,
Unkent by my guidman, wha sleeps sound by me.

Young Jamie lo'ed me weel, and sought me for his bride,
But saving ae crown-piece he had naething beside;
To make the crown a pound my Jamie gaed to sea,
And the crown and the pound—they were baith for me.

He hadna been gane a twelvemonth and a day,
When my father brake his arm and the cow was stown
My mither she fell sick—my Jamie was at sea, [away;
And auld Robin Gray came a-courting me.

My father cauldna wark—my mother couldna spin—
I toiled day and night, but their bread I couldna win;
Auld Rob maintained them baith, and, wi' tears in his ee,
Said: 'Jeanie, O for their sakes, will ye no marry me?'

My heart it said na, and I looked for Jamie back,
But hard blew the winds, and his ship was a wrack,
His ship was a wrack—why didna Jamie die,
Or why am I spared to cry wae is me?

My father urged me sair—my mither didna speak,
But she looked in my face till my heart was like to break;
They gied him my hand—my heart was in the sea—
And so Robin Gray he was guidman to me.

I hadna been his wife a week but only four,
When, mournfu' as I sat on the stane at my door,

I saw my Jamie's ghaist, for I couldna think it he,
Till he said: 'I'm come hame, love, to marry thee!'

Oh, sair sair did we greet, and mickle say o' a',
I gied him ae kiss, and bade him gang awa'—
I wish that I were dead, but I'm na like to die,
For, though my heart is broken, I'm but young, wae is me!

I gang like a ghaist, and I carena much to spin,
I darena think o' Jamie, for that wad be a sip,
But I'll do my best a gude wife to be,
For, oh! Robin Gray, he is kind to me.

Robert Fergusson.

Robert Fergusson was born, on 5th September 1750, in Cap-and-Feather Close, off the High Street of Edinburgh. His father was a poor clerk, but both father and mother were of gentle Aberdeenshire blood, and a maternal uncle was a landed proprietor and factor in that country; his biographer, Dr A. B. Grosart, assigns him two clerical great-grandfathers. Fergusson was sent to a private school at the age of six, and entered Edinburgh High School in 1758. He spent four years there, and is reputed to have been quick at making up leeway lost by frequent absences due to native delicacy of constitution, and to have been a devourer of books. In 1761 he procured a bursary which provided for 'maintenance and education' at the Grammar School of Dundee and the University of St Andrews, and after spending three years at the School he matriculated at St Andrews in 1765. Student life at St Andrews was not refined. The town swarmed with ale-houses, and the bursars had a too liberal supply of ale in their otherwise not too generous commons. So it is mainly the 'larks' of Fergusson's university career that contemporary gossip has preserved; a college servant described him as 'a tricky callant, but a fine laddie for a' that;' and careless biographers have stated wrongly that he was expelled for participation in a 'row.' But he is reputed to have loved and known Virgil and Horace; he read much good English; and he had a close friend in Professor William Wilkie, whom Charles Townshend pronounced the most singular combination of god and brute he had ever met (see page 441). Fergusson had rhymed in the vernacular from a very early period, and one of his extra-academical performances was an elegy on the death of Professor Gregory, which showed that at fifteen he was on equal terms with Ramsay:

Now mourn, ye college masters a'!
And frae your een a tear let fa',
Fam'd Gregory Death has taen awa'
Without remeid;

The skaith ye've met wi' s nae that sma' <sup>hurt—</sup>
Sin' Gregory's dead. <sup>not so</sup>

His university studies were broken off by the death of his father. He had intended to qualify for the Church, but he left St Andrews in 1768. A visit to the well-to-do, uncle in the north, who

—of which he had but an imperfect conception—with such a marching song as 'A man's a man for a' that.' It is even doubtful whether he could have written a second and truer Gentle Shepherd. Although he knew every potato on 'Epigoniad,' Wilkie's farm in Fife, and every inch of ground within walking or ferrying distance of Edinburgh, the world of lads and lasses, of 'the cannie hour at e'en,' and of 'the rigs o' barley' was outside the range of his sympathy, and its adequate representation was 'abune his nicht.' But there is no reason to believe that he could not have written many companion sketches to 'Leith Races' and 'The Farmer's Ingle,' 'The Election' and 'The Daft Days,' 'Braid Claith' and 'Hallow-Fair.' Nay, given time and a little judicious encouragement on the part of the 'Embro' gentry,' this warm-hearted lad, who could be satiric but never bitter, would have done justice to that solid, strenuous, municipal Edinburgh which was springing up in his time, whose members had their faults of habit and demeanour, but yet, on the showing of the courteous and gently scanning Topham, were not 'so intemperate as the Germans.' Judged even by the torso of his poetry, Fergusson must be accounted a man not of talent but of genius. Much of his English verse—the bulk of what he has to say on Boreas and Phœbus, Cynthia and Clarinda, Sol and Damon—is unreal enough, but not a whit more unreal than that of the majority of his English contemporaries. When he was satirically in earnest he could write English that was sufficiently incisive, as in his metrical parody of Johnsonese or in verses like:

Thanks to the gods who made me poor!
No lukewarm friends molest my door
Who always show a busy care
In being legatee or heir.
Of this stamp no one will ever follow,
The youth that 's favoured by Apollo;

and

Virtue and vice in him alternate reign'd,
That fill'd his mind and this his pocket drain'd;
Till in the contest they so stubborn grew,
Death gave the parting blow and both withdrew.

Fergusson was above all things the poetical Jan Steen of the Old Town of Edinburgh during its transition through 'jink and drink' from poverty to comfort, of the tipsy brotherhood and sinning sisterhood of its closes, of the coarse joys of its burghal life, of the often dismal gaieties of its high feasts and festivals, of the 'wanwordy, crazy, dinsome' noise of its bells and its crowds—in a word, of the good-nature and good-fellowship of 'Auld Reekie,' where

Couthy chiels at e'ning meet,      sociable fellows
Their bizzin' craigs and mou's to weet;      throats
And blythely gar auld Care gae bye,      make
Wi' blinkin' and wi' bleerin' eye.

A humorist and realist above all things, Fergusson could be more happily reflective than Ramsay, as in the close of his 'Ode to the Bee':

The Muse
Scuds ear and heartsome o'er the dews,      early
Fu' vogie and fu' blyth to nap      eager—glad
The winsome flow'rs frae Nature's lap;
Twining her living gardens there,
That lyart Time can ne'er impair.      hoaly

All the world knows what Burns owes to his elder brother in misfortune—it was loudly and cordially proclaimed from the house-tops by the debtor, and has been exhibited in innumerable 'parallels' ever since—for the conception and execution of 'The Cottar's Saturday Night,' 'The Twa Brigs,' 'Hallowe'en,' and 'The Mouse.' There are anticipations of Robert Louis Stevenson not only in the life of 'the poor white-faced, drunken, vicious boy that raved himself to death in an Edinburgh mad-house,' but in the dry causticity of 'Braid Claith' and in such legitimate tours de force of style as:

Through his minimum o' space
The bleer-ey'd sun,
Wi' blinkin' light, and stealin' pace,
His race doth run.

All unconsciously Fergusson prepared the way for Burns, as the best pupil in the studio prepares the way and the work for the master. In the heart of Scotland he holds the place next to Burns; in all the range of such Scottish verse as, being based on reality, is destined to immortality, there is only Dunbar between him and Burns.

Verses written at the Hermitage of Braid, near Edinburgh.

Would you relish a rural retreat,
Or the pleasure the groves can inspire,
The city's allurements forget,
To this spot of enchantment retire.

Where a valley and crystalline brook,
Whose current glides sweetly along,
Give nature a fanciful look,
The beautiful woodlands among. . . .

Oft let me contemplative dwell
On a scene where such beauties appear;
I could live in a cot or a cell,
And never think solitude near.

The Daft Days.      mad

Now mirk December's dowie face      dark—sad
Glow'rs ow'r the rigs wi' sour grimace,      stares—
While, thro' his minimum o' space,      strips of field
The bleer-ey'd sun,
Wi' blinkin' light, and stealin' pace,
His race doth run.

Frae naked groves nae birdie sings,
To shepherd's pipe nae hillock rings,
The breeze nae od'rous flavour brings
From Boroan cave,
Ap' dwynin' Nature droops her wings,      decaying
Wi' visage grave.

Mankind but scanty pleasure glean
 Frae snawy hill or barren plain,
 Whan Winter, 'midst his nipping train,
 Wi' frozen spear,
 Sends drift ow'r a' his bleak domain,
 And guides the weir.

Auld Reekie! thou 'rt the canty hole,
 A bield for mony a cauld-rife soul,
 Wha snugly at thine ingle loll,
 Baith warm and couth;
 While round they gar the bicker roll,
 To weet their mouth. . . .

Ye browster wives, now busk ye bra',
 An' fling your sorrows far awa';
 Then come and gie's the tither blaw
 O' reaming ale,
 Mair precious than the well o' Spa,
 Our hearts to heal. . . .

Fiddlers, your pins in temper fix,
 And rozet weel your fiddle-sticks,
 But banish vile Italian tricks
 Frae out your quorum,
 Nor fortes wi' pianos mix,
 Gie's Tullochgorum. . . .

And thou, great god of Aqua Vita!
 Wha sways the empire o' this city,
 When fou we're sometimes capernoity,
 Be thou prepar'd
 To hedge us frae that black banditti,
 The City-Guard.

Hallow-Fair.

At Hallowmas, whan nights grow lang,
 And starnies shine fu' clear,
 Whan fock, the nippin' cauld to bang,
 Their winter hap-warms wear;
 Near Edinburgh a fair there hads,
 I wat there's nane whase name is,
 For strappin' dames and sturdy lads,
 And cap and stoup, mair famous,
 Than it that day.

Upo' the tap o' ilka lum
 The sun began to keek,
 And bade the trig-made maidens come
 A sightly joe to seek.
 At Hallow-fair, whare browsters rare
 Keep guid ale on the gantries,
 And dinna scrimp ye o' a skair
 O' kebbucks frae their pantries
 Fu' saut that day.

Here kintry John in bannet blue,
 An' eke his Sunday claes on,
 Rins after Meg wi' rokelay new,
 An' sappy kisses lays on;
 She 'll tauntin' say, 'Ye silly coof!
 Be o' your gab mair sparin';'
 He 'll tak the hint, and criesh her loof
 Wi' what will buy her fairin,
 To chow that day. . . .

Without the cuissers prance and nicher, horses—neigh
 An' ow'r the ley-rig scud; fallow strip of land
 In tents the carles bend the bicker, drink—hooped cup
 An' rant and roar like wud. mad

Than there 's sic yellowchin' and din, shouting
 Wi' wives and wee-anes gabblin',
 That ane might trow they were akin
 To a' the tongues at Babylon,
 Confus'd that day.

The Farmer's Ingle.

Whan gloming grey out o'er the welkin keeks,
 Whan Batic ca's his owsen to the byre,
 Whan Thrasher John, sair dung, his barn-door steeks,
 And lusty lasses at the dighting tire:
 What bangs fu' leal the e'ening's coming cauld,
 And gars snaw-tappit winter freeze in vain;
 Gars dowie mortals look baith blythe and bauld,
 Nor fley'd wi' a' the poortith o' the plain;
 Begin, my Muse, and chant in hamely strain.

Frae the big stack, weel-winnow't on the hill,
 Wi' divets theekit frae the weet and drift,
 Sods, peats, and heath'ry trufs the chimley fill,
 And gar their thick'ning smeck salute the lift:
 The gudeman, new come hame, is blythe to find,
 Whan he out o'er the halland flings his een,
 That ilka turn is handled to his mind,
 That a' his housie looks sae cosh and clean;
 For cleanly house loes he, tho' e'er sae mean.

Weel kens the gudewife that the pleughs require
 A heartsome meltith, and refreshing synd
 O' nappy liquor, o'er a bleezing fire:
 Sair wark and poortith downa weel be join'd.
 Wi' butter'd bannocks now the girle reeks:
 I' the far nook the bowie briskly reams;
 The readied kail stands by the chimley cheeks,
 And hauds the riggin het wi' welcome streams;
 Whilk than the daintiest kitchen nicer seems. . . .

The couthy cracks begin whan supper 's o'er,
 The cheering bicker gars them glibly gash
 O' simmer's showery blinks and winter's sour,
 Whase floods did erst their mailin's produce hash.
 'Bout kirk and market eke their tales gae on,
 How Jock woo'd Jenny here to be his bride,
 And then how Marion, for a bastart son,
 Upo' the cutty-stool was forc'd to ride,
 The waefu' scald o' our Mess John to bide. . . .

Then a' the house for sleep begin to grien,
 Their joints to slack frae industry a while;
 The leaden god fa's heavy on their ein,
 And haffins steeks them frae their daily toil:
 The cruizy too can only blink and bleer,
 The restit ingle 's done the maist it dow;
 Tacksman and cottar eke to bed maun steer,
 Upo' the cod to clear their drumly pow,
 Till wauken'd by the dawning's ruddy glow.

Gloming, twilight; keeks, peeps; ca's, drives; byre, cow-house; sair dung, sorely tired; steeks, shuts; dighting, winnowing; hange, defeats; fu' leal, right well; gars, makes; dowie, melancholy; fley'd, frights; divets, turfs; theekit, thatched; sods, peats, and heath'ry trufs, various turf fuels; gar, make; smeck, smoke; lift, sky; halland, partition; ilka, each; cosh, cosy; meltith, meal; synd, wash-down; downa, dare not; bannocks, cakes; girdle, hot-plate; reeks, smokes; bowie, beer-barrel; reams, foams; riggin, roof of open hearth; couthy cracks, cosy talks; bicker, cup; gars, makes; gash, prattle; mailin's, farm; cutty-stool, stool of repentance; scald, scold; grien, long; haffins steeks, half shuts; cruizy, oil-lamp; restit, roasted; ingle, chimney-corner; dow, can; cod, pillow; drumly pow, confused head.

Leith Races.

In July month, ae bonny morn,
 Whan Nature's rokelay green mantle
 Was spread o'er ilka rigg o' corn
 To charm our roving een;
 Glouring about I saw a quean, staring
 The fairest 'neath the lift; sky
 Her een were o' the siller sheen,
 Her skin like snawy drift,
 Sae white that day.

Quoth she, 'I ferly unco sair wonder very much
 That ye sud musand gae,
 Ye wha hae sung o' Hallow-fair,
 Her winter pranks and play;
 Whan on Leith-sands the racers rare
 Wi' jockey louns are met, lads
 Their orrow pennies there to ware, odd—spend
 And drown themselves in debt
 Fu' deep that day.'

And wha are ye, my winsome dear,
 That taks the gate sae early? road
 Whare do ye win, gin ane may spier, go—if—ask
 For I right meikle ferly much
 That sic braw buskit laughing lass bravely decked
 Thir bonny blinks shou'd gie,
 An' loup like Hebe o'er the grass, skip
 As wanton and as free
 Frae dule this day? sorrow

'I dwell among the caller springs cool
 That weet the Land o' Cakes,
 And aften tune my canty strings joyous
 At bridals and late-wakes,
 They ca' me Mirth; I ne'er was kend
 To grumble or look sour,
 But blythe would be a lift to lend, glad
 Gin ye wod sey my pow'r prove
 An' pith this day.'

A bargain be 't, and, by my fegs, faith
 Gif ye will be my mate,
 Wi' you I'll screw the cheery pegs;
 Ye shanna find me blate; backward
 We'll reel and ramble through the sands,
 An' jeer wi' a' we meet;
 Nor hip the daft and gleesome bands mad
 That fill Edina's street
 Sae thrang this day. . . . crowded

The tinkler billies i' the Bow fellows
 Are now less eident clinking, busy
 As lang's their pith or siller dow, holds out
 They're daffin and they're drinking, larking
 Bedown Leith-walk what bourochs reel groups
 O' ilka trade and station, every
 That gar their wives and childer feel make
 Toom wames for their libation empty stomachs
 O' drink thir days. . . . these

The Bachan bodies thro' the beach
 Their bunch o' Findrums cry, smoked fish
 An' skirl out baul', in Norland speech, screech—boldly
 'Guid speldings fa' will buy?' dried fish—who
 An', by my saul, they're nae wrang gear stuff
 To gust a stirrah's mow; relish—fellow
 Weel staw'd wi' them he'll never spier filled—ask
 The price o' being fu' tipsy
 Wi' drink that day. . . .

The races o'er, they hale the dools heal the dumps
 Wi' drink o' a' kin-kind;
 Great feck gae hirpling hame like fools, the majority
 The cripple lead the blind. —limping
 May ne'er the canker o' the drink
 E'er mak our spirits thrawart, perverse
 'Case we get wharewitha' to wink 'Lest
 Wi' een as blue 's a blawart blue-bottle
 Wi' straits thir days. blows—these

To Hamilton of Bangour—from 'Hame Content: A Satire.'

O Bangour! now the hills and dales
 Nae mair gie back thy tender tales!
 The birks on Yarrow now deplore
 Thy mournfu' muse has left the shore:
 Near what bright burn or crystal spring
 Did you your winsome whistle hing?
 The muse shall there, wi' wat'ry e'e,
 Gie the dunk swaird a tear for thee; dank
 And Yarrow's genius, dowy dame, doleful
 Shall there forget her blude-stain'd stream,
 On thy sad grace to seek repose,
 Who mourn'd her fate, condol'd her woes.

Ode to Horror—posthumous.

Who's he that with imploring eye
 Salutes the rosy dawning sky?
 The cock proclaims the morn in vain,
 His sp'rit to drive to its domain;
 For morning light can but return
 To bid the wretched wail and mourn:
 Not the bright dawning's purple eye
 Can cause the frightful vapours fly,
 Not sultry Sol's meridian throne
 Can bid surrounding fears begone;
 The gloom of night will still preside
 While angry conscience stares on either side.

The chief authorities on Robert Fergusson are Poetical Works, with Life, by David Irving (1800); The Poems of Robert Fergusson, with a Sketch of the Author's Life, by Robert Aitken (1895); Grosart's Robert Fergusson ('Famous Scots' series, 1898); Ford's edition, with biographical introduction (1905, 1916); Porpoise Press Edition (1925); and Fairley's Bibliography (1916).

WILLIAM WALLACE.

John Dunlop (1755–1820) was the son of a Lord Provost of Glasgow, and, himself a successful merchant, attained that same dignity in 1796. At his death he was a collector of customs at Port-Glasgow. Of his songs and poems, the best known are 'Dinna ask me gin I lo'e ye' and 'Here's to the year that's awa'.' His son, John Colin Dunlop, was the author of the History of Fiction (1814).

Elizabeth Hamilton (1758–1816) was author of one excellent little moral tale, The Cottagers of Glenburnie, which was perhaps as effective in promoting domestic improvements among Scottish villagers as Johnson's Journey to the Hebrides was in encouraging the planting of trees by the landed proprietors. Both these critics of Scottish scenery and manners exaggerated weak points, but the pictures were too provokingly true and justly sarcastic of what was a national reproach to be laughed away or denied. Elizabeth Hamilton was born in Belfast. Her father, of Scottish family, was a merchant, and died early, leaving a widow and three children. The children were brought up by relatives, Elizabeth, the youngest, being sent to Mr Marshall, a farmer in Stirlingshire, married to her father's sister. Her brother obtained a cadetship in the East India Company's service, and an elder sister remained in Ireland. Elizabeth, adopted by the Marshalls, was educated with the utmost care. 'No child,' she says, 'ever spent so happy a life, nor have I ever met with anything at all resembling our way of living, except the description given by Rousseau of Wolmar's farm and vintage.' The child soon showed a taste for literature. Wallace was her first hero; but meeting with Ogilby's translation of the Iliad, she adored Achilles and dreamed of Hector. She visited Edinburgh and Glasgow, carried on a learned correspondence with a philosophical lecturer, and wrote many verses. Her first appearance in print was the record of a pleasure-party to the Highlands, surreptitiously sent by a friend to a provincial magazine. Her brother's letters and, when he returned on furlough, conversations on Indian affairs stored her mind with the materials for her Letters of a Hindoo Rajah (1796), a work remarkable for good sense and sprightliness. In 1800 she published Memoirs of Modern Philosophers, a novel in defence of virtue and religion against the dangerous elements in Godwin's Political Justice; and between that and 1806 she gave to the world Letters on Education, Memoirs of Agrippina, and Letters to the Daughter of a Nobleman. In 1808 appeared her most popular, original, and useful work, The Cottagers of Glenburnie; and she subsequently published Popular Essays on the Human Mind, and Hints to the Directors of Public Schools, based on Pestalozzi. From 1788 she lived mainly in London or elsewhere in England, till 1804, when 'Mrs Hamilton,' as she now liked to be called, settled in Edinburgh. She died at Harrogate.

The Cottagers of Glenburnie is a tale of humble life in a poor Scottish hamlet, and the heroine, a retired English governess, middle-aged and lame, has come to stay as a lodger with her only surviving relative, a cousin married to a small farmer in Glenburnie. On her way she has called at Gowanbrae, the house of the factor or land-steward, who, with his daughter and boys, walks with Mrs Mason to Glenburnie. The house is dirty and uncomfortable; the farmer is a good easy man, but his wife is obstinate and prejudiced, and the children self-willed and rebellious. Mrs Mason finds the family quite incorrigible, but she effects a wonderful change among their neighbours. She gets a school established on her own plan, and boys and girls exert themselves to effect a reformation in the cottages of their parents. The most sturdy sticklers for the old ways at length see the good points of the new system, and the village undergoes a complete transformation. Sir Walter called the Cottagers 'a picture of the rural habits of Scotland, of striking and impressive fidelity.' Miss Hamilton was an accomplished kailyard novelist long before the phrase was invented, and was perhaps the first entitled to the name; her Cottagers appeared twelve years before Galt's Ayrshire Legatees was published by Blackwood.

Glenburnie.

They had not proceeded many paces until they were struck with admiration at the uncommon wildness of the scene which now opened to their view. The rocks which seemed to guard the entrance of the glen were abrupt and savage, and approached so near each other that one could suppose them to have been riven asunder to give a passage to the clear stream which flowed between them. As they advanced, the hills receded on either side, making room for meadows and corn-fields, through which the rapid burn pursued its way in many a fantastic maze. The road, which winded along the foot of the hills, on the north side of the glen, owed as little to art as any country road in the kingdom. It was very narrow, and much encumbered by loose stones, brought down from the hills above by the winter torrents.

Mrs Mason and Mary were so enchanted by the change of scenery which was incessantly unfolding to their view that they made no complaints of the slowness of their progress, nor did they much regret being obliged to stop a few minutes at a time, where they found so much to amuse and to delight them. But Mr Stewart had no patience at meeting with obstructions which, with a little pains, could have been so easily obviated; and as he walked by the side of the car, expatiated upon the indolence of the people of the glen, who, though they had no other road to the market, could contentedly go on from year to year without making an effort to repair it. 'How little trouble would it cost,' said he, 'to throw the smaller of these loose stones into these holes and ruts, and to remove the larger ones to the side, where they would form a fence between the road and the hill! There are enough of idle boys in the glen to effect all this, by working at it for one hour a week during the summer. But then their fathers must unite in setting them to work; and there is not one in the glen who would not sooner have his horses lamed, and his carts torn to pieces, than have his son employed in a work that would benefit his neighbours as much as himself.'

As he was speaking they passed the door of one of these small farmers, and immediately turning a sharp corner, began to descend a steep, which appeared so unsafe that Mr Stewart made his boys alight, which they could do without inconvenience, and going to the head of the horse, took his guidance upon himself. At the foot of this short precipice the road again made a sudden turn, and discovered to them a misfortune which threatened to put a stop to their proceeding any further for the present evening. It was no other than the overturn of a cart of hay, occasioned by the breaking down of the bridge along which it had been passing. Happily for the poor horse that drew this ill-fated load, the harness by which he was attached to it was of so frail a nature as to make little resistance; so that he and his rider escaped unhurt from the fall, notwithstanding its being one of considerable depth.

At first, indeed, neither boy nor horse was seen; but as Mr Stewart advanced to examine whether, by removing the hay, which partly covered the bridge and partly hung suspended on the bushes, the road might still be passable, he heard a child's voice in the hollow exclaiming, 'Come on, ye muckle brute! ye had as weel come on! I'll gar ye! I'll gar ye! That's a gude beast now. Come awa'! That's it! Ay, ye're a gude beast now!' As the last words were uttered, a little fellow of about ten years of age was seen issuing from the hollow, and pulling after him, with all his might, a great long-backed clumsy animal of the horse species, though apparently of a very mulish temper. 'You have met with a sad accident,' said Mr Stewart; 'how did all this happen?' 'You may see how it happened plain enough,' returned the boy; 'the brig brak, and the cart coupet.' 'And did you and the horse coup likewise?' said Mr Stewart. 'O ay, we a' coupet thegither, for I was ridin' on his back.' 'And where is your father and all the rest of the folk?' 'Whaur sud they be but in the hay-field? Dinna ye ken that we're takin' in our hay? John Tamson's and Jamie Forster's was in a week syne, but we're aye ahint the lave.'

All the party were greatly amused by the composure which the young peasant evinced under his misfortune, as well as by the shrewdness of his answers; and having learned from him that the hay-field was at no great distance, gave him some halfpence to hasten his speed, and promised to take care of his horse till he should return with assistance. He soon appeared, followed by his father and two other men, who came on stepping at their usual pace. 'Why, farmer,' said Mr Stewart, 'you have trusted rather too long to this rotten plank, I think' (pointing to where it had given way); 'if you remember the last time I passed this road, which was several months since, I then told you that the bridge was in danger, and shewed you how easily it might be repaired.' 'It is a' true,' said the farmer, moving his bonnet; 'but I thought it would do weel enough. I spoke to Jamie Forster and John Tamson about it; but they said they wadna fash themselves to mend a brig that was to serve a' the folk in the glen.' 'But you must now mend it for your own sake,' said Mr Stewart, 'even though a' the folk in the glen should be the better for it.' 'Ay, sir,' said one of the men, 'that's spoken like yoursel!' 'Would everybody follow your example, there would be nothing in the world but peace and good neighbourhood.'

One somewhat didactic Scottish song, 'My ain Fireside,' by Miss Hamilton, attained great popularity, and is still often sung. The first verse is as follows:

I hae seen great anes, and sat in great ha's,
 'Mang lords and fine ladies a' covered wi' braws,
 At feasts made for princes wi' princes I've been,
 When the grand shine o' splendour has dazzled my een;
 But a sight sae delightfu' I trow I ne'er spied
 As the bonny blithe blink o' my ain fireside.
 My ain fireside, my ain fireside,
 O cheery's the blink o' my ain fireside;
 My ain fireside, my ain fireside,
 O there's nought to compare wi' ane's ain fireside.

Mrs Hamilton's Memoirs, with letters and papers, were published in 1815 by Miss Benger.

Minor Scottish Song-Writers.

Among the minor Scottish song-writers of the eighteenth century, many of whom are not thoroughly identified, the following deserve mention. George Halket (died 1756), a drunken Aberdeenshire schoolmaster, who published 'in 1727 a worthless volume of Occasional Poems,' is credited with the authorship of Logie o' Buchan, and of the spirited Jacobite song, Whirry Whigs Awa'. Other Jacobite rhymesters were the Rev. Murdoch M'Lennan (1701-83), minister of Crathie, who described the Race of Sheriffmuir in the spirited ballad bearing the refrain 'We ran and they ran;' and Adam Skirving (1719-1803), a gentleman-farmer of Haddingtonshire, who witnessed the battle of Prestonpans and celebrated it in Tranent Muir and Hey Johnnie Cope. Isobel Pagan (died 1821), an eccentric spinster who sold unlicensed whisky near Muirkirk, is said to have been the authoress of the well-known pastoral song, Ca' the Yowes to the Knowes, which Burns polished up for George Thomson in 1794. A collection of her songs and poems appeared at Glasgow about 1805.—From the mouth of Jean Glover (1758-1801), an Ayrshire tramp, street-singer, and thief, Burns took down the words of her song, Ower the Muir amang the Heather. Another oddity was Dougal Graham (1724-79), the hunchback bellman of Glasgow, who in his earlier years had peddled in Stirlingshire, and accompanied the Jacobite army (as a camp-follower, doubtless, rather than a combatant) to Derby and Culloden. His Account of the Rebellion (1746), though mere doggerel, has some worth as an historic document, and Sir Walter Scott thought of editing it for the Bannatyne Club. Graham was the author of many popular chapbooks, including John Cheap the Chapman and The History of Haverel Wives; and some of his verses—those notably on the Turninspike, describing the Highlanders' notion of the roads of General Wade—are not lacking in rude vigour. His works were published in a limited edition in 1883. A very different figure from these was Dr Adam Austin, a fashionable Edinburgh physician, who solaced his grief by writing The Lack of Gold when Miss Jean Drummond of Megginch jilted him for the Duke of Athole in 1749. For Mrs Elizabeth Grant, author of Roy's Wife, see above at page 596; and for Jean Adam and There's nae Luck about the House, see page 523.

John Mayne (1759-1836), born in Dumfries, died in London proprietor and joint-editor of The Star newspaper. He was brought up as a printer, and whilst apprentice in the Dumfries Journal office in 1777, in his eighteenth year, he published the germ of his Siller Gun in a quarto page of twelve stanzas; and this he continued to enlarge and improve up to the tittle of his death. The twelve stanzas expanded in two years to two cantos; in 1780, enlarged to three cantos, the poem was published in Ruddiman's Magazine; and in 1808 it was published in London in four cantos. Of this edition Sir Walter Scott said (in a note to the Lady of the Lake) 'that it surpassed the efforts of Fergusson and came near to those of Burns.' An edition in five cantos was published in 1836. Mayne was author of a short poem on 'Hallowe'en,' printed in Ruddiman's Magazine in 1780, which had a direct influence on Burns's treatment of the same subject; and in 1781 he published his fine ballad of Logan Braes, two lines of which Burns copied into his Logan Water. Many have thought Mayne's the better poem of the two. His version of Helen of Kirkconnel is often quoted. For five years (1782-87) he was employed in the office of the brothers Foulis in Glasgow. His poem on 'Glasgow,' published in the Glasgow Magazine in 1783, was separately issued in 1803, and is a description of Glasgow and its ways, in the verse specially favoured by Burns, and a laudation of the energy and accomplishments of its citizens. The Siller Gun is humorous and descriptive. The subject of the poem is an ancient custom in Dumfries, called 'Shooting for the Siller Gun,' the gun being a small silver tube presented by James VI. to the incorporated trades as a prize to the best marksman. It is after the manner of Pebbles to the Play and cognate rhymes down to Fergusson and Burns.

Logan Braes.

By Logan's streams that rin sae deep,
Fu' aft wi' glee I've herded sheep,
Herded sheep and gathered slaes,
Wi' my dear lad on Logan braes.
But wae's my heart, thae days are gane,
And I wi' grief may herd alane,
While my dear lad maun face his faes,
Far, far frae me and Logan braes.

Nae mair at Logan kirk will he
Atween the preachings meet wi' me:
Meet wi' me, or when it's mirk,
Convoy me hame frae Logan kirk.
I weel may sing thae days are gane:
Frae kirk and fair I come alane,
While my dear lad maun face his faes,
Far, far frae me and Logan braes.

At e'en, when hope amaist is gane,
I dauner out and sit alane;
Sit alane beneath the tree
Where aft he kept his tryst wi' me.
Oh! could I see thae days again,
My lover skaithless, and my ain!
Beloved by friends, revered by faes,
We'd live in bliss on Logan braes!

The characteristic short line,

Herded sheep and gathered slaes,
is in some of the versions filled out as—

I've herded sheep or gathered slaes.

And the last verse sometimes is made to run:

At e'en, when hope amaist is gane,
I dander dowie and forlane;
Or sit beneath the tyisting tree
Where first he spal'd o' love to me. . . .
Revered by friends, and far frae faes,
We'd live in bliss on Logan braes.

Helen of Kirkconnel.

I wish I were where Helen lies,
For, night and day, on me she cries:
And, like an angel, to the skies
Still seems to beckon me!
For me she lived, for me she sighed,
For me she wished to be a bride;
For me in life's sweet morn she died
On fair Kirkconnel-Lee!

Where Kirtle waters gently wind,
As Helen on my arm reclined,
A rival with a ruthless mind,
Took deadly aim at me:
My love, to disappoint the foe,
Rushed in between me and the blow;
And now her corse is lying low
On fair Kirkconnel-Lee!

Though Heaven forbids my wrath to swell,
I curse the hand by which she fell—
The fiend who made my heaven a hell,
And tore my love from me!
For if, where all the graces shine—
Oh! if on earth there's aught divine,
My Helen! all these charms were thine—
They centred all in thee!

Ah, what avails it that, amain,
I clove the assassin's head in twain;
No peace of mind, my Helen slain,
No resting-place for me!

I see her spirit in the air—
I hear the shriek of wild despair,
When Murder laid her bosom bare,
On fair Kirkconnel-Lee!

Oh! when I'm sleeping in my grave,
And o'er my head the rank weeds wave,
May He who life and spirit gave
Unite my love and me!

Then from this world of doubts and sighs,
My soul on wings of peace shall rise;
And, joining Helen in the skies,
Forget Kirkconnel-Lee!

The story of Helen Irving (or Bell), daughter of the Laird of Kirkconnel, in Annandale, slain by the bullet aimed by a rejected suitor at his favoured rival, her betrothed, seems to date from the sixteenth century, and is enshrined in a fine old ballad. There are modern versions by Pinkerton and Jamieson—not to speak of Wordsworth's Ellen Irwin—besides Mayne's. Many of the verses of the old ballad are incomparably more poetic, such as the last:

I wish I were where Helen lies!
Night and day on me she cries,
And I am weary of the skies
For her sake that died for me.

From 'The Siller Gun.'

The lift was clear, the morn serene,
The sun just glinting ower the scene,
When James M'Noe began again
To beat to arms,
Rousing the heart o' man and wean
Wi' war's alarms.

Frae far and near the country lads
(Their joes ahint them on their yads)
Flocked in to see the show in squads;
And, what was dafter,
Their pawky nithers and their dads
Cam trotting after!

jades—nags

And mony a beau and belle were there,
Doited wi' dozing on a chair;
For, lest they 'd, sleeping, spoil their hair,
Or miss the sight,
The gowks, like bairns before a fair,
Sat up a' night!

stupefied

Wi' hats as black as ony raven,
Fresh as the rose, their beards new shaven,
And a' their Sunday's cleeding having
Sae trim and gay,
Forth cam our 'Trades, some orra saving
To wair that day.

ninnies

odd spend

Fair fa' ilk canny, caidgy carle, shrewd, cheery countryman
Weel may he bruik his new apparel!
And never dree the bitter snarl
O' scowling wife!
But, blest in pantry, barn, and barrel,
Be blithe through life!

enjoy
endure

Hech, sirs! what crowds cam into town,
To see them mustering up and down!
Lasses and lads, sunburnt and brown—
Women and weans,
Gentle and simple, mingling, crown
The gladsome scenes!

high born and humbly born

At first, forenent ilk Deacon's hallan
His ain brigade was made to fall in;
And, while the muster-roll was calling,
And joy-bells jowing,
Het-pints, weel spiced, to keep the saul in,
Around were flowing!

in front of—entry

ringing
mullied ale

Broiled kipper, cheese, and bread, and ham,
Laid the foundation for a dram
O' whisky, gin frae Rotterdam,
Or cherry brandy;
Whilk after, a' was fish that cam
To Jock or Sandy.

Oh! weel ken they wha lo'e their chappin,
Drink maks the auldest swack and strappin';
Gars Care forget the ills that happen—
The blate look spruce—
And even the throwless cock their tappin, nerveless—headgear
And craw fu' croose!

choppin,
measure of ale
suppleshy
nerveless—headgear
crow briskly

The muster ower, the different bands
File aff in parties to the sands,
Where, 'mid loud laughs and clapping hands,
Glee'd Geordy Smith
Reviews them, and their line expands
Alang the Nith!

But ne'er, for uniform or air,
Was sic a group reviewed elsewhere!
The short, the tall; fat folk and spare;
Syde coats and docket;
Wigs, queues, and clubs, and curly hair;
Round hats and cockit!

As to their guns—thae fell engines,
Borrowed or begged, were of a' kinds,
For bloody war, or bad designs,
Or shooting cushies—
Lang fowling-pieces, carabines,
And blunderbusses! . . .

wood-pigeons

'Ohon!' says George, and ga'e a grane,
'The age o' chivalry is gane!'
Syne, having ower and ower again
The hale surveyed,
Their route and a' things else, made plain,
He snuffed, and said:

'Now, gentlemen! now, mind the motion,
And dinna, this time, mak a botion:
Shouter your arms! Oh! haud them tosh on,
And not athraw!
Wheel wi' your left hands to the ocean,
And march awa'!

botch
trimly
awry

Wi' that, the dialin drums rebound,
Fifes, clarionets, and hautboys sound!
Through crowds on crowds, collected round,
The Corporations
Trudge aff, while Echo's self is drowned
In acclamations!

echoing

Alexander Wilson (1766-1813), a Scottish weaver-poet, became famous as the skilful delineator of American birds and the enthusiastic describer of American scenery and bird life. Born in Paisley, he was brought up a weaver, but became a pedlar, and in 1789 he added to his muslin goods and other commodities a prospectus of a volume of poems. But his hopes from the sale of his own verse proved vain, and he returned to the loom, at Lochwinnoch and at Paisley. In 1792 he issued anonymously his best poem, Watty and Meg, which was at first attributed to Burns. And Burns almost justified the implied criticism. His wife told Dr Robert Chambers that on hearing a hawk of chapbooks cry 'Watty and Meg, a new ballad by Robert Burns,' Burns exclaimed, 'I would make your plack a bawbee if it were mine.' A lampoon on the master-weavers during a trade dispute in Paisley, implying indiscreet sympathy with reformers and French revolutionists, drove him to America in 1794. He got work in Philadelphia, travelled as a pedlar in New Jersey, and was a school-teacher in Pennsylvania. His skill in drawing birds led him to make a collection of all the birds in America. In October 1804 he set out on his first excursion, and wrote The Foresters, a Poem. In 1806 he was employed on the American edition of Rees's Cyclopaedia. He soon prevailed upon the publisher to undertake a new venture—a work illustrating, by his own drawings and with full descriptions, all the birds of America, and in 1808-10 he brought out the first two volumes of the American Ornithology. In 1811 he made a canoe voyage down the Ohio, and travelled overland through the Mississippi Valley from Nashville to New Orleans. He continued 'collecting birds and subscribers,' writing and publishing, traversing swamps and forests in quest of rare birds, and undergoing the greatest privations and fatigues, till he had issued a seventh volume. At Philadelphia he sank under his severe labours, and there he was buried. In his Ornithology he showed he possessed descriptive powers, artistic 'sensibilities, and a varied and ornate style quite exceptional even in a Paisley poet.

The Bald Eagle.

The celebrated cataract of Niagara is a noted place of resort for the bald eagle, as well on account of the fish procured there, as for the numerous carcasses of squirrels, deer, bears, and various other animals that, in their attempts to cross the river above the falls, have been dragged into the current, and precipitated down that tremendous gulf, where, among the rocks that bound the rapids below, they furnish a rich repast for the vulture, the raven, and the bald eagle, the subject of the present account. This bird has been long known to naturalists, being common to both continents, and occasionally met with from a very high northern latitude to the borders of the torrid zone, but chiefly in the vicinity of the sea, and along the shores and cliffs of our lakes and large rivers. Formed by nature for braving the severest cold; feeding equally on the produce of the sea and of the land; possessing powers of flight capable of outstripping even the tempests themselves; unawed by anything but man; and, from the ethereal heights to which he soars, looking abroad at one glance on an immeasurable expanse of forests, fields, lakes, and ocean deep below him, he appears indifferent to [localities or] change of seasons, as in a few minutes he can pass from summer to winter, from the lower to the higher regions of the atmosphere, the abode of eternal cold, and from thence descend at will to the torrid or the arctic regions of the earth.

In procuring fish he displays, in a very singular manner, the genius and energy of his character, which is fierce, contemplative, daring, and tyrannical—attributes not exerted but on particular occasions, but when put forth, overpowering all opposition. Elevated on the high dead limb of some gigantic tree that commands a wide view of the neighbouring shore and ocean, he seems calmly to contemplate the motions of the various feathered tribes that pursue their busy avocations below; the snow-white gulls slowly winnowing the air, the busy tringæ coursing along the sands, trains of ducks streaming over the surface, silent and watchful cranes intent and wading, clamorous crows, and all the winged multitude that subsist by the bounty of this vast liquid magazine of nature. High over all these hovers one whose action instantly arrests his whole attention. By his wide curvature of wing and sudden suspension in air, he knows him to be the fish-hawk, settling over some devoted victim of the deep. His eye kindles at the sight, and balancing himself with half-opened wings on the branch, he watches the result. Down, rapid as an arrow from heaven, descends the distant object of his attention, the roar of its wings reaching the ear as it disappears in the deep, making the surges foam around. At this moment the eager looks of the eagle are all ardour; and, levelling his neck for flight, he sees the fish-hawk once more emerge, struggling with his prey, and mounting in the air with screams of exultation. These are the signal for our hero, who, launching into the air, instantly gives chase, and soon gains on the fish-hawk; each exerts his utmost to 'mount above the other, displaying in these rencontres the most elegant and sublime aerial evolutions.' The unencumbered eagle rapidly advances, and is just on the point of reaching his opponent, when, with a sudden scream, probably of despair and honest execration, the latter drops his fish: the eagle, poising himself for a moment, as if to take a more certain aim, descends like a whirlwind, snatches it in his grasp ere it reaches the water, and bears his ill-gotten booty silently away to the woods.

From 'Watty and Meg.'

I' the thrang o' stories tellin',
Shakin' hands and jokin' queer,
Swith! a chap comes on the hallan— entry
'Mungo! is our Watty here?'

Maggy's weel-kent tongue and hurry
Darted through him like a knife:
Up the door flew—like a fury
In came Watty's scoldin' wife.

'Nasty, gude-for-naething being!
O ye snuffy drucken sow!
Bringin' wife and weans to ruin,
Drinkin' here wi' sic a crew!

'Rise! ye drucken beast o' Bethel!
Drink 's your night and day's desire;
Rise, this precious hour! or faith I'll
Fling your whisky i' the fire!'

Watty heard her tongue unhallowed,
Paid his groat wi' little din,
Left the house, while Maggy followed,
Flytin' a' the road behin'. Scolding

Folk frae every door came lampin', striding
Maggy curs't them ane and a',
Clappèd wi' her hands, and stampin',
Lost her bauchels i' the snaw. old shoes, slippers

Hame, at length, she turned the gavel, gable
Wi' a face as white's a clout, dishcloth
Ragin' like a very devil,
Kickin' stools and chairs about.

'Ye'll sit wi' your limmers round ye— paramours
Hang you, sir, I'll be your death!
Little hauds my hands, confound you, holds
But I cleave you to the teeth!'

Watty, wha, 'midst this oration,
Eyed her whites, but durst na speak,
Sat, like patient Resignation,
Trembling by the ingle-cheek.

Sad his wee drap brose he sippet— half-boiled porridge—sipped
Maggy's tongue gaed like a bell—
Quietly to his bed he slippet,
Sighin' aften to himsel:

'Nane are free frae some vexation,
Ilk ane has his ills to dree; endure
But through a' the hale creation
Is nae mortal vexed like me!'

Volumes viii. and ix. of the Ornithology were published after Wilson's death by Ord, his assistant. The work was continued by Charles Lucien Bonaparte (1828-33); and an edition by Jardine (1832) has been more than once reprinted. See Lives by Crichton (1816), Ord (1828), Hetherington (1831), Jared Sparks (1831), Brightwell (1861), and Paton (1863); and a Sketch prefixed to Grosart's edition of Poems and Miscellaneous Prose (1876).

Robert Burns.

Robert Burns was born on the 25th of January 1759, in a two-roomed clay cottage built by his father in the village of Alloway, which, carefully preserved, still stands—although there is some obstinate local scepticism on this point—about two miles from the town of Ayr. He came, on the one side, of a Kincardineshire yeoman family which, he believed, had suffered for the Stewarts; and on the other, of undoubted Ayrshire Covenanting stock. In his brief autobiography, written in the form of a letter to Dr John Moore, the novelist, in 1787, he says: 'My forefathers rented lands of the famous noble Keiths of Marshal, and had the honour to share their fate.' He told his friend, Ramsay of Ochtertyre, that his paternal grandfather 'had been plundered and driven out in the year 1715, when gardener to Earl Marischal,' and that his maternal great-grandfather was 'shot at Aird's Moss,' when Richard Cameron was taken prisoner.

William Burnes, a gardener, nurseryman, and farmer—who was thirty-eight years of age when his eldest son Robert was born, and is described as of 'thin sinewy figure, about five feet eight or nine inches in height, somewhat bent with toil, his haffet locks thin and bare, with a dark swarthy complexion'—was a man of notable character and individuality. He wrote for his children a Manual of Religious Belief; induced his neighbours to hire a competent teacher, John Murdoch, for the village; and showed his boys—he had seven children in all—both by precept and by practice, how to base conduct on reason. Agnes Broun, the poet's mother, and eleven years her husband's junior, was an excellent housewife, with no pretensions to education; but it was probably from her that he inherited the lyrical gift. According to her daughter, Mrs Begg, she had 'a well-made sony figure of about the ordinary height, with a beautiful red and white complexion, a skin the most transparent I ever saw, red hair, dark eyes and eyebrows, with a fine square forehead.' Life was hard with the Burneses. Robert had two and a half years' schooling in Alloway. Then his father, with a view to keeping his children about him, ventured to take the farm of Mount Oliphant, a couple of miles distant from the seven-acre croft he had hitherto cultivated, undertaking to pay forty or forty-five pounds a year for seventy acres of poor land which he had to stock with £100 borrowed from his employer. From the age of nine the boy had none but intermittent school-teaching; but his education was steadily carried on by his father, who taught his boys, in addition to the three 'R's,' geography and the rudiments both of ancient and of natural history, and, as Gilbert, the second son, testified, 'conversed familiarly on all subjects with us as if we had been men.'

Possession of a Complete Letter-Writer inspired

Robert with a strong desire to excel in letter-writing, while it furnished him with 'models by some of the first writers in the language.' The 'latent seeds of poesy' had been cultivated by Betsy Davidson, an 'old maid of his mother's who was remarkable for her ignorance, credulity, and superstition, but who had the largest collection in the country of tales and songs concerning devils, ghosts, fairies, brownies, witches, warlocks, spunkies, kelpies, elf-candles, dead-lights, wraiths, apparitions, cantraipts, enchanted towers, giants, and other trumpery.' He read poetry chiefly in 'Selections' and 'Collections,' but secured a copy of Pope soon after entering his teens. 'A critic in substantives, verbs, and particles' by ten or eleven, he obtained an introduction to French at fourteen, and made the first of several vain efforts to learn Latin. All the while he had, as a poor farmer's son, to work hard; at fifteen he was the principal labourer on the farm, which his brother Gilbert described as 'almost the very poorest soil I know of in a state of cultivation; there was little or no social intercourse with neighbours, and what with the overstrain of his young muscles, 'the cheerless gloom of a hermit, with the unceasing toil of a galley-slave,' and anxiety about the future—for the father, with the utmost economy and industry, could not keep his head above water—he was, before he came to manhood, affected with a nervous disorder, which caused him physical suffering and fits of hypochondria through life. But he fell in love in his fifteenth year, and wrote his first song. Two years later he went for a season to a school on a smuggling coast, Kirkoswald, and learned to 'take his glass.' So when in 1777 William Burnes removed to the farm of Lochlea—130 acres—in Tarbolton parish, Robert at nineteen was well read, 'constantly the victim of some fair enslaver,' and could rhyme. At Lochlea the circumstances of the family were easier. Burns became a Freemason, started a debating club in Tarbolton, developed the conversational powers which were to impress Edinburgh society, 'thirsted for distinction,' dressed with care, and acquired some notoriety as a champion of heretical as opposed to 'Old Light' opinions (or ultra-Calvinism) in the churchyard colloquies in which he had learned as a mere boy to practise the reasoning faculty so carefully cultivated by his father. He thought of marriage, and, despairing of making a living by farming, spent a season in Irvine to learn flax-dressing. The experiment, however, was not successful. His partner was, he averred, a swindler. Their shop was burned to the ground, and he was 'left like a true poet, not worth a sixpence.'

'After three years' tossing and whirling in the vortex of litigation,' William Burnes died of consumption in 1784; and, rescuing some small remains from his embarrassed estate, Robert and Gilbert took the farm of Mossiel, in the adjoining parish of Mauchline. The poet's life continued to be, on his brother's testimony, frugal and temperate; it must have been so, for he had not more than seven pounds a year in cash.

But before leaving Lochlea he had for the first time deviated from propriety in his relations with women, and Elizabeth Paton, his mother's maid-servant, bore him a daughter. The first genuine determination of his mind towards literary effort, the first appreciation of its usual aims and results, appears in certain entries in his Commonplace Book, which are undated, but may, though not without some hesitation, be ascribed to 1784. There he expressed a strong wish that he might be able to celebrate in verse the scenes of his native county, the locus of many of the actions of the 'Glorious Wallace, the Saviour of his Country,' as 'the excellent Ramsay' and 'the still more excellent Fergusson' had celebrated the scenes with which they were familiar. So he made poetry at once the exposition and the sedative of his passions, wrote a welcome to his illegitimate child, and versified epistles to local brother poets, such as David Sillar and John Lapraik. He threw his whole soul into the task. He fell in love with Jean Armour, daughter of a master-mason in Mauchline. He took sides with the New Lights or Liberal clergy against the Old Lights or High-flyers, of whom his own minister in Mauchline, the Rev. William Auld, was one; wrote skits in verse for the cause—'The Twa Herds,' the 'Epistle to John Goldie,' 'Holy Willie's Prayer'—and was encouraged by the countenance and friendship of clergymen and lawyers who appreciated his cleverness. His poems circulated in manuscript; and as by 1785 Mossgiel, which 'lies very high and mostly on a cold wet bottom,' promised to be no more profitable than Lochlea, he had doubtless come to contemplate publishing.

Burns was never more productive than at this time; it is safe to set down as the output of the later autumn and early winter these poems: 'To a Mouse,' 'Halloween,' 'Man was Made to Mourn,' 'The Cotter's Saturday Night,' 'Address to the Deil,' 'The Jolly Beggars,' 'To James Smith,' 'The Vision,' 'The Author's Earnest Cry and Prayer,' 'The Twa Dogs,' 'The Ordination,' and 'Scotch Drink'—the works which formed the foundation of his future fame. Publication was precipitated by the discovery that Jean Armour was soon to become a mother. Burns gave her a writing acknowledging her as his wife under certain conditions, but Armour disapproved of the proposal made, and induced his daughter to destroy the document. The poet, rendered well-nigh desperate, resolved to emigrate to Jamaica as book-keeper on the estate of an Ayr family of the name of Douglas. Partly to raise money for his passage, he now brought out his first volume, the famous Kilmarnock edition—Poems chiefly in the Scottish

ROBERT BURNS.

From the Portrait by Nasmyth in the National Gallery of Scotland at Edinburgh.

Dialect—copies of which have fetched from five hundred to a thousand pounds. Meantime there seems to have occurred the 'Highland Mary' episode. According to the best hypothesis founded on the few facts that have been ascertained, almost immediately after the breach with the Armour family, Jean having been despatched to Paisley, the poet plighted his troth to Mary Campbell, a Highland maid-servant residing in the neighbourhood, who went home to Dunoon to prepare for marriage, and straightway died, to be apparently forgotten for the moment by Burns (who had never ceased to love Jean), but to live for ever in 'To Mary in Heaven' and other poems.

The success of the Kilmarnock edition of the poems (July 1786) changed the current of the poet's life. He was induced to abandon the Jamaica scheme, and to proceed to Edinburgh with a view to the publication of a new edition. He arrived on 28th November 1786. By this time fairly well accustomed to 'the tables of the great,' owing to his popularity in Ayrshire, he discovered no shyness or awkwardness in his intercourse with the litterati to whom he was introduced through the mediation of an Ayrshire laird, and he was at home among the companions of a 'lower rank' who obtained access to him through John Richmond, clerk, an old Mauchline friend whose bed he shared. Conscious of his power, he met as an equal and was treated as an equal by Dugald Stewart, William Robertson, Hugh Blair, Henry Erskine, besides aristocrats like the Earl of Glencairn. His appearance and manners—he was about five feet ten inches in height (although a stoop made him look shorter), of muscular figure, with dark hair that curled round his forehead, and such a glowing eye as Sir Walter Scott never saw in any other human head—and his frank, vigorous, yet modest conversation, fascinated the Duchess of Gordon and other 'ladies of fashion.' William Creech, the best-known of the Edinburgh booksellers of the time, undertook to produce a new edition for him, and the gentlemen of the Caledonian Hunt were large subscribers. The book brought him four hundred or five hundred pounds; but Creech delayed in making a business settlement. So, after hanging on in Edinburgh for a little, taking stock of his new friends and of the durability of their friendship, delighting the Crochallan Fencibles, a convivial club, with rich and amusing verses, he made a tour of the southern counties. In the first flush of success he had thought of striking into a new line of life. Adam Smith suggested that he might get a salt-officership; and he did not repudiate the hint of Mrs Dunlop of Dunlop, an Ayrshire lady who was henceforth his most constant correspondent, that he had contemplated buying a commission in the army. Very quickly, however, he determined to live the life to which he had been bred, and on this Border tour he visited Dalswinton, near Dumfries—Mr Miller, the proprietor, having offered him a farm. On his 'éclatant return,' as he called it, to Mauchline, he was cordially received by Jean Armour, who had borne him twins the previous September, and their relations were restored to the old footing. After a brief stay at Mossgiel, he returned to Edinburgh, only to start on a three weeks' tour in the Highlands, in the course of which he was entertained by the Dukes of Athole and Gordon, and visited his Kincardineshire relatives. Back in Edinburgh, he had to resume the task of badgering Creech for his money; but he would have given up the attempt in December had he not met with a carriage accident which laid him on his back. Simultaneously he fell into a correspondence with a sentimental grass-widow of literary tastes—Mrs Macle hose; the correspondence, carried on in romantic style between

'Sylvander' and 'Clarinda,' ripened into an ardent friendship, and had she been free he might have married her. However, when he at last got a settlement with Creech, he returned to Mossgiel in February of 1788; married Jean Armour, who had been turned out of her father's house just before her second accouchement—she bore twins again, but they died immediately after birth; went through a course of instruction in the duties of an Excise officer, having obtained, in Edinburgh, a promise of a post in the service should farming fail him again; and took from Miller the farm of Ellisland, on the Dalswinton estate. Having built his house on the banks of the Nith, the poet took his wife thither, and set himself seriously to make 'conduct' his first aim, while not forgetting his destiny to 'mak' a sang at least' for Scotland or fame. His society was sought by the neighbouring gentry, notably by an enthusiastic antiquary, Mr Riddel of Glenriddel, and he used his pen to help the local Whig politicians. He wrote election verses, and, occasion offering, struck another blow for his old friends, the Liberal clergy of Ayrshire. Mrs Dunlop and other friends wrote to and received many letters from him. Captain Riddel and he established a parish library. The struggle for existence was now unfavourable to sustained literary effort. The farm was a bad bargain, and before the end of 1789 Burns had applied for and obtained work as an exciseman; and though his beat was in the environment of Ellisland, it covered ten parishes and involved almost continuous riding. Yet his Muse—he loved the word—was not infertile. He had begun in Edinburgh to contribute to Johnson's Musical Museum, and continued to make and adapt songs for that publication. He wrote an 'Ode to the Departed Regency Bill, 1789,' for Stuart's (London) Star, and was offered and declined a regular engagement on its staff. He refused also to think of the newly founded chair of Agriculture in Edinburgh University, for which Mrs Dunlop and Mr Graham of Fintry, one of the Commissioners of Excise, would have pressed his claim. It was in the autumn of 1790 that he composed 'Tam o' Shanter,' which by many critics is regarded as his masterpiece. In the same year Burns committed a breach of conjugal fidelity—the only one of which there is authentic record—his fellow-sinner being Ann Park, servant in a Dumfries inn; but his wife nursed the child of this connection along with one of her own.

In November 1791 the poet quitted farming in disgust, sold his stock, and became an exciseman pure and simple. He was appointed to a division in Dumfries at a salary of seventy pounds a year, with perquisites, and within a year this was increased by twenty pounds. He had a good friend in Mr Graham, and soon acquired another in Mr Corbet, one of the Supervisors-General, whom Mrs Dunlop interested in him. His prospects of advancement in his profession were excellent; but his politics now developed into active sympathy with the French Revolutionists. Life, however, went well with him on the whole. He kept on writing songs for Johnson, and more diligently and enthusiastically for George Thomson's Melodies; struck up a friendship with Mrs Maria Riddel, sister-in-law of his friend the Captain; and was on friendly terms with both the county gentry and the townsfolk. He did not, on his own confession, eschew the tavern; but according to the emphatic testimony of his wife, his official superior, Supervisor Findlater, and his immediate neighbour Gray, a teacher in the local Academy, he never became habitually intemperate. There is abundant evidence that he was attentive to his official duties; it goes without saying that he was the most careful and affectionate of fathers. Yet he did not take pains in word or act to conceal his sympathy with French Revolutionists or British Reformers. Although Graham of Fintry remained his steadfast friend, his outspokenness led to a delay in his promotion and to his being 'cut' by a section of Dumfries 'society'; and a somewhat mysterious quarrel with Mrs Riddel gave him much pain and cost him some friendships. Yet when 'Haughty Gaul' threatened invasion, his patriotic songs rang through the country and brought back any popularity he had lost; and the difference with Mrs Riddel did not last a year. A supervisorship was in sight, and not without reason he looked forward to obtaining, through political influence, a collectorship, which meant 'a life of literary leisure with a decent competence;' but an attack of rheumatic fever in the winter of 1795-96, following the loss of a daughter, proved too much for his constitution. He deliberately prepared for death and met it calmly—misunderstandings due to delirium deserve no serious consideration—on 21st July 1796.

The world of criticism, following the sure-footed judgment of the Scottish people, has given up the attempt to separate Burns the man from Burns the lyricist, humourist, and thinker. Than this there could be no better evidence that he was to all intents and purposes a poet sui generis. The events of his life, the details of his moral and intellectual experience, as realistically reproduced, idealised, or reflected upon in letters and poems, have the unity of a continuous self-revelation. In extent and intensity, that revelation is probably unique. There are mysteries in the life of Burns, such as the episode of the 'Highland Mary' of immortality, the Mary Campbell of tradition, which will probably never be cleared up; he dwelt so far apart from such of his contemporaries as he came in contact with, that, notwithstanding his emphatic preference of the 'social' to the self-contained man, he must have kept 'something to himself' he wadna tell to ony. Yet, like Goethe, he declined to join that almost universal 'conspiracy of silence' which regards the incidents of self-development as things to be ashamed of and consigned to a decent oblivion. Like Goethe also, he regarded his own character and life as so much grist for his artistic mill; and as he had imperious natural impulses which 'raged like demons,' and 'well-nigh the finest brain conceivable,' that grist was not inconsiderable. Though, as he anticipated in his fragment of autobiography, 'Whim and Fancy, keen sensibility and riotous passions, made him zigzag in his path of life,' and although his poetic career may be accounted a 'faithful failure' in the sense that he died before he had scaled

The wished-for height,

Where, Man and Nature fairer in her sight,
His Muse could imp her wing for some sublimer flight, his genius, his absolute command of the technique of his art, and his remorseless sincerity, made of these zigzags the Wilhelm Meister's Pilgrimage of Humanity. The wild abandonment of reckless joy, the anguish of an upbraiding conscience, the whole struggle of the soul with itself, reverence for the mysterious Power on which all things depend, scorn of cant and falsehood, contempt of folly, mirthful appreciation of the oddities of life and man, indignation at baseness and tyranny, delight in friendship, resentment against intrusive pride, pity for the suffering of all that feels, aspiration after a juster and happier structure of society, wise and sober contemplation of life and duty, the raptures of the hopeful, the anxieties of the despairing, the heart-breaking disappointment of the rejected or deserted lover, the hilarities of welcome, the sadness of farewell—these intensities of everyday life he reproduced as they never were reproduced before and may never be reproduced again. Hence it is that the 'universal plan' of Burns can never be grasped either in its reality or in its breadth, until the complete output of his life and art be carefully considered. Burns must be compared with Burns: Burns in despair must be read with Burns on the topmost wave of hope; Burns humorous must be interpreted by Burns serious, Burns resentful by Burns cheerfully acquiescent, Burns the Jacobite by Burns the Democrat. 'Scotch Drink' and the 'Peck o' Maut' must be collated with 'The Beadsman of Nithside'; any seeming condonation of license must be read in the light of the 'Epistle to a Young Friend' or a 'Bard's Epitaph'; the Burns who had the courage to say that his marriage, like that of every other man, was a venture in the lottery of life, must not be quoted to the prejudice of the Burns who, according to his widow, found 'the true pathos and sublime of human life' as the affectionate husband of Jean Armour and the devoted father of Jean Armour's children; the Burns who fiercely proclaimed his right to be 'independent in his sinning' in 'The Kirk an' State may gang to Hell, but I'll gang to my Anna,' must not be reprobated, and the Burns who brooded over his lapse from his own ideal in a silence which paralysed poetic effort and only found vent in agonised letters, absolutely ignored.

A consideration of Burns in all his aspects and triumphs leads to the conclusion that an instinct for thoroughness is the 'miraculous' or inexplicable element in him which has made him at once a ready-reckoner in mundane ethics and a joy for ever in the case of at least a moiety of the Anglo-Saxon race. He was equally thorough as 'a victim of fair enslavers,' as a preacher of self-control, as a student of his own nature, as a devotee of the rhymers' art, as a practitioner of his cardinal doctrine that while impulse must select subjects for poetic treatment, infinite patience and labour can alone make the treatment successful. Only by bringing together a few of his sentences and verses can the 'harmony not understood' of his artistic performance be effectually illustrated.

I pored over it [a selection of English poems] driving my cart or walking to labour song by song, verse by verse; carefully noting the tender or sublime from fustian. . . . I engaged several of my schoolfellows to keep up a literary correspondence with me.

On braes when we please then,
We'll sit and sowth a tune,
Syn rhyme tell't we'll time tell't,
And sing't when we ha'e done.

Whene'er my Muse does on me glance,
I jingle at her.

I have two or three times in my life composed from the wish rather than from the impulse, but I have never succeeded to any purpose.

How the subject theme may gang,
Let time and chance determine;
Perhaps it may turn out a sang,
Perhaps turn out a sermon.

I weighed myself alone; I balanced myself with others; I watched every means of information, how much ground I occupied as a man and a poet; I studied assiduously Nature's design, where she seemed to have intended the various lights and shades in my character. I firmly believe that excellence in the profession is the fruit of industry, labour, attention, and pains. . . . I have no great faith in the boastful pretensions to intuitive propriety and laboured elegance. The rough material of fine writing is certainly the gift of genius; but I as firmly believe that the workmanship is the united effort of pains, attention, and repeated trial. . . . Those who think that composing a Scotch song is a trifling business—let them try it. . . . I had rather be the author of five well-written songs than of ten otherwise. . . . I rhyme for fun. . . . The heart of the man and the fancy of the poet are the two grand considerations for which I live.

Grant me but this, I ask no more,
Aye rowth o' rhymes.

'A style of perfect plainness, relying for effect solely on the weight of that which with entire fidelity it utters,' has been rightly recognised by

Matthew Arnold as the citadel of Burns's strength. That style he would never have acquired but for his infinite capacity for taking pains, and for the experiences, including even the 'thoughtless follies,' that temporarily 'laid him low and stain'd his name.' It is his style of perfect plainness, 'rendering actual experiences, physical or mental, with entire fidelity, and reaching its height in lines of ecstasy or of exquisite clarity, that has made Burns a dictionary of poetical quotations. Such lines as these have become part of the current coin of literature:

To see her is to love her,
And love but her for ever;
For Nature made her what she is,
And never made anither.

Then down ye'll hurl, deil nor ye never rise!
And dash the gumlie jaups up to the pouring skies.

Rough, rude, ready-witted Rankine,
The wale o' cocks for fun and drinkin'.

The heart's aye the part aye
That makes us right or wrang.

Come, firm Resolve, take thou the van,
Thou stalk o' carl-hemp in man!

Know prudent, cautious self-control
Is wisdom's root.

The sky was blue, the wind was still,
The moon was shining clearly.

He was the king o' a' the core,
To guard, or draw, or wick a bore;
Or up the rink like Jehu roar,
In time o' need.

To make a happy fireside clime
To weans and wife,
That's the true pathos and sublime
Of human life.

The best-laid schemes o' mice and men
Gang aft agley.

Man to man the world o'er
Shall brothers be for a' that.

Rank is but the guinea stamp,
The man's the gowd for a' that.

A fig for those by law protected,
Liberty's a glorious feast;
Courts for cowards were erected,
Churches built to please the priest.

They reeled, they set, they crossed, they cleekit,
Till ilka carlin swat and reekit,
And coost her duddies to the wark,
And linket at it in her sark!

'The rank of Burns is the very first of his art' is the verdict of Byron, who also in advance effectively answered criticisms directed against his predecessor's courageously Teniersish treatment of certain features and phases of life by saying, 'A man may be coarse and yet not vulgar, and the reverse. Burns is often coarse but never vulgar.'

This verdict is now universally accepted. Yet, being a poet sui generis, he cannot profitably be compared with any of his predecessors or successors in English literature who may be accounted his equals in natural faculty. Goethe pronounced him the first of lyrists, and that in virtue of the two hundred and fifty songs which he wrote or improved in the intervals of work as a farmer and gauger, and while he was, not without reason, looking forward to a decent competence and 'literary leisure.' The author of 'The Jolly Beggars,' 'Tam o' Shanter,' and 'Holy Willie's Prayer;' of 'The Bard's Epitaph,' 'The Epistle to a Young Friend,' and 'A man's a man for a' that,' holds an assured place among 'inevitable' humorists and moralists. Of Scottish poets he is the first, the second being Dunbar, whom he scarcely if at all surpasses in biting trenchancy of sarcasm, but whom he greatly surpasses in the riot of good-humour and in sympathy with Humanity in general. His relation to Ramsay, and reverence for Fergusson and the others of the 'vernacular' or Scottish Renaissance school of poetry, is very much that of a master to pupils who have been preparing work in the studio for him. They gave him rhymes, including his favourite 'Mouse' stanza; and in the case of Ramsay and Fergusson, subjects for treatment, points of view, even phrases and verses. What he supplemented them with was original genius of the first order, consummate art, and the power of rising from Scotland into a conception of the world as a whole. It is a familiar saying that Burns won his greatest triumphs in and with the vernacular. That saying need not be gainsaid. It must, however, be remembered that he was the superior of his predecessors in English as well as in Scottish verse. 'Thou Lingering Star,' one of his greatest achievements in the impassioned as distinguished from the passionate, is in English. So also are 'Man was made to mourn,' the impassioned gazans on the wounded hare, the 'Ode to the Memory of Mrs Oswald' (which Carlyle terms a piece that might have been chanted by the Furies of Æschylus), the best half of the 'Mountain Daisy,' the finest reflective and descriptive passages in 'Tam o' Shanter,' practically the whole of the superb 'Macpherson's Farewell,' 'Afton Water,' the 'Song of Death,' 'The Gloomy Night is Gathering Fast,' the best of 'Scots wha hae,' 'Go fetch to me a pint of wine,' 'Had we never loved so kindly;' and the most elevated passages in 'The Vision' and 'The Cotter's Saturday Night.' Whenever, in fact, he soared from the particular to the universal in sentiment, in humour, and in reflection, he glided from Scottish into English. Thus it is that Burns's mission and achievement—his pre-eminence as a Scottish, his excellence as an English, poet—mean the triumphant assertion by Scotland of its rights of inheritance in British and general literature.

Tam o' Shanter.—A Tale.

Of Brownie and of Bogillie full is this Buke.—GAWIN DOUGLAS.

When chapman billies leave the street, packman fellows
And drouthy neebors neebors meet; thirsty
As market-days are wearing late,
An' folk begin to tak' the gate; road
While we sit bousing at the nappy, ale
An' getting fou and unco happy, mellow—very
We think na on the lang Scots miles,
The mosses, waters, slaps, and stiles, gaps
That lie between us and our hame,
Whare sits our sulky, sullen dame,
Gathering her brows like gathering storm,
Nursing her wrath to keep it warm.
This truth fand honest Tam o' Shanter, found
As he frae Ayr ae night did canter:
(Auld Ayr, wham ne'er a town surpasses
For honest men and bonie lasses).
O Tam, had'st thou but been sae wise,
As taen thy ain wife Kate's advice! have taken
She tauld thee weel thou was a skellum, rogue
A blethering, blustering, drunken blellum; idle talker
That frae November till October,
Ae market-day thou was nae sober; one
That ilka melder wi' the miller, every—meal-grinding
Thou sat as lang as thou had siller; money
That ev'ry naig was ca'd a shoe on, nag—shod
The smith and thee gat roaring fou on; drunk
Thar at the Lord's house, even on Sunday,
Thou drank wi' Kirkton Jean till Monday.
She prophesied that, late or soon,
Thou would be found deep drown'd in Doon,
Or catch'd wi' warlocks in the mirk, wizards
By Alloway's auld haunted kirk.
Ah! gentle dames! it gars me greet makes—weep
To think how monie counsels sweet,
How monie lengthen'd, sage advices
The husband frae the wife despises!
But to our tale:—Ae market-night,
Tam had got planted unco right,
Fast by an ingle, bleezing finely, fireside—blazing
Wi' reaming swats, that drank divinely; foaming—new ale
And at his elbow, Souter Johnie, Cobbler
His ancient, trusty, drouthie cronie; thirsty boon-companion
Tam lo'ed him like a very brither;
They had been fou for weeks thegither.
The night drave on wi' sangs and clatter;
And ay the ale was growing better:
The landlady and Tam grew gracious
Wi' favours secret, sweet and precious:
The Souter tauld his queerest stories;
The landlord's laugh was ready chorus:
The storm without might rair and rustle, roar
Tam did na mind the storm a whistle.
Care, mad to see a man sae happy,
E'en drown'd himsel among the nappy. ale
As bees flee hame wi' lades o' treasure,
The minutes wing'd their way wi' pleasure:
Kings may be blest, but Tam was glorious,
O'er a' the ills o' life victorious!
But pleasures are like poppies spread:
You seize the flow'r, its bloom is shed;
Or like the snow falls in the river,
A moment white—then melts for ever;
Or like the borealis race
That flit ere you can point their place;

Or like the rainbow's lovely form
 Vanishing amid the storm.
 Nae man can tether time nor tide ;
 The hour approaches Tam maun ride :
 That hour, o' night's black arch the key-stane,
 That dreary hour Tam mounts his beast in ;
 And sic a night he takes the road in
 As ne'er poor sinner was abroad in.
 The wind blew as 'twad blawn its last ;
 The rattling show'rs rose on the blast ;
 The speedy gleams the darkness swallow'd ;
 Loud, deep, and lang, the thunder bellow'd :
 That night, a child might understand,
 The Deil had business on his hand.
 Weel mounted on his grey mare Meg,
 A better never lifted leg,
 Tam skelpit on thro' dub and mire, rattled—mud
 Despising wind, and rain, and fire ;
 Whiles holding fast his guid blue bonnet,
 Whiles crooning o'er some auld Scots sonnet ;
 Whiles glow'ring round wi' prudent cares, gazing
 Lest bogles catch him unawares : hobgoblins
 Kirk-Alloway was drawing nigh,
 Whare ghaists and houlets nightly cry. ghosts—owls
 By this time he was cross the ford,
 Whare in the snaw the chapman smoor'd : was smothered
 And past the birks and meikle stane, birches—big Whare drunken Charlie brak's neck-bane ; broke his
 And thro' the whins, and by the cairn, gorse—stone-heap
 Whare hunters fand the murder'd bairn ;
 And near the thorn, aboon the well, above
 Whare Mungo's mither hang'd hersel.
 Before him Doon pours all his floods ;
 The doubling storm roars thro' the woods ;
 The lightnings flash from pole to pole ;
 Near and more near the thunders roll :
 When, glimmering thro' the groaning trees,
 Kirk-Alloway seem'd in a bleeze,
 Thro' ilka bore the beams were glancing, every cranny
 And loud resounded mirth and dancing.
 Inspiring bold John Barleycorn,
 What dangers thou canst make us scorn !
 Wi' tippenny, we fear nae evil ; twopenny small ale
 Wi' usquabae, we'll face the Devil ! whisky
 The swats sae ream'd in Tammie's noddle, frothed
 Fair play, he car'd na deils a boddle. not a farthing
 But Maggie stood right sair astonish'd, sorely
 Till, by the heel and hand admonish'd,
 She ventur'd forward on the light ;
 And, vow ! Tam saw an unco sight ! in sooth !—marvellous
 Warlocks and witches in a dance :
 Nae cotillion brent new frae France, brand
 But hornpipes, jigs, strathspeys, and reels,
 Put life and mettle in their heels.
 A winnock-bunker in the east, window box-seat
 There sat Auld Nick, in shape o' beast ;
 A tousie tyke, black, grim and large, shaggy dog
 To gie them music was his charge :
 He screw'd the pipes and gart them skirl, made—scream
 Till roof and rafters a' did dirl, ring
 Coffins stood round, like open presses,
 That shaw'd the dead in their last dresses ;
 And, by some devilish cantraip sleight, weird trick
 Each in its cauld hand held a light :
 By which heroic Tam was able
 To note upon the holy table,

A murderer's banes, in gibbet-airns ; iron
 Twa span-lang, wee, unchristen'd bairns ;
 A thief new-cutt'd frae a rape— rope
 Wi' his last gasp his gab did gape ; mouth
 Five tomahawks wi' bluid red-rusted ;
 Five scymitars wi' murder crusted ;
 A garter which a babe had strangled ;
 A knife a father's throat had mangled—
 Whom his ain son o' life bereft—
 The grey-hairs yet stack to the heft ; stuck—handle
 Wi' mair o' horrible and awefu',
 Which even to name wad be unlawfu'.
 As Tammie glow'd, amaz'd and curious, stared
 The mirth and fun grew fast and furious ;
 The piper loud and louder blew,
 The dancers quick and quicker flew :
 They reel'd, they set, they cross'd, they cleekit, hooked
 Till ilka carlin swat and reekit, she-ghost—steamed
 And coost her duddies to the wark, threw off—clothes
 And linket at it in her sark ! set to it—shift
 Now Tam, O Tam ! had thae been queans, these—
 A' plump and strapping in their teens ! girls
 Their sarks, instead o' creeshie flannen, greasy flannel
 Been snaw-white seventeen hunder linnen !— 1
 Thir breeks o' mine, my only pair, These breeches
 That ance were plush, o' guid blue hair,
 I wad hae gi'en them off my hurdies hams
 For ae blink o' the bonie burdies ! glimpse—birdies, dearies
 But wither'd beldams, auld and droll,
 Rigwoodie hags wad spean a foal, Tough—wean
 Louping and flinging on a crummock, Leaping—cudgel
 I wonder did na turn thy stomach !
 But Tam kend what was what fu' brawlie : quite well
 There was ae winsome wench and wawlie, comely—choice
 That night enlisted in the core, corps
 Lang after kend on Carrick shore :
 (For monie a beast to dead she shot,
 And perish'd monie a bonie boat, wrecked
 And shook baith meikle corn and bear, much—barley
 And kept the country-side in fear).
 Her cutty sark, o' Paisley harn, short shift—coarse linen
 That while a lassie she had worn,
 In longitude tho' sorely scanty,
 It was her best, and she was vauntie. . . . vain
 Ah ! little kend thy reverend grannie,
 That sark she coft for her wee Nannie, bought
 Wi' twa pund Scots ('twas a' her riches), 3s. 6d.
 Wad ever grac'd a dance of witches !
 But here my Muse her wing maun cour, stoop
 Sic flights are far beyond her power :
 To sing how Nannie lap and flang leaped—kicked
 (A souple jade she was and stryng),
 And how Tam stood like ane bewitch'd,
 And thought his very een enrich'd ;
 Even Satan glow'd, and fidg'd fu' fain, fidgeted—fond
 And hotch'd and blew wi' might and main ; squirmed
 Till first ae caper, syne anither, then
 Tam tint his reason a' thegither, lost—altogether
 And roars out : 'Weel done, Cutty-sark !' short-skirt, shift
 And in an instant all was dark ;
 And scarcely had he Maggie rallied,
 When out the hellish legi<sup>o</sup> sallied.
 As bees bizz out wi' angry fyke, fret
 When plundering herd's assail their byke ; herd-boys—nest

1 'Seventeen hunder' in connection with linnen indicates not the date but the degree of fineness

The flowers sprang wanton to be prest,
The birds sang love on every spray,
Till too, too soon, the glowing west
Proclaim'd the speed of winged day.

Still o'er these scenes my mem'ry wakes,
And fondly broods with miser-care;
Time but th' impression stronger makes,
As streams their channels deeper wear.
O Mary, dear departed Shade!
Where is thy place of blissful rest?
See'st thou thy Lover lowly laid?
Hear'st thou the groans that rend his breast?

Described by Burns in a letter of 8th November 1789 as 'made the other day,' and commonly believed to have been addressed to the 'dear, departed shade' of Mary Campbell on the anniversary of her death, which occurred in October 1785.

Ode, Sacred to the Memory of Mrs Oswald of Auchencruive.

Dweller in yon dungeon dark,
Hangman of creation, mark!
Who in widow-weeds appears,
Laden with unhonoured years,
Noosing with care a bursting purse,
Baited with many a deadly curse?

Strophe.

View the wither'd beldam's face—
Can thy keen inspection trace
Aught of Humanity's sweet, melting grace?
Note that eye, 'tis rheum o'erflows—
Pity's flood there never rose.
See those hands, ne'er stretch'd to save,
Hands that took, but never gave.
Keeper of Mammon's iron chest,
Lo, there she goes, unpitied and unblest
She goes, but not to realms of everlasting rest!

Antistrophe.

Plunderer of Armies! lift thine eyes
(A while forbear, ye torturing fiends),
Seest thou whose step, unwilling, hither bends?
No fallen angel, hurl'd from upper skies!
'Tis thy trusty, quondam Mate,
Doom'd to share thy fiery fate—
She, tardy, hell-ward plies.

Epode.

And are they of no more avail,
Ten thousand glittering pounds a-year?
In other worlds can Mammon fail,
Omnipotent as he is here?
O, bitter mockery of the pompous bier!
While down the wretched vital part is driv'n,
The cave-lodg'd beggar, with a conscience clear,
Expires in rags, unknown, and goes to Heav'n.

Written one night in January 1789, when the poet was driven out of a comfortable inn at Sanquhar into a night of 'bitter frost, howling hills and icy cataracts' by the funeral train of Mrs Oswald, daughter of a rich Jamaica merchant and widow of Richard Oswald, a Calithness man who made a fortune as a London merchant and as an army contractor ('plunderer of armies') in the Seven Years' War, but who earned a better character than Burns gave him by the services he rendered in arranging, on behalf of the Shelburne Ministry, the treaty which recognised the independence of the American Colonies.

Poor Mailie's Elegy.

Lament in rhyme, lament in prose,
Wi' saut tears tricklin down your nose; salt
Our Bardie's fate is at a close,
Past a' remead! remedy
The last, sad cape-stane of his woe's scope
Poor Mailie's dead!

It's no the loss o' warl's gear, worldly property
That could sae bitter draw the tear,
Or mak our Bardie, dowie, wear doleful
The mourning weed: garb
He's lost a friend an' neebor dear,
In Mailie dead.

Thro' a' the toun she trotted by him;
A lang half-mile she could descry him;
Wi' kindly bleat, when she did spy him,
She ran wi' speed:
A friend mair faithfu' ne'er cam nigh him,
Than Mailie dead.

I wat she was a sheep o' sense, wot
An' could behave hersel wi' mense; propriety
I'll say 't, she never brak a fence,
Thro' thievish greed.
Our Bardie, lanely, keeps the spence inner room
Sin' Mailie's dead.

Or, if he wanders up the howe, dell
Her livin image in her yowe ewe
Comes bleatin till him, owre the knowe, to—knoll
For bits o' bread;
An' down the briny pearls rowe roll
For Mailie dead.

She was nae get o' moorlan tips, child—tups
Wi' tawted ket, an' hairy hips; matted fleece
For her forbears were brought in ships, ancestors
Frae yont the Tweed: t'other side
A bonier fleesh ne'er cross'd the clips fleece—shears
Than Mailie's, dead.

Wae worth that man wha first did shape Woe befall
That vile, wanchancie thing—a rape! dangerous
It maks guid fellows girn an' gape, —rope
Wi' chokin dread; grin
An' Robin's bonnet wave wi' crape
For Mailie dead.

O, a' ye bards on bonie Doon!
An' wha on Ayr your chanters tune! bagpipes
Come, join the melancholious croon
O' Robin's reed!
His heart will never get aboon— get up again,
His Mailie's dead! recover

Printed in the Kilmarnock Edition. Written on the model of Robert Sempill's 'Piper of Kilsarchan,' Burns being inspired by the distress of a kindly boy over a sheep that had half-strangled itself with its own tether.

Holy Willie's Prayer.

And set the godly in a pet to pray.—POPE.

O Thou that in the Heavens does dwell,
Wha, as it pleases best Thyself,
Sends ane to Heaven an' ten to Hell
A' for Thy glory,
And, no for onie guid or ill any
They've done before Thee!

I bless and praise Thy matchless might,
When thousands Thou has left in night,
That I am here before Thy sight,
For gifts an' grace
A burning and a shining light
To a' this place.

What was I, or my generation,
That I should get sic exaltation?
I, wha deserv'd most just damnation
For broken laws,
Sax thousand years ere my creation,
Thro' Adam's cause!

When from my mither's womb I fell,
Thou might hae plunged me in hell
To gnash my gums, to weep and wail,
In burnin lakes,
Whare damnèd devils roar and yell,
Chain'd to their stakes.

Yet I am here, a chosen sample,
To show Thy grace is great and ample;
I'm here, a pillar o' Thy temple,
Strong as a rock;
A guide, a ruler, and example
To a' Thy flock!

O Lord, Thou kens what zeal I bear,
When drinkers drink, an' swearers swear,
An' singin there, an' dancin here,
Wi' great and sma';
For I am kept by Thy fear,
Free frae them a'.

But yet, O Lord, confess I must,
At times I'm fash'd wi' fleshly lust;
An' sometimes too, in worldly trust,
Vile Self gets in;
But Thou remembers we are dust,
Defiled wi' sin.

O Lord—yestreen—Thou kens—wi' Meg—<sup>last night</sup>
Thy pardon I sincerely beg:—<sup>—knowest</sup>
O, may't ne'er be a livin plague
To my dishonor!
And I'll ne'er lift a lawless leg
Again upon her!

Besides, I further maun avow,
Wi' Leezie's lass—three times—I trow—<sup>must</sup>
But Lord, that Friday I was fou <sup>drunk</sup>
When I cam near her;
Or else, Thou kens, Thy servant true
Wad never steer her. <sup>would—meddle with</sup>

Maybe Thou lets this fleshly thorn
Buffet Thy servant e'en and morn,
Lest he owre proud and high should turn <sup>too</sup>
That he's sae gifted:
If sae, Thy hand maun e'en be borne
Until Thou lift it.

Lord, bless Thy chosen in this place,
For here Thou has a chosen race;
But God confound their stubborn face,
And blast their name,
Wha bring their rulers to disgrace
And open shame!

Lord mind Gau'n Hamilton's deserts;
He drinks, and swears, and plays at cartes, <sup>cards</sup>
Yet has sae monie takin arts
Wi' great an' sma',
Frae God's ain Priest the people's hearts
He steals awa.

And when we chasten'd him therefore,
Thou kens how he bred sic a splore, <sup>row</sup>
And set the warid in a roar
O' laughin at us:
Curse Thou his basket and his store,
Kail and potatoes!

Lord, hear my earnest cry and pray'r
Against that Presbyt'ry of Ayr!
Thy strong right hand, Lord, mak it bare
Upo' their heads!

Lord, visit them, an' dinna spare, <sup>do not</sup>
For their misdeeds!

O Lord, my God! that glib-tongu'd Aiken,
My vera heart and flesh are quakin
To think how we stood sweatin, shakin,
An' pish'd wi' dread,
While he, wi' hingin lip an' snakin, <sup>sneering</sup>
Held up his head.

Lord, in Thy day o' vengeance try him!
Lord, visit them wha did employ him!
And pass not in Thy merey by them,
Nor hear their pray'r,
But for Thy people's sake destroy them,
An' dinna spare!

But, Lord, remember me and mine
Wi' mercies temporal and divine,
That I for grace and gear may shine,
Excell'd by nane!
And a' the glory shall be Thine,
Amen! Amen!

This satire on election and other Calvinistic doctrines was thus annotated by Burns: 'Holy Willie [William Fisher] was a rather oldish bachelor elder, in the parish of Mauchline, and much and justly famed for that polemical chattering which ends in tipping orthodoxy, and for that spiritualised lawdery which refines to liquorish devotion. In a sessional process with a gentleman of Mauchline—a Mr Gavin Hamilton—Holy Willie and his priest, Father Auld, after full hearing in the presbytery of Ayr, came off but second best; owing partly to the oratorical powers of Mr Robert Aiken, Mr Hamilton's counsel, but chiefly to Mr Hamilton's being one of the most irreproachable and truly respectable characters in the country. On losing his process, the Muse overheard him at his devotions, as follows.' The 'sessional process' occurred in 1785, Hamilton's offence being neglect of ordinances and violation of the Sabbath. Doubtless Burns believed too much evil of Fisher.

To a Mouse, on turning her up in her nest with the plough, November 1785.

Wee, sleekit, cowrin, tim'rous beastie, <sup>sleek</sup>
O, what a panic's in thy breastie!
Thou need na start awa sae hasty
Wi' bickering brattle! <sup>hurrying haste</sup>
I wad be laith to rin an' chase thee, <sup>loath</sup>
Wi' murdering pattle! <sup>plough-staff</sup>

I'm truly sorry Man's dominion
Has broken Nature's social union,
An' justifies that ill opinion
Which makes thee startle
At me, thy poor, earth-born companion
An' fellow mortal!

I doubt na, whyles, but thou may thieve; sometimes
 What then? poor beastie, thou maun live! must
 A daimen icker in a thrave odd ear in 24 sheaves
 'S a sma' request:
 I'll get a blessin wi' the lave, rest
 An' never miss't!

Thy wee bit housie, too, in ruin!
 Its silly wa's the win's are strewin! feeble walls—winds
 An' naething, now, to big a new ane, build
 O' foggage green! moss
 An' bleak December win's ensuin,
 Baith snell an' keen! sharp

Thou saw the fields laid bare an' waste,
 An' weary Winter comin fast,
 An' cozie here, beneath the blast,
 Thou thought to dwell,
 Till crash! the cruel coultter past
 Out thro' thy cell.

That wee bit heap o' leaves an' stibble, stubble
 Has cost thee monie a weary nibble!
 Now thou's turned out, for a' thy trouble,
 But house or hald, Without—holding
 To thole the winter's sleety dribble, endure
 An' cranreuch cauld! hoar-frost

But Mousie, thou art no thy lane,
 In proving foresight may be vain:
 The best-laid schemes o' Mice an' Men
 Gang aft agley, askew
 An' lea'e us nought but grief and pain,
 For promis'd joy! leave

Still thou art blest, compared wi' me!
 The present only toucheth thee:
 But, Och! I backward cast my e'e,
 On prospects drear!
 An' forward, tho' I canna see,
 I guess an' fear!

Green grow the Rashes, O.
Chorus—Green grow the rashes, O; rushes
 Green grow the rashes, O;
 The sweetest hours that e'er I spend,
 Are spent among the lasses, O.

There's nought but care on ev'ry han',
 In every hour that passes, O:
 What signifies the life o' man,
 An' 'twere na for the lasses, O? If it were not

The war'ly race may riches chase, worldly
 An' riches still may fly them, O;
 An' tho' at last they catch them fast,
 Their hearts can ne'er enjoy them, O.

But gie me a cannie hour at e'en, quiet
 My arms about my dearie, O,
 An' war'ly cares, an' war'ly men,
 May a' gae tapsalteeie, O! topsy-turvy

For you sae douce, ye sneer at this; quiet
 Ye're nought but senseless asses, O:
 The wisest man the war' e'er saw,
 He dearly lov'd the lasses, O.

Auld Nature swears, the lovely dears
 Her noblest work she classes, O:
 Her prentice han' she try'd on man,
 An' then she made the lasses, O.

Entered in the First Common-place Book under date August 1786.

To a Mountain Daisy, on turning one down with the plough in April 1786.

Wee, modest, crimson-tipped flow'r,
 Thou's met me in an evil hour;
 For I maun crush among the spoure must—dust
 Thy slender stem:
 To spare thee now is past my pow'r,
 Thou bonie gem.

Alas! it's no thy neebor sweet,
 The bonie lark, companion meet!
 Bending thee 'mang the dewy weet! wet
 Wi' speckl'd breast, speckled
 When upward-springing, blythe, to greet happy
 The purpling East.

Cauld blew the bitter-biting North
 Upon thy early, humble birth;
 Yet cheerfully thou glinted forth
 Amid the storm,
 Scarce rear'd above the parent-earth
 Thy tender form.

The flaunting flow'rs our gardens yield,
 High shelt'ring woods and wa's maun shield; walls
 But thou, beneath the random bield, —must
 O' clod or stane, shelter
 Adorns the histie stibble-field, bare—stubble
 Unseen, alane.

There, in thy scanty mantle clad,
 The snawie bosom sun-ward spread,
 Thou lifts thy unassuming head
 In humble guise;
 But now the share uptears thy bed,
 And low thou lies!

Such is the fate of artless maid,
 Sweet flow'ret of the rural shade!
 By love's simplicity betray'd,
 And guileless trust,
 Till she, like thee, all soil'd, is laid
 Low i' the dust.

Such is the fate of simple Bard,
 On Life's rough ocean luckless starr'd!
 Unskilful he to note the card
 Of prudent Lore,
 Till billows rage, and gales blow hard,
 And whelm him o'er!

Such fate to suffering Worth is giv'n,
 Who long with wants and woes has striv'n,
 By human pride or cunning driv'n
 To mis'ry's brink:
 Till, wrench'd of ev'ry stay but Heav'n,
 He, ruin'd, sink!

Ev'n thou who mourn'st the Daisy's fate,
 That fate is thine—no distant date;
 Stern Ruin's ploughshare drives, elate,
 Full on thy bloom,
 Till crush'd beneath the furrow's weight
 Shall be thy doom!

M'Pherson's Carewell.

Chorus—Sae rantingly, sae wantonly,
 Sae dauntingly gaed he;
 He play'd a spring, and danc'd it round
 Below the gallow's-tree.

Farewell, ye dungeons dark and strong,
The wretch's destinie !
M'Pherson's time will not be long
On yonder gallows-tree.

O, what is death but parting breath?
On many a bloody plain
I've dar'd his face, and in this place
I scorn him yet again !

Untie these hands from off my hands,
And bring to me my sword ;
And there's no a man in all Scotland
But I'll brave him at a word.

I've liv'd a life of sturt and strife ;      trouble
I die by treacherie :
It burns my heart I must depart,
And not aveng'd be.

Now farewell, light, thou sunshine bright,
And all beneath the sky !
May coward shame disdain his name,
The wretch that dares not die !

Written for Johnson's Musical Museum, and published 1788.
The verses were designed as an improvement on some attributed to a freebooter, half Celt, half gipsy, named M'Pherson, who was hanged at Banff in November 1700. Burns believed that Inverness was the scene.

The Banks o' Doon.

Ye banks and braes o' bonie Doon,      slopes
How can ye bloom sae fresh and fair ?
How can ye chant, ye little birds,
And I sae weary fu' o' care ?
Thou'll break my heart, thou warbling bird
That wantons thro' the flowering thorn !
Thou minds me o' departed joys,
Departed, never to return.

Aft hae I rov'd by bonie Doon,      Often
To see the rose and woodbine twine ;
And ilka bird sang o' its love,      every
And fondly sae did I o' mine ;
Wi' lightsome heart I pu'd a rose,      pulled
Fu' sweet upon its thorny tree !
And my fause luvver staw my rose—      false lover stole
But ah ! he left the thorn wi' me.

Written for the Musical Museum, and published in vol. iv., 1795.
It is the best of four sets of verses on the river Doon.

A Man's a Man for a' that.

Is there for honest Poverty
That tings his head, an' a' that ?      hangs
The coward slave, we pass him by,
We dare be poor for a' that !
For a' that, and a' that,
Our toils obscure, and a' that,
The rank is but the guinea's stamp,
The Man's the gowd for a' that !      gold

What though on hamely fare we dine,
Wear hoddin grey, and a' that ;      coarse woollen
Gie fools their silks and knaves their wine,
A Man's a Man for a' that :
For a' that, and a' that,
Their tinsel show and a' that ;
The honest man, tho' e'er so poor,
Is king o' men for a' that !

Ye see yon birkie ca'd a lord,      fellow—called
Wha struts, and stares, and a' that ?
Though hundreds worship at his word,
He's but a cuif for a' that :      dolt
For a' that, and a' that,
His ribband, star, and a' that ;
The man of independent mind,
He looks and laughs at a' that.

A prince can mak a belted knight,
A marquis, duke, and a' that ;
But an honest man's aboon his might—      above
Guid faith, he mauna fa' that !      must not—claim
For a' that, and a' that,
Their dignities, and a' that ;
The pith o' sense and pride o' worth
Are higher rank than a' that.

Then let us pray that come it may,—
As come it will for a' that—
That Sense and Worth, o'er a' the earth,
Shall bear the gree, and a' that !      have first place
For a' that, and a' that,
It's comin' yet for a' that,
That Man to Man, the world o'er,
Shall brithers be for a' that !

Sent to Thomson in January 1795.

The Jolly Beggars—a Cantata.

RECITATIVO.

When lyart leaves bestrow the yird,      withered—earth
Or, wavering like the hauckie-bird,      bat
Bedim cauld Boreas' blast ;      cold
When hail-stanes drive wi' bitter skyte,      dash
And infant frosts begin to bite,
In hoary cranreuch drest ;      rime
Ae night at e'en a merry core      corps
O' randie, gangrel bodies      lawless ; vagrant
In Poozie-Nansie's held the splore,      orgie
To drink their orra duddies :      spare rags
Wi' quaffing and laughing
They ranted an' they sang,
Wi' jumping an' thumping
The vera girdle rang.      baking-plate

First, niest the fire, in auld red rags,      next
Ane sat, weel brac'd wi' mealy bags,
And knapsack a' in order ;
His doxy lay within his arm ;      sweetheart
Wi' usquebae an' blankets warm      whisky
She blinket on her sodger :      leered
An' ay he gies the tozie drab      gives—tipsy
The tither skelpin kiss,      another—sounding
While she held up her greedy gab      mouth
Just like an aumous dish :      alms
Ilk smack still did crack still      Every
Like onie cadger's whip ;      hawkers
Then swaggering an' staggering,
He roared this ditty up :—

AIR.

TUNE—Soldier's Joy.

I am a son of Mars who have been in many wars,
And show my cuts and scars wherever I come :
This here was for a wench, and that other in a trench,
When welcoming the French at the sound of the drum,
Lal de dandle, &c.

My prenticeship I past where my leader breath'd his last,
When the bloody die was cast on the heights of Abram:
And I serv'd out my trade when the gallant game was play'd,
And the Moro low was laid at the sound of the drum.

I lastly was with Curtis among the floating batt'ries,
And there I left for witness an arm and a limb;
Yet let my country need me, with Elliott to head me,
I'd clatter on my stumps at the sound of a drum.

And now tho' I must beg, with a wooden arm and leg,
And many a tatter'd rag hanging over my bum,
I'm as happy with wallet, my bottle and my callet, trull
As when I used in scarlet to follow a drum.

What tho', with hoary locks, I must stand the winter shocks,
Beneath the woods and rocks, oftentimes for a home,
When the tother bag I sell, and the tother bottle tell,
I could meet a troop of hell, at the sound of a drum,
Lal de daudle, &c.

RECITATIVO.

He ended; and the kebars sheuk	rafters shook
Aboon the chorus roar;	Above
While frighted rattons backward leuk,	rats—look
An' seek the benmost bore:	inmost hole
A fairy fiddler frae the neuk,	corner
He skirl'd out, encore!	shrieked
But up arose the martial chuck,	dear
An' laid the loud uproar.

AIR.

TUNE—Jolly Mortals, fill your Glasses.

See the smoking bowl before us!
Mark our jovial, ragged ring!
Round and round take up the chorus,
And in raptures let us sing:—

Chorus—A fig for those by law protected!
Liberty's a glorious feast!
Courts for cowards were erected,
Churches built to please the priest!

What is title, what is treasure,
What is reputation's care?
If we lead a life of pleasure,
'Tis no matter how or where.

With the ready trick and fable
Round we wander all the day;
And at night, in barn or stable,
Hug our doxies on the hay.

Does the train-attended carriage
Thro' the country lighter rove?
Does the sober bed of marriage
Witness brighter scenes of love?

Life is all a variorum,
We regard not how it goes;
Let them prate about decorum
Who have character to lose.

Here's to budgets, bags and wallets!
Here's to all the wandering train!
Here's our ragged brats and callets!
One and all, cry out, Amen!

'This puissant and splendid production,' as Matthew Arnold called it, is believed to have been inspired by a visit of the poet to a lodging-house for beggars kept in Mauchline by Poesie Nansie, otherwise Agnes Ronald, wife of George Gibson, previously convicted by the kirk session of resetting stolen goods. It was written during the Mossiel period, but was not published during Burns's lifetime.

The Rigs o' Barley.

Chorus—Corn rigs, an' barley rigs, ridges
An' corn rigs are bonie:
I'll ne'er forget that happy night,
Among the rigs wi' Annie.

It was upon a Lammas night,
When corn rigs are bonie,
Beneath the moon's unclouded light,
I held awa' to Annie; took my way
The time flew by, wi' tentless heed; careless
Till, 'tween the late and early,
Wi' sma' persuasion she agreed
To see me thro' the barley.

The sky was blue, the wind was still,
The moon was shining clearly;
I set her down, wi' right good will,
Among the rigs o' barley:
I ken't her heart was a' my ain;
I lov'd her most sincerely;
I kiss'd her owre and owre again, over
Among the rigs o' barley.

I lock'd her in my fond embrace;
Her heart was beating rarely:
My blessings on that happy place,
Among the rigs o' barley!
But by the moon and stars so bright,
That shone that hour so clearly!
She ay shall bless that happy night
Among the rigs o' barley.

I hae been blythe wi' comrades dear; happy
I hae been merry drinking;
I hae been joyfu' gath'rin gear; money-making
I hae been happy thinking;
But a' the pleasures e'er I saw,
Tho' three times doubl'd fairly—
That happy night was worth them a',
Among the rigs o' barley.

This song was declared by Burns to have been composed before his twenty-third year.

Mary Morison.

O Mary, at thy window be!
It is the wish'd, the trusty hour.
Those smiles and glances let me see,
That makes the miser's treasure poor; endure—
How blythely wad I bide the stoure, struggle
A weary slave frae sun to sun,
Could I the rich reward secure,
The lovely Mary Morison.

Yestreen, when to the trembling string Last night
The dance gaed thro' the lighted ha', went—hall
To thee my fancy took its wing,
I sat, but neither heard nor saw:
Tho' this was fair, and that was braw, fine
And yon the toast of a' the town,
I sigh'd, and said among them a',
'Ye are na Mary Morison!'

O Mary, canst thou wreck his peace,
 Wha for thy sake wad gladly die?
 Or canst thou break that heart of his
 Whase only fault is loving thee? fault
 If love for love thou wilt na gie, give
 At least be pity to me shown;
 A thought ungentle canna be
 The thought o' Mary Morison.

Described by the poet in a letter to Thomson of March 1793 as 'one of my juvenile works.' Local tradition identifies the heroine with a veritable Mauchline Mary Morrison, but it is more commonly believed that 'Mary Morison' was only a euphonious rendering of 'Ellison Begbie,' the object of Burns's first serious passion.

Ae Fond Kiss.

Ae fond kiss, and then we sever! One
 Ae farewell, and then for ever!
 Deep in heart-wrung tears I'll pledge thee,
 Warring sighs and groans I'll wage thee. pledge
 Who shall say that Fortune grieves him,
 While the star of hope she leaves him?
 Me, nae cheerfu' twinkle lights me:
 Dark despair around benights me.

I'll ne'er blame my partial fancy:
 Naething could resist my Nancy!
 But to see her was to love her,
 Love but her, and love for ever.
 Had we never lov'd sae kindly,
 Had we never lov'd sae blindly,
 Never met—or never parted,
 We had ne'er been broken-hearted.

Fare-thee-weel, thou first and fairest!
 Fare-thee-weel, thou best and dearest!
 Thine be ilka joy and treasure,
 Peace, Enjoyment, Love and Pleasure!
 Ae fond kiss, and then we sever!
 Ae farewell, Alas, for ever!
 Deep in heart-wrung tears I'll pledge thee,
 Warring sighs and groans I'll wage thee.

Sent to Clarinda, 27th December 1791.

The most notable editions of the poems alone are the Kilmarnock (1786), Edinburgh (1787), London (1787), Edinburgh and London (1793), Centenary (Hendley and Henderson, 1896). Among editions with Life and Letters are those of Currie (1800), C Cunningham (1834), Douglas (1882), and Robert Chambers (1851; revised by present writer in 1896). The Letters were edited by Ferguson (2 vols. 1931). See also the studies by Lockhart (1828), Angellier (Paris, 1893), Hans Hecht (Heidelberg, 1921), D. M'Naught (1921), Mrs Carswell (1930), F. B. Snyder (1932), and the annual Burns Chronicle; the Essays by John Wilson (collected works, 1858), Carlyle (1831), and R. L. Stevenson (1882).

WILLIAM WALLACE.

Richard Gall (1776–1801) was born near Dunbar, and whilst employed as a printer in Edinburgh, threw off some Scottish songs that became favourites. A 'Farewell to Ayrshire' and one or two more were printed as by Burns; the best-known, 'My only jo and dearie,' is rather in Tannahill's manner. One verse runs:

The birdie sings upon the thorn
 Its sang o' joy, fu' cheerie O,
 Rejoicing in the summer morn,
 Nae care to mak it eerie O;
 But little kerls the sangster sweet
 Aught o' the care; I hae to meet,
 That gar my restliss bosom beat,
 My only jo and dearie O.

Lady Nairne (1766–1845), though she lived to near the middle of the nineteenth century, was born but seven years after Burns, and was writing verses in 1792. Carolina Oliphant, born at the 'auld house' of Gask in Perthshire, was the third daughter of its Jacobite laird. In 1806 she married her second cousin, Major William Murray Nairne (1757–1830), who in 1824, on the restoration of the attainted Scottish peerages, became the sixth Lord Nairne; to him she bore one son, William (1808–37). They settled near Edinburgh, and after her husband's death the Baroness Nairne lived for three years in Ireland, then for nine on the Continent, returning at last to the new house of Gask—the old one had been pulled down in 1801. Her eighty-seven songs appeared first under the pseudonym 'Mrs Bogan of Bogan' or 'B. B.' in The Scottish Minstrel (1821–24), and posthumously under her own name as Lays from Strathearn. Her songs show, in the poetic-remembrance stage, the family Jacobitism; but no Jacobite in his own day ever concealed his colours with more jealous care and elaborate pains than all her life long Lady Nairne did her authorship. Not a few of her songs are substantially recastings and adaptations of old popular favourites in the tone of which there was something to disapprove. But some of them—including a few incorporating old fragments—are pure inspirations, true and all but perfect lyrics, in poetic worth coming nearest to Burns's best; as many as eight or ten of them live in the hearts of the Scottish people with the airs to which they are wedded—the exquisite 'Land o' the Leal' (c. 1798) and 'Caller Herrin', 'The Laird o' Cockpen', 'The Auld House', 'The Rowan Tree', 'The Hundred Pipers', 'He's owre the hills that I lo'e weel', 'Will ye no come back again?' and 'Charlie is my Darling'—a list which indicates the variety of the notes she struck. The last two, though there were older songs with the same title and to the same general purpose, have completely superseded the other versions. 'Farewell, Edinburgh,' is also well known in Scotland; and 'Would you be young again' reveals the characteristic temper of Lady Nairne's later years. Her Jacobitism, like Burns's, Scott's, Hogg's, and that of the writers of almost all the best-known Jacobite songs, was historical, sentimental, poetical, and entirely consistent with the most perfect loyalty to the reigning House; Queen Victoria had no more faithful subject than this champion of a beloved and idealised Prince Charlie's claims on romantic devotion, who took a lively interest in Christian missions, in church extension, and in all philanthropic schemes. It should be added that in the songs the words often convey quite obviously the thoughts of a lady born, not of colliers or fishwives, and the Scots is the Scots of one bred to speak and write English habitually. Angels do not beckon in Scots; dwell and well rhyme conveniently in 'The Laird o' Cockpen,' but should be dwall and weel; throughout Scotland willows are always saughs, and billows is a word wholly alien to the dialect of Newhaven.

The Land o' the Leal.

I'm wearin' awa, John,
Like snaw-wreaths in thaw, John;
I'm wearin' awa'
To the land o' the leal.
There's nae sorrow there, John;
There's neither could nor care, John;
The day's aye fair
In the land o' the leal.

Our bonny bairn's there, John;
She was baith gude and fair, John;
And, oh! we grudged her sair
To the land o' the leal.
But sorrow's sel' wears past, John—
And joy's a-comin' fast, John—
The joy that's aye to last
In the land o' the leal.

Sae dear's that joy was bought, John,
Sae free the battle fought, John,
That sinfu' man e'er brought
To the land o' the leal.
Oh, dry your glistening ee, John!
My saul langts to be free, John!
And angels beckon me
To the land o' the leal.

Oh, haud ye leal and true, John!
Your day it's wearin' through, John;
And I'll welcome you
To the land o' the leal.
Now, fare-ye-weel, my ain John;
This world's cares are vain, John;
We'll meet, and we'll be fain,
In the land o' the leal.

Leal, another form of legal and loyal, means in Middle English and Scots loyal, faithful, honest, true, lawful, just, fair, and noble, and lives on in the dialects of the north of England and Scotland. In this particular case the 'land of the true-hearted' is obviously meant for the home of the faithful, heaven.

The Laird o' Cockpen.

The Laird o' Cockpen he's proud and he's great,
His mind is ta'en up with the things o' the state;
He wanted a wife his braw house to keep,
But favour wi' wootin' was fashious to seek. troublesome

Down by the dyke-side a lady did dwell,
At his table-head he thought she'd look well;
M'Clish's ae daughter o' Claverse-ha' Lee,
A penniless lass wi' a lang pedigree.

His wig was weel pouthered, and as gude as new; pow-
His waistcoat was white, his coat it was blue; dered
He put on a ring, a sword, and cocked hat;
And wha could refuse the Laird wi' a' that?

He took the gray mare, and rade cannillie,
And rapped at the yett o' Claverse-ha' Lee: gate
'Gae tell Mistress Jean to come speedily ben,
She's wanted to speak wi' the Laird o' Cockpen.'

Mistress Jean she was makin' the elder-flower wine:
'And what brings the Laird at sic a like time?'

She put aff her apron, and on her silk gown,
Her mutch wi' red ribbons, and gaed awa' down. cap

And when she cam ben, he bowed fu' low,
And what was his errand he soon let her know;
Amazed was the Laird when the lady said 'Na';
And wi' a laigh curtsey she turned awa'.

Dumfounded he was, but nae sigh did he gie;
He mounted his mare—he rade cannillie;
And aften he thought, as he gaed through the glen,
She's daft to refuse the Laird o' Cockpen.

[And now that the Laird his exit had made,
Mistress Jean she reflected on what she had said;
'Oh! for ane I'll get better, it's waur I'll get ten—
I was daft to refuse the Laird o' Cockpen.'

Next time that the Laird and the lady were seen,
They were gaun arm in arm to the kirk on the green;
Now she sits in the ha' like a weel-tappit hen—
But as yet there's nae chickens appeared at Cockpen.]

The last two verses were added by Miss Ferrier, authoress of Marriage, and are now always printed as part of the song.

Caller Herrin'.

Wha'll buy my caller herrin'? fresh, new-caught;
They're bonny fish and halesome farin';
Wha'll buy my caller herrin',
New drawn frae the Forth?

When ye were sleepin' on your pillows,
Dreamed ye aught o' our puir fellows,
Darkling as they faced the billows,
A' to fill the woven willows?
Wha'll buy my caller herrin'? &c.

Wha'll buy my caller herrin'?
They're no brought here without brave darin'.
Buy my caller herrin',
Hauled through wind and rain,
Wha'll buy my caller herrin'? &c.

Wha'll buy my caller herrin'?
Oh, ye may ca' them vulgar farin',
Wives and mithers maist despairin'
Ca' them lives o' men.
Wha'll buy my caller herrin'? &c.

When the creel o' herrin' passes,
Ladies, clad in silks and laces,
Gather in their braw pelisses,
Cast their heads and screw their faces.
Wha'll buy my caller herrin'? &c.

Caller herrin's no got lightly,
Ye can trip the spring fu' tightly,
Spite o' tauntin', flauntin', flingin',
Gow has set you a' a-singin'.
Wha'll buy my caller herrin'? &c.

Neebour wives, now tent my tellin':
When the bonny fish ye're sellin',
At ae word be in your dealin';
Truth will stand when a' thing's fallin'.
Wha'll buy my caller herrin'? &c.

Neil Gow (1797-1807) was a violinist and composer, famous for strathspeys and reels; so was his son Nathaniel, for whom this song was written and by whom the tune was composed. Dr Charles Rogers wrote the Life and Songs of Lady Nairne (1869), and there is a small work on her by the Rev. Geo. Henderson (1900); see also Kington Oliphant's Jacobite Lairds of Gask (1870).

Robert Tannahill (1774-1810), a lyrical poet, some of whose songs rival all but the best of Burns's in popularity, was born in Paisley, and, early sent to the loom, continued to follow the staple trade of his native town until his twenty-sixth year, when, with one of his younger brothers, he removed to Lancashire. There he continued two years, till, hearing of his father's ill-health, he returned in time to receive his dying blessing. Soon after he wrote to a friend: 'My brother Hugh and I are all that now remain at home with our old mother, bending under age and frailty; and but seven years back nine of us used to sit at dinner together.' In The Filial Vow he inscribed this monument to her memory:

'Twas hers to guide me through life's early day,
To point out virtue's paths, and lead the way:
Now, while her powers in frigid languor sleep,
'Tis mine to hand her down life's rugged steep;
With all her little weaknesses to bear,
Attentive, kind, to soothe her every care.
'Tis nature bids, and truest pleasure flows
From lessening an aged parent's woes.

The lines indicate the writer's filial piety, but their inferiority to his Scottish songs shows how little at home he was in English poetry. Though Tannahill, an enthusiastic student of Ramsay, Fergusson, and Burns, composed verses from a very early age, it was not till after this time that he passed mediocrity. Encouraged by R. A. Smith, a musician and composer, he applied himself sedulously to song-writing; and when Smith had set some of his songs to original airs, he in 1807 ventured on the publication of a volume of poems and songs, of which the first impression, consisting of nine hundred copies, was sold in a few weeks. He afterwards contributed songs to George Thomson's Select Melodies. Meanwhile he himself, always reserved, shy, and of slight and feeble physique, fell into a state of morbid despondency, aggravated by bodily weakness and a phthisical tendency. He had prepared a new edition of his poems for the press; but when Constable the publisher returned the copy because he already had on hand more new works than he could undertake that season, the disappointment preyed on the spirits of the sensitive poet; he burnt the manuscripts of a hundred new songs, and sank into a state of profound melancholia. One night in May 1810 he left his bedroom unperceived, and next day his body was found in the canal. The longer poems of this modest, ill-starred weaver-poet are greatly inferior to his songs, and are commonplace and artificial; but some of the lyrics are original, sincere, and touching, though often over-sentimental, and disfigured (e.g. the 'Flower o' Dumbfane') by appallingly prosaic phrases. He is mainly remembered for about half-a-dozen songs, including besides those given below, 'Loudon's Bonnie Woods and Braes' and 'The Bonnie Wood o' Craigielea.' Semple in his edition of the Poems (with Life, 1876) has 'restored' the Scots words to his idea of propriety and regularity.

The Braes o' Balquhither.

Let us go, lassie, go,
To the braes o' Balquhither,
Where the blae-berries grow
'Mang the bonny Highland heather;
Where the deer and the rae,
Lightly bounding together,
Sport the lang simmer day
On the braes o' Balquhither.

I will twine thee a bower
By the clear siller fountain,
And I'll cover it o'er
Wi' the flowers of the mountain;
I will range through the wilds,
And the deep glens sae drearie,
And return wi' their spoils
To the bower o' my dearie.

When the rude wintry win'
Idly raves round our dwelling,
And the roar of the linn waterfall
On the night-breeze is swelling,
So merrily we'll sing,
As the storm rattles o'er us,
Till the dear shieling ring
Wi' the light liltin' chorus.

Now the simmer's in prime
Wi' the flowers richly blooming,
And the wild mountain thyme
A' the moorlands perfuming;
To our dear native scenes
Let us journey together,
Where glad innocence reigns
'Mang the braes o' Balquhither.

The Braes o' Gleniffer.

Keen blows the wind o'er the braes o' Gleniffer;
The auld castle turrets are covered wi' snaw;
How changed frae the time when I met wi' my lover
Among the broom bushes by Stanley green shaw!
The wild-flowers o' simmer were spread a' sae bonnie,
The mavis sang sweet frae the green birken tree;
But far to the camp they hae marched my dear Johnie,
And now it is winter wi' nature and me.

Then ilk thing around us was blythesome and cheerie,
Then ilk thing around us was bonny and braw;
Now naething is heard but the wind whistling drearie,
And naething is seen but the wide-spreading snaw.
The trees are a' bare, and the birds mute and dowie;
They shake the cauld drift frae their wings as they flee;
And chirp out their plaints, seeming wae for my Johnie;
'Tis winter wi' them, and 'tis winter wi' me.

Yon cauld sleety cloud skiffs along the bleak mountain,
And shakes the dark firs on the steep rocky brae,
While down the deep glen brawls the snaw-flooded
fountain,

That murmured sae sweet to my laddie and me.
It's no its loud roar on the wintry wind swellin',
It's no the cauld blast brings the tear to my ee;
For oh! gin I saw but my bonny Scots callan, lad
The dark days o' winter were simmer to me.

The Flower o' Dumblane.

The sun has gane down o'er the lofty Ben-Lomond,
 And left the red clouds to preside o'er the scene,
 While lanely I stray in the calm simmer gloamin,
 To muse on sweet Jessie, the flower o' Dumblane.
 How sweet is the brier, wi' its saft fauldin' blossom !
 And sweet is the birk, wi' its mantle o' green ;
 Yet sweeter and fairer, and dear to this bosom,
 Is lovely young Jessie, the flower o' Dumblane,

She's modest as ony, and blithe as she's bonny ;
 For guileless simplicity marks her its ain :
 And far be the villain, divested of feeling,
 Wha'd blight in its bloom the sweet flower o' Dumblane.
 Sing on, thou sweet mavis, thy hymn to the e'ning ;
 Thou'rt dear to the echoes of Calderwood glen :
 Sae dear to this bosom, sae artless and winning,
 Is charming young Jessie, the flower o' Dumblane.

How lost were my days till I met wi' my jessie !
 The sports o' the city seemed foolish and vain ;
 I ne'er saw a nymph I would ca' my dear lassie,
 Till charmed wi' sweet Jessie, the flower o' Dumblane.
 Though mine were the station o' loftiest grandeur,
 Amidst its profusion I'd languish in pain,
 And reckon as naething the height o' its splendour,
 If wanting sweet Jessie, the flower o' Dumblane.

Gloomy Winter's now Awa'.

Gloomy winter 's now awa' ;
 Saft the westlin breezes blaw ;
 'Mang the birks o' Stanley-shaw
 The mavis sings fu' cheerie O.
 Sweet the craw-flower's early bell
 Decks Gleniffer's dewy dell,
 Blooming like thy bonny sel',
 My young, my artless dearie O.
 Come, my lassie, let us stray
 O'er Glenkilloch's sunny brae,
 Blithely spend the gowden day
 Midst joys that never wearie O.

Towering o'er the Newton woods,
 Laverocks fan the snaw-white clouds ;
 Siller saughs, wi' downie buds,
 Adorn the banks sae brierie O.
 Round the sylvan fairy nooks,
 Feathery breckans fringe the rocks,
 'Neath the brae the burnie jouks,
 And ilka thing is cheerie O.
 Trees may bud, and birds may sing,
 Flowers may bloom, and verdure spring,
 Joy to me they canna bring,
 Unless wi' thee, my dearie O.

Sir Alexander Boswell (1775-1822), of Auchinleck in Ayrshire, eldest son of Johnson's biographer, was a man of many accomplishments, but is now remembered for his tragic fate and for his songs, such as 'Auld Gudeman, ye're a Drucken Carle ;' 'Jenny's Bawbee ;' and 'Jenny dang the Weaver,' rough but characteristic genre-pictures rich in a kind of comic humour ; the less rude 'Good-night and Joy be wi' ye a'' is also still popular. Educated at Westminster and Oxford, in 1803 he printed a volume of Songs chiefly in the Scottish Dialect. In 1810 he published a somewhat overdrawn Scottish dialogue, in the style of Fergusson, called Edinburgh, or the Ancient Royalty ; a Sketch of Manners, by Simon Gray. Other poems were Clair Alpin's Vow (1811), a tragic Highland tale, based on the record in the Register of the Privy Council of Scotland for 1589, and Sir Albyn, a burlesque. Skeldon Haughs was a rhymed version of an old Ayrshire legend. Some of his best songs were among the twelve he contributed to Thomson's Select Collection (1817). His unfinished and not very brilliant anticipation of Byron, An Epistle to the Edinburgh Reviewers (1803), contains some smart couplets :

All are not damned you happen to dislike ;
 All turn not marble whom your glances strike. . . .
 When the fierce tiger rages o'er the land,
 Then to the chase, ye hunters, in a band ! . . .
 But where's the honour, where's the mighty feat,
 To seize a victim that can only bleat ?
 Why tinge with red the unassuming cheek,
 Or tear a linnet with a vulture's beak ? . . .
 Is he a lion who can gorge a rat ?
 Is he Goliath who can crush a gnat ?

Boswell did much to stimulate his countrymen to honour Burns's memory, securing the erection of the monument on the Doon ; and for two or three years sat in Parliament for Plympton in Devonshire. Sir Alexander, created a baronet in 1821 for a (poor but) loyal song, 'Long live George the Fourth,' was an ardent lover of our early literature, and at his private printing-press at Auchinleck House reprinted a series of rare works, both English and Scottish, some of the earlier ones with his own hand. When politics ran high he wrote some personal pasquinades, for one of which he received a challenge from Mr Stuart of Dunearn, and the parties met at Auchtertool in Fifeshire. Stuart shot took effect and the Tory baronet fell, dying from the wound on the following day, the 27th of March 1822. He was a hearty, high-spirited man, tall and of imposing presence, fond of field sports, and in almost every way (even in his literary gifts and interests) very unlike his father. His brother, James Boswell (1778-1822), an accomplished scholar and student, edited Malone's edition of Shakespeare (21 vols. 8vo, 1821). From James's funeral Sir Alexander returned straight to his fatal encounter with Mr Stuart.

Jenny dang the Weaver.

At Willie's wedding on the green,
 The lasses, bonny witches !
 Were a' dressed out in aprons clean,
 And braw white Sunday mitches :
 Auld Maggie bade the lads tak' tent,
 But Jock would not believe her ;
 But soon the fool his folly kent,
 For Jenny dang the weaver.
 And Jenny dang, Jenny dang,
 Jenny dang the weaver ;
 But soon the fool his folly kent,
 For Jenny dang the weaver.

caps
take heed

defeated,
balked, jilted

At ilka country-dance or reel,
Wi' her he would be bobbing ;
When she sat down, he sat down,
And to her would be gabbing ;
Where'er she gaed, baith but and ben,
The coof wuld never leave her ;
Ayē keckling like a clocking hen,
But Jenny dang the weaver.
Jenny dang, &c.

fool
hatching

Quo' he : ' My lass, to speak my mind,
In troth I needna swither ;
You've bonny een, and if you're kind,
I'll never seek anither : '
He hummed and hawed, the lass cried, ' Peugh ! '
And bade the coof no deave her ;
Syne snapt her fingers, lap and leugh,
And dang the silly weaver.
And Jenny dang, Jenny dang,
Jenny dang the weaver ;
Syne snapt her fingers, lap and leugh,
And dang the silly weaver.

hesitate

laughed

Jenny's Bawbee.

I met four chaps yon birks amang,
Wi' hingin' lugs, and faces lang ;
I speered at neebour Bauldy Strang,
Wha's that I see ?

birches hanging ears
asked

Quo' he : Ilk cream-faced, pawky chiel
Thought himsel cunnin' as the deil,
And here they cam, awa' to steal
Jenny's bawbee.

money, fortune

The first, a captain till his trade,
Wi' skull ill lined, and back weel clad,
Marched round the barn, and by the shed,
And pappit on his knee.

Quo' he : ' My goddess, nymph, and queen,
Your beauty's dazzled baith my een ; '
But deil a beauty he had seen
But—Jenny's bawbee.

A lawyer neist, wi' bletherin' gab,
Wha speeches wove like ony wab,
Ilk ane's corn aye took a dab,
And a' for a fee :

Accounts he had through a' the town,
And tradesmen's tongues nae mair could drown ;
Haith now he thought to clout his gown
Wi' Jenny's bawbee.

Faith

A norland laird neist trotted up,
Wi' bawsent naig and siller whup,
Cried : ' There's my beast, lad, haud the grup
Or tie 't till a tree.

white

' What's gowd to me?—I've walth o' lan' ;
Bestow on ane o' worth your han' ; '
He thought to pay what he was awn
Wi' Jenny's bawbee.

owing

A' spruce frae ban-boxes and tubs,
A Thing cam neist—but life has rubs—
Foul were the roads, and fou the dubs,
Ah ! wae's me !

puddles

A' clatty, squintin' through a glass,
He gined, ' I' faith, a bonny lass ! '
He thought to win, wi' front o' brass,
Jenny's bawbee.

muddy

She bade the laird gang comb his wig,
The sodger no to strut sae big,
The lawyer no to be a prig,
The fool cried : ' Tehee,

' I kent that I could never fail ! '
She preened the dish-clout till his tail,
And cooled him wi' a water-pail,
And kept her bawbee.

punned

The High Street of Edinburgh.

Tier upon tier I see the mansions rise,
Whose azure summits mingle with the skies ;
There, from the earth the labouring porters bear
The elements of fire and water high in air ;
There, as you scale the steps with toilsome tread,
The dripping barrel maddens your head ;
Thence, as adown the giddy round you wheel,
A rising porter greets you with his creel !
Here, in these chambers, ever dull and dark,
The lady gay received her gayer spark,
Who, clad in silken coat, with cautious tread,
Trembled at opening casements overhead ;
But when in safety at her porch he trod,
He seized the ring, and rasped the twisted rod.
No idlers then, I trow, were seen to meet,
Linked, six a-row, six hours in Princes Street ;
But, one by one, they panted up the hill,
And picked their steps with most uncommon skill ;
Then, at the Cross, each joined the motley mob—
' How are ye, Tam ? ' and, ' How's a' wi' ye, Bob ? '
Next to a neighbouring tavern all retired,
And draughts of wine their various thoughts inspired.
O'er draughts of wine the beau would moan his love ;
O'er draughts of wine the cit his bargain drove ;
O'er draughts of wine the writer penned the will ;
And legal wisdom counselled o'er a gill. . . .
Yes ! mark the street, for youth the great resort,
Its spacious width the theatre of sport.
There, midst the crowd, the jingling hoop is driven ;
Full many a leg is hit, and curse is given.
There, on the pavement, mystic forms are chalked,
Defaced, renewed, delayed—but never balked ;
There romping Miss the rounded slate may drop,
And kick it out with persevering hop.
There, in the dirty current of the strand,
Boys drop the rival corks with ready hand,
And, wading through the puddle with slow pace,
Watch in solicitude the doubtful race !
And there, an active band, with frequent boast,
Vault in succession o'er each wooden post.
Or a bold stripling, noted for his might,
Heads the array, and rules the mimic fight.
From hand and sling now fly the whizzing stones,
Unheeded broken heads and broken bones.
The rival hosts in close engagement mix,
Drive and are driven by the dint of sticks.
The bicker rages, till some mother's fears
Ring a sad story in a baillie's ears.
Her prayer is heard ; the order quick is sped,
And, from that corps which hapless Porteous led,

A brave detachment, probably of two,
Rush, like two kites, upon the warlike crew,
Who, struggling, like the fabled frogs and mice,
Are pounced upon, and carried in a trice.
But mark that motley group, in various garb—
There vice begins to form her rankling barb;
The germ of gambling sprouts in pitch-and-toss,
And brawl, successive, tells disputed loss.
From hand to hand the whirling halfpence pass,
And, every copper gone, they fly to brass.
Those polished rounds which decorate the coat,
And brilliant shine upon some youth of note,
Offspring of Birmingham's creative art,
Now from the faithful button-holes depart.
To sudden twitch the rending stitches yield,
And Enterprise again essays the field.
So, when a few fleet years of his short span
Have ripened this dire passion in the man,
When thousand after thousand takes its flight
In the short circuit of one wretched night,
Next shall the honours of the forest fall,
And ruin desolate the chieftain's hall;
Hill after hill some cunning clerk shall gain;
Then in a mendicant behold a thane!

The fourth line in Campbell's Pleasures of Hope runs:

'Whose sun-bright summit mingles with the sky.'

And in Telford's forgotten poem on Eskdale is a couplet:

'Hete lofty hills in varied prospect rise,
Whose airy summits mingle with the skies.'

To the Memory of Burns.

Ah! who shall breathe upon the oaten reed
That pour'd its melody on winding Ayr,
And who shall claim thy mantle as his meed,
Gift of wild poesy, which thou did'st wear?
For rude and earthborn wight how little meet
So rich a mantle, and a note so sweet!

Thee, Bard of Coila, all her echoes mourn,
Hid in thy silent cave and tuneless grove,
No more the [music] on the breeze is borne,
Mirth's jocund carol, or the plaints of love.
Dark Lugar's stream unheeded laves its bed,
And all that liv'd to thee seems dull and dead.

But when soft memory of other days
Steals on the fancy with delusive glow,
And while deep rapt we ponder on thy lays,
With music not their own the waters flow;
Thy spirit hov'ring seems to rule the spelt,
And our eyes glisten while our bosoms swell.

Good-night, and Joy be wi' ye a'.

Good-night, and joy be wi' ye a';
Your harmless mirth has charmed my heart;
May life's fell blasts out ower ye blow!
In sorrow may ye never part!
My spirit lives, but strength is gone;
The mountain-fires now blaze in vain:
Remember, sons, the deeds I've done,
And in your deeds I'll live again!

When on yon muir our gallant clan
Frae boasting foes their banners tore,
Wha shewed himsel a better man,
Or fiercer waved the red claymore?
But when in peace—then mark me there—
When through the glen the wanderer came,
I gave him of our lordly fare,
I gave him here a welcome hame.

The auld will speak, the young maun hear;
Be cantie, but be good and leal;
Your ain ill's aye hae heart to bear,
Anither's aye hae heart to feel.
So, ere I set, I'll see you shine,
I'll see you triumph ere I fa';
My parting breath shall boast you mine—
Good-night, and joy be wi' ye a'.

The song is supposed to be said or sung by an aged Highland chieftain to his clansmen, and, like Clan Alpin's Vow, bears witness to the 'Celtic Renaissance' characteristic of the period. Boswell's views on the Scots of contemporary poetry have been quoted above at page 796. His poems and songs were republished with a Memoir by R. H. Smith in 1873. Prefixed is a list by Mr Maidment of the publications and reprints of the Auchinleck press—the Disputation between Knox and the Abbot of Crossraguel; the poems of Barnfield; works by Whetstone, Churchyard, T. Lodge; as well as a number of anonymous pieces and fragments, some of them from the Auchinleck library.

INDEX

TO

VOLUMES I., II. AND III.

INDEX

- A
BECKETT, GILBERT ABBOTT, III. 400.
A Man's a Man for a' that, by Burns, II. 825.
Aaron's Rod, by Gillespie, I. 821.
Abbey Theatre, Dublin, III. 709, 722, 850.
ABBOTT, EVELYN, III. 841.
Abdelazer, by Aphra Behn, II. 68.
ABERCROMBIE, JOHN, III. 242.
ABERCROMBIE, LASCELLES, III. 715, 722.
ABERCROMBY, PATRICK, II. 301.
Abide with me, by H. F. Lyte, III. 271.
Abraham Lincoln, by Lowell, III. 804; by Drinkwater, III. 848.
Abraham and Achitophel, by Dryden, I. 793, 795, 796, 798.
Absentee, by Maria Edgeworth, II. 735; by T. H. Bayly, III. 241.
Abstract of Melancholy, The Author's, by Burton, I. 440.
Achærians, trans. by Frere, II. 676, 677.
Acrasia's Bower of Bliss, by Spenser, I. 299.
Across the Plains, by R. L. Stevenson, III. 697, 702.
Active Powers, Essays on, by Reid, II. 388.
ACTON, LORD, III. 684.
Actor, by Robert Lloyd, II. 612.
Ad Amicos, by Richard West, II. 422.
ADAM, SIR ROBERT, II. 670.
ADAM, G. M., III. 726.
ADAM, JEAN, II. 523.
Adam Bede, by George Eliot, III. 529, 530.
Adam Blair, by J. G. Lockhart, III. 250.
ADAMNAN, I. 171.
ADAMS, ARTHUR H., III. 729.
ADAMS, F. W. L., III. 730.
ADAMSON, ROBERT, III. 843.
ADDISON, JOSEPH, II. 2, 212.
Addison, Elegy on, by T. Tickell, II. 251.
Addison, Life of, by Lucy Aikin, III. 178.
ADD, GEORGE, III. 855.
ADLER, MAX. See CLARK, III. 825.
Admirable Crichton, by Sir J. M. Barrie, III. 705.
Admiral Guinea, by Henley and Stevenson, III. 686, 690.
Admirals, Lives of the, by Dr J. Campbell, II. 387.
Admonition to the True Lords, by George Buchanan, I. 224.
Adonais, by Shelley, III. 111, 115.
Advancement of Learning, by Bacon, I. 381.
Adventurer, The, II. 410.
Adventure of Mr Verdant Green, by Rev. E. Bradley, III. 624.
Adversaria, by Porson, II. 637.
Advice to a Lady, by Lyttelton, II. 349.
Advice to an Author, by Shaftesbury, II. 167, 168-170.
Advice to Julia, by Henry Luttrell, II. 755.
Advocates' Library, Edinburgh, I. 826.
ADV, MRS HENRY, III. 851.
'A. E.' (George W. Russell), III. 710.
Æ Fond Kiss, by Burns, II. 827.
ÆLFRED, I. 19, 22.
ÆLFRIC, I. 26.
Ella, by Thomas Chatterton, II. 515.
Æneid, trans. by Caxton, I. 96; by Pitt, I. 259; by Harrington, I. 620; by Conington, III. 634; by Morris, III. 665; by Gavin Douglas into Scots, I. 202.
Æolian Harp, by Thoreau, III. 798.
Æschylus, trans. by Edward FitzGerald, III. 425; by J. S. Blackie, III. 490; ed. by T. Stanley, I. 746.
Æsop's Fables, trans. by L'Estrange, I. 742.
Æfar in the Desert, by T. Pringle, II. 790.
Afghanistan, The War in, by Sir J. W. Kaye, III. 482.
Africa, Travels in the Interior of, by Mungo Park, II. 651.
African Farm, by Mrs Schreier, III. 733.
African Sketches, by T. Pringle, II. 789; III. 733.
After Dark, by Wilkie Collins, III. 620.
After Days, by Austin Dobson, III. 680.
After London, or Wild England, by R. Jefferies, III. 640.
Age of Dryden, by R. Garnett, III. 668.
Age of Queen Anne, II. 119.
Age of Reason, by Thomas Paine, II. 559.
Agincoort, by Drayton, I. 341, 343.
Agnostic's Apology, by Sir Leslie Stephen, III. 602.
Agreeable Surprise, by O'Keefe, II. 656.
AGUILAR, GRACE, III. 850.
AIDÉ, HAMILTON, III. 839.
Aids to Reflection, by Coleridge, III. 62, 63.
AIKEN, CONRAD, III. 856.
AIKIN, LUCY, III. 178.
AINGER, ALFRED, III. 681.
AINSWORTH, WILLIAM HARRISON, III. 377.
AIRD, THOMAS, III. 312.
AJAX and Ulysses, by Shirley, I. 487.
AKENSIDE, MARK, II. 372.
Alastor, by Shelley, III. 107.
Albania, edited by John Leyden, II. 440.
Albert Nyanza, by Sir S. W. Baker, III. 610.
ALBERRY, JAMES, III. 841.
Albigenses, by Maturin, II. 753.
Albion's England, by W. Warner, I. 336.
Alceus, An Ode in Imitation of, by Sir W. Jones, II. 616.
Alchemist, by Ben Jonson, I. 404, 407.
Alciphron, by Berkeley, II. 266.
ALCOTT, AMOS BRONSON, III. 756.
ALCOTT, LOUISA MAY, III. 757.
ALCUI, I. 19; by C. Brockden Brown, III. 743.
ALDINGTON, RICHARD, III. 849.
ALDINGTON, MRS RICHARD (Hilda Doo-ittle), III. 856.
ALDRICH, HENRY, II. 61.
ALDRICH, THOMAS BAILEY, III. 824.
ALEXANDER, CECIL FRANCES, III. 583.
ALEXANDER, SAMUEL, III. 718, 844.
ALEXANDER, W. (Earl of Stirling), I. 509.
ALEXANDER, WILLIAM, III. 839.
ALEXANDER, DR WILLIAM, III. 584.
Alexander the Great, by N. Lee, II. 88.
Alexander's Feast, by Dryden, I. 795.
Alexandre, Alisauxer, I. 51, 178.
ALFORD, HENRY, III. 396.
ALFRED. See ÆLFRED.
Alfred, by H. J. Pye, II. 686; by Thomson and Mallet, II. 321, 328, 329.
Algonquin Legends, by Leland, III. 784.
Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, by Lewis Carroll, III. 648.
ALISON, ARCHIBALD, II. 639.
ALISON, SIR ARCHIBALD, III. 288.
All Fools, by Chapman, I. 377, 378.
All for Love, by Dryden, I. 790, 807, 808.
All Sorts and Conditions of Men, by Sir W. Bessant, III. 650.
All the Year Round, by Dickens, III. 465.
Allan Quatermain, by Sir Rider Haggard, III. 708.
ALLEN, CHARLES GRANT, III. 726, 727.
ALLEN, HERVEY, III. 856.
ALLEN, JAMES LANE, III. 831.
ALLINGHAM, WILLIAM, III. 605.
Alliterative Poems, I. 53, 174; Early English, I. 173, 174; Scottish, I. 172, 173.
Alliterative Romances, I. 51, 172-173.
All's Well that Ends Well, by Shakespeare, I. 365.
ALLSTON, WASHINGTON, III. 853.
Alma, by Matthew Prior, II. 114, 118.
Almayer's Folly, by Conrad, III. 711.
A.L.O.E. (M. C. Tucker), III. 850.
Alone in London, by R. Buchanan, III. 656.
Alonzo the Brave and the Fair Imogene, by M. G. Lewis, II. 751.
Alphonsus, by Robert Greene, I. 324, 325.
Alps, Through the, by Forbes, III. 400.
Althea, To, by Richard Lovelace, I. 638.
Altiora Peto, by L. Oliphant, III. 636.
Alton Locke, by Charles Kingsley, III. 513.
Amadis de Gaul, trans. by Rose, II. 760.
Amazing Marriage, by Meredith, III. 658.
Ambassadors, by Henry James, III. 830.
Ambrosio, or the Monk, by M. G. Lewis, II. 748, 749.
Amelia, by Fielding, II. 341; by Coventry Patmore, III. 602.
America, History of, by Robertson, II. 382, 384; by W. Russell, II. 388; by J. Fiske, III. 828.
America, Men and Manners in, by Thomas Hamilton, III. 254.
America, Society in, by Harriet Martineau, III. 388.
America, Travels in North, by Basil Hall, III. 227.
America, Wanderings in South, by C. Waterton, III. 173.
American Civil War, by J. W. Draper, III. 825; by Goldwin Smith, III. 727.
American Commonwealth, by Lord Bryce, III. 686.
American Conflict, by Horace Greeley, III. 811.
American Humour, by Haliburton, III. 726.
American Literature, III. 734.
American Literature, by Julian Hawthorne, III. 831.
American Note-Books, Hawthorne's, III. 780.
American Notes, by Dickens, III. 465, 760.
American Ornithology, by Alexander Wilson, II. 812.
American Revolution, by Sir G. O. Trevelyan, III. 687.
American Scholar, by Emerson, III. 761.
American Taxation, by Burke, II. 544.
American Tragedy, by Theodore Dreiser, III. 835.
American Wives and English Husbands, by Mrs Atherton, III. 834.
Americans, Domestic Manners of the, by Frances Trollope, III. 276.
Among my Books, by J. R. Lowell, III. 802.
Among the Millet, by A. Lampman, III. 728.
Amoretti, by Spenser, I. 296, 302.
Amorous War, by J. Mayne, I. 633.
AMORY, THOMAS, Memoirs, II. 280.
Amos Barton, by George Eliot, III. 529, 532.
Arnwell, by John Scott, II. 456.
Amy Wentworth, by Whittier, III. 775.
Amynata, by Sir Gilbert Elliot, II. 423.
Anacron, trans. by F. Fawkes, II. 421.
Anacroniques, by Cowley, I. 643, 645.
Anabae, or Mexico and the Mexicans, by Sir E. B. Tylor, III. 663.
Analecta, by Robert Wodrow, I. 830.
Analogy of Religion, by J. Butler, II. 269.
Anastasis, by Thomas Hope, II. 745, 746.
Anatomie of Humors, by Grahame, I. 818.
Anatomy of Melancholy, by Burton, I. 433.
Ancient Inhabitants of Scotland, Critical Essay on the, by Thomas Innes, II. 302.
Ancient Mariner, by Coleridge, III. 58, 63.
Ancient Mysteries, by W. Hone, II. 759.
Ancient Sea Margins, by Robert Chambers, III. 316.
Ancient Spanish Ballads, by J. G. Lockhart, III. 250.
Ancren Riwle, I. 39.
ANCRUM, EARL OF, I. 509.
ANDERSON, ALEXANDER, III. 841.
ANDERSON, SHERWOOD, III. 855.
Andreas, poem in the Verrelli Book, I. 14.
ANDREWES, LANCELOT, I. 388.
Aneurin, I. 3.
Angel Court, by Austin Dobson, III. 688.
Angel in the House, by Coventry Patmore, III. 602.
Angel of the Doves, by Stephens, III. 732.
Anglican Difficulties, by J. H. Newman, III. 338.
Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, I. 24, 26, 29.
Anglo-Saxon Literature, I. 4-29.
Anglo-Saxons, History of the, by Sharon Turner, II. 639.
ANGUS, MARION, III. 851.
Anima Poeta, by Coleridge, III. 62, 71.
Annabel Lee, by E. A. Poe, III. 787, 789.
Annales, by Archbishop Ussher, I. 441.
Annals of Peterborough, I. 29.

- Annals of the Parish, by John Galt, III. 296, 298.
- Annals of Winchester, I. 29.
- Annals of Worcester, I. 29.
- Ann Veronica, by H. G. Wells, III. 712.
- Annie Weir, by David Wingate, III. 608.
- Annual Register, II. 13, 301, 543.
- Annuity, by George Outram, III. 414.
- Annus Mirabilis, by Dryden, I. 792, 796.
- Anonymous Early Scottish Pieces, I. 298.
- Anster Fair, by William Tennant, III. 307.
- ANSTLEY, CHRISTOPHER, II. 434.
- ANSTLEY, F. (T. Anstey Guthrie), III. 844.
- Anthea, To, by Robert Herrick, I. 562.
- Anthologies, Elizabethan, I. 257.
- ANTHONY, C. L. (Dodie Smith), III. 852.
- Anthropology, by Sir E. Tylor, III. 663.
- Anti-Jacobin, II. 668, 669, 670, 672, 673.
- Antient Metaphysics, by Lord Montbodo, II. 435.
- Antiquary, by Scott, III. 34, 39, 41.
- Antonio and Melinda, by J. Marston, I. 463.
- Antony and Cleopatra, by Shakespeare, I. 371.
- Ants, Bees, and Wasps, by Lord Avebury, III. 664.
- Aphorisms, Moral and Religious, by Benjamin Whichcote, I. 603.
- Apologia pro Vita Sua, by J. H. Newman, III. 338, 339.
- Apologie for Poetrie, by Sir Philip Sidney, I. 289, 291.
- Apology, Barclay's, II. 53.
- Apology for his Life, by Colley Cibber, II. 273.
- Apostolic Age, by Bishop Lightfoot, III. 625.
- Appearance and Reality, by F. H. Bradley, III. 703.
- Appius and Virginia, by Webster, I. 426.
- Apple Cart, by G. B. Shaw, III. 706.
- Apple Dumplings and a King, by Wolcot, II. 664.
- Approaching Age, by Crabbe, II. 698.
- Arabia, A Year's Journey through, by W. G. Palerava, III. 609.
- Arabia Deserta, Travels in, by C. M. Doughty, III. 693.
- Arabian Nights, trans. by Sir R. F. Burton, III. 610.
- Arabic Lexicon, by Edward William Lane, III. 327.
- Aratra Pentelici, by Ruskin, III. 571.
- ARBER, EDWARD, III. 840.
- ARBUTHNOT, JOHN, II. 145.
- Arcades, by Milton, I. 687.
- Arcadia, by Sir Philip Sidney, I. 288, 290, 292; New, by Madame Duclaux, III. 704.
- ARCHER, WILLIAM, III. 844.
- Arden of Feversham, I. 334; by George Lillo, II. 276.
- Areopagitica, by Milton, I. 688, 707, 709.
- Arethusa, by Shelley, III. 112.
- Argenis, by John Barclay, I. 159; trans. by Clara Reeve, II. 429.
- ARGYLL, THE DUKE OF, III. 613.
- Ariadne Florentina, by Ruskin, III. 571.
- Arians of the Fourth Century, by J. H. Newman, III. 337.
- Ariosto, trans. by Sir John Harrington, I. 391; by W. S. Rose, II. 760.
- Aristocracy and Evolution, by W. H. Mallock, III. 703.
- Aristophanes, trans. by Hookham Frere, II. 676.
- Aristotle's Poetics, trans. by H. J. Pye, II. 685.
- Arms and the Man, by G. B. Shaw, III. 706.
- ARMSTRONG, JOHN, II. 350.
- ARNOLD, MATTHEW, III. 10, 591; Book on, by Prof. Saintsbury, III. 693.
- ARNOLD, SIR EDWIN, III. 663.
- ARNOLD, THOMAS, III. 202; Life of, by Stanley, III. 394.
- Arrah-na-Pogue, by D. Bouicault, III. 585.
- Arraignment of Paris, by Peete, I. 240, 321.
- Arrows of the Chace, by Ruskin, III. 572.
- Arrowsmith, by Sinclair Lewis, III. 836.
- Art Journal founded, III. 281.
- Art of Dining, by A. Hayward, III. 327.
- Art of Politics, by J. Bramston, II. 209, 210.
- Art of Preserving Health, by Armstrong, II. 350.
- Arte of English Poesie, by G. Puttenham, I. 266.
- Arte of Rhetorique, by Sir Thomas Wilson, I. 143.
- Artemus Ward, III. 826.
- Arthur Bonnicastle, by J. G. Holland, III. 778.
- Arthur Coningsby, by J. Sterling, III. 270.
- Arthur (Le Morte D'Arthur), by Sir Thomas Malory, I. 92.
- Arthurian Legend, I. 35; Beginning of, I. 3.
- Artists of Spain, by Sir W. Stirling-Maxwell, III. 499.
- Arundel, by Richard Cumberland, II. 562.
- As I Lay A-Thynkyng, by R. H. Barham, III. 167.
- As Slow our Ship, by Moore, III. 348.
- As You Like It, by Shakespeare, I. 367.
- ASCHAM, ROGER, I. 120, 144, 237.
- ASGILL, JOHN, II. 100.
- ASHMOLE, ELIAS, I. 590.
- Ashtaroath, by A. L. Gordon, III. 731.
- Asiatic Studies, by Lyall, III. 681.
- Ask me no more, by Tennyson, III. 546.
- Asolando, by R. Browning, III. 557, 566.
- ASQUITH, HENRY HERBERT, EARL OF OXFORD AND ASQUITH, III. 843.
- Assembly, by Archibald Pitcairne, II. 103.
- Astræa Redux, by Dryden, I. 792, 795.
- Astrolabe, by Chaucer, I. 81.
- Astrological Prognostication, by Thomas Nash, I. 329.
- Astrophel, by Spenser, I. 297, 308; by A. C. Swinburne, III. 674.
- Astrophel and Stella, by Sir Philip Sidney, I. 287, 292.
- At Last, by Charles Kingsley, III. 514.
- At the Mid Hour of Night, by Moore, III. 348.
- Atalanta in Calydon, by Swinburne, III. 670-672, 676-677.
- Atalantis, by Mrs Manley, II. 96.
- Atheist's Tragedy, by Tourneur, I. 430.
- ATHELARD OF BATH, I. 34.
- Athelstane, by John Brown, II. 392.
- Athenæ Oxonienses, by A. Wood, I. 749.
- Athenæum established by J. S. Buckingham, III. 224; edited by C. W. Dilke, III. 259.
- Athenaid, by Richard Glover, II. 351.
- Athenian Captive, by Sir T. N. Talfourd, III. 272.
- ATHERSTONE, EDWIN, III. 146.
- ATHERTON, GERTRUDE FRANKLIN, III. 834.
- Atlantic Monthly, III. 772, 791, 797, 800, 801, 802, 829.
- Atossa, Character of, by Pope, II. 183.
- Attaché, by T. C. Haliburton, III. 726.
- ATTERBURY, FRANCIS, II. 158.
- Atticus, Character of, by Pope, II. 179, 183.
- AUBREY, JOHN, I. 747.
- Aucassin and Nicolette, trans. by Andrew Lang, III. 692.
- AUDEN, WYNSTAN HUGH, III. 724, 849.
- Audrey, by Mary Johnson, III. 834.
- Augusta, Stanzas to, by Byron, III. 131.
- Augustan Age of English Literature, II. 119.
- Auld Lang Syne, by Ramsay, II. 315.
- Auld Licht Idylls, by Sir J. Barrie, III. 705.
- Auld Reekie, by Robert Ferguson, II. 806.
- Auld Robin Forbes (in Cumbrian), by Susanna Blamire, II. 802.
- Auld Robin Gray, by Lady Anne Barnard, II. 803, 804.
- Aurengzebe, by Dryden, I. 797, 807.
- Aurora Floyd, by Miss Braddon, III. 690.
- Aurora Leigh, by Mrs Browning, III. 554, 557, 558, 561.
- AUSTEN, JANE, II. 774.
- AUSTIN, ALFRED, III. 681.
- AUSTIN, DR ADAM, II. 810.
- AUSTIN, JOHN, III. 373.
- AUSTIN, MRS JOHN, III. 373.
- AUSTIN, LUCIE (Lady Duff Gordon), III. 373, 733.
- Australasian Literature, III. 729.
- Author's Farce, by Fielding, II. 339.
- Autocrat of the Breakfast Table, by O. W. Holmes, III. 791, 792, 794.
- Autumn, Ode to, by Keats, III. 101, 105.
- AVEBURY, LORD, III. 663.
- Avillion, by Mrs Craik, III. 536.
- Ayenbyte of Inwyt, I. 49.
- Aylmers, by T. H. Bayly, III. 241.
- Aylwin, by T. Watts-Dunton, III. 608.
- Ayrshire Legatees, by Galt, III. 297, 298.
- AYTON, SIR ROBERT, I. 508.
- AYTON, WILLIAM EDMONSTOUNE, III. 475.
- Azores, by Raleigh, I. 305, 311.
- Bab Ballads, by W. S. Gilbert, III. 694.
- Babbitt, by Sinclair Lewis, III. 836.
- Babe Christabel, The Ballad of, by Gerald Massey, III. 608.
- Babylon, by Grant Allen, III. 727.
- Baby's Debut, by James Smith, III. 161.
- BACHELLER, IRVING, III. 855.
- Back to Methuselah, by Shaw, III. 706.
- BACON, FRANCIS, I. 380; Letters and Life, by Spedding, III. 397; Personal History, by Hepworth Dixon, III. 578.
- BACON, ROGER, I. 34.
- Baddington Peerage, by G. A. H. Sala, III. 625.
- BADA—'The Venerable Bede,' I. 18.
- BAGE, ROBERT, II. 572.
- BAGERHOT, WALTER, III. 630.
- BAILLY, PHILIP JAMES, III. 507.
- BAILLIE, JOANNA, III. 729.
- BAILLIE, LADY GRIZEL, II. 311.
- BAILLIE, ROBERT, I. 516.
- BAIN, ALEXANDER, III. 497.
- BAKER, SIR R.—his Chronicle, I. 589.
- BAKER, SIR SAMUEL WHITE, III. 610.
- Balade of Charitie, by Chatterton, II. 512.
- Balder, by Sydney Dobell, III. 603.
- Balder Dead, by Matthew Arnold, III. 592.
- BALE, JOHN, I. 154.
- BALFOUR, EARL OF, III. 842.
- BALL, SIR ROBERT STAWELL, III. 841.
- Hall, by Shirley and Chapman, I. 486.
- Ballad, by C. S. Calverley, III. 639.
- Ballad of Agincourt, by Drayton, I. 341, 343.
- Ballad of East and West, by Rudyard Kipling, III. 708.
- Ballad of Good Counsel, by James L., I. 183.
- Ballad of the Revenge, by Tennyson, III. 542.
- Ballad Poetry of Ireland, by Sir C. G. Duffy, III. 579, 583.
- Ballad upon a Wedding, by Sir J. Suckling, I. 631.
- Ballade of the Scottysse Kyng, by John Skeiton, I. 115.
- Ballades in Blue China, by Andrew Lang, III. 692.
- Ballades of Books, by A. Lang, III. 692.
- Ballads, I. 520.
- Ballads, Ancient Spanish, by J. G. Lockhart, III. 250.
- Ballads, by John Davidson, III. 706.
- Ballads, 'Dagonet,' by G. R. Sims, III. 694.
- Ballads, Hans Breitmann, III. 784.
- Ballads, Poetry of Wonder in Romantic, III. 4.
- Ballads and Lyrics of Old France, by A. Lang, III. 692.
- Ballads and Metrical Sketches, by Lord de Tabley, III. 650.
- Ballads of Ireland, III. 579.
- BALLANTINE, JAMES, III. 377.
- BALLANTYNE, ROBERT MICHAEL, III. 623, 725.
- BANCROFT, GEORGE, III. 755.
- BANCROFT, HUBERT HOWE, III. 854.
- Bangorian Controversy, II. 42, 245.
- BANIM, JOHN, III. 353.
- BANIM, MICHAEL, III. 353.
- Banishment of Poverty, by Scampill, I. 819.
- Banker's Wife, by C. G. F. Gore, III. 279.
- Banks of Helicon, by Alexander Montgomerie, I. 233.
- Banks o' Doon, by Burns, II. 825.
- BANNATYNE, RICHARD, I. 231.
- Barbarossa, by John Brown, II. 392.
- BARBAULD, ANNA LETITIA, II. 581.
- BARRELLON, W. N. P. (B. F. Cummings), III. 849.
- BARROUR, JOHN, I. 160, 175.
- Barchester Towers, by A. Trollope, III. 487.
- BARCLAY, ALEXANDER, I. 116.
- BARCLAY, JOHN, I. 519.
- BARCLAY, ROBERT, II. 53.
- Bard, by Thomas Gray, II. 359, 364.
- Bardomachia, by Alex. Geddes, II. 709.
- Bard's Epitaph, by Burns, II. 821.
- Barefoot Boy, by Whittier, III. 775.
- BARNAM, RICHARD HARRIS, III. 166.
- BARING-GOULD, SABINE, III. 664.
- BARKER, GRANVILLE, III. 847.
- BARLOW, JANE, III. 851.
- BARLOW, JOEL, III. 736, 743.
- Barnabe Itinerarium, or Barnabee's Journal, by Brathwaite, I. 488.
- Bardaby Rudge, by Dickens, III. 464.
- BARNARD, LADY ANNE, II. 803; III. 733.
- BARNES, BARNABE, I. 278.
- BARNES, WILLIAM, III. 412.
- Barnveld, Life of, by Motley, III. 816.
- Barney Mahoney, by C. Croker, III. 412.
- BARNFIELD, RICHARD, I. 399.
- Baron Munchausen, by Rudolf Erich Raspe, II. 714.
- BARR, ROBERT, III. 842.
- Barrack-Room Ballads, by Rudyard Kipling, III. 708.
- BARRIE, SIR JAMES MATTHEW, III. 705, 722.
- Barriers Buried Away, by Roe, III. 825.
- BARROW, ISAAC, I. 757.
- BARROW, SIR JOHN, II. 754.
- BARRY, WILLIAM FRANCIS, III. 842.
- Barry Lyndon, by Thackeray, III. 456.

- Bartholomew Fair, by Ben Jonson, I. 404.
 BARTON, BERNARD, III. 230.
 Bas Bleu, by Hannah More, II. 577, 579.
 Basilicon Doron, by James I., I. 506.
 Bastard, by Richard Savage, II. 283.
 Battle Day, by Ernest Jones, III. 505.
 Battle Hymn of the Republic, by Julia Ward Howe, III. 827.
 Battle of Beal' an Duffne, by Scott, III. 37.
 Battle of Blenheim, by Southey, III. 52.
 Battle of Otterburn, ballad, I. 537.
 Battle of the Baltic, by Campbell, II. 760, 769.
 Battle of the Books, by Swift, II. 123, 126, 139.
 Battlefield, by Bryant, III. 753, 755.
 Baviad, by William Gifford, II. 667.
 BAXTER, ARTHUR BEVERLEY, III. 726.
 BAXTER, RICHARD, I. 664.
 Bay Leaves, by Goldwin Smith, III. 727.
 Bay of Biscay, by Andrew Cherry, II. 758.
 Bay Psalm Book, III. 734.
 BAYLY, ADA ELLER (Edna Lyall), III. 851.
 BAYLY, THOMAS HAYNES, III. 241.
 BAYNTON, BARBARA, III. 851.
 Beachy Head, by Charlotte Smith, II. 593.
 BEACONSFIELD, LORD, III. 435.
 Beating of my Own Heart, by Lord Houghton, III. 382.
 BEATTIE, JAMES, II. 525.
 Beau Austin, by Henley and Stevenson, III. 695, 699.
 Beauchamp's Career, by Meredith, III. 658.
 BEAUMONT, FRANCIS, I. 468.
 BEAUMONT, SIR JOHN, I. 448.
 BEAUX' Stratagem, by Farquhar, II. 90.
 BEAZLEY, SIR CHARLES RAYMOND, III. 847.
 Bechuanaland Boy, by Thomas Pringle, II. 790.
 BECK, LOUIS, III. 730.
 Becket, by Tennyson, III. 542.
 BECKFORD, WILLIAM, II. 629.
 BEDDOES, THOMAS LOVELL, III. 237.
 BEDS, CUTHBERT (Rev. Edward Bradley), III. 624.
 * BEDS, THE VENERABLE, I. 18.
 Bedouin Love-Song, by Bayard Taylor, III. 822.
 Bed, by Goldsmith, II. 479, 490.
 BECHER, HENRY WARD, III. 813.
 BECHING, HENRY CHARLES, III. 844.
 BECKHOFF, MAX, III. 847.
 BEESLY, EDWARD SPENCER, III. 840.
 Beggar Man, by Thomas Moss, II. 617.
 Beggar's Opera, by Gay, II. 173, 175.
 BEHN, APHRA, II. 68.
 Being and Attributes of God, by Samuel Clarke, II. 160.
 BEITH, JOHN HAY, III. 847.
 BELASCO, DAVID, III. 855.
 Belaguered City, by Mrs Oliphant, III. 538.
 Belford Regis, by Mary Russell Mitford, III. 177.
 Belgium and Western Germany, by Frances Trollope, III. 276.
 BELL, HENRY GLASSFORD, III. 415.
 BELL, HENRY THOMAS MACKENZIE, III. 843.
 BELLAMY, EDWARD, III. 831.
 BELLEFON, JOHN, I. 215.
 BELLOC, HILAIRE, III. 847.
 Bells, by E. A. Poe, III. 786, 787.
 Bells and Pomegranates, by R. Browning, III. 553, 562.
 Belshazzar, by H. H. Milman, III. 298, 211.
 Belvedere, or the Garden of the Muses, I. 258.
 Ben Hur, by Lew Wallace, III. 823.
 Bending of the Bough, by G. Moore, III. 707.
 BENNET, STEPHEN VINCENT, III. 856.
 BENNETT, ARNOLD, III. 712, 719.
 BENNETT, WILLIAM COX, III. 548.
 BENSON, ARTHUR CHRISTOPHER, III. 845.
 BENSON, EDWARD FREDERIC, III. 846.
 BENSON, STELLA, III. 852.
 BENTHAM, JEREMY, II. 700.
 Benthamians, by John Hill Burton, III. 398.
 Bentinck, Life of Lord George, by Lord Beaconsfield, III. 438, 440.
 BENTLEY, RICHARD, II. 105.
 Beowulf, I. 4, 5; trans. by William Morris, III. 665.
 Beppo, by Lord Byron, III. 129, 132.
 BERESFORD, JAMES, II. 740.
 BERESFORD, JOHN DAVYS, III. 847.
 BERKLEY, GEORGE, II. 265.
 Bermudas, Emigrants in the, by Marvell, I. 712.
 BERNERS, DAME JULIANA, I. 99.
 BERNERS, LORD, I. 103.
 BESANT, MRS ANNE, III. 850.
 BESANT, SIR WALTER, III. 650.
 Besom Ben Stories, by E. Waugh, III. 492.
 Bessy Bell and Mary Gray, by Ramsay, II. 315.
 Beth Gélert, by W. R. Spencer, II. 740.
 BETHAM-EDWARDS, MATILDA BARBARA, III. 850.
 Betsy Lee, by Thos. E. Brown, III. 634.
 Bevis of Hampton, I. 51.
 Bewick (Thomas), by Dobson, III. 688.
 Beyond the Veil, by H. Vaughan, I. 682, 684.
 Bible, Brown's Self-interpreting, II. 646.
 Bible, Catholic Thoughts on the, by Myers, III. 691.
 Bible, Matthew's, I. 132; Cranmer's, I. 132; Geneva, I. 133, 134; 'Bishops', I. 133, 134, 242; Douay, I. 133; Tyndale's, I. 129, 134; Coverdale's, I. 131, 134; Great, I. 132, 139; of 1611, I. 252.
 Bible, Pictorial, by John Kitto, III. 374.
 Bible, The English, I. 128.
 Bible in Spain, by Borrow, III. 430, 432.
 BICKERSTAFFE, ISAAC, III. 409.
 BIERCE, AMBROSE, III. 832.
 BIGGLOW, POULTNEY, III. 854.
 Biglow Papers, by J. R. Lowell, III. 801, 802, 803.
 BILLINGS, JOSH (H. W. Shaw), III. 835.
 Billow and the Rock, by Harriet Martineau, III. 388.
 BINYON, LAURENCE, III. 713, 722.
 Biographia Britannica Literaria, by Thomas Wright, III. 411.
 Biographia Literaria, by Coleridge, III. 61, 63, 70.
 Biographia Presbyteriana, by P. Walker, II. 101.
 Biographical and Critical Essays, by Abraham Hayward, III. 327.
 Biographical History of England, by James Granger, II. 388.
 Biography, Contemporary, by Bryce, III. 687.
 Biography, Dictionary of National, III. 662, 707.
 BIRD, ROBERT MONTGOMERY, III. 853.
 Birks of Invermay, by D. Mallet, II. 330.
 BIRRELL, AUGUSTINE, III. 842.
 Birth of Balder, by Buchanan, III. 656.
 Birth of Merlin, by Rowley, I. 478.
 Birth-night Ball, Egey on the, by Catherine Maria Fanshawe, II. 739.
 BISHOP, MRS ISABELLA L., III. 850.
 BISHOP, SAMUEL, II. 533.
 Bishops of Scotland, Catalogue of the, by Robert Keith, II. 305.
 Bit o' Writin', by John Banim, III. 354.
 Bitter-Sweet, by J. G. Holland, III. 778.
 BLACK, WILLIAM, III. 691.
 Black Arrow, by R. L. Stevenson, III. 699.
 Black Rock, by Ralph Connor, III. 728.
 Black-eyed Susan, by John Gay, II. 174, 176; by Douglas Jerrold, III. 328.
 BLACKIE, JOHN STUART, III. 490.
 BLACKLOCK, THOMAS, II. 438.
 BLACKMORE, RICHARD DODDRIDGE, III. 622.
 BLACKMORE, SIR RICHARD, I. 732; II. 107.
 BLACKSTONE, SIR WILLIAM, II. 438.
 BLACKWOOD, ALGERNON, III. 847.
 BLAIS, HUGH, II. 534.
 BLAIR, ROBERT, II. 305.
 Blake, Robert, by Hepworth Dixon, III. 578.
 BLAKE, WILLIAM, II. 717; III. 6.
 Blake (William), a Critical Essay, by Swinburne, III. 671.
 BLAMIRE, SUSANNA, II. 801.
 BLANCHARD, EDWARD LAMAN, III. 331.
 BLANCHARD, LAMAN, III. 331.
 Blank Verse introduced by Surrey, I. 162.
 Bleak House, by Dickens, III. 465.
 Blessed Damozel, by D. G. Rossetti, III. 641, 643.
 BLESSINGTON, THE COUNTESS OF, III. 278.
 BLIND, MATILDE, III. 850.
 Blind Beggar of Alexandria, by Chapman, I. 377.
 Blind Beggar of Bednal Green, by John Day, I. 420.
 Blind Boy, by T. G. Hake, III. 384.
 BLIND HARRY, I. 166, 186.
 Blithedale Romance, by Hawthorne, III. 781.
 BLOOMFIELD, ROBERT, II. 687.
 Blot in the 'Scutcheon, by R. Browning, III. 553, 559.
 Blue Fairy Book, by A. Lang, III. 692.
 Blue-beard, by Reginald Heber, III. 213.
 BLUNDEN, EDMUND CHARLES, III. 849.
 BLUNT, WILFRID SCAMEN, III. 691.
 Blythstone Bridal, by Sempill, I. 819.
 Bob Burke's Duel, by William Maginn, III. 260, 261.
 BODLEY, J. E. C., III. 843.
 BOECE, HECTOR, I. 212.
 Boer War, by Sir Conan Doyle, III. 707.
 Boethius's De Consolatione Philosophia, trans. by Alfred, I. 21; trans. by Chaucer, I. 63, 82.
 BOKER, GEORGE HENRY, III. 853.
 BOLDREWOOD, ROLF (T. A. Brown), III. 730, 732.
 BOLINGBROKE, LORD, HENRY ST JOHN, II. 202.
 Bombastes Furioso, by Rhodes, II. 710.
 Bon Gaultier Ballads, III. 476, 477.
 Bonduca, by Fletcher, I. 468, 471.
 Book of Days, by R. Chambers, III. 316.
 Book of Martyrs, Foxe's, I. 251.
 Book of Nonsense, by E. Lear, III. 657.
 Book of Piuscarden, I. 208.
 Book of St Albans, by Dame Juliana Berners, I. 99.
 Book of the Beginnings, by G. Massey, III. 608.
 Book of the Native, by Sir C. G. D. Roberts, III. 728.
 Book-Hunter, by J. H. Burton, III. 398.
 Books and Bookmen, by A. Lang, III. 692.
 Books and Libraries, by Lowell, III. 805.
 BOORDE, ANDREW, I. 148.
 BOOTH, HARTON, II. 230.
 BOOTHBY, GUY, III. 730.
 Borough Minstrelsy, by Scott, III. 7, 31, 33.
 Borough, by G. Crabbe, II. 694, 697.
 BORROW, GEORGE HENRY, III. 429.
 BOSTON, THOMAS, II. 302.
 BOSWELL, JAMES, II. 10, 468.
 BOSWELL, SIR ALEXANDER, II. 830.
 Botanic Garden, by Erasmus Darwin, II. 572, 573.
 Botnie of Tober-na-Vuolich, by A. H. Clough, III. 511.
 Bothwell, by A. C. Swinburne, III. 671.
 BOTTOMLEY, GORDON, III. 714, 722.
 BOUCCAILLY, DIGN, III. 585.
 Bouquet of Dainty Conceits, I. 257.
 BOURINOT, SIR JOHN GEORGE, III. 726, 727.
 BOWDLER, THOMAS, II. 753.
 BOWER, ARCHIBALD, II. 387.
 BOWER, WALTER, I. 182.
 BOWEN-LYON, LILIAN, III. 852.
 BOWLES, CAROLINE ANNE (Mrs Southey), III. 55.
 BOWLES, WILLIAM LISLE, II. 721.
 Bow-Meeting Songs, by Reginald Heber, III. 213.
 BOWRING, SIR JOHN, III. 271.
 BOYD, ANDREW KENNEDY HUTCHISON, III. 624.
 BOYD, ZACHARY, I. 514.
 Boy David, by Sir J. M. Barrie, III. 705.
 BOYES, ABEL, II. 387.
 BOYLE, ROBERT, I. 726.
 BOYLE, ROGER, I. 787.
 Boyne Water, by Michael and John Banim, III. 353.
 Bracebridge Hall, by Irving, III. 745, 746.
 BRACKEN, THOMAS, III. 729.
 BRACTON, HENRY DE, I. 34.
 BRADDON, MARY ELIZABETH, III. 690.
 BRADLEY, ANDREW CECIL, III. 707.
 BRADLEY, EDWARD, III. 624.
 BRADLEY, FRANCIS HERBERT, III. 703.
 BRADLEY, KATHARINE H. ('Michael Field'), III. 704.
 BRADY, NICHOLAS, II. 60.
 Braes o' Balquhither, by Tannahill, II. 829.
 Braes o' Gleniffer, by Tannahill, II. 829.
 Braes of Yarrow, by W. Hamilton, II. 310; by John Logan, II. 532.
 Braid Claithe, by Robert Fergusson, II. 806.
 Bramble Flower, To the, by Ebenezer Elliot, III. 232.
 BRAMSTON, JAMES, II. 209.
 BRATHWAITE, RICHARD, I. 488.
 Brave New World, by Aldous Huxley, III. 716.
 Bravo of Venice, by Lewis, II. 748, 749.
 BRAV, MRS, III. 279.
 Bread-Winners, III. 825.
 Break, break, break, by Tennyson, III. 541, 545.
 Bredfield Hall, by E. FitzGerald, III. 428.
 BREITMANN, HANS. See LELAND.
 BRETON, NICHOLAS, I. 275.
 BREWSTER, SIR DAVID, III. 242.
 Bric-à-brac, by W. E. Henley, III. 695.
 Bridal, by Tennyson, III. 540, 543.
 Bride of Lammermoor, by Scott, III. 30, 31.
 Bride's Tragedy, by T. L. Beddoes, III. 237.
 Bridge of Sighs, by Hood, III. 138.
 BRIDGES, ROBERT, III. 693, 722.
 BRIDIE, JAMES (Dr O. H. Mavor), III. 848.
 Brief Discourse concerning the Different Wits of Men, by Walter Charleton, I. 744.

- Brief History of the Times, by L'Estrange, I. 741, 743.
- Brigadier Gerard, by Sir Conan Doyle, III. 707.
- BRIGHT, JOHN, III. 830.
- Bristowe Tragedie, by Chatterton, II. 513.
- Britannia, by Camden, I. 208.
- Britannia's Pastorals, by William Browne, I. 489, 490.
- British Geographics, by Grahame, II. 689, 690.
- British India, History of, by James Mill, II. 757.
- British Painters, Lives of, by Allan Cunningham, III. 303.
- British Paleozoic Fossils, by Sedgwick, III. 202.
- British Poets. Specimens of the, by Campbell, II. 766.
- British Prison-ship, by P. Freneau, III. 736.
- British Quarterly founded, III. 271.
- Broad Grins, by Colman, II. 656, 659-661.
- BROKE, ARTHUR, I. 237, 263.
- Broken Heart, by John Ford, I. 481, 482.
- BROME, RICHARD, I. 487.
- BRONTE, ANNE, III. 526.
- BRONTE, CHARLOTTE, III. 520.
- BRONTE, EMILY JANE, III. 525.
- BRONTE, EMILY, by Miss. Duclaux, III. 704.
- BRONTE, Life of Charlotte, by Mrs Gaskell, III. 527.
- Brook Fair, III. 777, 778, 781.
- BROOKE, CHARLOTTE, II. 396.
- BROOKE, HENRY, II. 396.
- BROOKE, LORD, I. 354.
- BROOKE, RUFERT, III. 848.
- BROOKE, STOFFORD AUGUSTUS, III. 662.
- BROOKS, C. W. SHIRLEY, III. 492.
- BROOKS, PHILLIPS, III. 825.
- BROOKS, VAN WYCK, III. 836.
- BROOME, WILLIAM, II. 199.
- Brothers, by Wordsworth, III. 16.
- BROUGHAM, LORD, III. 189.
- BROUGHAM, RHODA, III. 690.
- BROWN, CHARLES BROCKDEN, III. 743.
- BROWN, DR JOHN, III. 449.
- BROWN, GEORGE DOUGLAS, III. 847.
- BROWN, JOHN, II. 391.
- BROWN, JOHN, of Haddington, II. 646.
- BROWN, PETER HUME, III. 842.
- BROWN, THOMAS, II. 761.
- BROWN, THOMAS EDWARD, III. 634.
- BROWN, TOM, II. 78.
- Brown Jug, by Francis Hawkes, II. 421.
- BROWNE, CHARLES FARRAR, III. 826.
- BROWNE, ISAAC HAWKINS, II. 287.
- BROWNE, SIR THOMAS, I. 590.
- BROWNE, THOMAS ALEXANDER, III. 732.
- BROWNE, WILLIAM, I. 489.
- BROWNELL, WILLIAM CEAR, III. 854.
- Browne of Blednoch, by William Nicholson, III. 306.
- BROWNING, ELIZABETH BARRETT, III. 549, 557.
- BROWNING, OSCAR, III. 840.
- BROWNING, ROBERT, III. 9, 549, 558.
- BRUCE, JAMES, II. 649.
- BRUCE, MICHAEL, II. 528.
- Bruce, by Barbour, I. 176.
- Bruce, by John Davidson, III. 706.
- Bruandurb, Battle of, I. 23, 26.
- BRUNTON, MARY, II. 772.
- Brut, by Layamon, I. 3, 35.
- Brut d'Angleterre, by Wace, I. 35.
- Brutus Ulter, by Michael Field, III. 704.
- BRYANT, JACOB, II. 391.
- BRYANT, WILLIAM CULLEN, III. 753.
- BRUCE, GEORGE, III. 726.
- BRUCE, LORD, III. 686.
- BRYDGES, SIR SAMUEL EGERTON, II. 714.
- Brythonic Invasion of England, I. 2, 831.
- Bubbles from the Brunness of Nassau, by Sir Francis Bond Head, III. 266.
- Bubbles of the Day, by Douglas Jerrold, III. 328, 329.
- Buccareer, by Mrs S. C. Hall, III. 280.
- BUCHAN, ANNA, III. 852.
- BUCHAN, JOHN, III. 847.
- BUCHANAN, GEORGE, I. 166, 222.
- BUCHANAN, ROBERT, III. 655.
- BUCKINGHAM, DUKE OF (George Villiers), I. 788.
- BUCKINGHAM, DUKE OF (John Sheffield), II. 106.
- BUCKINGHAM, JAMES SILK, III. 224.
- BUCKLAND, FRANCIS TREVELYAN, III. 590.
- BUCKLE, HENRY THOMAS, III. 611.
- BUDGELL, EUSTACE, II. 242.
- Budget of Paradoxes, by A. de Morgan, III. 398.
- Bulk of Alexander, by Barbour (?), I. 178.
- Buke of the Howlat, by Holland, I. 174.
- Bull, John, by Arbuthnot, II. 145; by Colman, II. 656.
- BULLEN, ARTHUR HENRY, III. 844.
- BULLEN, FRANK THOMAS, III. 844.
- Bulletin School, III. 729.
- BULWER, EDWARD. See LYTTON, LORD.
- BULWER, HENRY LYTTON, III. 336.
- Bunde, John, by Thomas Amory, II. 280.
- Bundle of Letters, by Henry James, III. 830.
- BUNNER, HENRY CUYLER, III. 855.
- BUNYAN, JOHN, I. 719, 734.
- BURCKHARDT, JOHN LEWIS, III. 266.
- Burden of Nineveh, by Rossetti, III. 643.
- Bürger's Lenore, trans. by Taylor, II. 712.
- BURGHCLERE, LADY, III. 851.
- BURGIN, GEORGE B., III. 843.
- BURGOYNE, GENERAL, II. 670.
- Burial March of Dundee, by W. E. Aytoun, III. 476.
- Burial of Sir John Moore, by Charles Wolfe, II. 788, 789.
- BURKE, EDMUND, II. 543; Life of, by Morley, III. 686.
- BURNAND, SIR FRANCIS COWLEY, III. 694.
- BURNET, DR THOMAS, II. 28.
- BURNET, GILBERT, II. 30.
- BURNETT, FRANCES HODGSON, III. 833.
- BURNEY, FANNY (Madame D'Arblay), II. 586; Life of, by Austin Dobson, III. 688.
- Burning Babe, by Southwell, I. 337, 338.
- BURNS, ROBERT, II. 814; III. 6; Life and Works of, by Robert Chambers, III. 316; Life of, by J. G. Lockhart, III. 250; ed. by Henley and Henderson, III. 695; To the Memory of, by Campbell, II. 771; by Sir A. Boswell, II. 832; Wordsworth on, III. 28.
- Burnt Njal. Saga of, trans. by Sir G. W. Dasent, III. 499.
- BURROUGHS, JOHN, III. 824.
- BURTON, JOHN HILL, III. 398.
- BURTON, ROBERT, I. 435.
- BURTON, SIR RICHARD FRANCIS, III. 609; Life of, by Lady Burton, III. 610.
- BURY, JOHN B., III. 845.
- BURY, LADY CHARLOTTE, II. 772.
- BURY, RICHARD DE, I. 34.
- Bush aboon Traquair, by R. Crawford, II. 317.
- Bush Ballads, by A. L. Gordon, III. 731.
- BUTLER, JOSEPH, II. 269.
- BUTLER, SAMUEL, I. 731, 735.
- BUTLER, SAMUEL, III. 624, 730.
- BUTLER, SIR WILLIAM FRANCIS, III. 841.
- Bylow Hill, by G. W. Cable, III. 630.
- By Proxy, by James Payn, III. 634.
- BYRD, WILLIAM, III. 735.
- BYROM, JOHN, II. 278.
- BYRON, HENRY JAMES, III. 637.
- BYRON, LORD, III. 8, 118; Life of, by Moore, III. 347; by Henry Lytton Bulwer, III. 336; Conversations with, by the Countess of Blessington, III. 278.
- BYSSET, ABAKUK, I. 231.
- Byzantine Empire, by G. Finlay, III. 217.
- Ca' the Yowes to the Knowes, by Isobel Pagan, II. 810.
- Cabbages and Kings, by O. Henry (W. S. Porter), III. 835.
- CABELL, JAMES BRANCH, III. 836.
- CABLE, GEORGE WASHINGTON, III. 829.
- Calendus and Vanessa, by Swift, II. 128.
- CARDON, I. 9, 12.
- Cesar, a Sketch, by J. A. Froude, III. 502.
- CAFFYN, KATHLEEN MANNINGTON, III. 851.
- CAINE, SIR HALL, III. 848.
- CAIRD, EDWARD, III. 625.
- CAIRD, JOHN, III. 625.
- CAIRD, MRS MONA, III. 851.
- Calamus, by Walt Whitman, III. 807.
- CALAMY, EDMUND, I. 586.
- CALDERWOOD, DAVID, I. 513.
- Caleb Stukely, by Samuel Phillips, III. 482.
- Caleb Williams, by W. Godwin, II. 702, 704.
- Caledonia, by George Chalmers, II. 636.
- Call to the Unconverted, by Baxter, I. 665.
- Call'er Herrin', by Lady Nairne, II. 828.
- Callirrhoe, by Michael Field, III. 704.
- Callista, by John Henry Newman, III. 337.
- CALVERLEY, CHARLES STUART, III. 638.
- CAMBRIDGE, ADA, III. 730, 732.
- Cambridge Modern History, planned by Lord Acton, III. 634, 718.
- CAMDEN, WILLIAM, I. 268.
- CAMERON, GEORGE FREDERICK, III. 728.
- Cameronian's Dream, by J. Hyslop, III. 310.
- Camions, trans. by W. J. Mickle, II. 522, 524; by Sir R. F. Burton, III. 650.
- Campaign, by Addison, I. 213, 216.
- Campaspe, by Lyly, I. 315.
- CAMPBELL, DR JOHN, II. 387.
- CAMPBELL, GEORGE, II. 427.
- CAMPBELL, JAMES DYKES, III. 841.
- CAMPBELL, JOHN FRANCIS, III. 585.
- CAMPBELL, LEWIS, III. 661.
- CAMPBELL, LORD, III. 191.
- CAMPBELL, ROY DUNNACHIE, III. 733, 840.
- CAMPBELL, THOMAS, II. 765.
- CAMPBELL, WILLIAM WILFRED, * III. 726, 728.
- CAMPION, THOMAS, I. 274, 400.
- Canada, English Literature in, III. 725.
- Canada, History of, by W. Kingsford, III. 727.
- Canada, Old Régime in, by Parkman, III. 818.
- Canada, Political Destiny of, by Goldwin Smith, III. 727.
- Canada's Intellectual Strength and Weakness, by Bourinot, III. 727.
- Canadian Boat Song, III. 298, 725.
- CANFIELD, DOROTHY (Dorothea Frances Canfield Fisher), III. 834.
- CANNAN, GILBERT, III. 848.
- CANNING, GEORGE, II. 672.
- Cance and Saddle, by Winthrop, III. 823.
- Canterbury, Historical Memorials of, by A. P. Stanley, III. 394.
- Canterbury Tales, by Chaucer, I. 62, 64, 68, 70, 71-74, 81; fac-simile, I. 73.
- Canterbury Tales, by Sophia and Harriet Lee, II. 653, 654.
- Canute the Great, by Michael Field, III. 704.
- Cape Cod, by H. D. Thoreau, III. 796.
- CAPES, BERNARD, III. 847.
- CAPRAVE, JOHN, I. 89.
- Captain Digby Grand, by G. J. Whyte-Melville, III. 585.
- Captain Macklin, by R. H. Davis, III. 832.
- Captain Masters's Children, by T. Hood, III. 668.
- Captain's Toll-gate, by F. R. Stockton, III. 824.
- Caractacus, by William Mason, II. 426, 427.
- Cardiphonia, by John Newton, II. 614.
- Careless Content, by John Byrom, II. 279.
- Carew, Lady Elizabeth. See CAREY, LADY ELIZABETH.
- CAREW, RICHARD, I. 353.
- CAREW, THOMAS, I. 568.
- CAREY, HENRY, II. 330.
- CAREY, HENRY CHARLES, III. 853.
- CAREY, LADY ELIZABETH, I. 490.
- CAREY, SIR ROBERT, I. 396.
- CARISBIA, by Mrs Harrison, III. 704.
- CARLETON, WILLIAM, III. 352.
- CARLYLE, ALEXANDER, II. 414; his autobiography, II. 414.
- CARLYLE, DR JOHN, III. 402.
- CARLYLE, THOMAS, III. 401.
- Carlyle, Letters and Memorials of Jane Welsh, III. 404, 405.
- Carlyle, Letters to Mrs, by G. E. Jewsbury, III. 520.
- Carlyle Personally and in his Writings, by Masson, III. 653.
- Carlyle's Reminiscences, by J. A. Froude, III. 502.
- CARMAN, WILLIAM BLESS, III. 726, 728.
- Carolina Votiva, by A. Dobson, III. 688.
- Carols from the Coalfields, by Skipsey, III. 608.
- CARPENTER, EDWARD, III. 841.
- CARR, JOSEPH WILLIAMS COMYNS, III. 842.
- CARRINGTON, NOEL THOMAS, II. 760.
- CARROLL, LEWIS (C. L. Dodson), III. 648.
- CARRUTHERS, ROBERT, III. 316.
- CARTE, THOMAS, II. 244.
- CARTER, MRS ELIZABETH, II. 417.
- CARTON, R. C. (Richard Claude Critchett), III. 717.
- CARTWRIGHT, JULIA (Mrs Ady), III. 851.
- CARTWRIGHT, WILLIAM, I. 634.
- CARY, ALICE, III. 827.
- CARY, HENRY FRANCIS, II. 755.
- CARY, PHOEBE, III. 827.
- CARY (CARY), SIR ROBERT, I. 396.
- Cassaubon, by Mark Pattison, III. 480.
- Cash, Corn, and Catholics, Odes on, by Moore, III. 347, 349.
- Cashel Byton's Profession, by G. B. Shaw, III. 705.
- Castara, by William Habington, I. 571.
- Castaway, by Cowper, II. 602, 609.
- Caste, by T. W. Robertson, III. 637.
- Castell of Perseverance, Morality Play, I. 111.
- Casti's Animal Parliament, trans. by William Stewart Rose, II. 760.
- CASTLE, EGERTON, III. 844.
- Castle of Indolence, by Thomson, II. 321, 326-328.

- Castle of Otranto, by Walpole, II. 411, 414.
 Castle Rackrent, by Maria Edgeworth, II. 735.
 Castle Spectre, by M. G. Lewis, II. 748.
 Catarina to Camoens, by E. B. Browning, III. 537, 560.
 Catechism, Archbishop Hamilton's, I. 218.
 Cathedral, by J. R. Lowell, III. 802.
 CATHERS, VILLA SIBERT, III. 834.
 Catherine, by Thackeray, III. 453.
 Catholicism in England; Catholics, Present Position of, by John Henry Newman, III. 339.
 Catline, by Pen Jouson, I. 402, 405.
 Cato, by Addison, II. 213, 217.
 Catriona, by R. L. Stevenson, III. 699.
 Caudle's Curtain Lectures, Mrs, by Douglas Jerrold, III. 329.
 CAVE, EDWARD, II. 244.
 CAVENDISH, GEORGE, I. 140.
 CAXTON, WILLIAM, I. 95.
 Caxton's Successors, I. 101.
 Caxtons, by Lord Lytton, III. 332, 335.
 Cecil, by C. G. F. Gore, III. 279.
 Cecilia, by Fanny Burney, II. 587.
 Celestial Passion, by R. W. Gilder, III. 831.
 Celt, Roman, and Saxon, by Thomas Wright, III. 411.
 Celtic Influences on English Literature, I. 1, 831; III. 709.
 Celtic Languages, Divisions of, I. 2.
 Celtic Literature, On the Study of, by M. Arnold, III. 593, 598.
 Celtic Scotland by W. F. Skene, III. 399.
 Celtic Twilight, by W. B. Yeats, III. 709.
 Cenci, by P. B. Shelley, III. 109.
 CENTLIVRE, SUSANNAH, II. 96.
 Central Africa, by Bayard Taylor, III. 821.
 Centuries of Meditations, by T. Traherne, I. 776.
 Century After, by Stoddard, III. 823.
 Century Magazine, III. 778.
 Century of Roundels, by Swinburne, III. 674.
 Century of Science, by Fluke, III. 829.
 Cevennes, Travels with a Donkey in the, by R. L. Stevenson, III. 697.
 Ceylon, Eight Years' Wanderings in, by Sir S. W. Baker, III. 610.
 CHADWICK, JOHN WHITE, III. 854.
 CHAILLÉ, PAUL BELLONI DU, III. 840.
 Chaldee MS., III. 292.
 CHALKHILL, JOHN, I. 443.
 CHALMERS, GEORGE, II. 636.
 CHALMERS, THOMAS, III. 187.
 CHALONER, SIR THOMAS, I. 265.
 Chambered Nautilus, by O. W. Holmes, III. 792.
 CHAMBERLAYNE, WILLIAM, I. 744.
 CHAMBERS, CHARLES HADDON, III. 730, 845.
 CHAMBERS, ROBERT WILLIAM, III. 832.
 CHAMBERS, WILLIAM AND ROBERT, III. 315.
 Chambers's Cyclopædia of English Literature, I. preface; III. 315.
 Chambers's Encyclopædia, III. 315.
 Chambers's Journal, III. 285, 288, 315, 658, 678.
 Chameleon, by James Merrick, II. 420.
 CHAMIER, FREDERICK, III. 259.
 Chance, by Conrad, III. 711.
 Chance Acquaintances, by W. D. Howells, III. 829.
 Chancellors, Lives of the, by Lord Campbell, III. 191.
 Changeling, by T. Middleton, I. 459, 471.
 CHANNING, WILLIAM ELLERY, III. 745.
 Channings, by Mrs H. Wood, III. 520.
 Chansons de Geste, I. 37.
 CHAPMAN, GEORGE, I. 377.
 Chapman (George), a Critical Essay, by Swinburne, III. 674.
 CHAPONE, HESTER, II. 418.
 Chapter of Accidents, by Sophia Lee, II. 653.
 Character of a Trimmer, by the Marquis of Halifax, I. 756.
 Character of the Happy Warrior, by Wordsworth, III. 13, 16, 25.
 Characteristics, by Shaftesbury, II. 167, 168.
 Characters, Hall's, I. 417; Overbury's, I. 442; Earle's, I. 577.
 Charles I., Memoirs of the Court of, by Lucy Aikén, III. 178.
 Charles O'Malley, by Lever, III. 359, 362.
 Charles V., History of the Reign of, by William Robertson, II. 382, 383, 387; III. 766.
 Charles V., The Cloister Life of by Sir V. Stirling-Maxwell, III. 499.
 CHARLETON, WALTER, I. 743.
 Charism, by Carlyle, III. 404.
 Chase, by William Somerville, II. 300.
 Chastelard, by A. C. Swinburne, III. 670, 674.
 CHATHAM, THE EARL OF (WILLIAM PITT), II. 389.
 Chatham, Essay on the Earl of, by Macaulay, III. 371.
 CHATTERTON, THOMAS, II. 512; III. 6.
 CHAUCER, GEOFFREY, I. 59.
 Chaucer, Life of, by William Godwin, II. 702.
 Chaucer's Influence on Scottish Literature, I. 166, 504.
 Chaucer's Prose, I. 81.
 Chaucer's Successors, I. 76.
 Cheer, Boys! Cheer! by C. Mackay, III. 481.
 Cheerful Yesterdays, by T. W. Higginson, III. 811.
 CHECK, SIR JOHN, I. 142.
 Chemical History of a Candle, by Faraday, III. 243.
 Cherie and the Slae, by Alexander Montgomerie, I. 233.
 CHERRY, ANDREW, II. 758.
 Cherry Ripe, by Campion, I. 401; by Herrick, I. 561, 563.
 CHESNEY, SIR GEORGE TOMKINS, III. 840.
 Chess, Game of, by Caxton, I. 95.
 CHESTERFIELD, EARL OF, II. 291; Johnson's Letters to, II. 458.
 CHESTERTON, GILBERT KEITH, III. 711, 718, 724.
 CHETTLE, HENRY, I. 334.
 CHEVNE, THOMAS KELLY, III. 841.
 CHILD, LYDIA MARIA, III. 757.
 Child Harold's Pilgrimage, by Byron, III. 120, 121, 122, 126, 135.
 Child-hood, by Henry Vaughan, I. 684.
 Child of Nature, by R. Buchanan, III. 656.
 Child of Quality, To a, by Matthew Prior, II. 115.
 Children of Adam, by Whitman, III. 806, 808.
 Child's Garden of Verse, by R. L. Stevenson, III. 698.
 CHILLINGWORTH, WILLIAM, I. 586.
 Chimney Corner, by E. Waugh, III. 492.
 Chimney-Sweeper, by Blake, III. 719.
 Chips from a German Workshop, by Max-Müller, III. 661.
 Chivalry and Romance, Letters on, by Richard Hurd, II. 428.
 Choice, by John Pountret, II. 112.
 CHOLMONDELEY, MARY, III. 851.
 CHORLEY, HENRY FOTHERGILL, III. 273.
 Chris of all Sorts, by Baring-Gould, III. 664.
 Christabel, by Coleridge, III. 7, 58, 61, 65.
 Christiad, by Henry Kirke White, II. 729.
 Christian Doctrine, by Milton, I. 691.
 Christian Evidences, by Porteus, II. 646.
 Christian Hero, by Steele, II. 228.
 Christianity, Evidences of, by Paley, II. 643; by Baden Powell, III. 323.
 Christianity, Importance of, by Price, II. 428.
 Christianity, Practical View of, by William Wilberforce, II. 646.
 Christianity not Mysterious, by Toland, II. 161.
 Christian Poetry, Beginning of, I. 9.
 Christian Year, by John Keble, III. 215.
 CHRISTIE, ROBERT, III. 726.
 Christie Johnstone, by Reade, III. 483.
 Christmas, by G. Wither, I. 499, 501.
 Christopher North, Recreations of, by John Wilson, III. 247.
 Christ's Kirk on the Green. See CHRYSTIS KIRK OF THE GREEN.
 Christ's Victorie and Triumph, by Giles Fletcher, I. 446, 447.
 Chronicle of England, by Capgrave, I. 89.
 Chronicles and Romances, I. 42.
 Chronicles of Hollishead, I. 255.
 Chronologia Sacra, by Usher, I. 441.
 Chrononhotontologos the Great, by Henry Carey, II. 330, 331.
 Chrysal, by Johnstone, II. 410.
 Chrysaor, by Longfellow, III. 770, 771.
 Chrystis Kirk of the Grene, I. 210, 211; not by James I., I. 183; continuation of, by Allan Ramsay, II. 313, 316.
 CHUBB, THOMAS, II. 165.
 CHURCH, RICHARD WILLIAM, III. 577.
 Church Government, by Milton, I. 688, 704.
 CHURCHILL, CHARLES, II. 495.
 CHURCHILL, WINSTON, III. 832.
 CHURCHILL, Rt. Hon. WINSTON SPENCER, III. 714.
 CHURCHYARD, THOMAS, I. 265.
 CIBBER, COLLEY, II. 272.
 Cicero, Life of, by Middleton, II. 246.
 Cicero's Letters, trans. by Melmoth, II. 391.
 Cid and the Leper, by Lockhart, III. 251.
 Circle, by Somerset Maugham, III. 716.
 Cities of the Past, by F. P. Cobbe, III. 537.
 Citizen of the World, by Goldsmith, II. 479, 491-493.
 City: its Sins and Sorrows, by Thomas Guthrie, III. 342.
 City Dead-House, by Whitman, III. 810.
 City Madam, by Massinger, I. 464, 466.
 City Match, by Mayne, I. 633.
 City Mouse and Country Mouse, by Prior and Montagu, II. 113.
 City Night-Piece, by Goldsmith, II. 490.
 City of Dreadful Night, by James Thomson, III. 654, 655.
 City of the Plague, by John Wilson, III. 246.
 City of the Saints, by Sir R. F. Burton, III. 610.
 City Poems, by Alexander Smith, III. 604.
 Civil Liberty and the War with America, by Price, II. 428-430.
 Civil Society, Essay on, by Ferguson, II. 430.
 Civil War, Causes of the, by Motley, III. 815.
 Civil War and the Commonwealth, I. 542.
 Civil Wars between York and Lancaster, History of the, by S. Daniel, I. 339, 340.
 Civilisation, Origin of, by Lord Avebury, III. 664.
 Civilisation and Progress, by J. B. Crozier, III. 727.
 Civilisation in England, History of, by Buckle, III. 611.
 Clan Albin, by Christian Isobel Johnstone, II. 772.
 CLANVOWE, SIR THOMAS, I. 80.
 CLARE, JOHN, III. 233.
 CLARENDON, LORD, I. 652.
 CLARISSA, by Richardson, II. 295, 297.
 CLARKE, CHARLES HERBER, III. 825.
 CLARKE, EDWARD DANIEL, II. 714.
 CLARKE, FRANCES E. (Sarah Grand), III. 851.
 CLARKE, MARCUS, III. 730, 731.
 CLARKE, SAMUEL, II. 159.
 Claybanger, by Arnold Bennett, III. 712.
 Cleanliness, alliterative poem, I. 64, 174.
 Cleansing Fires, by Adelaide Ann Procter, III. 528.
 CLELAND, WILLIAM, I. 828.
 CLEMENS, SAMUEL LANGHORNE, III. 826.
 Clement Lorimer, by A. B. Reach, III. 605.
 Cleomenes, by Dryden, I. 796, 806, 807.
 CLERK OF TRARENT, I. 174.
 Clerk Saunders, I. 535.
 CLEVELAND, JOHN, I. 636.
 CLIFFORD, Mrs W. K., III. 851.
 CLIFFORD, WILLIAM KINGDON, III. 841.
 Clockmaker, by T. C. Halliburton, III. 726.
 Cloister and the Hearth, by Reade, III. 483.
 Cloister Life of the Emperor Charles V., by Sir W. Stirling-Maxwell, III. 499.
 Cloud, by Shelley, III. 112.
 Cloud Confines, by D. G. Rossetti, III. 645.
 Cloudsley, by William Godwin, II. 703.
 CLOUGH, ARTHUR HUGH, III. 511.
 Clough Fionn, by Michael Banim, III. 353.
 Clouvenook Papers, by Alice Cary, III. 827.
 Clyde, by John Wilson, II. 440.
 Clytemnestra, by the Earl of Lytton, III. 638.
 COBBE, FRANCES POWER, III. 536.
 COBBETT, WILLIAM, II. 681.
 Cobden, Life of, by Lord Morley, III. 686.
 Cock Lane and Common Sense, by A. Lang, III. 692.
 COCKBURN, HENRY, III. 313.
 COCKBURN, Mrs, II. 796.
 Cocklebie's Sow, I. 209.
 COCKTON, HENRY, III. 400.
 Colebs in Search of a Wife, by Hannah More, II. 577, 579-581.
 Colium Britannicum, by T. Carew, I. 509.
 COFFEY, CHARLES, II. 338.
 Cola Monti, by Mrs Craik, III. 536.
 COLENSO, BISHOP, III. 452.
 COLERIDGE, ERNEST HARTLEY, III. 842.
 COLERIDGE, HARTLEY, III. 72.
 COLERIDGE, MARY E., III. 851.
 COLERIDGE, SAMUEL TAYLOR, III. 7, 56.
 COLERIDGE, SARA, III. 72.
 COLET, JOHN, I. 120.
 Colin and Lucy, by T. Tickell, II. 251, 252.
 Colin and Phebe, by John Byrom, II. 279.
 Colin Clout 's come Home again, by Spenser, I. 294, 296, 301.
 Colin's Complaint, by N. Rowe, II. 95.
 Collar, by George Herbert, I. 497.
 Colleen Bawn, by Dion Boucault, III. 357, 585.
 Collegians, by Gerald Griffin, III. 357.
 COLLIER, JEREMY, I. 734; II. 47.
 Collier Lad, by Joseph Skipsy, III. 608.
 COLLINS, ANTHONY, II. 163.
 COLLINS, JOHN, II. 708.

- COLLINS, JOHN CURTTON, III. 842.
COLLINS, MORTIMER, III. 632.
COLLINS, WILLIAM, II. 11, 367; III. 5.
COLLINS, WILLIAM WILKIE, III. 620.
COLMAN, GEORGE, 'The Elder,' II. 561.
COLMAN, GEORGE, 'The Younger,' II. 656.
Colonel Enderby's Wife, by Mrs Harrison, III. 704.
Colonel Jacque, History of, by Defoe, II. 151, 154.
Colour of Life, by Alice Meynell, III. 704.
COLQUHOUN, JOHN, III. 839.
COLTON, CHARLES CALER, III. 172.
Columbiad, by Joel Barlow, III. 736, 743.
Columbus, Life of, by Washington Irving, III. 745, 746.
COLVIN, SIR SIDNEY, III. 603, 697.
Colyn Cloute, by John Skelton, I. 114, 116.
COMBE, GEORGE, III. 265.
COMBE, WILLIAM, II. 661.
Come under my plaidie, by Hector Macneill, II. 802.
Come whom to the childer an' me, by E. Waugh, III. 492.
Comedy of Errors, by Shakespeare, I. 358.
Cometh up as a Flower, by Miss Broughton, III. 690.
Coming of Love, by Watts-Dunton, III. 668.
Coming of the Messiah, by Edward Irving, III. 268.
Commemoration Ode, by J. R. Lowell, III. 802, 804.
Commentaries, Blackstone's, II. 439.
Commentary on the Bible, by Matthew Henry, II. 60.
Commercial Discourses, by Thomas Chalmers, III. 188.
Common Lot, by Montgomery, II. 744.
Common Sense, by Paine, II. 559.
Commonwealth, History of the, by Godwin, II. 703; by Sir F. Palgrave, III. 265.
Commonwealth and Protectorate, by S. R. Gardiner, III. 631.
Companion, edited by Leigh Hunt, III. 148.
Companions of my Solitude, by Sir A. Helps, III. 478.
Complaint of Deor, I. 4, 5.
Complaint of Nature, by J. Logan, II. 531.
Complaints, by Spenser, I. 295.
Complaynt of Scotlande, I. 214.
Complaynt to the King, by Sir David Lyndsay, I. 205.
Compleat Angler, by Izaak Walton, I. 613, 616.
Complaynt of Mars, by Chaucer, I. 62.
Complaynt to his Purs, by Chaucer, I. 66.
Compromise, by Lord Morley, III. 686.
Comte and Positivism, by Mill, III. 443.
Comte's Positive Philosophy, trans. by Harriet Martineau, III. 389.
Comus, by Milton, I. 687, 688, 694, 695.
Conary, by Sir Samuel Ferguson, III. 362.
Conciliation with America, by Burke, II. 544, 545.
Concordance of Histories, by Robert Fabyan, I. 105.
Condé, Life of, by Stanhope, III. 374.
Condensed Novels, by Bret Harte, III. 827, 828.
Conduct of the Understanding, by Locke, II. 18.
Confessio Amantis, of John Gower, I. 35, 74.
Confessions of a Fanatic, III. 292.
Confessions of an Inquiring Spirit, by Coleridge, III. 62, 63, 71.
Confessions of an Opium-Eater, by De Quincey, III. 93.
Confessions of a Thug, by Meadows Taylor, III. 415.
Conflict, by Miss Braddon, III. 690.
CONGREVE, WILLIAM, II. 82; Life of, by Sir Edmund Gosse, III. 696.
Coningsby, by Beaconsfield, III. 437, 438.
CONINGTON, JOHN, III. 634.
Connaught, A Tour in, by Cesar Otway, III. 345.
CONNELLY, MARC, III. 722, 856.
CONNOR, RALPH (Charles William Gordon), III. 728.
Conquest of Granada, by Dryden, I. 797, 806, 807, 814; by Washington Irving, III. 745, 746.
Conquest of Syria, Persia, and Egypt, by Simon Ockley, II. 211.
CONRAD, JOSEPH, III. 711, 719, 721.
Conscious Lovers, by Sir R. Steele, II. 229.
Consolation for Catholics, by Southwell, I. 337.
Consolations in Travel, by Sir Humphry Davy, II. 761, 763.
Conspiracy of Pontiac, by Parkman, III. 818.
CONSTABLE, HENRY, I. 278.
Constant Wife, by Somerset Maugham, III. 715.
Constitution of England, by Jean Louis De Lolme, II. 541.
Constitution of Man, by Combe, III. 265.
Contarini Fleming, by Lord Beaconsfield, III. 435.
Contemplation, by Richard Gifford, II. 441.
Contemporary Thought and Thinkers, by R. H. Hutten, III. 632.
Content, Hyman to, by Mrs Barbauld, II. 583.
Contention of Ajax and Ulysses, by Shirley, I. 487.
Convention of Cintra, by Wordsworth, III. 14, 17, 28.
Conversation, by Cowper, II. 603, 605.
Conversations with Lord Byron, by the Countess of Blessington, III. 278.
Conversations with some of the Old Poets, by J. R. Lowell, III. 801.
Convict Once, by J. B. Stephens, III. 732.
Convict Ship, by Clark Russell, III. 691.
CONWAY, MONCURE DANIEL, III. 854.
CONWAY, WILLIAM MARTIN, BARON, III. 844.
COOK, ELIZA, III. 528.
COOKE, JOHN ESTEN, III. 853.
COOKE, THOMAS, II. 290.
COOLIDGE, SUSAN (Sarah Chauncey Woolsey), III. 836.
COOPER, ANTHONY ASHLEY. See SHAPTEBURY, EARL OF.
COOPER, EDITH EMMA ('Michael Field'), III. 704.
COOPER, JAMES FENIMORE, III. 750.
COOPER, THOMAS, III. 376.
Cooper's Hill, by Sir J. Denham, I. 639.
Copperhead, by Harold Frederic, III. 832.
Coral Island, by Ballantyne, III. 624.
CORBET, RICHARD, I. 456.
CORELLI, MARIE, III. 850.
Corinna's going a-Maying, by Herrick, I. 563.
Coriolanus, by Shakespeare, I. 371.
Corn, by Sidney Lanier, III. 825.
Corn-law Rhymes, by Ebenezer Elliott, III. 231, 233.
CORNWALL, BARRY (Bryan Waller Procter), III. 227.
Cornwall, Footsteps of Former Men in, by R. S. Hawker, III. 381.
Cornwall, Survey of, by R. Carew, I. 353.
Coronach, from The Lady of the Lake, III. 37.
Coronation, On the, by Dryden, I. 792.
Corruptions of Christianity, by Priestley, II. 540.
Corsica, by Boswell, II. 468, 469.
CORY, WILLIAM JOHNSON, III. 576.
CORYATE, THOMAS, I. 452; Coryat's Crudities, I. 452.
COSTELLO, LOUISA STUART, III. 324.
COTES, MRS EVERARD, III. 726.
Cottagers of Glenburnie, by Elizabeth Hamilton, II. 808, 809.
COTTON, CHARLES, I. 613, 616, 731, 774.
COTTON, NATHANIEL, II. 532.
COTTON, SIR ROBERT BRUCE, I. 271.
Council of Trent, by J. A. Froude, III. 503.
Count Julian, by W. S. Lander, III. 141.
Counterblast against Tobacco, by James I., I. 506, 507.
Country Contentments, by Gervase Markham, I. 398.
Country Justice, by Dr John Langhorne, II. 521.
Country Parson, by Herbert, I. 496, 497.
Country Wife, by W. Wycherley, II. 65.
County Guy, by Scott, III. 33, 37.
Courage, brother! do not stumble, by Norman Macleod, III. 397.
Courant, Daily, II. 2, 12.
Course of Time, by Robert Pollok, II. 792-794.
COURTHOPE, WILLIAM JOHN, III. 684.
Court of Death, by John Gay, II. 174, 175.
Courtship of Miles Standish, by Longfellow, III. 768, 770.
Courtier, trans. by Sir Thomas Hoby, I. 258.
COVERDALE, MILES, I. 131.
COWARD, NOEL, III. 719, 849.
COWLEY, ABRAHAM, I. 642, 731, 732.
COWPER, WILLIAM, II. 601; III. 6.
Cowper, Letters of, II. 610-612.
Cowper, Life of, by William Hayley, II. 614.
Cowper's Grave, by E. B. Browning, III. 549, 559.
COXE, WILLIAM, II. 630.
CRABBE, GEORGE, II. 693.
CRADDOCK, CHARLES EGBERT (Mary Noailles Murfree), III. 833.
Cradle Song, by William Blake, II. 720.
CRAIG, JOHN, I. 230.
CRAIGIE, MRS (John Oliver Hobbes), III. 834.
CRAIK, GEORGE LILLIE, III. 291.
CRAIK, GEORGIANA MARION, III. 291.
CRAIK, MRS (Dinah Maria Mulock), III. 536.
CRAIK, SIR HENRY, III. 842.
CRANCH, CHRISTOPHER PEARSE, III. 853.
CRANE, STEPHEN, III. 832.
Crantford, by Mrs Gaskell, III. 527.
CRANMER, THOMAS, Archbishop of Canterbury, I. 138.
CRASHAW, RICHARD, I. 676; Elegy on, by Cowley, I. 644.
CRAWFORD, FRANCIS MARION, III. 831.
CRAWFORD, ISABELLA VALANCY, III. 726.
CRAWFORD, ROBERT, II. 317.
Crazed Maiden's Song, by Crabbe, II. 699.
CREASY, SIR EDWARD SHEPHERD, III. 839.
Creation by Sir R. Blackmore, II. 108, 109.
Creed, Exposition of, by Pearson, I. 623.
CREIGHTON, MANDELL, III. 687.
Creoles of Louisiana, by G. W. Cable, III. 829.
Crescent and the Cross, by Eliot Warburton, III. 274.
Crimes, Invasion of the, by A. W. Kinglake, III. 421.
Criminal Law, by Sir A. Alison, III. 289.
Criminal Trials in Scotland, by J. H. Burton, III. 398.
Criminals, Idiots, Women, and Minors, by F. P. Cobbe, III. 537.
CRIPPS, ARTHUR S., III. 733.
Cripps the Carrier, by R. D. Blackmore, III. 622.
Crisis, by Thomas Paine, II. 559.
Crist, by Cynewulf, I. 13.
CRITCHETT, RICHARD CLAUDE, III. 843.
Critic, by Sheridan, II. 564, 565.
Critic, Papers of a, by C. W. Dilke, III. 529.
Critical Kit-Kats, by Sir E. Gosse, III. 696.
Critical Miscellanies, by Lord Morley, III. 686.
Critical Review, II. 13, 442.
Criticism, History of, by Saintsbury, III. 694.
CROCKETT, SAMUEL RUTHERFORD, III. 845.
CROKER, JOHN WILSON, III. 170.
CROKER, THOMAS CROFTON, III. 412.
CROLE, ROBERT. See CROWLEY.
CROLY, GEORGE, III. 171.
Cromarty, Traditional History of, by Hugh Miller, III. 285.
Cromwell, Discourse concerning the Government of, by Cowley, I. 648, 651.
Cromwell (Oliver), by Lord Morley, III. 686.
Cromwell's Letters and Speeches, by Carlyle, III. 404, 405, 406.
CROMIN, ARCHIBALD JOSEPH, III. 849.
Crook in the Lot, by Boston, II. 302.
Crookit Meg, by Sir J. Skelton, III. 635.
Cross of Snow, by Longfellow, III. 770, 772.
Crossing the Bar, by Tennyson, III. 547.
Crochet Castle, by Thomas Love Peacock, III. 150, 153-155.
CROWE, CATHERINE, III. 280.
CROWE, WILLIAM, II. 616.
CROWLEY, ROBERT, I. 150.
CROWNE, JOHN, II. 89.
Crown of Wild Olive, by Ruskin, III. 571, 572, 575.
CROZIER, JOHN BEATTIE, III. 726, 727.
Cruise of the Betsy, by H. Miller, III. 286.
Cruise of the Midge, by M. Scott, III. 254.
Cry of the Children, by E. B. Browning, III. 550, 560.
Cuckoo, To the, by Bruce or Logan, II. 528-531.
Cuckoo and Nightingale, by Clanvowe, I. 81.
CUDWORTH, RALPH, I. 670.
Culprit Fay, by J. R. Drake, III. 752.
Culture and Anarchy, by M. Arnold, III. 594, 599.
CUMBERLAND, BISHOP, II. 59.
CUMBERLAND, RICHARD, II. 561.
CUMMINGS, BRUCE F., III. 849.
CUMMINGS, MARIA SUSANNA, III. 827.
Cunnor Hall, by W. J. Meikle, II. 522, 523.
CUNNINGHAM, ALLAN, III. 303.
CUNNINGHAM, FRANCIS, III. 305.
CUNNINGHAM, JOHN, II. 455.
CUNNINGHAM, JEREMY DAVEY, III. 305.
CUNNINGHAM, PETER, III. 305.
CUNNINGHAM, SIR ALEXANDER, III. 305.
CUNNINGHAM, THOMAS MOUNSEY, III. 305.
CUNNINGHAM, GRAHAM, R. B., III. 724, 843.
Cup, by Tennyson, III. 542.
Curiosities of Literature, by Isaac D'Israeli, II. 715.

- *Curiosities of Natural History, by Buckland, III. 500.
 CURRIAN, JOHN PHILIPOT, II. 681.
 CURRIE, LADY MARY MONTGOMERIE, III. 850.
 Curse of Kehama, by Southey, III. 48, 49, 51.
 Cursor Mundi, I. 46.
 CURTIS, GEORGE WILLIAM, III. 784.
 CURZEON, LORD, III. 844.
 CUSHING, PAUL (R. Wood-Seys), III. 854.
 Cushia-ma-chree, by J. F. Waller, III. 364.
 Custom and Myth, by A. Lang, III. 692.
 Cyclical Miracle-Plays, I. 47.
 Cyclopaedia, Knight's English, III. 266; Lardner's, III. 266; Penny, III. 266; of English Literature, I. preface, III. 315.
 Cymbeline, by Shakespeare, I. 371.
 CYNWULF, I. 8, 10, 12.
 Cynthia's Revels, by Jonson, I. 404, 409.
 Cypress Grove, by Drummond, I. 510, 512.
 Cyril Thornton, by T. Hamilton, III. 254.
 Cyril's Success, by H. J. Byron, III. 637.
- D
 DACRE, LADY, II. 771.
 Daemonology, by James I., I. 506.
 Daft Days, by R. Ferguson, II. 805, 806.
 'Dagonet' Ballads, by G. R. Sims, III. 694.
 Daily Conrart, II. 2, 12.
 Daisy Miller, by Henry James, III. 830.
 DALEY, VICTOR J., III. 729.
 Daltons, by C. J. Lever, III. 359.
 DAMPIER, WILLIAM, II. 103.
 DANA, RICHARD HENRY, III. 752.
 DANA, RICHARD HENRY, JUN., III. 752.
 Dance of the Seven Deadly Synnis, by Dunbar, I. 197.
 DANE, CLEMENCE, III. 852.
 Dancesbury House, by Mrs Henry Wood, III. 520.
 DANIEL, SAMUEL, I. 339.
 Daniel, in Exeter Book, I. 11, 12.
 Daniel, Lectures on, by Edward Bouverie Pusey, III. 337.
 Daniel Deronda, by George Eliot, III. 530.
 Danites in the Sierras, by Miller, III. 828.
 Dante, trans. by Henry Francis Cary, II. 766; by C. E. Norton, III. 822; by John Carlyle, III. 402.
 Dante and his Circle, by D. G. Rossetti, III. 641.
 Dante's Divina Commedia, trans. by Longfellow, III. 768, 771.
 Daphnida, by Spenser, I. 296.
 D'ARBLAY, MADAME (Fanny Burney), II. 586.
 Darien, by Eliot Warburton, III. 274.
 Darkness and Dawn, by Farrar, III. 661.
 Dark Rosalind, by J. C. Mangau, III. 358.
 DARLEY, GEORGE, III. 235.
 DARMESTETER, MADAME (Duclaux), III. 704.
 Darney, by G. P. R. James, III. 327.
 Dartmoor, by Noel T. Carrington, II. 760.
 DARWIN, CHARLES ROBERT, III. 416; Life of, by Grant Allen, III. 727.
 Darwinism, by A. R. Wallace, III. 614; by J. Fiske, III. 828; by F. P. Colbte, III. 537.
 Darwinism and Language, by W. D. Whitney, III. 824.
 DASEN, SIR GEORGE WEBB, III. 499.
 Data of Ethics, by Spencer, III. 588.
 Dauber, by John Massfield, III. 710.
 Daughter of Heth, by Wm. Black, III. 691.
 D'AVENANT, SIR WILLIAM, I. 628, 729.
 David, Song to, by Smart, II. 424-426.
 David and Bethsabe, by Peck, I. 322.
 David Copperfield, by Dickens, III. 465, 467, 478.
 David Elginbrod, by George Macdonald, III. 606.
 David Grieve, by Mrs M. Ward, III. 704.
 David Harrow, by E. N. Westcott, III. 831.
 David Simple, by Sarah Fielding, II. 417.
 Davideis, by Cowley, I. 643, 644.
 DAVIDSON, JOHN, III. 706.
 DAVIES, HUBERT HENRY, III. 847.
 DAVIES, JOHN, I. 396.
 DAVIES, SIR JOHN, I. 394.
 DAVIES, WILLIAM HENRY, III. 847.
 DAVIOT, GORDON (Elizabeth Mackintosh), III. 852.
 DAVIS, JOHN, I. 390.
 DAVIS, RICHARD HARDING, III. 832.
 DAVIS, THOMAS OSBORNE, III. 364; Lament for, by Sir S. Ferguson, III. 363; Life of, by Sir C. G. Duffy, III. 546.
 DAVY, SIR HUMPHRY, II. 761.
 DAWSON, GEORGE M., III. 726.
 DAWSON, SIR JOHN WILLIAM, III. 726.
 DAY, JOHN, I. 420.
 DAY, THOMAS, II. 738.
 Day and Night Songs, by W. Allingham, III. 605.
- Day of Doom, by Michael Wigglesworth, III. 734, 735.
 Days and Hours, by F. Tennyson, III. 539.
 Deacon Brodie, by Henley and Stevenson, III. 695, 699.
 Dead Letter, by Austin Dobson, III. 689.
 Dear Lady Disdain, by McCarthy, III. 660.
 Death Comes for the Archbishop, by Willa Cather, III. 834.
 Death of Lincoln, by Whitman, III. 810.
 Death of the Flowers, by W. C. Bryant, III. 753, 754.
 Deathbed, by Thomas Hood, III. 140.
 Death's Jest-book, by Beddoes, III. 237.
 Declaration of Independence, III. 736, 742.
 De Clifford, by R. P. Ward, II. 754.
 Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, by Gibbon, II. 550, 553-558.
 De Consolatione Philosophia: of Boethius, trans. by Alfred, I. 21; by Chaucer, I. 63, 82.
 Deerbrook, by Harriet Martineau, III. 388.
 Defence of Guenevere, by W. Morris, III. 665, 667.
 Defence of Poesie, by Sir P. Sidney, I. 289.
 DEFOE, DANIEL, II. 5, 149; Life of, by W. Minto, III. 693.
 DEGAN, RICHARD, III. 733.
 Deirdre, by Sir S. Ferguson, III. 382; by W. B. Yeats, III. 709; by G. W. Russell, III. 710.
 Deistical Controversy, II. 121.
 Deist's Bible, by M. Tindal, II. 162.
 Dejection, an Ode, by Coleridge, III. 59, 66.
 DEKKER, THOMAS, I. 422.
 DELAFIELD, E. M., III. 852.
 DE LA MARE, WALTER, III. 714.
 DE LA ROCHE, MAZO, III. 852.
 DELAND, MARGARET, III. 833.
 Delicia Poetarum Scotorum, I. 519.
 Della Crusca, II. 473, 667.
 DE LOHME, JEAN LOUIS, II. 541.
 DELONEY, THOMAS, I. 333.
 Democracy, by J. R. Lowell, III. 801, 802.
 Democracy and Liberty, by Lecky, III. 682.
 Democracy in Europe, by Sir T. E. May, III. 490.
 Democratic Vistas, by Whitman, III. 808.
 De Montfort, by Joanna Baillie, II. 729, 732, 734.
 DE MORGAN, AUGUSTUS, III. 398.
 DE MORGAN, WILLIAM F., III. 709.
 DENHAM, SIR JOHN, I. 639.
 DENIHRY, DANIEL H., III. 729.
 DENNIS, JOHN, II. 196.
 DENT, J. C., III. 726.
 Departmental Duties, by Kipling, III. 708.
 DE QUINCEY, THOMAS, III. 92; book on, by David Masson, III. 633.
 De Religione Gentilium, by Lord Herbert, I. 491.
 DERMODY, THOMAS, II. 759.
 Dermot and the Earl, I. 34.
 Descent into Hell, by J. A. Heraud, III. 268.
 Descent into the Maelstrom, by E. A. Poe, III. 788.
 Descent of Man, by Darwin, III. 417, 418.
 Descent of Odin, by Gray, II. 359, 361.
 Descriptive Sketches, by Wordsworth, III. 13.
 Deserted Village, by Goldsmith, II. 480, 484-486, 494.
 Destiny, by Susan Edmondstone Ferrier, III. 300.
 Deths of Blanche the Duchesse, by Chaucer, I. 61, 67.
 Deths of Pitee, by Chaucer, I. 61, 62, 68.
 De Tocqueville, Correspondence and Conversations with, by N. W. Senior, III. 343.
 DE VERE, AUBREY, III. 581.
 DE VERE, EDWARD, Earl of Oxford, I. 277.
 De Vere, by R. P. Ward, II. 754.
 De Veritate, by Lord Herbert, I. 491.
 Devil to Pay, by Charles Coffey, II. 358.
 Devil's Inquest, by Dunbar, I. 198.
 Devil's Dream on Mount Aksbeck, by Thomas Aird, III. 312.
 Dial, III. 757, 760, 763.
 Dialogues on Sincerity, by R. Hurd, II. 428.
 Diana, a Collection of Sonnets, by Henry Constable, I. 278.
 Diana of the Crossways, by G. Meredith, III. 658.
 Diaries of a Lady of Quality, ed. by Abraham Hayward, III. 327.
 Diary, Evelyn's, I. 733, 765; Pepys's, I. 733, 770; Sewall's, III. 732.
 Diary and Letters of Fanny Burney, II. 587, 590-593.
 Diary by Lady Charlotte Bury, II. 772.
 Diary of a Late Physician, by Samuel Warren, III. 344.
 DIBDIN, CHARLES, II. 708.
- DICKENS, CHARLES, III. 464.
 Dickens, Life of, by Forster, III. 474.
 DICKINSON, EMILY, III. 833.
 Dicles and Sayings of the Philosophes, printed by Caxton, I. 96.
 Dictionary, General, by G. Sale, II. 388.
 Dictionary, Johnson's, II. 457, 462.
 Dictionary of Greek and Roman Antiquities, by Sir W. Smith, III. 479.
 Dictionary of National Biography, III. 662, 707.
 Dictionary of Slang, by Henley and Farmer, III. 695.
 Dictionary of the Bible, by John Brown, II. 646.
 Diderot and the Encyclopaedists, by Morley, III. 686.
 Dies Irae, Version of, by the Earl of Roscommon, I. 778.
 DIGBY, SIR KENELM, I. 579.
 Digby Grand, by Whyte-Melville, III. 585.
 DILKE, CHARLES WENTWORTH, III. 259.
 DILKE, SIR CHARLES WENTWORTH, III. 841.
 DILLON, WENTWORTH. See ROSCOMMON, THE EARL OF.
 Dipsychus, by A. H. Clough, III. 511, 512.
 Directions to Servants, by Swift, II. 127.
 Dirge, by Dunbar, I. 198; by H. King, I. 568.
 Dirge of Owen Roe O'Neill, by Aubrey de Vere, III. 582.
 Discipline, by Mary Brunton, II. 772.
 Discourse concerning the Government of Oliver Cromwell, by Cowley, I. 648, 651.
 Discourse on the Original and Progress of Satire, by Dryden, I. 816.
 Discourses on Government, by Algernon Sidney, I. 716.
 Discoveries, by Ben Jonson, I. 412.
 Discovery of a New World, by John Wilkins, I. 685.
 Discovery of Beautiful Guiana, by Sir Walter Raleigh, I. 305.
 Dispensary, by Sir Samuel Garth, II. 109.
 DISRAELI, BENJAMIN, III. 435.
 D'ISRAELI, ISAAC, II. 715.
 Distressed Mother, by Philips, II. 239.
 Diversions of Purley, by H. Tooke, II. 633.
 Divine Dialogues, by Dr H. More, I. 611.
 Divine Emblems, by Quarles, I. 566, 567.
 Divine Legation of Moses, by Warburton, II. 271.
 Divine Tragedy, by Longfellow, III. 770.
 Divine Weeks, trans. by Sylvester, I. 345.
 DIXON, RICHARD WATSON, III. 840.
 DIXON, WILLIAM HERFORTH, III. 578.
 DOBELL, SYDNEY THOMPSON, III. 603.
 DOBSON, HENRY AUSTIN, III. 688.
 Doctor, by Southey, III. 48, 50.
 Dr Nikola, by Guy Boothby, III. 730.
 Doctor's Dilemma, by Shaw, III. 706.
 Doctor Thorne, by A. Trollope, III. 487, 488.
 DODD, DR WILLIAM, II. 456.
 DODDRIDGE, PHILIP, II. 332.
 DOGSON, CHARLES LUTWIDGE, III. 648.
 DODSLEY, ROBERT, II. 301.
 Dodsworth, by Sinclair Lewis, III. 836.
 Dolly Dialogues, by Anthony Hope (Sir A. H. Hawkins), III. 708.
 Dolores, by A. C. Swinburne, III. 672.
 Domain of Arnheim, by E. A. Poe, III. 787.
 Dombey and Son, by Dickens, III. 465, 467, 471.
 Domestic Annals of Scotland, by Robert Chambers, III. 316.
 Domestic Manners of the Americans, by Frances Trollope, III. 276.
 DOMETT, ALFRED, III. 729, 732.
 Dominic's Legacy, by A. Picken, III. 308.
 Dominion of Dreams, by Fiona Macleod, III. 705.
 Don John of Austria, by Sir W. Stirling-Maxwell, III. 499.
 Don Juan, by Byron, III. 123, 127, 130, 133-135.
 Don Quixote in England, by Fielding, II. 339, 342.
 Don Sebastian, by Dryden, I. 796, 810; by Miss Porter, II. 772.
 Don Simonides, by B. Rich, I. 238, 333.
 DONNE, JOHN, I. 413.
 Donne, Dr, Life of, by Izaak Walton, I. 613; Life and Letters of, by Sir Edmund Gosse, III. 696.
 DOOLITTLE, HILDA, III. 856.
 DORAN, JOHN, III. 331.
 Dorian Gray, by Oscar Wilde, III. 707.
 Dorothy Forster, by Besant, III. 650.
 DORSET, EARL OF (Charles Sackville), I. 781.
 DORSET, EARL OF (Thomas Sackville), I. 237, 245.
 Dornet Dialect, Poems in the, by W. Barnes, III. 412.

- DOS PASSOS, JOHN RODRIGO, III. 720, 856.
 Double Dealer, by Congreve, II. 82, 85.
 DOUCE, FRANCIS, II. 713.
 DOUGALL, LILY, III. 726.
 DOUGHTY, ARTHUR, III. 726.
 DOUGHTY, CHARLES M., III. 695, 722.
 DOUGLAS, GAVIN, I. 166, 202.
 DOUGLAS, GEORGE (G. D. Brown), III. 847.
 DOUGLAS, JAMES, III. 847.
 DOUGLAS, NORMAN, III. 847.
 Douglas, by John Home, II. 453-455.
 DOUGLASS, FREDERICK, III. 853.
 Dover Beach, by M. Arnold, III. 506.
 DOWDEN, EDWARD, III. 687.
 DOWSON, ERNEST, III. 847.
 DOYLE, JOHN A., III. 841.
 DOYLE, SIR ARTHUR CONAN, III. 707.
 Dragon of Wantley, by O. Wister, III. 832.
 DRAKE, JOSEPH RODMAN, III. 752.
 Drama, Development of the Secular, I. 150.
 Drama in the Eighteenth Century, II. 12.
 Dramatic Lyrics and Romances, by R. Browning, III. 553.
 DRAIDIST, by F. Reynolds, II. 710.
 DRAPER, JOHN WILLIAM, III. 825.
 Draper's Letters, by Jonathan Swift, II. 125, 127.
 DRAYTON, MICHAEL, I. 341.
 Dream-Children, by Lamb, III. 76.
 Dream Life, by Donald Grant Mitchell, III. 821.
 Dream of Gerontius, by J. H. Newman, III. 338, 341.
 Dream of John Bull, by W. Morris, III. 665.
 Dream of the Road, I. 15.
 Dream-Pedlary, by T. L. Beddoes, III. 237.
 Dred, by Mrs H. B. Stowe, III. 813.
 DREISER, THEODORE, III. 835.
 Dreme, by Sir David Lyndsay, I. 205.
 DRENNAN, WILLIAM, III. 344.
 Drink, by Charles Reade, III. 483.
 DRINKWATER, JOHN, III. 848.
 DRUMMOND, HENRY, III. 842.
 DRUMMOND, WILLIAM, I. 510.
 DRUMMOND, W. H., III. 727.
 Drummond of Hawthornden, Life of, by Masson, III. 633.
 Drum-Taps, by Walt Whitman, III. 807.
 Druken Barnaby's Four Journeys, by Brathwaite, I. 488.
 Drury Lane, A Tale of, by Horace Smith, III. 162.
 DRYDEN, JOHN, I. 730, 731, 732, 734, 791; III. 3; by Saintsbury, III. 693; The Age of, by Richard Garnett, III. 668.
 Drythelm, Story of, I. 169.
 DU CHATEL, PAUL BELLONI, III. 840.
 Duchess of Malin, by J. Webster, I. 426, 428.
 DUCLAUX, MADAME, III. 794.
 Duenna, by Sheridan, II. 564, 565.
 DUFF, SIR MOUNTSTUART GRANT, III. 840.
 DUFFERIN, LORD, III. 839.
 DUFFERIN, THE COUNTESS OF, III. 385.
 DUFFY, SIR CHARLES GAVIN, III. 583, 730.
 DUGDALE, SIR WILLIAM, I. 590.
 DUKE, RICHARD, II. 111.
 DU MAURIER, GEORGE, III. 840.
 DUNBAR, PAUL L., III. 855.
 DUNBAR, WILLIAM, I. 166, 191.
 DUNCAN, SARA JEANNETTE (Mrs Everard Cotes), III. 726.
 Dunciad, by Pope, II. 179, 183, 190.
 DUNLOP, JOHN, II. 808.
 DUNLOP, JOHN COLIN, III. 219.
 DUNNE, FINLEY PETER, III. 855.
 DUNTON, JOHN, II. 112.
 Durandarte and Belerma, by M. G. Lewis, II. 751.
 D'URFVEY, THOMAS, I. 732, 782.
 Dutch Courtesan, by John Marston, I. 462.
 Dutchman's Fireside, by J. K. Paulding, III. 743.
 Dutch Republic, by J. L. Motley, III. 814, 815, 816.
 Duty, Ode to, by Wordsworth, III. 13, 16, 24.
 DWIGHT, TIMOTHY, III. 736.
 Dyalogue Concerning Heresies, by Sir Thomas More, I. 123.
 DYCE, ALEXANDER, III. 324.
 DYER, JOHN, II. 284.
 DYER, SIR EDWARD, I. 274, 275.
 Dying Christian to his Soul, by Pope, II. 191.
 Dying Negro, by Thomas Day, II. 738.
 DYKE, HENRY VAN, III. 854.
 Dynasts, by Thos. Hardy, III. 680, 722.
 Dynasty of Theodosius, by T. Hodgkin, III. 661.
 DYSON, EDWARD, III. 729.
 EADMER OF CANTERBURY, I. 33.
 EAGLE, SOLOMON (Sir J. C. Squire), III., 848.
 Eagle's Nest, by John Ruskin, III. 571.
 EALDHLM, I. 11, 16.
 EARLE, JOHN, I. 577.
 Early English Poets, by George Ellis, I. 30; II. 678.
 Early English Romances, by Ellis, II. 678.
 Early Literary Criticism, I. 266.
 Early Minor Scottish Poets, I. 208.
 Early Primrose, To an, by H. Kirke White, II. 728.
 Early Scottish Fragments, I. 168.
 Earthly Paradise, by W. Morris, III. 665.
 East Lynne, by Mrs Henry Wood, III. 520.
 Eastern Life, by H. Martineau, III. 388.
 EASTLAKE, LADY, III. 387.
 Eastward Hoe, I. 378, 402.
 Ebb-tide, by R. L. Stevenson, III. 699.
 Ecce Homo, by Sir J. R. Seeley, III. 649.
 Ecclesiastical History, by Bada, I. 18, 169; trans. by Alfred, I. 20.
 Ecclesiastical History of Scotland, A.D. 80 to 818, by Thomas Innes, II. 302.
 Ecclesiastical Institutions, by Spencer, III. 589.
 Ecclesiastical Memorials, by John Strype, II. 148.
 Ecclesiastical Polity, by Hooker, I. 279-283.
 EDHARD, LAURENCE, II. 210.
 Echo, by Christina Rossetti, III. 647.
 Echo, by Thomas Moore, III. 348.
 Echo Sonnet, by Barnabe Barnes, I. 278.
 Eclipse of Faith, by Henry Rogers, III. 374.
 Eclogues, by Alexander Barclay, I. 118.
 Eclogues of Virgil, trans. by Warton, II. 507.
 Economy of Vegetation, by E. Darwin, II. 572, 574, 575, 576.
 EDDINGTON, SIR ARTHUR, III. 848.
 Eden Bower, by D. G. Rossetti, III. 643.
 EDGEWORTH, MARIA, II. 735.
 EDGEWORTH, RICHARD LOVELL, II. 734.
 Edinburgh, by Sir A. Boswell, II. 830, 831.
 Edinburgh: Picturesque Notes, by R. L. Stevenson, III. 700.
 Edinburgh, Old and New, by J. Grant, III. 578.
 Edinburgh, Traditions of, by Robert Chambers, III. 316.
 Edinburgh Review, III. 86, 156, 158.
 Edinburgh Sketches and Memories, by Masson, III. 635.
 Education, by Mandell Creighton, III. 687.
 Education, Thoughts concerning, by Locke, II. 18, 20; Tractate on, by Milton, I. 688, 706.
 Edward, by Dr John Moore, II. 618.
 Edward and Leonora, by Thomson, II. 321.
 Edward I., by George Peck, I. 321.
 Edward II., by Marlowe, I. 349, 351.
 EDWARDS, AMELIA B., III. 850.
 EDWARDS, JONATHAN, III. 734, 738.
 EDWARDS, RICHARD, I. 264.
 Edwin, by James Beattie, II. 526.
 Edwin and Elfrida, by Helen Maria Williams, II. 600.
 Edwin of Deira, by A. Smith, III. 604.
 EGAN, PIERCE, III. 264.
 EGAN, PIERCE, The Younger, III. 265.
 EGERTON, FRANCIS (Earl of Ellesmere), II. 791.
 EGERTON, GEORGE (Mrs Golding Bright), III. 730, 732.
 EGGLESTON, EDWARD, III. 824.
 EGLINTON, SIR HUGH OF, I. 172.
 Egoist, by George Meredith, III. 658, 659.
 Egyptians, Ancient, by Sir John Gardner Wilkinson, III. 321.
 Egyptians, Modern, by Edward William Lane, III. 327.
 Eighteenth Century in English Literature, II. 1.
 Eighteenth Century Vignettes, by Austin Dobson, III. 688.
 Eikon Basilike, by Gauden, I. 587, 588.
 Eikonoklastes, by Milton, I. 669.
 Eileen Aroon, by Gerald Griffin, III. 357.
 Eirenicon, by Dr Pusey, III. 337.
 El Dorado, by Bayard Taylor, III. 821.
 Election, by John Sterling, III. 271.
 Election, by Robert Ferguson, II. 806.
 Electricity, Chemical Agencies of, by Sir H. Davy, II. 761.
 Elegant Epistles, by V. Knox, II. 713.
 Elegant Extracts, by V. Knox, II. 713.
 Elegy—on the Princess Margaret, I. 208; on Crashaw, by Cowley, I. 644; on the Death of a Mad Dog, by Goldsmith, II. 486; on an Unfortunate Lady, by Pope, II. 179, 182, 187; in a Country Churchyard, by Gray, II. 11, 359, 365; III. 5; by Campbell, II. 767; by M. Bruce, II. 528; on the Death of Scots Music, by Ferguson, II. 805.
 Elements of Criticism, by Kames, II. 389.
 Eleonora, by Dryden, I. 706.
 Elfrida, by William Mason, II. 426.
 Ella, Essays of, III. 74, 76, 79.
 Elduc, by W. C. Roscoe, III. 625.
 ELLIOT, GEORGE, III. 529.
 ELLIOT, THOMAS STEARNS, III. 716, 723.
 ELIZABETH, QUEEN, I. 249.
 Elizabethan and Jacobean Literature, I. 235.
 Elizabethan Seamen, by Froude, III. 506.
 Elizabethan Song-Writers, I. 273.
 Elizabethan Sonnet-Cycles, I. 286.
 ELLESMERE, EARL OF, II. 791.
 ELLIOT, JEAN, II. 796.
 ELLIOT, SIR GILBERT, II. 423.
 ELLIOT, EMBESEER, III. 231.
 ELLIS, GEORGE, II. 670, 678.
 ELLIS, SARAH, III. 388.
 ELLWOOD, THOMAS, II. 55.
 Elmer Gantry, by Sinclair Lewis, III. 836.
 Eloisa and Abelard, by Pope, II. 179, 182, 186.
 El Ombú, by W. H. Hudson, III. 711.
 ELPHINSTONE, MOUNTSTUART, III. 366.
 Elsie Venner, by O. W. Holmes, III. 791.
 ELWIN, WHITWELL, III. 490.
 ELYOT, SIR THOMAS, I. 127.
 Embargo, by W. C. Bryant, III. 753.
 EMERSON, RALPH WALDO, III. 758; Life of, by O. W. Holmes, III. 791.
 Emigrants, by Thomas Pringle, II. 790.
 Emigrants in the Bermudas, by Marvell, I. 712.
 Eminent Statesmen, by Hayward, III. 327.
 Emma, by Jane Austen, II. 774.
 Emotions and the Will, by Bain, III. 497.
 Empedocles on Etna, by M. Arnold, III. 591, 592, 596.
 Emperor Jones, by Eugene O'Neill, III. 836.
 Emperor of the East, by Massinger, I. 464, 467.
 Encyclopædia Britannica, II. 535; Chambers's, III. 315. And see CYCLOPÆDIA.
 Endavour after the Christian Life, by James Martineau, III. 392.
 Endimion, by Lyly, I. 315.
 Endymion, by John Keats, III. 99, 100, 102.
 England and its People, First Impressions of, by Hugh Miller, III. 285.
 England and Wales, Antiquities of, by Francis Grose, II. 629.
 England, Conquest of, by J. R. Green, III. 653; The Making of, III. 653.
 England, Expansion of, by Sir J. R. Seeley, III. 649.
 England, History of, by S. Daniel, I. 271; by T. May, I. 582; by Milton, I. 690, 709; by Echard, II. 210; by Carte, II. 244; by Kennett, II. 244; by Mrs Macaulay, II. 419; by Smollett, II. 442; by Turner, II. 639; by Lingard, II. 647; by Hallam, III. 193; by Craik and Macfarlane, III. 291; by Macaulay, III. 367, 372; by Stanhope, III. 374; by Mrs Pentecost, III. 384; by May, III. 490; by Froude, III. 502; by Stubbs, III. 629; by Gardiner, III. 631; by Green, III. 652; by Lecky, III. 682; by G. M. Trevelyan, III. 715.
 England in the Age of Wycliffe, by G. M. Trevelyan, III. 715.
 England in Time of War, by S. T. Dobell, III. 603, 604.
 England my Mother, by Sir W. Watson, III. 706.
 England under Queen Anne, by G. M. Trevelyan, III. 715.
 England under Seven Administrations, by A. W. Foulquanque, III. 267.
 England's Helicon, I. 258, 276, 278.
 English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, by Byron, III. 129.
 English Chronicle, I. 20, 26, 29.
 English Constitution, by Bagehot, III. 630.
 English Garden, by W. Mason, II. 426, 427.
 English Gentleman, and English Gentlewoman, by Brathwaite, I. 488.
 English Girl, by Robert Chambers, III. 616.
 English Humorists, by Thackeray, III. 459.
 English in Ireland, by Froude, III. 502.
 English Literature, by Stopford A. Brooke, III. 662; by G. L. Craik, III. 291; by Gosse, III. 698; by Minto, III. 695; by Saintsbury, III. 693.
 English Literature before the Invasion of Britain, I. 4.
 English Literature from Edward VII. to George VI., III. 717.
 English Literature in the Nineteenth Century, III. 1.
 English Literature in the Reign of Victoria, by H. Morley, III. 633.
 English Literature in the Reigns of the German-born Georges, II. 319.

- English Mail-Coach, by De Quincey, III. 97.
 Englishman, by Eliza Cook, III. 528.
 English Mistle and Irish Misdeeds, by A. de Vere, III. 581.
 English Note-Books, by Hawthorne, III. 780, 781.
 English Past and Present, by Trench, III. 393.
 English People, History of the, by J. R. Green, III. 652.
 English Poetry, Beginning of, I. 4.
 English Poetry, History of, by Thomas Warton, II. 508-512.
 English Poets, by W. Hazlitt, III. 80, 82; by W. Minto, III. 695.
 English Poets, Lives of the, by Johnson, II. 460, 463, 464.
 English Prose, Beginning of, I. 19.
 English Prose Writers from 1380-1600, I. 81.
 English Speech-craft, by Barnes, III. 412.
 English Thought in the Eighteenth Century, by Sir Leslie Stephen, III. 662.
 English Tongue, by Richard Carew, I. 353.
 English Traits, by Emerson, III. 760, 762.
 English Utilitarians, by Sir Leslie Stephen, III. 662.
 English Words, Select Glossary of, by Trench, III. 393.
 English Writers, by Henry Morley, III. 633.
 Engraving, by Sir Sidney Colvin, III. 693.
 Enigmas of Life, by W. R. Greg, III. 400.
 Ennui, by Maria Edgeworth, II. 735, 736.
 Enoch Arden, by Tennyson, III. 542.
 Entail, by John Galt, III. 297, 298.
 Enterkin, by Dr John Brown, III. 452.
 Enterlude of Hyckescorner, I. 151.
 Envoy a Bukton, by Chaucer, I. 65, 66.
 Eöthen, by A. W. Kinglake, III. 421.
 Ephemerides, by Thomas Pringle, II. 789.
 Epic of Hades, by Sir L. Morris, III. 662.
 Epic of Women, by A. W. E. O'Shaughnessy, III. 656.
 Epicæne, by Ben Jonson, I. 404, 409.
 Epictetus, trans. by Mrs Carter, II. 417.
 Epicurean, by Thomas Moore, III. 347.
 Epigoniad, by William Wilkie, II. 441.
 Epipsychidion, by Shelley, III. 111.
 Episodes in a Life of Adventure, by L. Oliphant, III. 636.
 Epistle to the Countess of Cumberland, by S. Daniel, I. 339.
 Epistles, Pope's, II. 183.
 Epistola Macaronica ad Fratrem, by Alexander Geddes, II. 799, 801.
 Epistola Ho-Eliana, by J. Howell, I. 573.
 Epistolary Correspondence in the Eighteenth Century, II. 10.
 Epithalamion, by Spenser, I. 296, 302.
 Epsom Wells, by T. Shadwell, II. 63.
 Equality, by Edward Bellamy, III. 831.
 Erasmus, Life of, by John Jortin, II. 301; by J. A. Froude, III. 503, 504.
 ERCLDOUNE, THOMAS OF, I. 43, 166.
 Erechtheus, by Swinburne, III. 671, 672.
 Erwhon, by Samuel Butler, III. 624, 730.
 ERNLE, LORD, III. 843.
 Eros and Psyche, by R. Bridges, III. 693.
 Erris and Tyravly, by C. Otway, III. 345.
 Errors of Ecstasie, by Darley, III. 235, 236.
 ERSKINE, LORD, II. 634.
 ERSKINE, THOMAS, III. 265.
 ERTZ, SUSAN, III. 852.
 ERVINE, ST JOHN, III. 848.
 ESMOND, HENRY V., III. 847.
 Esmond, by Thackeray, III. 458, 460-462.
 Essay on Man, by Pope, II. 179, 187; on Ancient and Modern Learning, by Sir William Temple, I. 754; Evolution of the, II. 3, 12; on Criticism, by Pope, II. 178, 180, 182, 188; of Dramatic Poesy, by Dryden, I. 792, 796, 797, 813; for the Press, by Asgill, II. 100; on Reason, by Sir G. Mackenzie, I. 827; on Truth, by James Beattie, II. 525.
 Essays, Bacon's, I. 381, 383; Theological and Literary, by R. H. Hutton, III. 692; from the Quarterly, by James Hannay, III. 632; on Fiction, by N. W. Senior, III. 343; on His Own Times, by Coleridge, III. 67, 68; on Happiness, by Sir G. Mackenzie, I. 826; in Criticism, by M. Arnold, III. 594, 595, 597, 598; in Verse and Prose, by Cowley, I. 643, 648.
 Essays and Reviews, III. 480.
 Essays and Reviews, by Mandell Creighton, III. 687.
 Ether, by Wilfrid S. Bunt, III. 691.
 Ether Waters, by George Moore, III. 707.
 ETHERIDGE, SIR GEORGE, II. 61.
 Ethical Philosophy, Dissertation on, by Sir J. Mackintosh, II. 641.
 Ethical Theory, Types of, by J. Martineau, III. 322.
 Ethics, Science of, by Sir L. Stephen, III. 662.
 Ethwald, by Joanna Baillie, II. 734.
 Etonian, III. 266, 379.
 'Ettrick Shepherd,' III. 292.
 Eugene Aram, by Hood, III. 137, 138; by Lord Lytton, III. 332.
 Euphranor, by E. FitzGerald, III. 424, 427.
 Euphuus, by Lyly, I. 238, 239, 313.
 Europe, History of, by Alison, III. 288-290.
 Europe, Literature of, by H. Hallam, III. 193, 195.
 European Morals, History of, by Lecky, III. 682.
 Europe during the Middle Ages, by Henry Hallam, III. 193.
 Evadne, by Richard Lalor Sheil, III. 351.
 Evan Harrington, by G. Meredith, III. 658.
 Evangeline, by Longfellow, III. 769, 772.
 EVANS, GEORGE E., III. 729.
 Eve of St Agnes, by Keats, III. 99, 101, 104.
 Eve of St Mark, by Keats, III. 99, 102.
 Evelina, by Fanny Burney, II. 586, 588-590.
 EVELYN, JOHN, I. 733, 765.
 Evelyn Hope, by Robert Browning, III. 562.
 Evenen in the Village, by Barnes, III. 412.
 Evenings with a Reviewer, by Spedding, III. 397.
 Evergreen, ed. by Ramsay, II. 313.
 Everlasting Mercy, by Masefield, III. 710.
 Every Man in his Humour, by Ben Jonson, I. 402, 404, 406.
 Every Man out of his Humour, by Ben Jonson, I. 402, 404.
 Every-day Book, by William Hoare, II. 760.
 Everyman, Moral Interlude, I. 151.
 Evolution of the Idea of God, by Grant Allen, III. 727.
 Evolutionist at Large, by Grant Allen, III. 727.
 EWING, MRS JULIA HOBATIA, III. 850.
 Examiner, edited by Leigh Hunt, III. 147.
 Excursion, by Wordsworth, III. 11, 13; by Ebenezer Elliott, III. 232.
 Excursions in Criticism, by Sir W. Watson, III. 706.
 Exeter Book, I. 8, 11, 13.
 Exile of Erin, by Campbell, II. 766.
 Exile's Song, by Gilfillan, III. 311.
 Existence of God, by A. H. Clough, III. 512.
 Exodus, in Exeter Book, I. 11.
 Expostulation and Reply, by Wordsworth, III. 17.
 Eyeless in Gaza, by Aldous Huxley, III. 716.
F
 FABER, FREDERICK WILLIAM, III. 482.
 Fable for Critics, by J. R. Lowell, III. 801, 803.
 Fable of the Bees, II. 201; Remarks on, by William Law, II. 247.
 Fables, by Henryson, I. 190; by Dryden, I. 794, 796, 803; by John Gay, II. 173, 175; by Nathaniel Cotton, II. 532.
 Fables and Tales, by Allan Ramsay, II. 313, 315.
 Fables for the Female Sex, by Edward Moore, II. 400.
 FARYAN, ROBERT, I. 105.
 Factory Folk during the Cotton Famine, by Edwin Waugh, III. 492.
 Faerie Queene, by Spenser, I. 293, 296, 299.
 FAIRBAIRN, ANDREW MARTIN, III. 841.
 Fairchild Family, by Mrs Sherwood, III. 324.
 Faire and Happy Milk-maid, by Sir T. Overbury, I. 442.
 FAIRFAX, EDWARD, I. 444.
 Fair God, by Lewis Wallace, III. 823.
 Fair Hills of Ireland, by Sir S. Ferguson, III. 363.
 Fair is thy Native Isle, by T. D. Sullivan, III. 580.
 Fair Maid of the Exchange, by T. Heywood, I. 433.
 Fair Penitent, by N. Rowe, II. 93, 94.
 Fair Rosamund, by Michael Field, III. 704.
 Fair Saxon, by Justin McCarthy, III. 660.
 Fairy Mythology, by Thomas Keightley, III. 259.
 Faith Doctor, by E. Eggleston, III. 824.
 Faithful Shepherdess, by Fletcher, I. 474.
 Faithful Shepherd, by Sir Richard Fanshawe, I. 672.
 FALCONER, WILLIAM, II. 498.
 Falkner Lyle, by Mark Lemon, III. 399.
 Fall of Nineveh, by E. Atherstone, III. 146.
 False Delicacy, by Hugh Kelly, II. 571.
 Familiar Letters, by J. Howell, I. 572, 573.
 Family Legend, by Joanna Baillie, II. 729.
 Fan, on a, by Austin Dobson, III. 688.
 Fan, by John Keats, III. 101, 103.
 Fancy and Desire, by E. de Vere, I. 277.
 FANE, VIOLET (Lady Mary Montgomerie Currie), III. 860.
 FANSHAWE, CATHERINE MARIA, II. 739.
 FANSHAWE, LADY, I. 673.
 FANSHAWE, SIR RICHARD, I. 672.
 Fanshawe, by N. Hawthorne, III. 778, 779.
 Far from the Madding Crowd, by Hardy, III. 679.
 FARADAY, MICHAEL, III. 242.
 Fardorougha the Miser, by W. Carleton, III. 352.
 Fare thee Well, by Lord Byron, III. 131.
 Farewell Address, by George Washington, III. 736, 742.
 Farewell to Arms, by Ernest Hemingway, III. 729, 856.
 Farewell to Ayrshire, by R. Gall, II. 827.
 Farewell to Folly, by Greene, I. 324, 827.
 Farewell to the Fairies, I. 456, 457.
 FARINGTON, JOSEPH, III. 343.
 FARJEON, BENJAMIN LEOPOLD, III. 732.
 FARMER, DR RICHARD, II. 629.
 Farmer's Boy, by Bloomfield, II. 687.
 Farmer's Calendar, by A. Young, II. 627.
 Farmer's Ingle, by Robert Fergusson, II. 806, 807.
 Farmer's Year, by Sir Rider Haggard, III. 703.
 FARNOL, JOHN JEFFERY, III. 848.
 FARQUHAR, GEORGE, II. 90.
 FARRAR, FREDERIC WILLIAM, III. 661.
 FARRELL, JOHN, III. 729.
 Fatal Curiosity, by George Lillo, II. 277.
 Fatal Sisters, by Gray, II. 359, 361.
 Father and Daughter, by Mrs Opie, II. 508.
 Father and Son, by Sir E. Gosse, III. 696.
 Father O'Flynn, by A. P. Graves, III. 694.
 Father Tom and the Pope, by Sir S. Fergusson, III. 362.
 Father's Tragedy, by M. Field, III. 704.
 FAULKNER, WILLIAM, III. 856.
 FAUST, trans. by Abraham Hayward, III. 327; by J. Stuart Blackie, III. 490; by Bayard Taylor, III. 822.
 Faustine, by A. C. Swinburne, III. 670.
 Faustus, by Marlowe, I. 347.
 FAWCETT, HENRY, III. 840; Life of, by Sir Leslie Stephen, III. 662.
 FAWCETT, MRS, III. 850.
 FAWKES, FRANCIS, II. 421.
 Feast for Wormes, by Quarles, I. 566, 567.
 Feast of Bacchus, by R. Bridges, III. 693.
 Feats on the Fiord, by Harriet Martineau, III. 388.
 Federal Government, History of, by E. A. Freeman, II. 626.
 Federalist, by Hamilton and Madison, III. 736.
 Felix Holt, by George Eliot, III. 530.
 Fellowship, by Lady Eastlake, III. 387.
 FELLTHAM, OWEN, I. 578.
 Felon's Dream, by G. Crabbe, II. 697.
 Female Quixote, by C. Lennox, II. 417.
 FENN, GEORGE MANVILLE, III. 840.
 FENTON, ELIJAH, II. 199.
 FERBER, EDNA, III. 856.
 Ferdinand and Isabella, by Prescott, III. 764.
 Ferdinand Count Fathom, by Smollett, II. 442, 444.
 FERGUSON, ADAM, II. 430.
 FERGUSON, SIR SAMUEL, III. 362.
 FERGUSON, ROBERT, II. 804.
 Ferishtah's Fancies, by R. Browning, III. 556, 566.
 Ferrex and Porrex, by Norton and Sackville, I. 157.
 FERRIER, JAMES FREDERICK, III. 398.
 FERRIER, SUSAN EDMONDSTONE, III. 300.
 Festus, by Philip James Bailey, III. 507-510.
 Feuerbach's 'Christianity,' trans. by George Eliot, III. 529.
 Fiction, Essays on, by N. W. Senior, III. 343.
 Fiction, History of, by Dunlop, II. 808; III. 219.
 Fidelia, by G. Wither, I. 499, 502.
 FIELD, BARRON, III. 729.
 FIELD, EUGENE, III. 851.
 FIELD, MICHAEL, III. 704.
 FIELD, NATHANIEL, I. 487.
 FIELDING, HENRY, II. 7, 339; book on, by Austin Dobson, III. 688.
 FIELDING, SARAH, II. 417.
 Fine at the Fair, by R. Browning, III. 556, 558, 559, 565.
 Fight about the Isles of the Azores, by Sir Walter Raleigh, I. 805, 811.
 FILMER, SIR ROBERT, I. 559.
 Finding of the Book, by W. Alexander, III. 584.

- Fingal, by James Macpherson, II. 500.
 FINLAY, GEORGE, III. 217.
 Piusburg, Battle of, I. 4, 5.
 Firdausi in Exile, by Sir Edmund Gosse, III. 696.
 Fireside, by N. Cotton, II. 533.
 Firmilian, by W. E. Aytoun, III. 475, 477.
 First Principles, by Herbert Spencer, III. 586, 587, 589.
 First Sketch of English Literature, by H. Morley, III. 633.
 FIRTH, SIR CHARLES HARDING, III. 844.
 FISHER, DOROTHEA FRANCES CANFIELD (Dorothy Canfield), III. 834.
 FISHER, HERBERT ALBERT LAURENS, III. 846.
 FISHER, JOHN, I. 126.
 Fisher's Boy, by H. D. Thoreau, III. 799.
 FISKE, JOHN, III. 828.
 FITCH, CLYDE, III. 855.
 FITCHETT, WILLIAM HENRY, III. 730.
 FITZBALL, EDWARD, II. 783.
 FITZ-BOODLE, GEORGE (W. M. Thackeray), III. 456.
 FITZGERALD, EDWARD, III. 424.
 FITZGERALD, FRANCIS S. K., III. 856.
 Fitzgerald (Lord Edward), Life of, by Moore, III. 347.
 FITZNEAL, RICHARD, I. 34.
 FITZPATRICK, GENERAL RICHARD, II. 670.
 FITZPATRICK, SIR PERCY, III. 733.
 Five Hundredth Potatoes of Good Husbandry, by Tusser, I. 249.
 Five Nations, by Kipling, III. 708.
 Flaming Heart, by Crasnow, I. 678.
 Flaming Tinnan, by Boston, III. 434.
 FLATMAN, THOMAS, I. 783.
 FLAVEL, JOHN, I. 670.
 FLAHER, by C. G. Leland, III. 784.
 FLECKER, JAMES ELROY, III. 848.
 FLECKNOE, RICHARD, I. 784.
 Floor, by John Dyer, II. 284, 286.
 Fleet Street Eclogues, by J. Davidson, III. 706.
 Fleetwood, by William Godwin, II. 703.
 FLETCHER, ANDREW, I. 827.
 FLETCHER, ELIZA, III. 187.
 FLETCHER, GILES, I. 445.
 FLETCHER, JOHN, I. 468.
 FLETCHER, JOHN GOULD, III. 856.
 FLETCHER, PHINEAS, I. 445.
 FLINT, ROBERT, III. 840.
 Flodden Field, by Alfred Austin, III. 681.
 Flood of Years, by W. C. Bryant, III. 753.
 Floods in Morayshire, by Sir Thomas Dick Lauder, III. 305.
 Florence MacCarthy, by Lady Morgan, II. 781.
 FLORENCE OF WORCESTER, I. 33.
 FLORIO, JOHN, I. 261.
 Flotsam and Jetsam, by Domett, III. 732.
 Flower and the Leaf, I. 81.
 Flower o' Dumblane, by Tannahill, II. 830.
 Flowers from Parnassus, by Pennecuik, II. 309.
 Flowers of the Forest, by Jean Elliot, II. 796; by Mrs Cockburn, II. 796.
 Fly-Leaves, by C. S. Calverley, III. 638.
 Flying, by Dunbar and Kennedy, I. 199.
 Fo'c'sle Yarns, by T. E. Brown, III. 634.
 Federa, by Thomas Rymer, I. 751.
 Foes in Law, by Miss Broughton, III. 690.
 Folle Farine, by Ouida, III. 690.
 FONBLANQUE, ALBANY W., III. 267.
 Fool of Quality, by H. Brooke, II. 306, 397-400.
 FOOTE, SAMUEL, II. 432.
 Footprints of Former Men in Cornwall, by R. S. Hawker, III. 381.
 Footprints of the Creator, by Hugh Miller, III. 285.
 Footprints on the Sea-Shore, by Hawthorne, III. 780.
 For the Fallen, by Laurence Binyon, III. 713, 714.
 For the Term of his Natural Life, by M. Clarke, III. 731.
 FORBES, ARCHIBALD, III. 841.
 FORBES, EDWARD, III. 839.
 FORBES, JAMES DAVID, III. 400.
 Forces in Nature, Various, by Faraday, III. 243.
 FORD, JOHN, I. 481.
 FORD, PAUL LEICESTER, III. 832.
 FORD, RICHARD, III. 322.
 FORDUN, JOHN, I. 182.
 Forest, by Ben Jonson, I. 408, 409.
 Foresters, by John Wilson, III. 246.
 Forest Minstrel, by James Hogg, III. 292; by William and Mary Howitt, III. 283.
 Forest Scenery, by W. Gilpin, II. 655.
 Forging of the Anchor, by Sir S. Ferguson, III. 362.
 FORMAN, HARRY BUXTON, III. 841.
 Forreine Travel, Instructions for, by J. Howell, I. 573, 577.
 Foes Clavigera, by Ruskin, III. 571, 572.
 FORSTER, EDWARD MORGAN, III. 848.
 FORSTER, JOHN, III. 474.
 Foscyle Saga, by Galsworthy, III. 712.
 FORTESCUE, SIR JOHN, III. 845.
 FORTESQUE, SIR JOHN, I. 90.
 Forth Feasting, by Drummond, I. 510.
 Fortnightly Review founded, III. 495.
 Fortunatus, by Dekker, I. 422, 424.
 Forty-Five, by Stanhope, III. 374.
 Foscarl, by Mary Russell Mitford, III. 176.
 Fossils, Palaeozoic, by Sedgwick, III. 202.
 FOSTER, JOHN, II. 738.
 FOSTER, STEPHEN COLLINS, III. 823.
 FOULIS, HUGH (Neil Munro), III. 713.
 Founder of Christendom, by Goldwin Smith, III. 727.
 Four Elements, Interlude of the, I. 102, 152.
 Fourfold State, by Thomas Boston, II. 302.
 Four Georges, by Thackeray, III. 459; by McCarthy, III. 660.
 Fourteen Sonnets, by W. L. Bowles, II. 721, 722.
 FOWLER, ELLEN THORNEycroft, III. 851.
 FOWLER, THOMAS, III. 840.
 FOX, CHARLES JAMES, II. 636; Life of, by Sir G. O. Trevelyan, III. 687.
 FOX, GEORGE, I. 716.
 Fox, Charles James, Characters of, by Samuel Parr, II. 630.
 FOXE, JOHN, I. 251.
 Foxglove Manor, by R. Buchanan, III. 656.
 Fragments of Science, by Tyndall, III. 548.
 Framley Parsonage, by Trollope, III. 487.
 France, Travels in, by Arthur Young, II. 628.
 Francis, Sir Philip (Junius), II. 518.
 Frankenstein, by Mrs Shelley, III. 519.
 FRANKLIN, BENJAMIN, III. 735, 739.
 Franklin, by Sir T. Overbury, I. 443.
 Frank Midway, by F. Martyat, III. 255.
 FRASER, ALEXANDER CAMPBELL, III. 839.
 FRASER, JAMES BAILLIE, III. 787.
 Fraser's Magazine begun, III. 260.
 Fraternity, by Galsworthy, III. 712.
 FRAZER, SIR JAMES GEORGE, III. 713.
 FREDERIC, HAROLD, III. 832.
 Frederick the Great, by Carlyle, III. 404, 405, 406, 411.
 Freedom of the Press, Apology for the, by Robert Hall, II. 738.
 Freedom of the Will, by Jonathan Edwards, III. 738, 739.
 Frecholder, II. 214; extract, II. 226.
 FREEMAN, EDWARD AUGUSTUS, III. 625.
 Free thinking, by Anthony Collins, II. 163.
 Free-thinking and Plain Speaking, by Sir Leslie Stephen, III. 662.
 French Influence on English Literature, I. 236; III. 1.
 French Influence on the Revolution Period of English Literature, II. 16.
 French in India, by Malleson, III. 632.
 French Literature, by Dowden, III. 687.
 French Literature of England in 12th to 14th century, I. 34.
 French Revolution, by Carlyle, III. 403, 406, 408.
 French Revolution, Reflections on the, by Burke, II. 544, 547, 548.
 FRENEAU, PHILIP, III. 736.
 FREKE, JOHN HOOKHAM, II. 675.
 Friar of Orders Gray, by Percy, II. 505.
 Friar of Orders Grey, by O'Keefe, II. 656.
 Friend, edited by Coleridge, III. 60, 61, 68.
 Friendless Girls, by F. P. Cobbe, III. 537.
 Friendship's Garland, by M. Arnold, III. 594.
 Friends in Council, by Helps, III. 478.
 Frier Bacon and Frier Bungay, by Greene, I. 325.
 Fröissart, by Madame Duclaux, III. 704.
 Fröissart, Chronicles of, trans. by Lord Berners, I. 103.
 Frontenac and New France, by Parkman, III. 818.
 FROST, ROBERT, III. 835.
 Frost at Midnight, by Coleridge, III. 66.
 FROUDE, JAMES ANTHONY, III. 509.
 Fruits of Solitude, by W. Penn, II. 52, 53.
 Fudge Family in Paris, by Moore, III. 347.
 Fulgens and Lucres, by Medwall, I. 157.
 FULLER, SARAH MARGARET, III. 757.
 FULLER, THOMAS, I. 596.
 FULLER-MAITLAND, J. A., III. 844.
 FULLERTON, LADY GEORGINA, III. 520.
 Funeral, by Sir Richard Steele, II. 239.
 FURNESS, HORACE HOWARD, III. 825.
 FURNIVALL, FREDERICK JAMES, III. 839.
 Gaberlunze's Wallet, by J. Ballantine, III. 377.
 Gaffer Gray, by Thomas Hocroft, II. 570.
 GAIMAR, GEOFFREY, I. 35.
 GAIRDNER, JAMES, III. 632.
 GALE, NORMAN, III. 845.
 GALL, RICHARD, II. 827.
 Gallery of Literary Characters, by William Maginn, III. 260.
 GALLIENNE, RICHARD LE, III. 846.
 GALSWORDY, JOHN, III. 712.
 GALT, JOHN, III. 296, 725.
 GALTON, SIR FRANCIS, III. 839.
 GAMBOLD, JOHN, II. 421.
 Game at Chess, by T. Middleton, I. 458.
 Game of the Chess, by Caxton, I. 95.
 Gamekeeper at Home, by Jefferies, III. 640.
 Gamester, by Edward Moore, II. 400.
 Gammeter Gurton's Needle, by William Stevenson (?), I. 155, 156.
 Gardener's Daughter, by Tennyson, III. 541.
 Garden of Cyrus, by Sir T. Browne, I. 592, 595.
 Garden of Florence, by Reynolds, III. 268.
 Garden Song, by Austin Dobson, III. 689.
 GARDINER, SAMUEL RAWSON, III. 631.
 GARLAND, HAMLIN, III. 855.
 Gardou of Ladeis, by Henryson, I. 189.
 GARNETT, RICHARD, III. 668.
 GARRICK, DAVID, II. 431.
 GARRISON, WILLIAM LLOYD, III. 774, 811.
 GARTH, SIR SAMUEL, II. 109.
 Garth, by Julian Hawthorne, III. 831.
 GASCOIGNE, GEORGE, I. 238, 247.
 GASKELL, MRS, III. 527.
 Gathering Clouds, by F. W. Farrar, III. 661.
 GAU, JOHN, I. 230.
 GAUDIN, JOHN, I. 587.
 GAUNT, MARY (Mrs L. Miller), III. 730.
 GAY, JOHN, II. 5, 172.
 Gebir, by W. S. Lander, III. 141, 143.
 GEDDES, ALEXANDER, II. 798.
 GEIKIE, SIR ARCHIBALD, III. 840.
 General Historie of the Turkes, by Richard Koolles, I. 272.
 Genesis A, I. 9, 11, 22; Genesis B, I. 22, 25.
 Gentle Craft, by Thomas Deloney, I. 333.
 Gentle Gratter, by O. Henry (W. S. Porter), III. 833.
 Gentle Shepherd, by Ramsay, II. 313, 314.
 Gentleman's Magazine, II. 12, 244.
 GEOFFREY OF MONMOUTH, I. 3, 33, 35, 37.
 Geoffrey Hamlyn, by Henry Kingsley, III. 517, 518.
 Geographical Distribution of Animals, by A. R. Wallace, III. 614.
 Geology, Principles of, by Sir Charles Lyell, III. 317.
 Geology of Russia in Europe and the Ural, by Sir R. I. Murchison, III. 267.
 GEORGE, DAVID LLOYD, III. 845.
 GEORGE, HENRY, III. 854.
 GEORGE, WALTER LIONEL, III. 848.
 George Barnwell, by George Lillo, II. 276.
 George III., English Literature under, II. 475.
 George III., Memoirs of, by Walpole, II. 411.
 George IV., King William IV., and Queen Victoria, Journal of the Reigns of, by Charles Greville, III. 319-321.
 George-a-Greene, by Greene, I. 324.
 Geopics, trans. by Thomas May, I. 582; by Joseph Warton, II. 507; by William Sotheby, II. 713.
 GERALD DE BARY (Giraldus Cambrensis), I. 33.
 GERARD, ALEXANDER, II. 388.
 German Poetry, by William Taylor, II. 712.
 Gertrude of Wyoming, by Campbell, II. 766, 767.
 Gesta Romanorum, I. 34.
 GILGOUR, by Byron, III. 122.
 GIBSON, EDWARD, II. 9, 550.
 GIBSON, LEWIS GRASSIC (J. L. Mitchell), III. 849.
 GIBSON, PERCEVAL, III. 733.
 GIBSONS, STELLA, III. 852.
 GIBBS, SIR PHILIP, III. 847.
 GIBSON, WILFRED WILSON, III. 715, 723.
 GIFFORD, RICHARD, II. 441.
 GIFFORD, WILLIAM, II. 666.
 GILBERT, SIR WILLIAM SCHWENCK, III. 604.
 GILDAS, historian, I. 3.
 GILDER, RICHARD WATSON, III. 831.
 GILDON, CHARLES, II. 196.
 GILFILLAN, GEORGE, III. 480.
 GILFILLAN, ROBERT, III. 311.
 GILLESPIE, GEORGE, I. 821.
 GILLETTE, WILLIAM, III. 855.

- GILLIES, JOHN, II. 636.
 GILPIN, WILLIAM, II. 655.
 Gipsies, by Crabbe, II. 608; by Wordsworth, III. 24.
 GIRALDUS CAMBRENSIS, I. 33.
 Gisippus, by Gerald Griffin, III. 357.
 GISHING, GEORGE, III. 711.
 Gitanjali, by Tagore, III. 710.
 Gletschers of the Alps, by Tyndall, III. 548.
 Glaciers, Theory of, by Forbes, III. 400.
 GLADSTONE, WILLIAM EWART, III. 447;
 • Life of, by McCarthy, III. 660; by Lord Morley, III. 686.
 GLANVIL, RANULPH DE, I. 34.
 GLAPTHORNE, HENRY, I. 487.
 GLASCOCK, WILLIAM NUGENT, III. 250.
 GLASGOW, ELLEN, III. 855.
 Glasgow, by Alexander Smith, III. 605.
 GLASPELL, SUSAN, III. 856.
 Gleanings, by Gladstone, III. 448.
 GLEIG, GEORGE ROBERT, III. 323.
 GLEN, WILLIAM, III. 309.
 Glenara, by Campbell, II. 766.
 Glenarvon, by Lady Caroline Lamb, II. 780.
 Glenaveril, by the Earl of Lytton, III. 638.
 Gloomy Winter's now Awa', by Tannahill, II. 830.
 Gloria Mundi, by Harold Frederic, III. 832.
 Glossarium Archaeologicum, by Spelman, I. 271.
 GLOUCESTER, ROBERT OF, I. 32, 42.
 GLOVER, JEAN, II. 810.
 GLOVER, RICHARD, II. 351.
 GLOVER, TERROR KEAVELEY, III. 847.
 Go, Lovely Rose, by Edmund Waller, I. 627.
 Goblin Market, by C. Rossetti, III. 646, 647.
 God and the Bible, by M. Arnold, III. 505.
 God and the Man, by R. Buchanan, III. 856.
 Goddwyn, by Thomas Chatterton, II. 516.
 Godfrey of Bulloigne, by Carew, I. 353; by Fairfax, I. 444.
 GODLEY, ALFRED DENIS, III. 844.
 GODWIN, MARY WOLLSTONECRAFT, II. 706.
 GODWIN, WILLIAM, II. 702; Life of, by Kegan Paul, II. 703.
 Goethe, Life of, by Lewes, III. 496.
 Goetheic Invasion, I. 2, 831.
 Golden Book of Marcus Aurelius, by Lord Berners, I. 104.
 Golden Bough, by Sir J. G. Frazer, III. 713.
 Golden Buttery, by Besant and Rice, III. 830.
 Golden Legend, by Longfellow, III. 770.
 Golden Legend, trans. by Chaucer, I. 128.
 Golden Targe, by Dunbar, I. 194.
 Golden Treasury, ed. by F. T. Palgrave, III. 609.
 GOLDING, ARTHUR, I. 266.
 GOLDSMITH, OLIVER, II. 8, II. 478; Life of, by Forster, III. 474; by Austin Dobson, III. 688.
 GOLLANZ, SIR ISRAEL, III. 846.
 Gondibert, by D'Avenant, I. 628.
 GOODALL, WALTER, II. 389.
 Good Counsel, Ballad of, by James I., I. 183.
 Good-Nur'd Man, by Goldsmith, II. 480.
 Good-night, and Joy be wi' ye a', by Sir A. Boswell, II. 832.
 GOODWIN, THOMAS, I. 668.
 Good Words, III. 396.
 GOOD, BARNABE, I. 265.
 Gorbofac, by Norton and Sackville, I. 157, 240.
 Gordian Knot, by C. W. S. Brooks, III. 492.
 GORDON, ADAM LINDSAY, III. 729, 730.
 GORDON, CHARLES WILLIAM, III. 728.
 GORDON, LADY DUFF (Lucie Austin), III. 373, 733.
 GORE, CATHERINE G. F., III. 279.
 GORE, CHARLES, III. 843.
 GORGEOUS Gallies of Gallant Inventions, I. 257.
 GOSK, SIR EDMUND, III. 696.
 Gossip in a Library, by Sir E. Gosse, III. 696.
 GOSSON, STEPHEN, I. 206.
 Gothaid, by C. Churchill, II. 496, 497.
 GOUGH, RICHARD, II. 629.
 GOULDSBURY, CULLEN, III. 733.
 Governance of England, by Fortescue, I. 90.
 Government, Best Form of, by Sir G. O. Lewis, III. 207.
 Government, Discourses on, by Algernon Sidney, I. 716.
 GOVERNOR, by Sir T. Elyot, I. 127.
 GOWER, JOHN, I. 35, 74.
 Grace Abounding, by Bunyan, I. 719, 722.
 GRAFTON, RICHARD, I. 257.
 GRAHAM, DOUGAL, II. 810.
 GRAHAM, ENNIS (Mrs Mary Louisa Stewart Molesworth), III. 850.
 GRAHAM, JAMES. See MONTROSE, MARQUIS OF.
 GRAHAM, R. B. CUNNINGHAME, III. 724, 843.
 GRAHAM, ROBERT, II. 797.
 GRAHAM, STEPHEN, III. 848.
 Graham of Claverhouse, by Mark Napier, III. 291.
 GRAHAME, JAMES, II. 689.
 GRAHAME, KENNETH, III. 844.
 GRAHAME, SIMION, I. 818.
 GRAINGER, JAMES, II. 375.
 GRAMMAR of Assent, by Newman, III. 338.
 GRAND, SARAH, III. 851.
 Grandfather's Chair, by Hawthorne, III. 780.
 Grandissimes, by G. W. Cable, III. 829.
 GRANGER, JAMES, II. 388.
 GRANT, JAMES, III. 578.
 GRANT, JAMES AUGUSTUS, III. 610.
 GRANT, MRS ANNE, II. 596.
 GRANT, MRS ELIZABETH, II. 596.
 GRANVILLE, G. See LANSDOWNE, LORD.
 GRANVILLE-BARKER, HARLEY, III. 847.
 GRASS of Parnassus, by A. Lang, III. 692.
 GRATTAN, HENRY, II. 678.
 GRATTAN, THOMAS COLLEY, III. 350.
 Grave, by Robert Blair, II. 305.
 GRAVEY Thoughts of a Country Parson, by A. K. H. Boyd, III. 624.
 GRAVES, ALFRED PERCEVAL, III. 694.
 GRAVES, CLOTILDE, III. 733.
 GRAVES, RICHARD, II. 376.
 GRAVES, ROBERT, III. 849.
 Graves of a Household, by Mrs Hemans, III. 180.
 Graves of Tircoone and Tyrone, by A. de Vere, III. 582.
 GRAY, DAVID, III. 657.
 GRAY, MAXWELL (Miss M. Tuttle), III. 851.
 GRAY, THOMAS, II. 11, 359; III. 5; book on, by Sir Edmund Gosse, III. 696.
 Great Adventure, by Arnold Bennett, III. 712.
 Great Britain, History of, by Speed, I. 271; by Hume, II. 377-381.
 Great Duke of Florence, by Massinger, I. 464, 466.
 Great Remembrance, by R. W. Gilder, III. 831.
 Great Stone Face, by Hawthorne, III. 782.
 Greatest English Poets, by Addison, II. 212, 218.
 Greece, History of, by W. Mitford, II. 630-632; by John Gillies, II. 636; by Thirlwall, III. 204; by Finlay, III. 217; by George Grote, III. 199; Ancient Language and Literature of, by Colonel Wm. Muir, III. 219.
 Greece and Russia, Travels in, by Bayard Taylor, III. 822.
 Greek Social Life, by Sir John P. Mahaffy, III. 688.
 CREELEY, HORACE, III. 811.
 GREEN, JOHN RICHARD, III. 652.
 GREEN, MATTHEW, II. 288.
 GREEN, MRS ALICE STOPFORD, III. 850.
 GREEN, MRS MARY ANNE EVERETT, III. 850.
 GREEN, THOMAS HILL, III. 651.
 Green Fire, by Fiona Macleod, III. 705.
 Green grow the Rashers, by Burns, II. 824.
 Green Linnet, by Wordsworth, III. 16, 21.
 Green Mandarins, by W. H. Hudson, III. 711.
 GREENE, ROBERT, I. 228, 240, 323.
 Greenland, by James Montgomery, II. 742, 743.
 GREG, PERCY, III. 400.
 GREG, WILLIAM RATHBONE, III. 400.
 GREGORY, LADY, III. 850.
 GREVILLE, CHARLES CAVENDISH FULKE, III. 319.
 GREVILLE, FULKE, LORD BROOKE, I. 354.
 GREY, EDWARD, VISCOUNT, III. 845.
 Grey, Memoir of Sir George, by Mandell Creighton, III. 687.
 GRIERSON, SIR HERBERT J. C., III. 846.
 GRIEVE, CHRISTOPHER M., III. 849.
 Grif, by Farjeon, III. 732.
 GRIFFIN, B., I. 278.
 GRIFFIN, GERALD, III. 357.
 Griffith Gaunt, by Charles Reade, III. 483.
 GRIMALD or GRIMOALD, NICHOLAS, I. 278.
 Griselda, by Wilfrid S. Blunt, III. 691.
 GRISWOLD, RUFUS WILMOT, III. 853.
 Groat's-worth of Wit, by Greene, I. 325.
 GROOBY, WILLIAM, I. 120.
 Groggier Hill, by John Dyer, II. 284.
 GROOME, FRANCIS HINDS, III. 842.
 GROSE, FRANCIS, II. 629.
 GROSSETESTE, ROBERT, I. 34.
 GROTE, GEORGE, III. 199.
 Grotesque and Arabesque, Tales of the, by E. A. Poe, III. 786.
 GROVE, SIR GEORGE, III. 578.
 Gruach, by Gordon Bottomley, III. 714.
 GRUNDY, SYDNEY, III. 695.
 Gryll Grange, by T. L. Peacock, III. 150, 153.
 Guardian, II. 4, 121, 195, 214; extract by Addison, II. 226; commenced, II. 232; extract by Steele, II. 235.
 Guardian Angel, by Holmes, III. 791.
 Gude and Godlie Ballatis, I. 216.
 Guesses at Truth, by A. and J. Hare, III. 299, 270.
 GUEST, LADY CHARLOTTE, III. 387.
 Guiana, Discovery of, by Sir Walter Raleigh, I. 305.
 Guizot's Civilisation, trans. by Mrs Austin, III. 373.
 Gulistan, trans. by Sir E. Arnold, III. 663.
 Gulliver's Travels, by Swift, II. 125, 127, 141-143.
 Gull's Hornbook, by Dekker, I. 425.
 Gustavus Vasa, by Henry Brocke, II. 396.
 GUTHRIE, THOMAS, III. 542.
 GUTHRIE, THOMAS ANSTEV, III. 844.
 GUTHRIE, WILLIAM, III. 387.
 Guy Livingstone, by Lawrence, III. 624.
 Guy Mannerling, by Scott, III. 40.
 Guy of Warwick, I. 51.
 GWYNN, STEPHEN, III. 846.
 H, Riddle on, by Miss Fanshawe, II. 739.
 HABBERTON, JOHN, III. 854.
 Habbie Simson, by R. Sempill, I. 818.
 HABBINGTON, WILLIAM, I. 571.
 Habitat, by W. H. Drummond, III. 728.
 Hafiz, Song of, by Sir W. Jones, II. 616.
 HAGGARD, SIR HENRY RIDER, III. 703.
 Hail, Columbia! by J. Hopkinson, III. 736.
 HAILES, LORD, II. 455.
 Hajji Baba, by Morier, II. 783, 784-787.
 HAKE, THOMAS GORDON, III. 384.
 HAKLUYT, RICHARD, I. 283; Hakluytus Posthumus, I. 449.
 HALE, EDWARD EVERETT, III. 853.
 HALE, SIR MATTHEW, I. 663.
 HALES, JOHN, I. 550.
 HALES, JOHN WESLEY, III. 840.
 Half-Century of Conflict, by Parkman, III. 818.
 Half-Heaven Poetry, I. 7.
 Half-Sister, by G. E. Jewsbury, III. 520.
 HALBURTON, THOMAS CHANDLER, III. 726.
 HALIFAX, EARL OF, II. 244.
 HALIFAX, MARQUIS OF, I. 755.
 HALKETT, GEORGE, II. 810.
 HALL, BASIL, III. 227.
 HALL, EDWARD, I. 106.
 HALL, JOSEPH, I. 417.
 HALL, MRS S. C., III. 280.
 HALL, ROBERT, II. 798.
 HALL, SAMUEL CARTER, III. 281.
 HALLAM, ARTHUR HENRY, III. 548.
 HALLAM, HENRY, III. 193.
 HALLECK, FITZ-GREENE, III. 749.
 Hallo, My Fancy, by Cleland, I. 829.
 Hallow-Fair, by F. Sempill (?), I. 819; by R. Fergusson, II. 806, 807.
 Hame Content, by R. Fergusson, II. 808.
 Hame, Hame, Hame, by Allan Cunningham, III. 394.
 HAMBERTON, PHILIP GILBERT, III. 613.
 HAMILTON, ALEXANDER, III. 736.
 HAMILTON, ELIZABETH, II. 808.
 HAMILTON, SIR WILLIAM, III. 245.
 HAMILTON, THOMAS, III. 254.
 HAMILTON, W. OF BANGOUR, II. 309.
 HAMILTON, W. OF GILBERTFIELD, II. 309.
 Hamilton's Catechism, Archbishop, I. 218.
 Hamlet, by Shakespeare, I. 368.
 HAMLEY, SIR EDWARD BRUCE, III. 839.
 HAMMOND, JAMES, II. 422.
 HAMPOLE, RICHARD ROLLE OF, I. 49.
 Handful of Pleasant Delights, I. 257, 274.
 Handlyng Synne, by Manlyng, I. 43, 43.
 Handy Andy, by Lover, III. 356.
 Hannah Thurston, by B. Taylor, III. 822.
 HANNAY, JAMES, III. 632, 726.
 Hannibal, by John Nichol, III. 637.
 Hans Breitmann Ballads, III. 784.
 Happiness, Essays on, by Sir G. Mackenzie, I. 826.
 Hard Cash, by C. Reade, III. 483, 484.
 HARDY, THOMAS, III. 678, 722.
 Hardyknute, by Lady E. Wardlaw, II. 312.
 HARE, AUGUSTUS and JULIUS, III. 269.
 Hare with Many Friends, by Gay, II. 174.
 HARRINGTON, JOHN, I. 264.
 HARRINGTON, SIR JOHN, I. 391.

- HARLAND, HENRY, III. 855.
 Harleian Miscellany, ed. by Oldys, II. 301.
 Harold, by Lord Lytton, III. 332.
 HARPUR, CHARLES, III. 729.
 HARRADEN, BEATRICE, III. 851.
 HARRINGTON, JAMES, I. 619.
 HARRINGTON, SIR JOHN. See HARINGTON, SIR JOHN.
 HARRIS, JAMES, II. 358.
 HARRIS, JOEL CHANDLER, III. 831.
 HARRISON, CONSTANCE CARY, III. 854.
 HARRISON, FREDERIC, III. 661.
 HARRISON, MARY ST LEGER, III. 704.
 HARRISS, HENRY, III. 853.
 Harris's (Mrs Frances) Petition, 1700, by Swift, II. 133.
 Harrowing of Hell, I. 45.
 Harry Coverdale's Courtship, by F. E. Smedley, III. 492.
 Harry Lorraine, by Lever, III. 359, 360.
 Harry Richmond, by Meredith, III. 658.
 HARTE, FRANCIS BRET, III. 827.
 HARTLEY, DAVID, II. 338.
 HARVEY, GABRIEL, I. 332.
 Hassan the Camel-driver, by Collins, II. 369.
 Hastings, Speech against Warren, by Sheridan, II. 569.
 Haunch of Venison, by Goldsmith, II. 480, 486.
 Haunted and the Haunters, by Lord Lytton, III. 332.
 Haunted Palace, by E. A. Poe, III. 789.
 Havlok the Dane, I. 43, 44, 336.
 HAWES, STEPHEN, I. 112.
 HAWKER, ROBERT STEPHEN, III. 381.
 HAWKESWORTH, JOHN, II. 410.
 HAWKINS, SIR ANTHONY HOPE, III. 708.
 Hawthorn and Lavender, by W. E. Henley, III. 695.
 HAWTHORNE, JULIAN, III. 831.
 HAWTHORNE, NATHANIEL, III. 778.
 Hawthorne, by Henry James, III. 830.
 HAY, IAN (John Hay Beith), III. 847.
 HAY, JOHN, III. 825.
 Haydon, Autobiography of B. R., compiled and edited by Tom Taylor, III. 463.
 HAYLEY, WILLIAM, II. 614.
 HAYNE, PAUL HAMILTON, III. 853.
 HAYWARD, ABRAHAM, III. 327.
 HAYWARD, SIR JOHN, I. 271.
 Haze, by H. D. Thoreau, III. 798.
 HAZLITT, WILLIAM, III. 79.
 'H. D.' (Hilda Doolittle), III. 856.
 HEAD, SIR FRANCIS BOND, III. 266.
 HEAD, SIR GEORGE, III. 266.
 Headlong Hall, by Thomas Love Peacock, III. 150, 151.
 HEARN, LAFCADIO, III. 842.
 HEARNE, THOMAS, II. 244.
 Heart of Gold, by D. Jerrold, III. 328.
 Heart of Midlothian, by Scott, III. 39, 44-46.
 Heartsease, by Miss Yonge, III. 535.
 Hearts-ease and Rue, by Lowell, III. 802.
 Heat as a Mode of Motion, by Tyndall, III. 548.
 Heathen Chinee, by Bret Harte, III. 827.
 Heavens, Mechanism of the, by Mrs Somerville, III. 186.
 HEAVYSEGE, CHARLES, III. 725.
 HEBER, REGINALD, III. 212.
 Hebrew Melodies, by Byron, III. 122.
 Hecatombathia, by T. Watson, I. 241, 277.
 Hedda Gabler, trans. by Gosse, III. 696.
 Hegel, Secret of, by J. H. Stirling, III. 661.
 Heir at law, by Colman, II. 656, 657.
 Heiress of Bruges, by Grattan, III. 351.
 Heir of Redclyffe, by Miss Yonge, III. 535.
 Helbeck of Bannisdale, by Mrs H. Ward, III. 704.
 Helen of Kirkcubright, by J. Mayne, II. 811.
 Helen of Troy, by Andrew Lang, III. 692.
 Helenore, by Alexander Ross, II. 317.
 Hellas, by Shelley, III. 112, 116.
 Hellenics, by Landor, III. 141.
 HELPS, SIR ARTHUR, III. 478.
 HEMANS, MRS, III. 179.
 HEMINGWAY, ERNEST, III. 856.
 HENLEY, WILLIAM ERNEST, III. 695.
 HENRY, MATTHEW, II. 60.
 HENRY, O. (W. S. Porter), III. 833.
 HENRY, ROBERT, II. 388.
 Henry II., Reign of, by Lytton, II. 349.
 Henry IV., by Shakespeare, I. 366.
 Henry V., by Shakespeare, I. 366.
 Henry VI., by Shakespeare, I. 359.
 HENRY VIII., as author, I. 149.
 Henry VIII., by Fletcher and Shakespeare, I. 373; Henry VIII., by Bacon, I. 385; Henry VIII., by Lord Herbert, I. 491.
 Henry and Emma, by Prior, II. 114.
 Henry Masterton, by G. P. R. James, III. 327.
 HENRY OF HUNTINGDON, I. 33.
 HENRYSON, ROBERT, I. 186, 189.
 HENRY, GEORGE ALFRED, III. 840.
 Hepzibah Guinness, by S. W. Mitchell, III. 825.
 HERAUD, JOHN ABRAHAM, III. 268.
 HERBERT, GEORGE, I. 495.
 HERBERT OF CHESHAM, LORD, I. 491.
 HERBERT, SIR THOMAS, I. 601.
 HERBERT, WILLIAM, II. 755.
 HERD, DAVID, II. 797.
 Herdsman's Book (Cura Pastoralis), I. 29.
 HEREFORD, NICHOLAS, I. 86.
 Heretic, A, by Walter C. Smith, III. 607.
 Heretics, by G. K. Chesterton, III. 711.
 Hereward the Wake, by Kingsley, III. 513.
 HERFORD, CHARLES HAROLD, III. 843.
 HERGESHEIMER, JOSEPH, III. 856.
 HERMES, by James Harris, II. 358.
 Hermit, by Beattie, II. 526, 527; by Parnell, II. 249.
 HERNE, JAMES A., III. 854.
 Hero and Leander, by Marlowe, I. 352.
 Heroic Stanzas, by Dryden, I. 792, 795, 800.
 HERRICK, ROBERT, I. 560, 731.
 HERSCHEL, SIR JOHN, III. 243.
 Hertha, by Swinburne, III. 675.
 HERVEY, JAMES, II. 338.
 HERVEY, LORD, Memoirs, II. 289.
 Hesioid, trans. by Cooke, II. 290.
 Hesperides, by Herrick, I. 560.
 HEWLETT, MAURICE HENRY, III. 845.
 HEVLYN, PETER, I. 582.
 HEYWOOD, JOHN, I. 152.
 HEYWOOD, THOMAS, I. 431.
 Hiawatha, by Longfellow, III. 770, 773.
 Hibernian Nights Entertainments, by Sir S. Ferguson, III. 362.
 HICHENS, ROBERT SMYTHE, III. 840.
 Hierarchy of the Blessed Angels, by T. Heywood, I. 433.
 Hieroglyphikes, by Quarles, I. 566, 568.
 Higgin's Polychronicon, I. 33, 84.
 HIGGINSON, T. WENTWORTH, III. 811.
 Highlander, by Mrs Anne Grant, II. 596.
 Highland Host, by Cleland, I. 829.
 Highland Parish, by Norman Macleod, III. 397.
 Highland Rambles, by Sir T. Dick Lauder, III. 305.
 High Life below Stairs, by James Townley, II. 410.
 Highways and Byways, by T. C. Grattan, III. 350.
 HILDRETH, RICHARD, III. 853.
 HILL, AARON, II. 197.
 HILL, GEORGE BIRKBECK, III. 840.
 Hills of Dream, by Fiona Macleod, III. 705.
 Hillyars and the Burtons, by H. Kingsley, III. 517.
 Hind and the Panther, by Dryden, I. 793, 796, 800.
 HINKSON, MRS KATHARINE TYNAN, III. 851.
 HINTON, JAMES, III. 613.
 His Darling Sid, by Miss Braddon, III. 690.
 Historical Characters, by H. L. Bulwer, III. 336.
 Historical Register, by Fielding, II. 340.
 Historic Doubts, by Whately, III. 196.
 Historic of the Reformation, by John Knox, I. 220.
 History, Study of, by Bolingbroke, II. 202, 204; by Lord Acton, III. 684.
 History, Universal, II. 387, 388.
 History of Our Own Times, by J. M'Carthy, III. 660.
 History of English Poetry, by W. J. Courthope, III. 684.
 History of Scotland. See SCOTLAND.
 Histro-Mastix, by W. Prynne, I. 584.
 HOADLY, BENJAMIN, II. 245.
 HOBBS, JOHN OLIVER (Pearl Mary Teresa Richards), III. 834.
 HOBBS, THOMAS, I. 553.
 HOBY, SIR THOMAS, I. 258.
 HOCLEVE, THOMAS, I. 77.
 Hochelaga, by George Warburton, III. 274; ed. by Eliot Warburton, III. 274.
 HOCKING, JOSEPH, III. 843.
 HOCKING, SILAS KITTO, III. 842.
 HODGKIN, THOMAS, III. 661.
 HODGSON, FRANCES ELIZA (Frances Hodgson Burnett), III. 833.
 HODGSON, RALPH, III. 847.
 HOGAN, JAMES FRANCIS, III. 730.
 Hogarth, Epistle to, by Churchill, II. 405; 497; Life of, by Austin Dobson, III. 688.
 HOGGEN, LANCELOT, III. 849.
 HOGG, JAMES, III. 8, 292.
 Hoggarty Diamond, by Thackeray, III. 456.
 Hohenlinden, by Campbell, II. 766, 769.
 HOLCROFT, THOMAS, II. 569.
 HOLINSHED, RAPHAEL, I. 255.
 HOLLAND, JOSIAH GILBERT, III. 778.
 HOLLAND, PHILEMON, I. 260.
 Holland-Tide Tales, by G. Griffin, III. 357.
 Holly Tree, by Southey, III. 52.
 HOLMES, OLIVER WENDELL, III. 790.
 HOLBY, WINIFRED, III. 852.
 Holy and Profane State, by Fuller, I. 596, 597.
 Holy Dying, by Jeremy Taylor, I. 604, 606.
 Holy Living, by Jeremy Taylor, I. 604.
 Holy Roman Empire, by Bryce, III. 686.
 Holy Scriptures, Introduction to the, by Thomas Hartwell Horne, II. 714.
 Holy Thursday, by William Blake, II. 720.
 Holy War, by Bunyan, I. 720.
 Holy Willie's Prayer, by Burns, II. 822.
 HOLYOAKE, GEORGE JACOB, III. 839.
 HOME, HENRY (Lord Kames), II. 388.
 HOME, JOHN, II. 453.
 Homer, Studies on, by Gladstone, III. 448.
 Homer, translations of, by Chapman, I. 377; by Hobbes, I. 555, 559; by Clarke, II. 160; by Pope, II. 179, 191; by Tickell, II. 251; by Macpherson, II. 500; by Cowper, II. 602, 609; by Sotheby, II. 713; by Blackie, III. 490; by Morris, III. 665; by Lang, &c., III. 692.
 Homes and Haunts of the Italian Poets, III. 490.
 Homes of England, by Mrs Hemans, III. 180.
 Homilies of Ælfric, I. 26.
 Homilies on the Sacraments, by Edward Irving, III. 208.
 HONE, WILLIAM, II. 759.
 Honest Whore, by Dekker, I. 423.
 Honest Moon, by John Tobin, II. 710.
 HOOD, BASIL, III. 846.
 HOOD, THOMAS, III. 136.
 HOOD, TOM, the Younger, III. 668.
 HOOK, THORPORA EDWARD, III. 163.
 HOOKER, RICHARD, I. 279.
 HOOLE, JOHN, II. 755.
 'Hoosier Poet' (J. W. Riley), III. 831.
 Hoosier Schoolmaster, by E. Eggleston, III. 824.
 HOPF, ANTHONY (Sir Anthony Hope Hawkins), III. 708.
 HOPE, THOMAS, II. 745.
 Hope, by William Cowper, II. 603.
 HOPKINS, GERRARD MANLEY, III. 713, 723.
 HOPKINS, JOHN, I. 150.
 Horace, trans. by Dryden, I. 806; by Smart, II. 424; by Geddes, II. 798, 800; by Conington, III. 634.
 Horace in London, by James and Horace Smith, III. 159.
 Horæ Hellenicæ, by J. S. Blackie, III. 490.
 Horæ Lyricæ, by Isaac Watts, II. 206-209.
 Horæ Paulinæ, by Paley, II. 643, 645.
 Horæ Subsecivæ, by Dr J. Brown, III. 449.
 Horatian Ode on Cromwell, by Marvell, I. 714.
 Horatius, by Macaulay, III. 369.
 HORNE, RICHARD HENRY, III. 413, 729.
 HORNE, THOMAS HARTWELL, II. 714.
 HORNING, ERNEST WILLIAM, III. 846.
 HORNLEY, SAMUEL, II. 646.
 Hospital Rhymes, by Henley, III. 695.
 HOUGHTON, LORD, III. 382.
 HOUGHTON, STANLEY, III. 848.
 Hound of Heaven, by Francis Thompson, III. 710.
 Hound of the Baskervilles, by Sir A. Conan Doyle, III. 707.
 Hours in a Library, by Sir Leslie Stephen, III. 662.
 Hours of Idleness, by Lord Byron, III. 120.
 Hours of Thought, by James Martineau, III. 392, 393.
 House by the Churchyard, by Le Fanu, III. 365.
 House of Fame, by Chaucer, I. 63, 70.
 House of Life, by Rossetti, III. 642, 643, 644.
 House of the Seven Gables, by Hawthorne, III. 781.
 House of the Wolfings, by William Morris, III. 666.
 House of Titian, by Mrs Jameson, III. 185.
 House of Usber, by Poe, III. 786, 787, 788.
 Household Words, ed. by Dickens, III. 465.
 Householder, by Robert Browning, III. 565.
 HOUSMAN, ALFRED EDWARD, III. 713.
 HOUSMAN, LAURENCE, III. 847.
 HOVEY, RICHARD, III. 833.
 HOWARD, BRONSON, III. 854.
 HOWARD, EDWARD, III. 259.
 HOWARD, SIR ROBERT, I. 787.
 Howard, Life of John, by Hepworth Dixon, III. 578.
 HOWE, JOHN, I. 669.
 HOWE, JOSEPH, III. 725, 726.
 HOWE, JULIA WARD, III. 828.

- HOWELL, JAMES, I. 572.
 HOWELLS, WILLIAM DEAN, III. 829.
 HOWIE, JOHN, II. 640.
 HOWITT, WILLIAM AND MARY, III. 233.
 HUCBOWN OF THE AWLE REALE, I. 51, 166, 171.
 Huckleberry Finn, by Mark Twain, III. 826.
 Hudibras, by Butler, I. 735, 737.
 HUDSON, HENRY NORMAN, III. 853.
 HUDSON, W. H., III. 711.
 HUDSON, WILLIAM HENRY, III. 845.
 HUFFNER, FORD MADDOX, III. 847.
 HUGGINS, SIR WILLIAM, III. 839.
 Hugh Trevor, by Holcroft, II. 570.
 Hugh Wynne, by S. W. Mitchell, III. 825.
 HUGHES, JOHN, II. 196.
 HUGHES, THOMAS, I. 333.
 HUGHES, THOMAS, III. 577.
 HULME, THOMAS ERNEST, III. 718, 848.
 Human Life, by S. Rogers, II. 723, 725.
 Human Mind, by James Mill, II. 757; by Thomas Brown, II. 761.
 Human Nature, by Hobbes, I. 554, 557, 558.
 Human Personality, by Myers, III. 691.
 Human Understanding, by Locke, II. 18; by David Hume, II. 377.
 HUME, ALEXANDER, I. 507.
 HUME, DAVID, II. 377; Life of, by J. H. Burton, III. 398.
 HUME, MARTIN, III. 841.
 HUMPHREYS, MRS DESMOND, III. 850.
 Humphry Clinker, by Smollett, II. 443, 444, 447.
 HUNGERFORD, MRS MARGARET WOLFF, III. 851.
 HUNNIS, WILLIAM, I. 156.
 HUNT, JAMES HENRY LEIGH, III. 147.
 HUNTER, MRS, II. 599.
 Huon of Bordeaux, ed. by Lee, III. 707.
 HURD, RICHARD, II. 428.
 Hurothumbo, II. 99.
 Hurt of Sedition, by Sir J. Cheke, I. 143.
 Husband's Message, in Exeter Book, I. 8.
 HUTCHESON, FRANCIS, II. 290.
 HUTCHINSON, A. S. M., III. 848.
 HUTCHINSON, LUCY, I. 674.
 HUTTON, RICHARD HOLT, III. 632.
 HUXLEY, ALDOUS, III. 716, 720.
 HUXLEY, JULIAN, III. 848.
 HUXLEY, THOMAS HENRY, III. 615.
 Hymnical Rhymes, by W. Barnes, III. 412.
 HYDE, DOUGLAS, III. 845.
 Hydrotophia, by Sir T. Browne, I. 591, 592, 593-595.
 Hyllas and Philonous, by Berkeley, II. 265, 267-269.
 Hymn's Triumph, by S. Daniel, I. 339, 340.
 Hymn of Heavenly Beauty, by Spenser, I. 296, 302; to the Name above every Name, by Crashaw, I. 681; on the Nativity, by Milton, I. 687, 693; to Darkness, by Thomas Valden, II. 200; to Intellectual Beauty, by Shelley, III. 108, 112.
 Hymns for Infant Minds, by Ann and Jane Taylor, III. 174.
 Hypatia, by Charles Kingsley, III. 513.
 Hyperion, by Keats, III. 99, 100, 103; by Longfellow, III. 768, 769.
 Hypolympia, by Sir Edmund Gosse, III. 696.
 Hyslop, JAMES, III. 310.
- I do not love Thee, by Mrs Norton, III. 386.
 I remember, I remember, by Hood, III. 138, 140.
 Ibsen, by Gosse, III. 696.
 Ichabod, by J. G. Whittier, III. 775, 776.
 I'd be a Batterfly, by T. H. Bayly, III. 241.
 Idalia, by Onida, III. 690.
 Idlesleigh, Life and Letters of Lord, by A. Lang, III. 692.
 Ideal Husband, by Oscar Wilde, III. 707.
 Ideals in Ireland, III. 707.
 Idea of a Patriot King, by Bolingbroke, II. 202, 206.
 Ideas of Good and Evil, by W. B. Yeats, III. 709.
 Ider, by Dr Johnson, II. 459.
 Ider in Italy, by the Countess of Blessington, III. 278.
 Idyll of Red Gulch, by Bret Harte, III. 827.
 Idylls of the King, by Tennyson, III. 541, 542.
 If Doughty Deeds, by R. Graham, II. 798.
 Iliad, translations of, by Chapman, I. 377; by Hobbes, I. 555, 559; by Clarke, II. 160; by Alexander Pope, J. 179, 191; by Tickell, II. 251; by Macpherson, II. 500; by Cowper, II. 609; by Goethe, II. 713; by Blackie, III. 490; by Conington, III. 634; by A. Lang, &c., III. 692.
 Illumination, by Harold Frederic, III. 832.
 Il Penseroso, by Milton, I. 687, 696.
- Image of Death, by Southwell, I. 338.
 Imaginary Conversations, by Landor, III. 141, 144-146.
 Imaginary Portraits, by Pater, III. 607.
 Imagination and Fancy, by Leigh Hunt, III. 148.
 Imagist Poetry, III. 723.
 Imitations of Horace, by Pope, II. 179.
 Imitations of Living Writers, by Isaac Hawkins Browne, II. 287.
 Immorality of the English Stage, by Jeremy Collier, II. 47.
 Importance of being Earnest, by Oscar Wilde, III. 707.
 Imposture, by Shirley, I. 485.
 Impregnable Rock of Scripture, by Gladstone, III. 448.
 Improvement of the Mind, by Mrs Chapone, II. 418.
 In All Shades, by Grant Allen, III. 727.
 INCHEALD, MRS ELIZABETH, II. 584.
 Inconstancy Upraised, by Sir R. Ayton, I. 508.
 Inconstant Mistress, by Sir R. Ayton, I. 508.
 Independent in Politics, by J. R. Lowell, III. 801, 802.
 India, History of, by Mountstuart Elphinstone, III. 366.
 India, China, and Japan, by Bayard Taylor, III. 821.
 Indian Mutiny, by Malleston, III. 632.
 Indian Pilgrim, by Mrs Sherwood, III. 324.
 Indicator, edited by L. Hunt, III. 148, 149.
 Indostan, History of, by Orme, II. 541.
 Inductive Sciences, by Whewell, III. 198.
 Infant Medusa, by T. G. Hake, III. 384.
 Infernal Marriage, by Lord Beaconsfield, III. 436, 439.
 Infidel, by Miss Braddon, III. 690.
 INGE, WILLIAM RALPH, III. 845.
 INGELOW, JEAN, III. 528.
 Ingoldsby Legends, by Barham, III. 166.
 INGRAM, J. K., III. 580.
 Inheritance, by Susan E. Ferrier, III. 300.
 Inisfail, by Aubrey de Vere, III. 581.
 Initials, by the Baroness von Tautphoeus, III. 385.
 Inland Voyage, by R. L. Stevenson, III. 697.
 In Memoriam, by Tennyson, III. 541, 542, 546, 548.
 Inner Temple Masque, by W. Browne, I. 489, 490.
 INNES, COSMO, III. 291.
 INNES, THOMAS, II. 302.
 Innkeeper of Abbeyville, by Fitzhull, II. 783.
 Innocents Abroad, by Mark Twain, III. 826.
 Inquirer, by Godwin, II. 702.
 Inquiry into the Human Mind, by Reid, II. 588.
 Insane Root, by Mrs Campbell Praed, III. 732.
 Insatiate Countess, by Marston, I. 462, 464.
 Insectivorous Plants, by Darwin, III. 417.
 Instauration of the Sciences, by Lord Bacon, I. 380.
 Institutes of Metaphysics, by Ferrier, III. 398.
 Instructions for Forreine Travel, by Howell, I. 573, 577.
 Intellectual Development, by J. B. Crozier, III. 727.
 Intellectual Development of Europe, by J. W. Draper, III. 825.
 Intellectual Powers, by J. Abercromby, III. 242; by Reid, II. 388.
 Intellectual System, by Cudworth, I. 670.
 Interludes, I. 150; Interlude of the Four Elements, I. 102, 152.
 In the Shadows, by David Gray, III. 657.
 Intimations of Immortality, by Wordsworth, III. 13, 16, 25.
 Intuitions of the Mind, by J. McCosh, III. 397.
 Intuitive Theory of Morals, by Miss Cobbe, III. 537.
 Invasion of the Crimea, by Kinglake, III. 421, 422-424.
 In Vinculis, by Wilfrid S. Blunt, III. 691.
 In War Time, by S. W. Mitchell, III. 825.
 Ion, by Sir T. N. Talfourd, III. 272.
 Ionica, by Wm. J. Cory, III. 577.
 IOTA (Mrs Caffyn), III. 851.
- IRELAND, WILLIAM HENRY, II. 711.
 Ireland in Burlesque, A Voyage to, by C. Cotton, I. 775; Legends and Stories of, by Samuel Lover, III. 355; Past and Present, by Croker, III. 170; Sketches in, by Caesar Otway, III. 345; Songs and Ballads of, edited by M. J. Barry, III. 579; Tales of, by Carleton, III. 352; Tour in, by Arthur Young, II. 627; View of, by Spenser, I. 294, 297, 303.
- Irene, by Johnson, II. 457, 458.
 Irish Airman foresees his Death, by W. H. Yeats, III. 709.
 Irish Ballads, edited by D. F. MacCarthy, III. 579, 583.
 Irish Contribution to English Literature, I. 831.
 Irish Emigrant, by Lady Dufferin, III. 385.
 Irish Melodies, by Moore, III. 346.
 Irish Nation, by James Wills, III. 350.
 Irish Peasantry, Stories of the, by Mrs S. C. Hall, III. 280.
 Irish Peasantry, Traits and Stories of the, by W. Carleton, III. 352.
 Irish Poetry, by Stopford Brooke and another, III. 662.
 Irish Rebellion, by W. H. Maxwell, III. 268.
 Irish Songs and Ballads, by A. P. Graves, III. 694.
 IRVING, EDWARD, III. 268.
 IRVING, WASHINGTON, III. 745.
 Isaac Ashford, by G. Crabbe, II. 696.
 Isabella, by Keats, III. 90, 101, 102.
 Isabella, by Southerne, II. 75, 76.
 Ishmael, by Miss Braddon, III. 690.
 Island, by Lord Byron, III. 131.
 Island Nights' Entertainments, by R. L. Stevenson, III. 699.
 Isle of Palms, by John Wilson, III. 246.
 Israel in Egypt, by E. Atherstone, III. 146.
 Israel Potter, by H. Melville, III. 821.
 Israfil, by Poe, III. 785, 787, 788.
 It is Never too Late to Mend, by C. Reade, III. 483.
 Italian, by Mrs Radcliffe, II. 594.
 Italian Influence on English Literature, I. 235.
 Italy, by Berkford, II. 621; by Rogers, II. 723, 724, 726, 727; by Lady Morgan, II. 781; by Hodgkin, III. 661; Remarks on, by Addison, II. 212, 219; Visit to, by Frances Trollope, III. 276.
 Itinerary, by Leland, I. 140.
 Ivanhoe, by Scott, III. 34, 37.
- Jack Brag, by Theodore Hook, III. 164, 165.
 Jack Cade's Rebellion, by R. Fabyan, I. 105.
 Jack Hinton, by Lever, III. 359.
 JACKS, LAWRENCE P., III. 845.
 Jack Sheppard, by Alnsworth, III. 378.
 Jack Wilton, by Nash, I. 330.
 Jacob and Esau (by Hunnis?), I. 155, 156.
 Jacobean Literature, I. 235.
 Jacobean Poets, by Sir Edmund Gosse, III. 696.
 Jacob Faithful, by Marryat, III. 255.
 Jacobite's Journal, ed. by Fielding, II. 341.
 JACOBS JOSEPH, III. 730.
 JACOBS, WILLIAM WYMARK, III. 846.
 JAGO, RICHARD, II. 438.
 Jail Journal, by John Mitchell, III. 582.
 JAMES, GEORGE PAYNE RAINFORD, III. 827.
 JAMES, HENRY, III. 720, 830.
 JAMES, WILLIAM, III. 831.
 JAMES I., I. 505; Court of, by Lucy Aikin, III. 178.
 JAMES I. of Scotland, I. 166, 183.
 James II., History of the Reign of, by Fox, II. 636.
 JAMESON, ANNA, III. 183.
 Jamie Telfer, I. 526.
 Jane Eyre, by C. Brontë, III. 522, 524.
 Jane Shore, by Nicholas Rowe, II. 93, 94.
 Janice Meredith, by P. L. Ford, III. 832.
 Japhet in Search of a Father, by Marryat, III. 255.
 Jar of Honey, by Leigh Hunt, III. 148.
 Jason, by William Morris, III. 665, 667.
 Jeanie Morrison, by Motherwell, III. 309.
 JEANS, SIR JAMES, III. 847.
 JEBB, SIR RICHARD CLAYTONHOUSE, III. 841.
 JEFFERIES, RICHARD, III. 640.
 JEFFERSON, THOMAS, III. 736.
 JEFFREY, FRANCIS, III. 85; Life of, by Henry Cockburn, III. 313.
 Jekyll (Dr) and Mr Hyde, by R. L. Stevenson, III. 698.
 Jenny dang the Weaver, by Sir A. Boswell, II. 830.
 Jenny's Bawbee, by Sir A. Boswell, II. 831.
 JEROME, JEROME KLAFFKA, III. 844.
 JERROLD, DOUGLAS, III. 328.
 JERROLD, WILLIAM HARRIARD, III. 331.
 Jess, by Sir H. Rider Haggard, III. 703.
 JESSOFF, AUGUSTUS, III. 839.
 Jesuits in North America, by Parkman, III. 818.
 Jew of Malta, by Marlowe, I. 349, 361.
 JEWETT, SARAH ORNE, III. 854.

- Jews, History of the, by Milman, III. 209.
 JEWSEBURY, GERALDINE ENDOR, III. 520.
 Joan and Peter, by Wells, III. 713.
 Joan of Arc, by Southey, III. 48, 49, 50;
 by De Quincey, III. 93.
 John Brent, by Theodore Winthrop, III.
 823.
 John Bull, by Arbuthnot, II. 145; by
 Colman, II. 656, 657.
 John Gilpin, by Cowper, II. 605.
 John Halifax, by Mrs Craik, III. 536.
 John Herring, by Baring-Gould, III. 664.
 John Holdsworth, by Clark Russell, III.
 601.
 John Inglesant, by Shorthouse, III. 637.
 John March, Southerner, by G. W. Cable,
 III. 830.
 John Ploughman's Talk, by Spurgeon, III.
 649.
 John Splendid, by Neil Munro, III. 713.
 Johnnie Courteau, by W. H. Drummond,
 III. 727.
 Johnny Gibb of Gushetneuk, III. 839.
 JOHNSON, DR SAMUEL, II. 8, 457; Life
of, by Boswell, II. 469, 470-473.
 JOHNSON, E. PAULINE, III. 726, 851.
 JOHNSON, LIONEL, III. 846.
 JOHNSON, SAMUEL (Whig), II. 99.
 JOHNSON, ARTHUR, I. 519.
 JOHNSON, MARY, III. 834.
 JOHNSON, SIR HARRY HAMILTON, III. 844.
 JOHNSTONE, CHARLES, II. 410.
 JOHNSTONE, CHRISTIAN ISABEL, II. 772.
 Jolly Beggars, by Burns, II. 825.
 Jonathan to John, by J. R. Lowell, III.
 803.
 Jonathan Wild, by Fielding, II. 341, 344.
 JONES, EBENEZER, III. 506.
 JONES, ERNEST, III. 505.
 JONES, HENRY ARTHUR, III. 695.
 JONES, SIR WILLIAM, II. 615.
 JONSON, BEN, I. 401.
 Jorrock's Jaunts, by Surtees, III. 414.
 JORTIN, JOHN, II. 301.
 Joseph and his Brethren, by C. J. Wells,
 III. 657.
 Joseph Andrews, by Fielding, II. 340, 342-344.
 Joseph Vance, by Wm. de Morgan, III. 709.
 Joshua Davidson, by Mrs Lynn Linton, III.
 536.
 Journalism, II. 2, 15.
 Journey to France, by J. Corbet, I. 456; to the Hebrides, by Boswell, II. 467; to the Western Isles, by Johnson, II. 459, 463.
 JOWETT, BENJAMIN, III. 494.
 JOYCE, JAMES, III. 720, 848.
 JUDD, SYLVESTER, III. 773.
 Jude the Obscure, by T. Hardy, III. 679.
 Judgment of the Flood, by Heraud, III. 298.
 Judith, in Beowulf MS., I. 11, 12.
 Julia de Roubigné, by Mackenzie, II. 536.
 Julian, by Miss Mitford, III. 176.
 Julian, Count, by Landor, III. 141.
 Julian and Maddalo, by Shelley, III. 109.
 Julian the Apostate, by Johnson, II. 99.
 Julia's Letter, by Lord Byron, III. 133.
 Julius Cæsar, by Shakespeare, I. 368.
 June Bracken and Heather, by Tennyson,
 III. 543, 547.
 Jungle Books, by Rudyard Kipling, III.
 708.
 Junian MS., I. 10.
 JUNIUS, II. 517.
 Jürgen, by J. B. Cabell, III. 836.
 Justice, by J. Galsworthy, III. 712.
 Justice and Expediency, by Whittier, III.
 774.
 Justin Martyr, by Trench, III. 303.
 Just So Stories, by Rudyard Kipling, III.
 708.
K
 KAMES, LORD, II. 388.
 Kant, by Edward Caird, III. 625; by Mahaffy, III. 689; Text-book to, by
 J. H. Stirling, III. 661.
 Karshish, by Browning, III. 563.
 Kate Coventry, by G. J. Whyte-Melville,
 III. 585.
 Kate Kearney, by Lady Morgan, II. 781.
 Katerfelto, by Whyte-Melville, III. 585.
 Kathrina, by J. G. Holland, III. 778.
 KAVANAGH, JULIA, III. 850.
 KAYE, SIR JOHN WILLIAM, III. 482.
 KEATS, JOHN, III. 99; Life and Remains of, by Lord Houghton, III. 383; Life
and Letters, by Sir Sidney Colvin, III.
 693.
 KEBLE, JOHN, III. 215.
 KEIGHTLEY, THOMAS, III. 259.
 KEITH, ROBERT, II. 305.
 KELLY, HUGH, II. 571.
 KELVIN, LORD, III. 839.
 KEN, THOMAS, II. 45.
 KENDALL, HENRY CLARENCE, III. 729, 731.
 Kenilworth, by Scott, III. 34.
 KENNEDY, JOHN PENDELTON, III. 853.
 KENNEDY, MARGARET, III. 852.
 KENNEDY, QUINTIN, I. 230.
 KENNEDY, WALTER, I. 200.
 Kentons, by W. D. Howells, III. 829.
 Kentucky Cardinal, by J. L. Allen, III. 831.
 KERN, WILLIAM PATON, III. 843.
 KERTSMAN, by J. A. Grant, III. 610.
 KIDD, BENJAMIN, III. 844.
 Kidnapped, by R. L. Stevenson, III. 699, 701.
 Kildrostan, by Walter C. Smith, III. 607.
 Killarney, Legend of, by Bayly, III. 241.
 KILLIGREW, SIR WILLIAM, I. 634.
 KILLIGREW, THOMAS, I. 634.
 Killing no Murder, by Saxby, I. 622.
 Kilmenny, by Hogg, III. 293, 294.
 Kim, by Rudyard Kipling, III. 708.
 KINCAID, SIR JOHN, III. 223.
 KING, HENRY, I. 568.
 KING, WILLIAM, II. 197.
 King Alisaunder, I. 51.
 King Arthur, by Lord Lytton, III. 333;
 by Sir R. Blackmore, II. 107.
 King Erik, by Sir Edmund Gosse, III. 696.
 King Horn, I. 43, 45.
 King John, by Shakespeare, I. 361.
 King Lear, by Shakespeare, I. 371.
 King Lear's Wife, by Gordon Bottomley,
 III. 714.
 King Solomon's Mines, by Sir Rider Haggard, III. 703.
 King's Own, by F. Martiat, III. 255, 258.
 King's Tragedy, by Rossetti, III. 643.
 Kingis Quair, by James I., I. 166, 183.
 KINGLAKE, ALEXANDER WILLIAM, III. 421.
 KINGSFORD, WILLIAM, III. 727.
 KINGSLEY, CHARLES, III. 513.
 KINGSLEY, GEORGE HENRY, III. 517.
 KINGSLEY, HENRY, III. 517, 729.
 KINGSLEY, MARY HENRIETTA, III. 517.
 KINGSTON, W. H. G., III. 482.
 Kinmont Willie, I. 539.
 KIPLING, RUDYARD, III. 708, 721.
 Kippis, by H. G. Wells, III. 712.
 Kirby, WILLIAM, III. 726, 839.
 Kitten, by Joanna Baillie, II. 730.
 KITTO, JOHN, III. 873.
 Kitty of Coleraine, by E. Lysaght, II. 759.
 KLEIN, CHARLES, III. 855.
 KNIGHT, CHARLES, III. 296; his Cyclopædia, Magazine, III. 266.
 KNIGHT, HENRY GALLY, II. 782.
 KNIGHT, RICHARD PAYNE, II. 678.
 Knight of the Burning Pestle, by Beaumont and Fletcher, I. 471.
 Knight of the Kirk, by W. Weston, II. 316.
 KNOLLES, RICHARD, I. 272.
 KNOWLES, HERBERT, II. 787.
 KNOWLES, JAMES SHERRIDAN, III. 225.
 KNOX, JOHN, I. 166, 218; Life of, by
 M'Crie, II. 763; by Hume Brown, III.
 716.
 KNOX, VICESIMUS, II. 715.
 KNOX, WILLIAM, II. 782.
 Koran, trans. by George Sale, II. 388.
 Krutznher, by Harriet Lee, II. 653.
 Kuzzilbash, by J. B. Fraser, II. 787.
 KYD, THOMAS, I. 240, 241, 319.
 Kynd Kytok, by Dunbar, I. 197.
L
 La Belle Dame sans Merci, by Keats, III.
 99, 101, 105.
 Lachrymæ Musarum, by Sir W. Watson,
 III. 706.
 Lack of Gold, by Adam Austin, II. 810.
 Lacon, by C. C. Colton, III. 172.
 Lady Audley's Secret, by Miss Braddon,
 III. 690.
 Lady-Errant, by Cartwright, I. 635.
 Lady of Last Century, by Doran, III. 331.
 Lady of Lyons, by Lord Lytton, III. 333.
 Lady of Pleasure, by Shirley, I. 484, 485.
 Lady of the Lake, by Scott, III. 37.
 Lady or the Tiger, by Stockton, III. 824.
 Lady Windermere's Fan, by Oscar Wilde,
 III. 707.
 LAIDLAW, WILLIAM, III. 307.
 LAING, DAVID, III. 291.
 LAING, MALCOLM, II. 637.
 Laird o' Cockpen, by Lady Nairne, II. 828.
 Lake Lyrics, by W. W. Campbell, III. 728.
 Lake Regions, by Sir R. F. Burton, III. 610.
 Lalla Rookh, by Moore, III. 347, 349.
 L'Allegro, by Milton, I. 687, 695.
 LAMB, CHARLES, III. 72; Memoir of, by
 Talkour, III. 272.
 LAMB, LADY CAROLINE, II. 780.
 Lame Lover, by Foote, II. 432-434.
 Lament for the Makaris, by Dunbar, I. 190.
 Lament for Thomas Davis, by Sir S. Ferguson, III. 363.
 Lament of the Irish Emigrant, by the Countess of Dufferin, III. 385.
 Lamia, by Keats, III. 99, 101.
 Lamplighter, by Miss Cummins, III. 827.
 LAMPMAN, ARCHIBALD, III. 728.
 Lamp of our Feet, by Bernard Barton, III.
 231.
 LAMPSON. See LOCKER-LAMPSON, III. 600.
 Lancashire Witches, by Shadwell, II. 63.
 Land and Water, ed. by Buckland, III. 590.
 Land Monopoly, by E. Jones, III. 506.
 Land Nationalisation, by A. R. Wallace,
 III. 614.
 Land of the Saracens, by Bayard Taylor,
 III. 821.
 Land o' the Leal, by Lady Nairne, II. 828.
 Land Sharks, by W. N. Glascock, III. 259.
 LANDON, LETITIA ELIZABETH, III. 181.
 LANDOR, WALTER SAVAGE, III. 141.
 Landor's Cottage, by Poe, III. 787.
 LANE, EDWARD WILLIAM, III. 327.
 LANG, ANDREW, III. 692.
 LANGHORNE, DR JOHN, II. 521.
 LANGLAND, WILLIAM, I. 55.
 LANIER, SIDNEY, III. 828.
 LANSDOWNE, LORD, II. 244.
 Lardicæan, by Thomas Hardy, III. 679.
 LARCOM, LUCY, III. 853.
 LARDNER, DIONYSIUS, III. 266; his Cyclopædia, III. 266.
 LARDNER, NATHANIEL, II. 247.
 Lars, by Bayard Taylor, III. 822.
 La Saisiaz, by Browning, III. 556, 559, 566.
 La Salle and the Great West, by Parkman,
 III. 818.
 Last Ballad, by J. Davidson, III. 706.
 Last Buccaneer, by Kingsley, III. 514, 516.
 Last Chronicle of Barset, by Trollope, III.
 487.
 Last Conquest of Ireland, by J. Mitchel,
 III. 583.
 Last Days of Herculaneum, by Edwin
 Atherstone, III. 146.
 Last Days of Pompeii, by Lord Lytton, III.
 332, 334.
 Last Entry, by Clark Russell, III. 691.
 Last Leaf, by Holmes, III. 790, 791, 792, 794.
 Last Man, by Campbell, II. 766, 770.
 Last of the Barons, by Lytton, III. 332.
 Last of the Mohicans, by Cooper, III. 750.
 Last Rose of Summer, by Moore, III. 349.
 Last Testimony, by Naylor, I. 624.
 LATIMER, HUGH, I. 136.
 Latin Christianity, by Milman, III. 209, 210.
 Latin Poetry, Sacred, by Trench, III. 393.
 Latin Writers before Ælfred, I. 16; after,
 I. 33.
 Letter-Day Pamphlets, by Carlyle, III.
 404, 405, 409.
 LAUDER, SIR THOMAS DICK, III. 305.
 LAUDER, WILLIAM, I. 710.
 LAUGHTON, SIR JOHN KNOX, III. 840.
 LAURENCE, DR FRENCH, II. 670.
 Laurence Bloomfield, by W. Allingham, III.
 605.
 LAURIE, SIMON SOMERVILLE, III. 853.
 Lavengro, by Borrow, III. 430, 432, 434.
 LAW, WILLIAM, II. 247.
 Law-Breaker, by James Hinton, III. 613.
 LAWLESS, HON. EMILY, III. 850.
 LAWRENCE, DAVID HERBERT, III. 715, 720,
 721.
 LAWRENCE, GEORGE ALFRED, III. 624.
 LAWRENCE, THOMAS EDWARD, III. 716.
 Lawrie Todd, by John Galt, III. 297, 298, 725.
 LAWSON, HENRY, III. 729, 732.
 LAVANON, I. 3, 35.
 LAVARD, SIR AUSTEN HENRY, III. 497.
 Lay of the Last Minstrel, by Scott, III. 31,
 34, 35.
 Lays from Strathearn, by Lady Nairne, II.
 827.
 Lays of Ancient Rome, by Macaulay, III.
 367, 369.
 Lays of my Home, by Whittier, III. 775.
 Lays of the Scottish Cavaliers, by W. E.
 Aytoun, III. 475, 476.
 Lays of the Western Gael, by Sir S. Fer-
 guson, III. 362.
 LAZARUS, EMMA, III. 854.
 Lazarus, York's play of, I. 110.
 LEA, HENRY CHARLES, III. 853.
 LEACOCK, STEPHEN, III. 726, 728.
 Leaders in the Northern Church, by Bishop
 Lightfoot, III. 625.
 Leaders of Public Opinion in Ireland, by Lecky, III. 682.

- Lead, kindly Light, by Newman, III. 337.
 LEAF, WALTER, III. 843.
 LEAR, EDWARD, III. 657.
 LEAR, King, by Shakespeare, I. 371.
 Learning, Ancient and Modern, by Sir W. Temple, I. 754.
 LEATHES, STANLEY, III. 840.
 LEAVES from Australian Forests, by H. C. Kendall, III. 731.
 LEAVES of GRASS, by Whitman, III. 806, 808.
 LECKY, W. E. H., III. 682.
 LEE, NATHANIEL, II. 87.
 LEE, SIR STEVEN, III. 707.
 LEE, SOPHIA and HARRIET, II. 653.
 LEE, VERNON (Violet Page), III. 851.
 LE FANU, JOSEPH SHERIDAN, III. 365.
 Legal and Political Sketches, by Sheil, III. 351.
 Legal Antiquities, by Cosmo Innes, III. 291.
 LE GALLIENNE, RICHARD, III. 846.
 Legal Lyrics, by Outram, III. 414.
 Legend of Good Women, by Chaucer, I. 63, 70.
 Legends and Stories of Ireland, by Samuel Lover, III. 355.
 Legends of the Saints, attributed to Barbour, I. 180; of the Saxon Saints, and of St Patrick, by A. de Vere, III. 581.
 Legislative Reviews, by J. Howe, III. 726.
 LEHMANN, ROSAMOND, III. 852.
 LEHMANN, RUDOLPH CHAMBERS, III. 844.
 LEIGHTON, ARCHBISHOP, I. 822.
 Leith Races, by Ferguson, II. 806, 808.
 LELAND, CHARLES GODFREY, III. 784.
 LELAND, JOHN, I. 139, 270.
 LEMON, MARK, III. 399.
 LENNOX, CHARLOTTE, II. 417.
 Leo X., by Roscoe, II. 639.
 Leonard Lindsay, by A. B. Reach, III. 505.
 Leonidas, by Richard Glover, II. 351, 352.
 LEPROTON, Mrs R. E., III. 726.
 Lesbia, by Campion, I. 401.
 LESLIE, CHARLES, II. 209.
 LESLIE, JOHN, I. 226.
 L'ESTRANGE, SIR ROGER, I. 741.
 Letters, by Pope, II. 191-195; from Italy, by Addison, II. 212, 216; from the Mountains, by Mrs Grant, II. 596; from the Cape, and from Egypt, by Lady Duff Gordon, III. 373, 733; from the Baltic, by Lady Eastlake, III. 387.
 Letters of Horace Walpole, II. 411-414.
 Letters on Literature, by A. Lang, III. 692.
 Letters to Dead Authors, by A. Lang, III. 692.
 Leven Water, Ode to, by Smollett, II. 444.
 LEVER, CHARLES JAMES, III. 359.
 Leviathan, by Hobbes, I. 554, 555, 556, 558.
 LEVY, AMY, III. 851.
 LEWES, GEORGE HENRY, III. 405.
 Lewesdon Hill, by William Crowe, II. 616.
 LEWIS, ALFRED HENRY, III. 855.
 LEWIS, CECIL DAY, III. 724, 849.
 LEWIS, DAVID, II. 420.
 LEWIS, MATTHEW GREGORY, II. 748.
 LEWIS, SIR GEORGE CORNEWALL, III. 206.
 LEWIS, SINCLAIR, III. 836.
 LEYDEN, JOHN, II. 690.
 Liberal Education, by Huxley, III. 618.
 Liberator, edited by W. Lloyd Garrison, III. 811.
 Liberty, by J. S. Mill, III. 443.
 Liberty, Ode to, by Shelley, III. 110.
 Liberty and Necessity, by Hobbes, I. 544, 558.
 Liberty of Prophecy, by Jeremy Taylor, I. 604.
 Library, by Andrew Lang, III. 692.
 Library, by George Crabbe, II. 694.
 Library of American Literature, III. 824.
 Library of English Literature, by H. Morley, III. 633.
 LIDDON, HENRY PARRY, III. 625.
 Lie, by Sir Walter Raleigh, I. 308.
 Lie, by Mrs Barbauld, II. 582; in London, by Pierce Egan, III. 264; in the Sick-room, by Harriet Martineau, III. 388; in Nature, by James Hinton, III. 613; Use of, by Lord Avesbury, III. 664.
 Life and Death of Mr Badman, by Bunyan, I. 729.
 Life Drama, by Alexander Smith, III. 604.
 Life of Reason, by G. Santayana, III. 835.
 Lifted Veil, by George Eliot, III. 531.
 Ligeia, by Poe, III. 786, 787.
 Light of Asia, by Sir E. Arnold, III. 663; of Nature, by A. Tucker, II. 338; of other Days, by Moore, III. 348; of the Harem, by Moore, III. 349, 350; of the World, by Sir E. Arnold, III. 663.
 Light that Failed, by R. Kipling, III. 708.
 LIGHTFOOT, JOSEPH BARBER, III. 625.
 Lights and Shadows of Irish Life, by Mrs S. C. Hall, III. 289; of Scottish Life, by John Wilson, III. 246.
 Lilies of the Vale, by G. Darley, III. 235.
 Lillibulero, by Thomas Wharton, II. 98.
 LILLO, GEORGE, II. 276.
 LILLY, WILLIAM, I. 120.
 LILLY, WILLIAM SAMUEL, III. 841.
 Lilly Dawson, by Catherine Crowe, III. 280.
 Lily Nell, by David Wingate, III. 608.
 Limits of Religious Thought, by Mansel, III. 497.
 LINACRE, THOMAS, I. 120.
 LINCHE, RICHARD, I. 278.
 LINCOLN, ABRAHAM, III. 784; Emerson on, III. 762; Death of, by Whitman, III. 810.
 LINDSAY, ROBERT, I. 225.
 LINDSAY. See LINDSAY, LYNDISAY.
 LINDSAY, LADY ANNE. See BARNARD.
 LINDSAY, VACHEL, III. 856.
 Lines written among the Euganean Hills, by Shelley, III. 109.
 LINGARD, DR JOHN, II. 647.
 LINKLATER, ERIC, III. 849.
 LINTON, ELIZA LYNN, III. 536.
 LINTON, WILLIAM JAMES, III. 536.
 Linton, by Geddes, II. 799.
 Lion's Cub, by R. H. Stoddard, III. 824.
 LISTER, THOMAS HENRY, III. 158.
 Litania to the Holy Spirit, by Herrick, I. 565.
 Literary Criticism, Early, I. 266.
 Literature, Curiosities of, by Isaac D'Israeli, II. 715.
 Literature, Studies in, by Morley, III. 686.
 Literature and Dogma, by M. Arnold, III. 595.
 Literature of Europe, by Henry Hallam, III. 193, 195.
 LITHGOW, WILLIAM, I. 517.
 LITTLE, THOMAS (Thomas Moore), III. 345.
 Little Black Rose, by A. de Vere, III. 582.
 Little Henry and his Bearer, by Mrs Sherwood, III. 324.
 Little Lord Fauntleroy, by Mrs Burnett, III. 833.
 Little Mary, by Sir J. M. Barrie, III. 705.
 Little Masters, by W. Bell Scott, III. 490.
 Little Minister, by Sir J. M. Barrie, III. 705.
 Little White Bird, by Barrie, III. 705.
 Little Woodman, by Mrs Sherwood, III. 324.
 Lives of the Engineers, by Samuel Smiles, III. 475.
 Lives of the Poets, by Johnson, II. 460.
 LIVINGSTONE, DAVID, III. 480.
 Livy, trans. by Philemon Holland, I. 260.
 LLOYD, ROBERT, II. 612.
 LLOYD GEORGE, DAVID, III. 845.
 LLYWARCH HEN, I. 3.
 Lochiel's Warning, by Campbell, II. 766.
 Lochleven, by Michael Bruce, II. 528.
 LOCKE (LOK), HENRY, I. 278.
 LOCKE, JOHN, II. 17.
 LOCKE, WILLIAM J., III. 846.
 LOCKER-LAMPSON, FREDERICK, III. 600.
 LOCKHART, JOHN GIBSON, III. 259; Life of, by Andrew Lang, III. 692.
 Locksley Hall, by Tennyson, III. 541.
 LOCKYER, SIR NORMAN, III. 840.
 LODGE, HENRY CABOT, III. 854.
 LODGE, SIR OLIVER JOSEPH, III. 843.
 LODGE, SIR RICHARD, III. 843.
 LODGE, THOMAS, I. 316.
 Lodging for Single Gentlemen, by Colman, II. 660.
 LOFFT, CAPELL, II. 689.
 LOGAN, JOHN, II. 529.
 LOGAN, SIR WILLIAM, III. 726.
 Logan Braes, by John Mayne, II. 811.
 Logbook, by Buckland, III. 590.
 Logic, by J. S. Mill, III. 443, 444; by Alexander Bain, III. 497.
 Logie o' Buchan, by G. Halket, II. 810.
 LOK, HENRY, I. 278.
 Lombard Street, by W. Bagehot, III. 630.
 LONDON, JACK, III. 835.
 London, by Glover, II. 351; by Johnson, II. 457, 458; Survey of, by John Stowe, I. 257; in the Eighteenth Century, by Sir W. Besant, III. 651.
 London Gazetteer, II. 230.
 London Lyckpenny, by John Lydgate, I. 79.
 London Lyrics, by Locker-Lampson, III. 600.
 London Poems, by R. Buchanan, III. 655.
 London Rhymes, by Locker-Lampson, III. 600.
 London Voluntarys, by Henley, III. 78, 695.
 LONG, GEORGE, III. 839.
 Long-ago, by Lord Houghton, III. 384.
 Long Ago, by Michael Field, III. 704.
 LONGFELLOW, HENRY WADSWORTH, III. 768.
 Looking Backward, by E. Bellamy, II. 831.
 Lord Gregory, by John Wolcot, II. 663, 666.
 Lord Harry has written a Novel, by T. H. Bayly, III. 241.
 Lord of the Isles, by Scott, III. 31.
 Lord Ormont and his Aminta, by Meredith, III. 658.
 Lord Ullin's Daughter, by Campbell, II. 766.
 Lord Wickenham, by J. O. Hobbes, III. 830.
 Lorenzo de' Medici, by Roscoe, II. 369.
 Lorna Doone, by R. D. Blackmore, III. 622.
 Loss and Gain, by J. H. Newman, III. 337.
 Lost and Won, by Georgina Marion Craik, III. 291.
 Lost Chord, by Miss Procter, III. 528.
 Lost Leader, by Browning, III. 562.
 Lost Leaders, by Andrew Lang, III. 692.
 Lost Sir Massingberd, by J. Payn, III. 634.
 Lost Tales of Miletus, by Lytton, III. 333.
 Lot of Thousands, by Mrs Hunter, II. 599.
 Lothair, by Lord Beaconsfield, III. 438.
 Lotos-eaters, by Tennyson, III. 541, 545.
 Lounger, II. 536, 539.
 LOUNSBURY, THOMAS R., III. 854.
 LOUSIAD, by John Wolcot, II. 662.
 Love Affairs of a Bibliomaniac, by Eugene Field, III. 831.
 Love à-la-Mode, by Macklin, II. 274.
 Love for Love, by Congreve, II. 82, 86.
 Love in a Village, by Bickerstaffe, III. 400.
 Love in the Valley, by G. Meredith, III. 658.
 Love is Enough, by William Morris, III. 665.
 Love of Fame, by E. Young, II. 260, 263.
 Love Sonnets of Proteus, by Wilfrid S. Blood, III. 691.
 LOVELACE, RICHARD, I. 637.
 LOVER, SAMUEL, III. 355.
 Lovers, and a Reflection, by C. S. Calverley, III. 639.
 Lover's Journey, by George Crabbe, II. 698.
 Lover's Melancholy, by John Ford, I. 481, 483; Answer to the, by Strode, I. 570.
 Lover's Tale, by Tennyson, III. 540.
 Love's Dominion, by R. Flecknoe, I. 784.
 Love's Labour's Lost, by Shakespeare, I. 357, 358.
 Love's Meinie, by John Ruskin, III. 571.
 Loves of the Angels, by Moore, III. 347; of the Plants, by Darwin, II. 572, 573, 575; of the Poets, by Anna Jameson, III. 183, 184; of the Triangles, by Canning, II. 673, 674, and by Hookham Frere, II. 676.
 LOWE, JOHN, II. 803.
 LOWELL, AMY, III. 855.
 LOWELL, JAMES RUSSELL, III. 799.
 LOWES, JOHN LIVINGSTON, III. 855.
 LOUTH, ROBERT, II. 389.
 Low Tide on Grand Pré, by W. B. Carman, III. 728.
 Loyalties, by J. Galsworthy, III. 712.
 LURBOCK, SIR JOHN (Lord Avesbury), III. 663.
 Lucan's Pharsalia, trans. by T. May, I. 582; by Rowe, II. 93, 95.
 LUCAS, EDWARD VERRALL, III. 847.
 Lucasta, by Richard Lovelace, I. 637, 638.
 Lucian's Dialogues, trans. by Mayne, I. 633.
 Lucile, by the Earl of Lytton, III. 638.
 Luck of Roaring Camp, by Bret Harte, III. 827.
 Lucrece, by Shakespeare, I. 361, 363.
 Lueubrations of Bickerstaff, by Steele, II. 230.
 Lucy's Fittin', by William Laidlaw, III. 307.
 Lusad, trans. by Mickle, II. 522, 524; by Sir R. Burton, III. 610.
 Lusty Juvenus, Moral Interlude, I. 151.
 LUTTRELL, HENRY, II. 755.
 LYALL, EDNA, III. 851.
 LYALL, SIR ALFRED COMYN, III. 681.
 Lycidas, by Milton, I. 687, 688, 698.
 LYDGATE, JOHN, I. 79.
 LYLELL, SIR CHARLES, III. 317.
 Lying Valet, by David Garrick, II. 432.
 LYLBY, JOHN, I. 238, 240, 274, 313.
 LYNCH (LINCHE), RICHARD, I. 278.
 LYNDISAY, SIR DAVID, I. 166, 204.
 Lysa Apostolica, by J. H. Newman, III. 337.
 Lyrical Ballads, by Wordsworth and Coleridge, III. 13, 17, 19, 58.
 Lyrical Poetry, Influence of Music on, I. 273.
 Lyrical Poetry, Beginning of, I. 41.
 Lyrics of Earth, by A. Lampman, III. 728.
 LYSAGHT, EDWARD, II. 759.
 LYTTE, HENRY FRANCIS, III. 271.

- LYTTELTON, GEORGE, LORD, II. 348.
Lytelton Fabrication, by W. Combe, II. 461.
- LYTTON, EARL OF, III. 638.
- LYTTON, LORD, III. 332.
- M
- Mabonocion, trans. by Lady Charlotte Guest, III. 387.
- MACAULAY, CATHERINE, II. 419.
- MACAULAY, ROSE, III. 852.
- MACAULAY, THOMAS BABINGTON, III. 367;
Life and Letters of, by Sir G. O. Trevelyan, III. 687.
- Macbeth, by Shakespeare, I. 357, 370, 458, 461.
- MACCARTHY, DENIS FLORENCE, III. 583.
- M'CARTHY, JUSTIN, III. 660.
- M'CARTHY, JUSTIN HUNTLY, III. 660, 845.
- M'COSE, JAMES, III. 397.
- M'CRAE, JOHN, III. 726.
- M'CRIE, DR THOMAS, II. 763.
- MACDIARMID, HUGR (Christopher M. Grievet), III. 849.
- MACDONALD, GEORGE, III. 606.
- MACFIE, RONALD CAMPBELL, III. 847.
- MacFlecknoe, by Dryden, I. 793, 799.
- M'GER, THOMAS D'ARCY, III. 726.
- MACKAIL, JOHN W., III. 844.
- MACKAY, CHARLES, III. 481.
- MACKAY, JESSIE, III. 729.
- MACKAY, PERCY, III. 855.
- MACKAYE, STEELE, III. 855.
- M'KENNA, STEPHEN, III. 848.
- MACKENZIE, COMPTON, III. 848.
- MACKENZIE, HENRY, II. 536.
- MACKENZIE, SIR GEORGE, I. 829.
- Mackey End, by Lamb, III. 77.
- MACKINTOSH, ELIZABETH ('Gordon Daviot'), III. 852.
- MACKINTOSH, SIR JAMES, II. 641.
- MACKLIN, CHARLES, II. 274.
- M'ACLILAN, ALEXANDER, III. 726.
- MACLAREN, IAN (John Watson), III. 842.
- M'LENNAN, JOHN FERGUSON, III. 613.
- M'LENNAN, MURDOCH, II. 816.
- MACLEOD, FIONA (Wm. Sharp), III. 705.
- MACLEOD, NORMAN, III. 396.
- Maclood of Dare, by W. Black, III. 691.
- MACNEILL, HECTOR, II. 802.
- MACPHERSON, JAMES, II. 509.
- M'Pherson's Farewell, by Burns, II. 824.
- Mad Dog, Elegg on a, by Goldsmith, II. 486.
- Madeline in her Chamber, by Keats, III. 104.
- MADISON, JAMES, III. 736.
- Madoc, by Southey, III. 48, 49.
- Madonna, Legends of the, by Anna Jameson, III. 183, 184.
- Madad's Grave, by Gosse, III. 696.
- Mæviid, by William Gifford, II. 668.
- Magazines, beginnings of Monthly, II. 12.
- Magdalen Hepturn, by Mrs Oliphant, III. 538.
- Magic and Religion, by A. Lang, III. 692.
- MAGNIN, WILLIAM, III. 260.
- Magnalia Christi, by Cotton Mather, III. 734, 736, 737, 738.
- Magnificence, by John Skelton, I. 152.
- Magnificent Ambersons, by Booth Tarkington, III. 835.
- MAHAFY, SIR JOHN PENTLAND, III. 687.
- MAHAN, ALFRED TRAYNER, III. 827.
- MAHONY, FRANCIS SYLVESTER (Father Prout), III. 262.
- Maid Marian, by T. L. Peacock, III. 150, 152.
- Maid of Honour, by Massinger, I. 464, 465.
- Maid of Sker, by R. D. Blackmore, III. 622.
- Maid of the Mill, by Bickerstaffe, II. 400.
- Maid's Tragedy, by Beaumont and Fletcher, I. 470, 473.
- Main Street, by Sinclair Lewis, III. 836.
- MAINE, SIR HENRY J. S., III. 567.
- Maine Woods, by H. D. Thoreau, III. 796.
- MATLAND, FREDERIC WILLIAM, III. 842.
- MATLAND, SIR RICHARD, I. 231.
- Maitland of Lethington, by Sir J. Skelton, III. 635.
- MAJOR, JOHN, I. 212.
- Malay Archipelago, by A. R. Wallace, III. 614.
- MALCOLM, SIR JOHN, II. 741.
- Malcolm, by George Macdonald, III. 606.
- Maldon, Battle of, I. 23, 24.
- Male Reule, by Hoccleve, I. 78.
- MALLET, LUCAS (Mrs Harrison), III. 704.
- MALLESON, GEORGE BRUCE, III. 839.
- MALLETT, DAVID, II. 328.
- MALLOCK, WILLIAM HUBRELL, III. 703.
- MALONE, EDMOND, II. 629.
- MALORY, SIR THOMAS, I. 92.
- MALTHUS, THOMAS ROBERT, II. 707.
- Mamilla, by Greene, I. 239, 324.
- Man, Antiquity of, by Sir Charles Lyell, III. 317.
- Man, History of, by Giffillan, III. 480.
- Man, Observations on, by Hartley, II. 338.
- Man and his Dwelling-Place, by J. Hinton, III. 613.
- Man and Superman, by G. B. Shaw, III. 709.
- Man for Galway, by C. J. Lever, III. 360.
- Man from Glengarry, by Ralph Connor, III. 728.
- Man made of Money, by Douglas Jerrold, III. 329, 331.
- Man of Feeling, by Henry Mackenzie, II. 536, 537.
- Man of Mode, by Sir G. Etherege, II. 62.
- Man of Property, by Galsworthy, III. 712.
- Man of Taste, by J. Bramston, II. 209, 210.
- Man of the World, by Mackenzie, II. 536, 537-539; by Macklin, II. 274.
- Man of Woe, by Sir Edward Dyer, I. 275.
- Man versus the State, by Spencer, III. 588.
- Man's Destiny, by John Fiske, III. 828.
- Man's Place in Nature, by Huxley, III. 619.
- MANDEVILLE, BERNARD DE, II. 200.
- MANDEVILLE, SIR JOHN, I. 82.
- Manfred, by Lord Byron, III. 126, 132, 133.
- MANGAN, JAMES CLARENCE, III. 358.
- MANING, FREDERICK E., III. 730.
- Mankind, History of, by Tylor, III. 663.
- MANLEY, MARY DE LA RIVIERE, II. 96.
- Manners and Customs of the Ancient Egyptians, by Sir J. G. Wilkinson, III. 321.
- Manners and Customs of the Modern Egyptians, by E. W. Lane, III. 327.
- Manners and Principles of the Times, by John Brown, II. 391.
- MANNYNG, ROBERT, I. 34, 41, 43.
- MANSER, HENRY LONGUEVILLE, III. 497.
- MANSFIELD, KATHERINE, III. 721, 730, 852.
- Mansfield Park, by Jane Austen, II. 774.
- Mansie Wauch, by David Macbeth Moir, III. 311.
- Manxman, by Sir Hall Caine, III. 843.
- Many Memories of Many People, III. 343.
- MAP, WALTER, I. 34, 37.
- Marble Faun, by Hawthorne, III. 781.
- Marcella, by Mrs Humphry Ward, III. 704.
- March to Kinsale, by A. de Vere, III. 581.
- MARK, W. DE LA, III. 714.
- Margaret, by Sylvester Judd, III. 773.
- Margaret, Elegy on Princess, I. 208.
- Margaret Lyndsay, by John Wilson, III. 246.
- Margaret Ogilvy, by Sir J. M. Barrie, III. 705.
- Marian, by Mrs S. C. Hall, III. 280.
- Marino Faliero, by Swinburne, III. 674.
- Marius the Epicurean, by W. H. Pater, III. 607, 608.
- Marjorie Fleming, by Dr J. Brown, III. 451.
- Market Harborough, by Whyte-Melville, III. 585.
- MARKHAM, GERVAISE, I. 398.
- Mark Rutherford, by W. H. White, III. 687.
- Marlborough (Duke of), Memoirs of, by William Coxe, II. 630; book on, by Saintsbury, III. 693; by Winston Churchill, III. 714.
- MARLOWE, CHRISTOPHER, I. 240, 241, 346.
- MARMION, SHACKERLEY, I. 633.
- Marmion, by Scott, III. 31, 34, 36, 39.
- Maroon, by T. Mayne Reid, III. 506.
- MARPRELATE, MARTIN, I. 332.
- Marriage, by S. E. Ferrier, III. 300, 301; by H. G. Wells, III. 713.
- Marriage à la Mode, by Dryden, I. 706.
- MARRIOTT, CHARLES, III. 847.
- MARRYAT, FREDERICK, III. 255.
- MARSDEN, by Harold Frederic, III. 832.
- MARSH, HERBERT, II. 646.
- MARSHALL, ROBERT, III. 845.
- MARSH-CALDWELL, ANNE, III. 187.
- Marshes of Glyn, by S. Lanier, III. 825.
- MARSTON, JOHN, I. 462.
- MARSTON, JOHN WESTLAND, III. 567.
- MARSTON, PHILIP BOURKE, III. 567.
- Martial Achievements of the Scots Nation, by Abercromby, II. 301.
- MARTIN, MARTIN, II. 303.
- MARTIN, SIR THEODORE, III. 478.
- MARTIN, VIOLET, III. 851.
- Martin Chuzzlewit, by Dickens, III. 465, 467, 469, 470.
- Martin Faber, by W. G. Simms, III. 742.
- Martin Rattler, by R. M. Ballantyne, III. 624.
- Martin Toutrood, by J. J. Morier, II. 784.
- MARTINEAU, HARRIET, III. 388; <sup>4</sup> Autobiography of, 389.
- MARTINEAU, JAMES, III. 391.
- Martins of Cro' Martin, by Lever, III. 359.
- Martinus Scriberius, II. 145, 195.
- Martyrdom of Madeline, by Buchanan, III. 656.
- Martyrs of Science, by Sir D. Brewster, III. 242.
- MARVELL, IK (D. G. MITCHELL), III. 821.
- MARVELL, ANDREW, I. 711.
- Mary Barton, by Mrs Gaskell, III. 627. <sup>4</sup>
- Mary Hamilton, I. 540.
- Mary in Heaven, by Burns, II. 815.
- Mary Jane, by G. R. Sims, III. 695.
- Mary Madgalene (St), by Crashaw, I. 678.
- Mary Morison, by Burns, II. 826.
- Mary of Castle-Cary, by Hector Macneill, II. 802, 803.
- Mary Queen of Scots, by Agnes Strickland, III. 281; by Chalmers, II. 636; by Henry Glassford Bell, III. 415; by Tytler, II. 388; Letters said to have been written by, by Walter Goodall, II. 889.
- Mary Rose, by Sir J. M. Barrie, III. 705.
- Mary's Dream, II. 803.
- Mary Stuart, by A. C. Swinburne, III. 671.
- MARSHALS, SIR FRANK, III. 841.
- MARSHFIELD, JOHN, III. 710, 723.
- Masks and Faces, by Charles Reade, III. 463, 483.
- MASON, ALFRED EDWARD WOODLEY, III. 846.
- MASON, WILLIAM, II. 426.
- Massachusetts, by J. R. Lowell, III. 803.
- Massachusetts to Virginia, by Whittier, III. 776.
- Massarenes, by Ouida, III. 690.
- MASSEY, GERALD, III. 608.
- MASSINGER, PHILIP, I. 464.
- MASSON, DAVID, III. 633.
- Master Builder, by Gosse, III. 696.
- Masterman Ready, by Marryat, III. 255.
- Master of Ballantrae, by R. L. Stevenson, III. 699.
- MASTERS, EDGAR LEE, III. 855.
- Match A, by A. C. Swinburne, III. 671.
- Materia Hieroglyphica, by Sir J. G. Wilkinson, III. 321.
- MATHER, COTTON, III. 734, 737.
- MATHER, INCREASE, III. 734; Memoirs of, III. 738.
- MATHERS, HELEN (Mrs Reeves), III. 850.
- MATHIAS, THOMAS JAMES, II. 678.
- Matilda, by Marquis of Normanby, II. 783.
- Matus, by George Herbert, I. 496.
- Matter and Spirit, by J. Priestley, II. 540.
- MATTHEW PARIS, I. 35.
- Matthew Wald, by J. G. Lockhart, III. 250.
- MATTHEWS, JAMES BRANDER, III. 854.
- MATHEW, CHARLES ROBERT, II. 752.
- Maud, by Tennyson, III. 642.
- Maud Mullet, by J. G. Whittier, III. 775.
- MAUGHAM, W. SOMERSET, III. 714, 722.
- MAURICE, FREDERICK DENISON, III. 441.
- Maurice Terney, by C. J. Lever, III. 359.
- MAURIER, GEORGE DU, III. 840.
- MAVOR, DR O. H. ('James Bridle'), III. 848.
- MAX-MÜLLER, FRIEDRICH, III. 661.
- MAXWELL, JAMES CLERK, III. 840.
- MAXWELL, SIR HERBERT, III. 841.
- MAXWELL, WILLIAM HAMILTON, III. 267.
- MAY, SIR THOMAS ERSKINE, III. 490.
- MAY, THOMAS, I. 581.
- May, by William Barnes, III. 413.
- May, Song to, by Lord Thurlow, II. 792.
- May-day with the Muses, by Bloomfield, II. 687.
- May-eve, by John Cunningham, II. 455.
- MAYNE, JASPER, I. 633.
- MAYNE, JOHN, II. 810.
- Maynooth Grant, Speech on, by Macaulay, III. 370.
- MEADE, L. T. (Mrs Toulmin Smith), III. 850.
- Measure for Measure, by Shakespeare, I. 370.
- Mechanics, Treatise on, by W. Whewell, III. 198.
- Mechanism of the Heavens, by Mary Somerville, III. 186.
- Medal, by John Dryden, I. 793.
- Medals, Essay on, by J. Pinkerton, II. 637.
- Medieval Church History, by Archbishop Trench, III. 303.
- Meditations, by T. Traherne, I. 776.
- Meditations among the Tombs, by Hervey, II. 338.
- MEDWALL, HENRY, I. 157.
- MEKKE, MRS MARY, III. 178.
- Meg Dodg's Cobby, by Christian Isobef Johnson, II. 772.
- Mehalah, by S. Haring-Gould, III. 664.
- Meister Karl's Sketch-Book, by C. G. Leland, III. 784. <sup>4</sup>

- Melancholy, Anatomy of, by Burton, I. 435.
 Melchior, by W. Gorman Wills, III. 584.
 MELMOTH, WILLIAM, II. 391.
 Melmoth the Wanderer, by C. R. Maturin, II. 752, 753.
 MELVILLE, HERMAN, III. 821.
 MELVILLE, JAMES, I. 229.
 MELVILLE, SIR JAMES, I. 227.
 Memoirs of Eighty Years, by T. G. Hake, III. 584.
 Memorials of English Affairs, by Bulstrode Whitelocke, I. 750.
 Memorials of his Time, by Henry Cockburn, III. 313.
 Memory of the Dead, by J. K. Ingram, III. 580.
 Men and Books, by R. L. Stevenson, III. 698.
 Men and Women, by Robert Browning, III. 554, 563.
 Menaphon, by Greene, I. 324, 327.
 MENCKEN, HENRY LOUIS, III. 856.
 MENNES, SIR JOHN, I. 630.
 Mental and Moral Science, by Bain, III. 497.
 Menu, Ordinances of, trans. by Sir W. Jones, II. 616.
 Merchant of Venice, by Shakespeare, I. 360.
 Merddin, I. 3.
 MEREDITH, GEORGE, III. 658.
 MEREDITH, OWEN (Earl of Lytton), III. 638.
 MERES, FRANCIS, I. 397.
 MERIVALE, CHARLES, III. 207.
 Merle and the Nightingale, by Dunbar, I. 195.
 Merlin and Arthur, I. 51.
 Mermaid, by John Leyden, II. 692.
 Merope, by Matthew Arnold, III. 592.
 MERRICK, JAMES, II. 420.
 MERRICK, LEONARD, III. 846.
 MERRIMAN, HENRY SETON (Hugh Stowell Scott), III. 719.
 Merry Devil of Edmonton, I. 334.
 Merry Men, by R. L. Stevenson, III. 699.
 Merry-Mount, by J. L. Motley, III. 814.
 Merry Wives of Windsor, by Shakespeare, I. 366.
 Messiah, by Pope, II. 180, 184.
 Messiah, Coming of the, by Edward Irving, III. 268.
 MESTON, WILLIAM, II. 316.
 Method, by Coleridge, III. 61.
 Method of the Divine Government, by M'Cosh, III. 397.
 Metra of Boethius, I. 21.
 Metrical Romances, ed. by Ritson, II. 637.
 MEW, CHARLOTTE, III. 851.
 Mexico, Conquest of, by Prescott, III. 765, 766.
 Mexico and the Mexicans, by Sir E. B. Tylor, III. 663.
 MEYNELL, ALICE, III. 704.
 MICHAEL, LIONEL, III. 729.
 Michael, by Wordsworth, III. 16.
 MICKLE, WILLIAM JULIUS, II. 522.
 Microcosmographic, by John Earle, I. 577.
 Middle English Literature, I. 31.
 Middlemarch, by George Eliot, III. 530.
 MIDDLETON, CONYERS, II. 246.
 MIDDLETON, RICHARD, III. 722.
 MIDDLETON, THOMAS, I. 458.
 Midshipman Easy, by Marryat, III. 255, 257.
 Midsummer Holiday, by Swinburne, III. 673.
 Midsummer Night's Dream, by Shakespeare, I. 365.
 Miggles, by Bret Harte, III. 827.
 Milestones, by Arnold Bennett, III. 712.
 MILL, JAMES, II. 757.
 MILL, JOHN STUART, III. 442.
 MILLAY, EDNA, III. 856.
 MILLER, HUGH, III. 384.
 MILLER, JOAQUIN, III. 828.
 MILLER, THOMAS, III. 377.
 Miller of Deshaugh, by Ballantine, III. 587.
 Mill on the Floss, by George Eliot, III. 529, 533.
 MILMAN, HENRY HART, III. 208.
 MILNE, ALAN A., III. 848.
 MILNES, RICHARD MONCKTON (Lord Houghton), III. 382.
 MILTON, JOHN, I. 687; Life of, by D. Masson, III. 633; by J. Toland, II. 161, 162; by Mark Pattison, III. 480.
 Minchmoor, by Dr John Brown, III. 451.
 Minor Historians, II. 387.
 Minor Scottish Song-Writers, IR 910.
 MINOT, LAURENCE, I. 54.
 Minstrel, by James Beattie, II. 525, 526.
 Minstrel O'Connellan, by Wids, III. 350.
 Minstrelsy Ancient and Modern, by William Motherwell, III. 309.
 Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border, by Scott, III. 7, 31, 33.
 MINTO, WILLIAM, III. 693.
 Minutes of Lives, by John Aubrey, I. 747.
 Miracle-Plays, I. 34, 45, 107, 239.
 Miracles, Op, by Campbell, II. 427, 428.
 Miracles and Modern Spiritualism, by A. R. Wallace, III. 615.
 Miracles of Christ, by Woolston, II. 164.
 Mirandola, by Bryan W. Procter, III. 227.
 Mirour de l'Homme, by Gower, I. 74.
 Mirror, II. 536.
 Mirror for Magistrates, I. 237, 245.
 Mirthful Haven, by Booth Tarkington, III. 835.
 Miscellanea, by Sir W. Temple, I. 752; by Dryden, I. 794, 796, 815.
 Miser, by Henry Fielding, II. 339.
 Miseries of Human Life, by Beresford, II. 740.
 Misfortunes of Arthur, I. 333, 334.
 Misfortunes of Barney Branagan, by Carleton, III. 352.
 Misfortunes of Elphin, by Thomas Love Peacock, III. 150, 151.
 Miss in her Teens, by David Garrick, II. 432.
 Missionary of the Andes, by Bowles, II. 721, 722.
 Miss Marjoribanks, by Mrs Oliphant, III. 538.
 Mistress, by Cowley, I. 643.
 Mistress of Philarete, by Wither, I. 499.
 Mistress of the Manse, by Holland, III. 778.
 MITCHELL, JOHN, III. 582.
 MITCHELL, DONALD GRANT, III. 821.
 MITCHELL, JAMES LESLIE, III. 849.
 MITCHELL, MARGARET, III. 856.
 MITCHELL, SILAS WEIR, III. 825.
 MITCHISON, NAOMI, III. 852.
 MITFORD, MARY RUSSELL, III. 176.
 MITFORD, WILLIAM, II. 630.
 Mitherless Bairn, by W. Thom, III. 305.
 MIVART, ST GEORGE, III. 839.
 Mixed Essays, by M. Arnold, III. 595.
 Moby Dick, by Herman Melville, III. 821.
 Mock-Doctor, by Henry Fielding, II. 339.
 Modern Guides of English Thought, by R. H. Hutton, III. 632.
 Modern Love, by G. Meredith, III. 658.
 Modern Painters, by Ruskin, III. 568, 569, 570, 572.
 Modern Painting, by G. Moore, III. 707.
 Modern Utopia, by H. G. Wells, III. 712.
 Modest Proposal, by Swift, II. 125, 127.
 Modocs, My Life among the, by Joaquin Miller, III. 828.
 MOIR, DAVID MACBETH, III. 311.
 Molecular and Microscopic Science, by Mary Somerville, III. 186.
 MOLESWORTH, MRS MARY LOUISA STEWART, III. 850.
 Monarchie, by Sir David Lyndsay, I. 206.
 Monarchy, by Fulke Greville, I. 354.
 MONRODDO, LORD, II. 435.
 Money, by Lord Lytton, III. 333.
 Monk, by M. G. Lewis, II. 748, 749.
 Monk of Fife, by Andrew Lang, III. 692.
 MONMOUTH, GEOFFREY OF, I. 3, 33, 35, 37.
 Monna Innominata, by C. Rossetti, III. 646, 648.
 Monody, by Lytton, II. 349.
 Monsieur Beaucaire, by Booth Tarkington, III. 835.
 MONTAGU, CHARLES (Earl of Halifax), II. 244.
 MONTAGU, ELIZABETH, II. 418.
 MONTAGU, LADY MARY WORTLEY, II. 254.
 MONTAGUE, CHARLES EDWARD, III. 847.
 Montaigne's Essays, trans. by Florio, I. 261.
 Montcalm and Wolfe, by F. Parkman, III. 818, 819-821.
 MONTEPIRE, CLAUDE G., III. 844.
 Montezuma's Daughter, by Sir H. Rider Haggard, III. 703.
 MONTGOMERIE, ALEXANDER, I. 233.
 MONTGOMERY, JAMES, II. 741.
 MONTGOMERY, L. M., III. 851.
 MONTGOMERY, ROBERT, III. 238.
 Monthly Review, II. 13.
 MONTROSE, MARQUIS OF (James Graham), I. 817; Memoirs of, by M. Napier, III. 291.
 Monuments of Nineveh, by Sir A. H. Layard, III. 498.
 MONYPENNY, WILLIAM F., III. 846.
 MOODIE, MRS SUSANNA, III. 725.
 MOODY, W. V., III. 833.
 Moon and Sixpence, by Somerset Maugham, III. 714.
 Moonstone, by Collins, III. 620.
 MOORE, DR JOHN, II. 618.
 MOORE, EDWARD, II. 400.
 MOORE, FRANK FRANKFORT, III. 843.
 MOORE, GEORGE, III. 707.
 MOORE, GEORGE EDWARD, III. 847.
 MOORE, THOMAS, III. 345.
 MOORE, THOMAS STURGE, III. 714.
 Mopsa the Fairy, by Jean Ingelow, III. 528.
 Moral and Metaphysical Philosophy, by F. D. Maurice, III. 441.
 Moral and Political Philosophy, by Paley, II. 643.
 Moral and Religious Aporisms, by Benjamin Whichcote, I. 603.
 Moral Essays, by Pope, II. 183.
 Moral Feelings, by J. Abercromby, III. 242.
 Moral Ode, I. 40.
 Moral Philosophy, by Francis Hutcheson, II. 290; by Dugald Stewart, II. 535.
 Moral Sentiments, by Adam Smith, II. 448, 449.
 Moralists, by Shaftesbury, II. 167, 170-172.
 Moralities, Religious, I. 107, 239.
 Morals, European, by Lecky, III. 684.
 Morals, Inquiry concerning, by Hume, II. 377.
 Morayshire, Floods in, by Dick Lauder, III. 305.
 MORE, DR HENRY, I. 160.
 MORE, HANNAH, II. 577.
 MORE, PAUL ELMER, III. 855.
 MORE, SIR THOMAS, I. 120, 121.
 More Worlds than One, by Brewster, III. 242.
 MORGAN, AUGUSTUS DE, III. 398.
 MORGAN, LADY, II. 780.
 MORGAN, WILLIAM DE, III. 709.
 Morgana (Palace of), by Sterling, III. 271.
 MORIER, JAMES JUSTINIAN, II. 783.
 MORISON, JAMES COTTER, III. 662.
 MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER, III. 856.
 MORLEY, HENRY, III. 632.
 MORLEY, LORD, III. 685.
 MORMONS, History of the, by C. Mackay, III. 481.
 MORRIS, SIR LEWIS, III. 662.
 MORRIS, WILLIAM, III. 10, 664.
 MORRISON, ARTHUR, III. 845.
 Mortal Antipathy, by O. W. Holmes, III. 792.
 Morte d'Arthur, by Malory, I. 92-94; attributed to Huchowne, I. 57, 172; by Heber, III. 213.
 MORTON, THOMAS, II. 709.
 Morton's Hope, by Motley, III. 814, 816.
 MOSS, THOMAS, II. 617.
 Mosses from an Old Manse, by Hawthorne, III. 779.
 Mostyn Plays, I. 157.
 MOTHERWELL, WILLIAM, III. 309.
 Moths, by Ouida, III. 690.
 MOTLEY, JOHN LOTHPRO, III. 814; Life of, by O. W. Holmes, III. 791.
 MOTTRAM, RALPH HALE, III. 848.
 MOULTON, LOUISE CHANDLER, III. 851.
 MOULTRIE, JOHN, III. 323.
 Mountain Bard, by James Hogg, III. 292.
 Mountain Children, by Mary Howitt, III. 283.
 Mountain Daisy, by Burns, II. 824.
 Mountain Lovers, by Fiona Macleod, III. 705.
 Mountaineering, by Tyndall, III. 548.
 Mountaineers, by Colman, II. 656, 657.
 Mourning Becomes Electra, by Eugene O'Neill, III. 836.
 Mourning Bride, by Congreve, II. 82, 83.
 Mourning Garment, by Greene, I. 324, 327.
 MOOSE, To a, by Burns, II. 823.
 Mrs Dalloway, by Virginia Woolf, III. 705.
 Mrs Warren's Profession, by Shaw, III. 706.
 Much Ado about Nothing, by Shakespeare, I. 367.
 MULGRAVE, EARL OF. See SHEFFIELD (JOHN).
 MULLER, FRIEDRICH MAX, III. 661.
 MULLINGER, JAMES BASS, III. 840.
 MULOCK, DINAH MARIA (Mrs Craik), III. 536.
 Mummer's Wife, by G. Moore, III. 707.
 Mummy, Address to the, by Horace Smith, III. 160, 162.
 MUNDAY, ANTHONY, I. 333.
 Mundi et Cordis Carmina, by Thomas Wade, III. 344.
 Munera Pulveris, by Ruskin, III. 571.
 MUNRO, NEIL, III. 713.
 Munster Festivals, by G. Griffin, III. 357.
 MURCHISON, SIR ROBERT I., III. 267.
 Murder in the Cathedral, by T. S. Eliot, III. 716.
 Murders in the Rue Morgue, by Poe, III. 788.

- MURE, COLONEL WILLIAM, III. 219.
 MURFRE, MARY NOAILLES, III. 835.
 MURPHY, ARTHUR, II. 455.
 MURRAY, CHARLES, III. 733, 846.
 MURRAY, DAVID CHRISTIE, III. 842.
 MURRAY, GILBERT, III. 730.
 MURRAY, LINDLEY, III. 743.
 MURRAY, SIR JAMES AUGUSTUS HENRY, III. 840.
 MURRAY, SIR JOHN, III. 726.
 Musarum Deliciae, I. 630.
 Music, Influence on Lyrical Poetry, I. 273.
 Music and Manners in France and Germany, by H. F. Chorley, III. 273.
 Music and Moonlight, by A. W. E. O'Shaughnessy, III. 656.
 Musick's Duell, by Crashaw, I. 678.
 My ain Fireside, by Mrs Hamilton, II. 810.
 My Beautiful Lady, by T. Woolner, III. 607.
 My Birthday, by J. G. Whittier, III. 775, 777.
 My Brother's Grave, by J. Moultrie, III. 323.
 My Lady Nicotine, by Sir J. M. Barrie, III. 795.
 My Land, by T. O. Davis, III. 365.
 My Little Wife, by David Wingate, III. 609.
 My Mind to Me a Kingdom is, by Sir Edward Dyer, I. 275.
 My Mother bids me bind my Hair, by Mrs Hunter, II. 509.
 My Novel, by Lord Lytton, III. 332.
 My Own Time, History of, by Bishop Burnet, II. 30, 32-36.
 My pretty Jane, by E. Fitzball, II. 783.
 My Psalm, by J. G. Whittier, III. 775, 777.
 My Relations with Carlyle, by J. A. Froude, III. 503.
 My Schools and Schoolmasters, by Hugh Miller, III. 283.
 My Sister's Sleep, by D. G. Rossetti, III. 642, 644.
 My Village, by T. C. Croker, III. 412.
 MYERS, FREDERIC WILLIAM HENRY, III. 691.
 Myroure for Magistrates, I. 237, 245.
 Mysteries of Udolpho, by Mrs Radcliffe, II. 594, 595.
 Mysterious Mother, by Walpole, II. 411.
 Mystery of Edwin Drood, by Dickens, III. 465, 466.
 Mystery of Godliness, by H. More, I. 611.
 Mystery of Life, by Gambold, II. 421.
 Mystery of Metropolisville, by E. Eggleston, III. 824.
 Mystery of the Royal Mail, by Farjeon, III. 732.
 Mystic's Monologue, by G. Darley, III. 236.
 Myth, Ritual, and Religion, by A. Lang, III. 692.
 Myths of the Middle Ages, by S. Baring-Gould, III. 664.
- N
 NABES, THOMAS, I. 487.
 Nabob, by Susanna Blamire, II. 801.
 Nabal, by J. H. Reynolds, III. 268.
 NAIENE, LADY, II. 827.
 Nanby Pamy, by Henry Carey, II. 330.
 Naumoua the Enchantress, by Moore, III. 350.
 Nan, by John Massfield, III. 710.
 NAPIER, MARK, III. 291.
 Napier, Sir Charles, Life of, by Sir W. F. P. Napier, III. 229.
 NAPIER, SIR WILLIAM F. P., III. 219.
 Napoleon Buonaparte, Life of, by Hazlitt, III. 80; by Seeley, III. 649; Historic Doubts relative to, by Whately, III. 196.
 NASH, THOMAS, I. 328.
 Nation newspaper, III. 364, 583.
 Native Genius, by Ebenezer Elliot, III. 233.
 Natural History, by Waterson, III. 174.
 Natural History of Enthusiasm, by Isaac Taylor, III. 244; of Intellect, by R. W. Emerson, III. 760.
 Natural History of Selborne, by Gilbert White, II. 625-627.
 Natural Magic, by Sir D. Brewster, III. 242.
 Natural Religion, by David Hume, II. 377; by Seeley, III. 649.
 Natural Selection, by A. R. Wallace, III. 614.
 Natural Theology, by Paley, II. 643, 644; by Chalmers, III. 188.
 Naturalist in La Plata, by W. H. Hudson, III. 711.
 Nature, by R. W. Emerson, III. 759, 760, 761, 780; by H. D. Thoreau, III. 799.
 Nature and Art, by Mrs Inchbald, II. 584-586.
- Nature-Riddles, by Cynewulf (?), I. 8, 9, 13.
 Nature's Serial Story, by E. P. Roe, III. 825.
 NAUNTON, SIR ROBERT, I. 457.
 Naval Sketch-Book, by Glascock, III. 259.
 Navigations of Hakluyt, I. 284.
 NAVLER, JAMES, I. 623.
 Neatier Home, by Phoebe Cary, III. 824.
 NEAVES, CHARLES, III. 313.
 Nebo the Nailer, by Baring-Gould, III. 664.
 NEEHAM, ALEXANDER, I. 34.
 Needy Knife Grinder, by Canning, II. 673, 674.
 Nelson, Life of, by Southey, III. 50, 53; by A. T. Mahan, III. 827.
 Nemesis of Faith, by Froude, III. 602.
 NENNIUS, I. 3.
 Nepenthe, by George Darley, III. 235, 236.
 Nero, by Robert Bridges, III. 603.
 New Arabian Nights, by R. L. Stevenson, III. 697, 698.
 New Arcadia, by Madame Duclaux, III. 704.
 New Atlantis, by Bacon, I. 385.
 New Bath Guide, by Anstey, II. 434.
 NEWBOLT, SIR HENRY JOHN, III. 845.
 NEWCASTLE, DUCHESS OF, I. 675, 732.
 Newcastle Apothecary, by Colman, II. 639.
 NEWCOMES, by W. M. Thackeray, III. 458, 462.
 New England Primer, III. 735.
 New England Tragedies, by Longfellow, III. 770.
 New Grub Street, by Gissing, III. 711.
 New Inn, by Ben Jonson, I. 405.
 New Machiavelli, by Wells, III. 712.
 NEWMAN, F. W., III. 342.
 NEWMAN, JOHN HENRY, III. 337.
 New Paul and Virginia, by W. H. Mallock, III. 703.
 New Road, by Neil Munro, III. 713.
 News from Nowhere, by W. Morris, III. 665.
 Newspaper, First Daily, II. 2, 12.
 New Spirit of the Age, III. 413.
 New Testament, Scots, I. 212.
 New Timon, by Lord Lytton, III. 333.
 NEWTON, JOHN, II. 613.
 NEWTON, SIR ISAAC, II. 23.
 New Way to pay Old Debts, by Massinger, I. 464, 465.
 New York, History of, by Diedrich Knickerbocker, III. 745.
 New York Tribune, III. 811.
 New Zealand, Manning's, III. 730.
 New Zealand Literature. See AUSTRALIAN LITERATURE, III. 729.
 NICHOL, JOHN, III. 637.
 Nicholas Minturn, by J. G. Holland, III. 778.
 Nicholas Nickleby, by Dickens, III. 464, 467, 469, 470.
 NICHOLS, ROBERT, III. 849.
 NICHOLSON, WILLIAM, III. 306.
 NICOLL, ROBERT, III. 481.
 NICOLL, SIR WILLIAM ROBERTSON, III. 842.
 NICHOLSON, WILLIAM, II. 166.
 Night, by Churchill, II. 495, 496.
 Night, Sonnet on, by Blanco White, II. 792.
 Night and Morning, by Lord Lytton, III. 333.
 Night-piece on Death, by Parnell, II. 249.
 Night-side of Nature, by Catherine Crowe, III. 280.
 Night Thoughts, by E. Young, 260-263.
 Nightingale, by Coleridge, III. 66.
 Nightingale, Ode to a, by Keats, III. 101, 104.
 Nightingales, by Robert Bridges, III. 603.
 Nile, Books on the, by Burton, III. 610; by Speke, III. 610; by Baker, III. 610.
 Nine Cases of Conscience, by Sanderson, I. 552.
 Nineveh, by Sir A. H. Layard, III. 498.
 NOBLE, JAMES ASCROFT, III. 841.
 Noble Lord, Letter to a, by Burke, II. 548.
 Noble Numbers, by Robert Herrick, I. 560.
 No Cross, no Crown, by Penn, II. 51, 52.
 Noctes Ambrosianae, by John Wilson, III. 246, 247-250.
 Nocturnal Reverie, by the Countess of Winchelsea, II. 253, 254.
 NOEL, RODEN, III. 637.
 No Name, by Wilkie Collins, III. 620.
 Nonsense Rhymes, by Lear, III. 657.
 Norman Conquest, by Freeman, III. 626.
 Norman Conquest, After the, I. 29.
 NORMANBY, THE MARQUIS OF, II. 783. See also SHEFFIELD (JOHN).
 Normandy, History of, by Palgrave, III. 265.
 Norman-French in England, I. 31.
 NORRIS, FRANK, III. 855.
 NORRIS, JOHN, II. 259.
 NORRIS, WILLIAM EDWARD, III. 842.
- Norse, Tales from the, by Dasent, III. 409.
 NORTH, CHRISTOPHER (John Wilson), III. 245.
 NORTH, SIR THOMAS, I. 258.
 North America, Travels in, by Basil Hall, III. 227.
 North American Review, III. 752, 801, 802.
 North and South, by Mrs Gaskell, III. 527.
 Northanger Abbey, by Jane Austen, II. 774.
 North Briton, edited by Wilkes, II. 516.
 Northern Cobbler, by Tennyson, III. 541.
 Northern Farmer, by Tennyson, III. 541.
 Northern Studies, by Sir E. Gosse, III. 696.
 Northern Travel, by Bayard Taylor, III. 822.
 NORTON, CHARLES ELIOT, III. 825.
 NORTON, THE HON. MRS, III. 385.
 NORTON, THOMAS, I. 157, 241.
 Norway and its Glaciers, by J. D. Forbes, III. 400.
 Nozze Teispum, by Sir John Davies, I. 394.
 Nostramo, by Conrad, III. 711.
 Notes and Queries founded, III. 331.
 Not Wisely but Too Well, by Miss Broughton, III. 690.
 Nourjahad, by Mrs Sheridan, II. 564.
 Nova Scotia, by T. C. Haliburton, III. 726.
 Nova Scotian, III. 725, 726.
 Novel, Development of the, II. 6.
 Novum Organum, by Bacon, I. 381, 387.
 Now Winter Nights Enlarge, by Campion, I. 400.
 NOYES, ALFRED, III. 848.
 Nugæ Antiquæ, by Harrington, I. 392.
 Nun, by Aphra Behn, II. 68.
 Nurse's Song, by William Blake, II. 720.
 Nymph and her Fawn, by Marvell, I. 712.
 Nymphidia, by Drayton, I. 342, 345.
 Nymph's Reply, by Sir Walter Raleigh, I. 353.
- O
 Oberon (Wieland's) trans. by Sotheby, II. 713.
 Observations on Man, by Hartley, II. 338.
 Observations on the Art of Poesie, by Campion, I. 400.
 O'CASEY, SEAN, III. 722, 848.
 Occasional Reflections, by Boyle, I. 727.
 OCCLEVE (HOCCEVE), I. 77.
 Ocean, Address to the, by B. W. Procter, III. 228.
 Ocean, Ode on, by Young, II. 265.
 Ocean Tragedy, by Clark Russell, III. 691.
 Oceana, by Harrington, I. 619; by Froude, III. 503.
 OCKLEY, SIMON, II. 211.
 O'Connor's Child, by Campbell, II. 766, 770.
 Ode to Adversity, by Gray, II. 360; to Eton College, II. 359, 360, 362; for Music, III. 363; to Evening, by Collins, II. 368, 369; to Mrs Anne Killgrew, by Dryden, I. 795, 798; to the Departing Year, by Coleridge, III. 57, 63; to the North-East Wind, by Kingsley, III. 514, 516.
 O'Donnell, by Lady Morgan, II. 781.
 O'DOWD, BERNARD P., III. 729.
 Odyssey, translations of, by Chapman, I. 377; by Hobbes, I. 555; by Ogilby, I. 824; by Pope, II. 179; by Southey, II. 713; by Morris, III. 665; by Lang, &c., III. 692.
 Of Bodies, by Sir Kenelm Digby, I. 580.
 O'FLAHERTY, LIAM, III. 849.
 OGILBY, JOHN, I. 823.
 OGILVY, WILLIAM H., III. 729.
 O'HARA, JOHN B., III. 729.
 O'Hara Family, by Michael and John Banim, III. 353, 354.
 O'KEEFE, JOHN, II. 656.
 Old Arm-Chair, by Eliza Cook, III. 528.
 Old Bachelor, by Congreve, II. 82, 84.
 Old Bridge at Florence, by Longfellow, III. 772.
 Old Creole Days, by G. W. Cable, III. 829.
 Old Curiosity Shop, by Dickens, III. 464, 467.
 Old English Baron, by Clara Reeve, II. 420.
 Old Familiar Faces, by Lamb, III. 73, 75.
 Old Ironsides, by O. W. Holmes, III. 790.
 Old Judge, by T. C. Haliburton, III. 726.
 Old Kensington, by Lady Ritchie, III. 689.
 Old Lang Syne, by Sir R. Ayton, I. 508.
 Old Law, by Massinger, Middleton, and Rowley, I. 478.
 Old Manor House, by Charlotte Smith, II. 593.
 Old Man's Wish, by Walter Pope, II. 98.
 Old Mortality, by Scott, III. 42.
 Old Play, Dodsley's, II. 301.
 Old Quebec, by Sir G. Parker, III. 728.
 Old Red Sandstone, by Hugh Miller, III. 285, 286.

- Old Régime in Canada, by F. Parkman, III. 818.
- Old St Paul's, by W. H. Ainsworth, III. 378.
- Old Stoic, by Emily Brontë, III. 526.
- Old Wives' Tale, by Peete, I. 321; by Arnold Bennett, III. 712.
- Old-World Idylls, by A. Dobson, III. 688.
- OLDHAM, JOHN, I. 790.
- OLDMIXON, JOHN, I. 244.
- OLBY, WILLIAM, II. 300.
- Ole Swamin' Hole, by J. W. Riley, III. 831.
- OLIPHANT, LAURENCE, III. 635.
- OLIPHANT, MRS, III. 537.
- OLIVER, FREDERICK SCOTT, III. 846.
- Oliver Twist, by Dickens, III. 464, 467, 468.
- Olivia, by W. G. Wills, III. 584.
- OLNEY HYMNS, II. 601, 605, 614.
- Olor Iscarius, by Vaughan, I. 682, 683.
- Orig Grange, by 'Hermann Kunst' (Walter Chalmers Smith), III. 607.
- OMAN, SIR CHARLES WILLIAM CHADWICK, III. 845.
- 'Omhar Khayyâm, trans. by FitzGerald, III. 424, 427.
- O may I join the Choir Invisible, by George Eliot, III. 535.
- OTUO, by Herman Melville, III. 821.
- O Nancy, wilt thou go with me? by Thomas Percy, II. 505.
- One-Hoss Shay, by O. W. Holmes, III. 792, 793.
- O'NEILL, EUGENE (GLADSTONE), III. 722, 836.
- One in Paradise, To, by E. A. Poe, III. 790.
- One of our Conquerors, by Meredith, III. 658.
- ONIONS, OLIVER, III. 847.
- O no, we never mention her, by T. H. Bayly, III. 241.
- OPIE, MRS AMELIA, II. 598.
- Optics, by Sir Isaac Newton, II. 24.
- Orara, by H. C. Kendall, III. 731.
- Orcaidian Sketches, by D. Vedder, III. 305.
- Orchestra, or a Poem on Dancing, by Sir John Davies, I. 394.
- Ordeal of Richard Feverel, by G. Meredith, III. 658, 659.
- ORDERICUS VITALIS, I. 33.
- Oregon Trail, by Francis Parkman, III. 817.
- Orestes, by Lord de Tabley, III. 650.
- Oriental Eclogues, by Collins, II. 11, 368.
- Oriental Herald, III. 224.
- Oriental Poems, by Bayard Taylor, III. 822.
- Origines Sacre, by E. Stillingfleet, II. 39.
- Origin of Evil, by John Fiske, III. 828.
- Origin of Society, by Mandeville, II. 201.
- Origin of Species, by Darwin, III. 417, 418, 419, 420.
- ORINDA (Mrs K. Phillips), I. 746.
- Orion, by R. H. Home, III. 413; by Sir C. G. D. Roberts, III. 728.
- Orlando, by Virginia Woolf, III. 705.
- Orlando Furioso, by Greene, I. 324.
- Orlando Furioso (Ariosto's), trans. by Harrington, I. 391; by John Hoole, II. 755; by W. S. Rose, II. 760.
- ORM or ORMIN, I. 38.
- ORME, ROBERT, II. 541.
- Ormond, by Maria Edgeworth, II. 735.
- Ormond, To the Duchess of, by Dryden, I. 801.
- Ornulum, I. 38.
- Oroonoko, by Aphra Behn, II. 68, 69; by Thomas Southerne, II. 75.
- Orosius's History, I. 20.
- Orphan, by Otway, II. 72, 74.
- Orphan Boy's Tale, by Mrs Opie, II. 598.
- Orpheus and Euridice, by King, II. 197.
- Orpheus in Thrace, by Lord de Tabley, III. 650.
- Orra, by Joann Basili, II. 733.
- Orygynale Cronykil, by Wynthoun, I. 181.
- OSBORNE, DOROTHY, I. 751; Letters, I. 755.
- O'SHAUGHNESSY, A. W. E., III. 656.
- Ossian, II. 500-504; Wordsworth on, III. 29.
- Othello, by Shakespeare, I. 370.
- Ottoman Empire, by Rycourt, I. 273.
- OTWAY, CESAR, III. 345.
- OTWAY, THOMAS, II. 71.
- OUIDA (Louise de la Ramée), III. 690.
- Our American Cousin, by Tom Taylor, III. 463.
- Our Betters, by Somerset Maugham, III. 714.
- Our Boys, by Henry James Byron, III. 637.
- Our Old Home, by Hawthorne, III. 781.
- Our Owl Times, History of, by McCarthy, III. 660.
- Our Village, by M. R. Milford, III. 176, 177.
- Our of the Hurly Burly, by C. H. Clark, III. 825.
- OUTRAM, GEORGE, III. 414.
- Outward Bound, by E. Howard, III. 259.
- OVERBURY, SIR THOMAS, I. 442.
- Over-Soul, by R. W. Emerson, III. 762.
- OWEN, JOHN, I. 698.
- OWEN, SIR RICHARD, III. 318.
- OWEN, WILFRID, III. 723, 849.
- Owl and the Nightingale, I. 42.
- OXFORD, EARL OF. See De Vere, I. 277.
- OXFORD AND ASQUITH, EARL OF, III. 843.
- Oxford, by Robert Montgomery, III. 238.
- Oxford Movement, by R. W. Church, III. 577.
- Pacchiarotto, by Browning, III. 556, 566.
- Pacha of Mady Tales, by Martyat, III. 255.
- Paddock and the Mous, by Henryson, I. 191.
- PAGAN, ISOBEL, II. 810.
- PAGE, GERTRUDE, III. 733.
- PAGE, THOMAS NELSON, III. 854.
- Pageant, by Christina Rossetti, III. 646.
- Pageant of Summer, by R. Jefferies, III. 640.
- PAGET, VIOLET, III. 851.
- PAIN, BARRY, III. 846.
- PAINE, THOMAS, II. 559.
- PAINTER, WILLIAM, I. 238, 262.
- Palace of Morgana, by J. Sterling, III. 271.
- Palace of Pleasure, by W. Painter, I. 238, 262; in Chaucer, I. 70; in Dryden, I. 802.
- Paladin of Philanthropy, by Austin Dobson, III. 688.
- Palamon and Arcite, by R. Edwards, I. 264.
- Palestine, by Bishop Heber, III. 212, 213.
- PALEY, WILLIAM, II. 643.
- PALFREY, JOHN GORHAM, III. 853.
- PALGRAVE, FRANCIS TURNER, III. 266, 609.
- PALGRAVE, SIR FRANCIS, III. 265.
- PALGRAVE, WILLIAM GIFFORD, III. 266, 609.
- Palice of Honour, by Gavin Douglas, I. 202.
- Pallada Tamia, by Francis Meres, I. 397.
- PALTOCK, ROBERT, II. 393.
- Pamela, by Richardson, II. 295, 297.
- Pandosto, by Greene, I. 324, 328.
- Panegyric on the Coronation, by Dryden, I. 795.
- Panegyric to My Lord Protector, by Waller, I. 626.
- Panorama, by J. G. Whittier, III. 775.
- Papacy in the Reformation Period, by Mandell Creighton, III. 687.
- Papp with a Hatchett, by Lyly, I. 316.
- Parables and Tales, by T. G. Hake, III. 384.
- Paracelsus, by Browning, III. 552, 559.
- Paradise Lost, I. 690, 692, 700-703.
- Paradise of Dainty Devices, by Edwards, I. 257, 264.
- Paradise Regained, I. 690, 704.
- PARDOE, JULIA, III. 384.
- Parentator, by Cotton Mather, III. 737, 738.
- Parish Register, by Crabbe, II. 694, 696.
- Parish Workhouse, by Crabbe, II. 695.
- Parisina, by Lord Byron, III. 122.
- Paris in 1815, by G. Croly, III. 171, 172.
- PARK, MUNGO, II. 651.
- PARKER, JOSEPH, III. 840.
- PARKER, SIR GILBERT, III. 726, 728.
- PARKER, THEODORE, III. 763.
- PARKMAN, FRANCIS, III. 817.
- Parment of Foules, by Chaucer, I. 63, 66, 67.
- Parliamentary Government in England, by A. Todd, III. 726.
- PARNELL, THOMAS, II. 248.
- PARR, SAMUEL, II. 630.
- Parson's Wedding, by Killigrew, I. 634.
- Parthenia and Argalus, by Cartwright, I. 635.
- Parthenogenesis, by Sir R. Owen, III. 318.
- Parthenophil, by Barnabe Barnes, I. 278.
- PASCAREL, by Ouida, III. 690.
- Pasquin, by Henry Fielding, II. 340.
- Passage to India, by Whitman, III. 807, 810.
- Passages from the Diary of a Late Physician, by Warren, III. 344.
- Passages of a Working Life by Charles Knight, III. 266.
- Passing of Arthur, by Tennyson, III. 547.
- Passionate Pilgrim, I. 257, 309.
- Passionate Shepherd to his Love, by Marlowe, I. 352.
- Passions, by Collins, II. 368, 370.
- Passion of Christ, by W. Kennedy, I. 201.
- Past and Present, by Carlyle, III. 404.
- Pastime of Pleasure, by S. Hawes, I. 112.
- PASTON, GEORGE (E. M. Symonds), III. 851.
- Paston Letters, I. 100; ed. by J. Gairdner, III. 632.
- Pastoral Ballad, by Shenstone, II. 353, 355-357.
- Pastoral Poetry, Beginnings of, I. 118, 242.
- Pastorals, by Pope, II. 178, 180.
- Patchwork, by Basil Hall, III. 227.
- PATER, WALTER HORATIO, III. 607.
- PATERSON, A. B., III. 729, 732.
- PATERSON, WILLIAM ROMAINE, III. 847.
- Patience, alliterative poem, I. 54, 174.
- Patient Grisill, I. 334.
- PATMORE, COVENTRY K. D., III. 601.
- Patriarchs, by Sir R. Filmer, I. 559.
- Patriarchal Theory, by J. F. McLennan, III. 613.
- PATRICK, SIMON, II. 43.
- Patriot, by Henry Brooke, II. 396.
- Patriotism, Spirit of, by Bolingbroke, III. 202, 205.
- Patron, by George Crabbe, II. 694, 699.
- PATTISON, MARK, III. 479.
- PAUL, HERBERT WOODFIELD, III. 843.
- Paul Clifford, by Lord Lytton, III. 332.
- PAULDING, JAMES KIRKE, III. 743.
- Pauper's Death-bed, by Mrs Southey, III. 555.
- PAYN, JAMES, III. 634.
- PAYNE, JOHN HOWARD, III. 853.
- Peace Ode, by R. Bridges, III. 693.
- PEACOCK, THOMAS LOVE, III. 150.
- Pearl, alliterative poem, I. 54, 173.
- PEARSON, CHARLES HENRY, III. 730.
- PEARSON, JOHN, I. 623.
- PEARSON, KARL, III. 844.
- PEARY, ROBERT E., III. 855.
- Pebilis to the Play, I. 210; not by James I., I. 183.
- PECOCK, REGINALD, I. 91.
- Peelshire, History of, by William Chambers, III. 315.
- Peel, Sir Robert, Life of, by Earl Stanhope, III. 374; by McCarthy, III. 600.
- PEELE, GEORGE, I. 274, 321.
- Peg Woffington, by C. Reade, III. 483.
- Pelham, by Lord Lytton, III. 332.
- Pelican Island, by Montgomery, II. 742, 744.
- PENBERTON, SIR MAX, III. 845.
- Pencilings by the Way, by N. P. Willis, III. 749.
- Pendennis, by W. M. Thackeray, III. 458.
- Peninsular War, by Sir W. F. P. Napier, III. 219-223; by T. Hamilton, III. 254.
- PENN, WILLIAM, II. 50; Life of, by W. Hepworth Dixon, III. 578.
- PENNANT, THOMAS, II. 494.
- PENNECUK, ALEXANDER, II. 309.
- PENNECUK, DR ALEXANDER, II. 309.
- Penniless Pilgrimage, by J. Taylor, I. 454.
- Penny Cyclopaedia, III. 296.
- Penny Magazine, III. 266.
- PENROSE, ELIZABETH, III. 284.
- Pension Beaurepas, by H. James, III. 830.
- Pentameter, by W. S. Landon, III. 141.
- Pentateuch, work on, by Colenso, III. 452.
- PERYS, SAMUEL, I. 733, 770.
- PERCIVAL, JAMES GATES, III. 853.
- PERCY, THOMAS, II. 504.
- PERCY, WILLIAM, I. 278.
- Percy, by Hannah More, II. 577, 579.
- Peregrine Pickle, by Smollett, II. 442, 443, 444, 446.
- Pericles, by Fletcher and Shakespeare, I. 371.
- Pericles and Aspasia, by George Croly, III. 171; by W. S. Landon, III. 141, 146.
- Perpetual Curate, by Mrs Oliphant, III. 538.
- Persia, Armenia, and Asia Minor, by J. J. Morier, II. 783.
- Persian in England, by Lytton, II. 349.
- Persian Monarchy, by Sir T. Herbert, I. 601.
- Persuasion, by Jane Austen, II. 774, 775.
- Persu, Conquest of, by Prescott, III. 765, 767.
- Peter Bell, by Wordsworth, III. 13.
- Peter Bell the Third, by Shelley, III. 110, 114.
- Peterborough Annals, I. 29.
- Peter Pan, by Sir J. M. Barrie, III. 705.
- PETER PLUMLEY (Sydney Smith), III. 150, 157.
- Peter Simple, by Frederick Marryat, III. 255, 256.
- Peter's Letters to his Kinsfolk, by Lockhart, III. 250.
- Peter Sterling, by P. L. Ford, III. 832.
- Peter the Great, On, by Aaron Hill, II. 198.
- Peter Wilkins, by R. Paltock, II. 393-396.
- Petrarch, Life of, by Campbell, II. 766.
- Phaedrus, Fables of, trans. by Smart, II. 424.
- PHARIS, THOMAS, I. 265.
- Phalaris, by Richard Bentley, II. 105.
- Phantasmagoria, by Mrs M. J. Fletcher, III. 520.
- Phantasms of the Living, by Myers, III. 691.
- Phantasies, by George Macdonald, III. 606.
- Pharais, by Fiona Macleod, III. 705.
- Pharonnida, by W. Chamberlayne, I. 744.
- Pharsalia, trans. by T. May, I. 582; by Nicholas Rowe, II. 93, 95.
- Phases of Faith, by F. W. Newman, III. 342.
- Phaudrig Crochoore, by J. S. Le Fanu, III. 365.

- PHELPS, ELIZABETH STUART, III. 854.
 Phylaster, by Beaumont and Fletcher, I. 469.
 Philip, II., by W. H. Prescott, III. 765, 766.
 Phillips, AMBROSE, II. 239.
 Phillips, JOHN, II. 241.
 Phillips, Mrs KATHERINE, I. 746.
 Philip van Artevelde, by Sir Henry Taylor, III. 324-326.
 PHILLIPS, DAVID GRAHAM, III. 855.
 PHILLIPS, EDWARD, I. 589.
 PHILLIPS, SAMUEL, III. 482.
 PHILLIPS, STEPHEN, III. 722, 846.
 PHILLIPS, WENDELL, III. 811.
 Phillis, by T. Lodge, I. 316, 318.
 PHILLPOTTS, EDEN, III. 845.
 Philoctetes, by Lord de Tabley, III. 650.
 Philosophy, History of, by G. H. Lewes, III. 496.
 Philosophy and Religion, by James Hinton, III. 613.
 Philosophy of Belief, by the Duke of Argyll, III. 614.
 Philosophy of Roman History, by De Quincey, III. 95.
 Philosophy of the Human Mind, by Dugald Stewart, II. 535.
 Phoebe Dawson, by G. Crabbe, II. 697.
 Phoenix Nest, I. 257.
 Phylpp Sparowe, by John Skelton, I. 114, 115, 119.
 Physical Basis of Life, by T. H. Huxley, III. 618.
 Physical Geography, by Mary Somerville, III. 186.
 Physical Sciences, by Mary Somerville, III. 186.
 Physician, Diary of a late, by Warren, III. 344.
 Physics and Politics, by Walter Bagehot, III. 630.
 Physiology of Common Life, by G. H. Lewes, III. 496.
 Piccadilly, by Laurence Oliphant, III. 636.
 PICKEN, ANDREW, III. 308.
 PICKEN, EDENBERG, III. 309.
 PICKTHALL, MARJORIE, III. 726.
 Pickwick Papers, by Dickens, III. 464, 467, 468, 469.
 Pictorial Bible, by John Kitto, III. 374.
 Pictorial History of England, by G. L. Craik and another, III. 291.
 Picturesque, Essay on the, by Sir U. Price, II. 655.
 Pied Piper of Hamelin, by R. Browning, III. 553.
 Pierce Penniless, by T. Nash, I. 328, 329.
 PIERPONT, JOHN, III. 853.
 Pierre and his People, by Sir G. Parker, III. 728.
 Piers the Plowman, Vision of, I. 55-59.
 Pike County Ballads, by J. Hay, III. 825.
 Pilgrimage, by Sir Walter Raleigh, I. 307.
 Pilgrimage to El Medinah and Mecca, by Sir R. F. Burton, III. 609.
 Pilgrimage to Parnassus, I. 420.
 Pilgrims and the Peas, by Wolcot, II. 663.
 Pilgrims of the Night, by Faber, III. 482.
 Pilgrims of the Rhine, by Lytton, III. 332.
 Pilgrims of the Sun, by James Hogg, III. 292.
 Pilgrim's Progress, by Bunyan, I. 720, 724, 734.
 Pills to Purge Melancholy, by Tom D'Urfey, I. 782.
 Pilot, by J. Fenimore Cooper, III. 750, 751.
 PINDAR, PETER (John Wolcot), II. 662.
 Pindar, trans. by Gilbert West, II. 259; by Pyc, II. 685.
 Pindaric Odes, by Gray, II. 359.
 Pindarique Odes, by Cowley, I. 643.
 PINERO, SIR ARTHUR WING, III. 695, 722.
 Pines, by Bayard Taylor, III. 822.
 PINKERTON, JOHN, II. 637.
 Pioneers of France in the New World, by Parkman, III. 818, 819.
 Pious Editor's Creed, by Lowell, III. 803.
 PITZ, Mrs, II. 473.
 PITCAIRNE, ARCHIBALD, II. 103.
 PITSCOTTIE (R. Lindsay), I. 223.
 PITT, CHRISTOPHER, II. 259.
 PITT, WILLIAM, II. 680; Life of, by Earl Stanhope, III. 374.
 PITT, WILLIAM, EARL OF CHATHAM, III. 389.
 PITTER, RUTH, III. 852.
 Pitra, by Sheridan, II. 564, 565, 569.
 Plague, History of the, by Defoe, II. 151, 152.
 Plain Dealer, by Wycherley, II. 65, 66-68.
 Plain Speaker, by Hazlitt, III. 80, 83.
 Plain Tales from the Hills, by Kipling, III. 708.
 Plaint of Freedom, by W. J. Linton, III. 536.
 PLANCHE, JAMES ROBINSON, III. 577.
 Plato, by George Grote, III. 199; trans. by Jowett, III. 494.
 Playboy of the Western World, by Synge, III. 709.
 Playground of Europe, by Sir Leslie Stephen, III. 662.
 Play of Love, by John Heywood, I. 152.
 Play of the Weather, by J. Heywood, I. 153.
 Plays for Puritans, by G. B. Shaw, III. 706.
 Plays on the Passions, by Joanna Baillie, II. 729.
 Plays Pleasant and Unpleasant, by G. B. Shaw, III. 706.
 Plea for Ragged Schools, by Thomas Guthrie, III. 342.
 Pleasant Comedy of Old Fortunatus, by Dekker, I. 422, 424.
 Pleasures of Hope, by Campbell, II. 765, 767; of Imagination, by Abenside, II. 372; of Life, by Lord Avebury, III. 604; of Memory, by S. Rogers, II. 723, 724.
 Pliny's Letters, trans. by Melmoth, II. 391.
 PLUMER, WILLIAM C. F., III. 849.
 PLUMTRE, ANNE, II. 600.
 Plurality of Worlds, by Whewell, III. 198; by Baden Powell, III. 323.
 Plutarch's Lives, trans. by Langhorne, II. 621; by Sir Thomas North, I. 269.
 Poe, EDGAR ALLAN, III. 785.
 Poems by Two Brothers, III. 539, 540.
 Poems of Felicity, by T. Traherne, I. 776.
 Poesie, Arte of, by Puttenham, I. 266; Defence of, by Sidney, I. 289, 291; Observations on, by Campion, I. 400.
 Poet at the Breakfast Table, by O. W. Holmes, III. 791, 792.
 Poet's Portfolio, by W. W. Story, III. 784.
 Poetical Miscellanies, I. 258.
 Poetical Rhapsody, edited by Francis Davison, I. 258.
 Poetical Sketches, by W. Blake, II. 717.
 Poetry, Apologie for, by Sidney, I. 289, 291; Beginning of Christian, I. 9; English, I. 4; from Ælfred to the Conquest, I. 22; of the 10th Century (Religious), I. 22; Lyric, I. 41; Pastoral, I. 118; Renaissance of Wonder in, III. 1-10.
 Polar Star, by Letitia E. Landon, III. 182.
 Policy and Passion, by Mrs Campbell Praed, III. 732.
 Polite Conversation, by Swift, II. 125, 127, 144.
 Political Discourses, by Hume, II. 377.
 Political Economy, books on, by Adam Smith, II. 448; by Ricardo, II. 757; by Nassau Senior, III. 343; by Harriet Martineau, III. 388; by J. S. Mill, III. 443, 445.
 Political Institutions, by Herbert Spencer, III. 588.
 Political Justice, by Godwin, II. 702, 705.
 Political Litany, by William Hone, II. 759.
 Political Register, Cobbett's, II. 681.
 Political State of Great Britain, ed. by Abel Boyer, II. 387.
 Politics, by R. W. Emerson, III. 762.
 POLLARD, ALBERT FREDERICK, III. 847.
 POLLARD, ALFRED WILLIAM, III. 844.
 POLLOCK, SIR FREDERICK, III. 841.
 POLLOCK, WALTER HERRIES, III. 842.
 POLLOK, ROBERT, II. 792.
 Polly, by Dryden, II. 174.
 Polonius, by Edward FitzGerald, III. 424.
 Polychronicon, Higden's, I. 33; trans. by John of Trevisa, I. 84.
 Polyhymnia, by George Peele, I. 323.
 Polyolbion, by Drayton, I. 341, 342.
 Pomeroy Abbey, by Mrs H. Wood, III. 520.
 POMFREY, JOHN, II. 112.
 Pontiac, by Parkman, III. 818.
 Poor Gentleman, by Colman, II. 656, 657-659.
 Poor Jack, by Dibdin, II. 708.
 Poor Mallie's Elegy, by Burns, II. 822.
 Poor Richard's Almanack, by Franklin, III. 736, 740.
 POPE, ALEXANDER, II. 4, 178; Works and Life of, by Croker, Elwin, and Courthope, III. 490.
 POPE, WALTER, II. 98.
 Popes, History of the, by A. Bower, II. 387; by Creighton, III. 687.
 Popular Delusions, by C. Mackay, III. 481.
 Popular Government, by Sir H. J. S. Maine, III. 567.
 Popular Rhymes of Scotland, by Robert Chambers, III. 316.
 Popular Tales of the West Highlands, by J. F. Campbell, III. 585.
 Population, by Malthus, II. 707.
 PORSON, RICHARD, II. 637.
 PORTER, ANNA MARIA, II. 772.
 PORTER, JANE, II. 772.
 PORTER, Wm. S. ('O. Henry'), III. 833.
 PORTUS, BELLY, II. 646.
 Portugal, Traditions of, by Julia Pardoe, III. 384.
 Potiphar Papers, by G. W. Curtis, III. 784.
 POTTER, JOHN, II. 209.
 POUND, EZRA, III. 856.
 POWELL, BADEN, III. 323.
 POWELL, FREDERICK YORK, III. 842.
 PRAED, Mrs CAMPBELL, III. 730, 732.
 PRAED, WINTHROP MACAWORTH, III. 379.
 Præterita, by Ruskin, III. 572, 576.
 Prairie, by Fenimore Cooper, II. 750.
 Praise of Age, by Walter Kennedy, I. 201.
 Prayer of Columbus, by Whitman, III. 810.
 Preceptor, Dodsley's, II. 301.
 Prehistoric Times, by Lord Avebury, III. 664.
 Prelude, by Wordsworth, III. 11, 13, 14.
 Preludes, by Alice Meynell, III. 704.
 Pre-Raphaelites, III. 642.
 PRESCOTT, WILLIAM HICKLING, III. 764.
 Present Position of Catholics, by J. H. Newman, III. 339.
 Press, An Essay for the, by Asgill, II. 100.
 PRICE, RICHARD, II. 428.
 PRICE, SIR UVEDALE, II. 655.
 Pricke of Conscience, by Richard Rolle, I. 49.
 Pride and Prejudice, by Jane Austen, II. 774, 776-778.
 PRIDEAUX, HUMPHREY, II. 61.
 PRIESTLEY, JOHN BOYNTON, III. 720, 849.
 PRIESTLEY, JOSEPH, II. 539.
 Primitive Culture, by Sir E. B. Tylor, III. 663.
 Primitive Marriage, by J. F. McLennan, II. 613.
 Prince Arthur, by Sir R. Blackmore, II. 107.
 Prince Consort, Life of, by Sir T. Martin, III. 478.
 Prince Deukalion, by B. Taylor, III. 822.
 Prince Otto, by R. L. Stevenson, III. 698.
 Prince Rupert and the Cavaliers, Memoirs of, by Eliot Warburton, III. 274.
 Prince's Progress, by C. Rossetti, III. 646, 647.
 Princess, by Tennyson, III. 541, 545.
 Princess of Thule, by Wm. Black, III. 691.
 Principia, Newton's, II. 24.
 Principles of Biology, by Spencer, III. 587, 589; of Psychology, by Spencer, III. 586, 587, 589; of Sociology, by Spencer, III. 588.
 PRINGLE, THOMAS, II. 789; III. 733.
 PRINGLE-PATTISON, ANDREW SETH, III. 843.
 PRIOR, MATTHEW, II. 4, 5, 113.
 Prisoner of Chillon, by Byron, III. 130, 135.
 Prisoner of Zenda, by Sir Anthony Hope Hawkins, III. 708.
 Prisoners of Hope, by M. Johnston, III. 830.
 Private Papers of Henry Kyecroft, by George Gissing, III. 711.
 Probationary Odes, II. 670, 671.
 Problems of Life and Mind, by G. H. Lewes, III. 496.
 PROCTOR, ADELAIDE ANN, III. 528.
 PROCTOR, BRYAN WALLER ('Barty Cornwall'), III. 227.
 PROCTOR, EDNA DEAN, III. 854.
 Professor, by Charlotte Brontë, III. 521.
 Professor at the Breakfast Table, by O. W. Holmes, III. 791, 792.
 Professor's Love Story, by Sir J. M. Barrie, III. 705.
 Progress of Man, by Canning, II. 673, 674.
 Progress of Poesy, by Gray, II. 359, 364.
 Progress of Romance, by C. Reeve, II. 420.
 Prolegomena Logica, by H. L. Mansel, III. 497.
 Prolegomena to Ethics, by T. H. Green, III. 651.
 Prologue to the Satires, by Pope, II. 179, 183, 189.
 Prometheus, by R. Bridges, III. 693.
 Prometheus Unbound, by Shelley, III. 499, 113.
 Promos and Cassandra, by Whetstone, I. 333.
 Prophecy, by T. Chatterton, II. 513.
 Prophecy of Famine, by Churchill, II. 495, 496.
 Prose, Beginning of English, I. 19.
 Prose Edda, trans. by Dasent, III. 499.
 Protopopoeia, by Spenser, I. 295.
 Prothalamion, by Spenser, I. 293, 296.
 PROTHRO, ROWLAND EDMUND (Lord Ernie), III. 843.
 PROTHRO, SIR GEORGE WALTER, III. 842.
 Proud Maise, by Scott, III. 33, 39.
 PROUD, FATHER (F. S. Mahony), III. 262.
 Proverbial Philosophy, by Tupper, III. 491.

- Proverbs in Porcelain, by Austin Dobson, III, 688.
- Provincial Tales, by N. Hawthorne, III, 779.
- Provoked Wife, by Sir J. Vanbrugh, II, 80.
- Provost, by John Galt, III, 297, 298, 299.
- Prue and I, by G. W. Curtis, III, 784.
- PRUYNE, WILLIAM, I, 584.
- Psalm of Life, by H. W. Longfellow, III, 766.
- PSALMANAZAR, GEORGE, II, 387.
- Psalms, Translation of the, Rous's version, I, 503, 515; Zachary Boyd's version, I, 514; by Dr Arthur Johnston, I, 519; Denham, I, 641; Tate and Brady's version, II, 60.
- Pseudodoxia Epidemica, by Sir T. Browne, I, 590.
- Psyche, by Mrs Tighe, II, 599.
- Psychology, Principles of, by Wm. James, III, 831.
- Public Advertiser, II, 517.
- Puck, by Ouida, III, 690.
- Pudd'nhead Wilson, by Mark Twain, III, 826.
- Pulley, by George Herbert, I, 496.
- Pulvis et Umbra, by Stevenson, III, 702.
- Punch, III, 138, 328, 329, 400, 463, 492, 696.
- PURCHAS, SAMUEL, I, 440.
- Purgatory of Suicides, by Thomas Cooper, III, 376, 377.
- Puritan and Anglican, by Dowden, III, 687.
- Puritan Movement, I, 542.
- Purple East, by Sir Wm. Watson, III, 706.
- Purple Island, by P. Fletcher, I, 445, 446.
- Pursuits of Literature, by Mathias, II, 678.
- PURVEY, JOHN, I, 87.
- PUSEY, EDWARD BOUVERIE, III, 538.
- Put Yourself in his Place, by Charles Reade, III, 483.
- PUTTENHAM, GEORGE, I, 266.
- PYE, HENRY JAMES, II, 685.
- Q (Sir A. T. Quiller-Couch), III, 846.
- Quakers, Sect founded, I, 716.
- QUARLES, FRANCIS, I, 566.
- Quarterly Magazine, Knight's, III, 266.
- Quarterly Review, II, 669.
- Queechy, by Susan Warner, III, 795.
- Queen Anne, Age of, II, 119.
- Queen Anne, Reign of, by Earl Stanhope, III, 374; by Burton, III, 398; by McCarthy, III, 660.
- Queen's Ester, by Quarles, I, 566.
- Queen Elizabeth, by Cressington, III, 687; Court of, by Lucy Aldin, III, 178.
- Queen Mab, by Shelley, III, 107.
- Queen Mary, by Tennyson, III, 542.
- Queen Victoria, by Lytton Strachey, III, 715.
- Queens of England, by Miss Strickland, III, 281.
- Queens of Scotland, by Miss Strickland, III, 281.
- Queen's Wake, by James Hogg, III, 292, 294.
- Quentin Durward, by Scott, III, 37.
- Questions at Issue, by Sir E. Gosse, III, 690.
- Quest of the Sangreal, by R. S. Hawker, III, 381.
- QUILLER-COUCH, SIR ARTHUR THOMAS, III, 846.
- QUIN, DAN (A. H. Lewis), III, 855.
- Quince, by Præd, III, 380.
- Qulp, by George Herbert, I, 497.
- Quisanté, by Sir Anthony Hope Hawkins, III, 708.
- Quizology of the British Drama, by A. Beckett, III, 400.
- Rab and his Friends, by Dr J. Brown, III, 449.
- Rabelais, trans. by Sir Thomas Urquhart, I, 824.
- RADCLIFFE, MRS. II, 594.
- RAIMOND, C. E. (Elizabeth Robins), III, 851.
- Rainbow, by Præd, III, 381.
- RALEIGH, SIR WALTER, I, 304.
- RALEIGH, SIR WALTER, III, 845.
- Ralph Roister Doister, by Udall, I, 155, 239.
- Rambler, II, 459, 461.
- RAMÉE, LOUISE DE LA (Ouida), III, 690.
- RANSAY, ALLAN, II, 312.
- RANSAY, DEAN, III, 314.
- RANDALL, JAMES RYDER, III, 854.
- RANDOLPH, THOMAS, I, 572.
- Ranolf and Amohia, by A. Domett, III, 742.
- Rape of Lucrece, by T. Heywood, I, 431, 433; by Shakespeare, I, 361, 362, 363.
- Rape of the Lock, by Pope, II, 178, 180, 181, 182, 185.
- Rapture, by T. Traherne, I, 776.
- Rare Adventures, by W. Lithgow, I, 517.
- RASHDALL, HASTINGS, III, 844.
- RASSE, RUDOLF ERICH, II, 714.
- Rasselas, by Samuel Johnson, II, 459, 462.
- RASTELL, JOHN, I, 152, 157.
- Rationalism, History of, by W. E. H. Lecky, III, 682.
- Rational Religion, by Goldwin Smith, III, 727.
- Rational Theology, by J. Tulloch, III, 506.
- Rattlin the Reefer, by E. Howard, III, 259.
- Raven, by E. A. Poe, III, 786, 787, 788.
- Ravenscroft Hall, by J. P. Waller, III, 304.
- Ravenshoe, by H. Kingsley, III, 517, 518.
- RAY, JOHN, II, 26.
- REACH, ANGUS BETHUNE, III, 505.
- READ, THOMAS BUCHANAN, III, 853.
- READ, CHARLES, III, 482, 729.
- READ, JOHN EDMUND, III, 267.
- Ready-Money Mortiboy, by Besant and Rice, II, 650, 651.
- Realism, by Sir A. Helps, III, 478.
- Real Presence, Doctrine of the, by Edward Bouverie Pusey, III, 357.
- Rebellion, History of the, by Lord Clarendon, I, 652.
- Rebellion, History of the Irish, by W. H. Maxwell, III, 268.
- Rebellions in Scotland, History of the, by Robert Chambers, III, 316.
- Recess, by Sophia Lee, II, 653.
- Recessional, by Rudyard Kipling, III, 708.
- Recollections of a Chaperon, II, 772.
- Records of the Western Shore, by R. S. Hawker, III, 381.
- Recreations of a Country Parson, by A. K. H. Boyd, III, 624.
- Recruiting Officer, by Farquhar, II, 90, 91.
- Red as a Rose is She, by Miss Broughton, III, 690.
- Red Badge of Courage, by Stephen Crane, III, 832.
- Redgauntlet, by Scott, III, 34.
- Red Rover, by Fenimore Cooper, III, 750.
- REEVE, CLARA, II, 420.
- REEVES, MRS HENRY, III, 850.
- REEVES, W. P., III, 729, 730.
- Reflections on the Dead-Alive, by John Banim, III, 353.
- Reflections upon Exile, by Lord Bolingbroke, II, 202, 203.
- Reformation, History of, by John Knox, I, 220; by Peter Heylyn, I, 582; by Gilbert Stuart, II, 388; by William Cobbett, II, 682.
- Reformation of the Church of England, by Bishop Burnet, II, 30.
- Reginald Dalton, by J. G. Lockhart, III, 250.
- Reginald Hastings, by Eliot Warburton, III, 274.
- Rehearsal, by the Duke of Buckingham, I, 788.
- REID, CAPTAIN MAYNE, III, 505.
- REID, SIR THOMAS WEMYSS, III, 841.
- REID, THOMAS, II, 388.
- Reign of Law, by J. L. Allen, III, 831.
- Rejected Addresses, by James and Horace Smith, III, 159.
- Relapse, by Sir J. Vanbrugh, II, 80.
- Religio Laici, by Dryden, I, 793, 796, 800.
- Religio Medici, by Sir T. Browne, I, 590, 595.
- Religion, A Study of, by Martineau, III, 392.
- Religion and Science, by J. W. Draper, III, 825.
- Religion of the Future, by J. B. Crozier, III, 727.
- Religion of the Protestants, by Chillingworth, I, 586.
- Religions of the World, by F. D. Maurice, III, 441.
- Religious Literature of the Middle English Period, I, 38, 49.
- Religious Moralities, I, 107.
- Religious Poetry of the 10th Century, I, 22.
- Reliques, Percy's, II, 504.
- Reliques of Irish Poetry, by Charlotte Brooke, II, 396.
- Reliquie Baxteriana, I, 665.
- Reliquie Wottoniana, I, 393.
- Reminiscences, by Carlyle, III, 404, 405, 407, 502.
- Reminiscences of a Highland Parish, by Norman Macleod, III, 397.
- Reminiscences of Scottish Life and Character, by Dean Ramsay, III, 314.
- Remorse, by Coleridge, III, 60, 63.
- Renaissance, by W. H. Pater, III, 607; by J. A. Symonds, III, 640.
- Renaissance and Reformation Period, I, 120.
- Renaissance of Wonder in Poetry, III, 1-10.
- RENNELL OF RODD, BARON, III, 844.
- Representative, newspaper, begun, III, 260.
- Representative Government, by J. S. Mill, III, 443, 444.
- Representative Men, by R. W. Emerson, III, 760, 762.
- Repressor, by Bishop Peacock, I, 91.
- Resignation, by H. W. Longfellow, III, 769, 771.
- Resolution and Independence, by Wordsworth, III, 16, 20.
- Resolves, by Owen Felltham, I, 578.
- Restoration Period, I, 729.
- Resurrection, by Cowley, I, 645.
- Retaliation, by Goldsmith, II, 480, 487.
- Retired from Business, by Douglas Jerrold, III, 328, 330.
- Retreat, by H. Vaughan, I, 682, 683.
- Return from Parnassus, I, 420.
- Return of the Native, by T. Hardy, III, 679.
- Revenge, by Edward Young, II, 260.
- Revenge, Ballad of the, by Tennyson, III, 542.
- Revenge's Tragedy, by Tourneur, I, 430.
- Reveries of a Bachelor, by D. G. Mitchell, III, 821.
- Reversionary Payments, by Price, II, 428.
- Review, edited by Defoe, II, 150.
- Revolt in the Desert, by T. E. Lawrence, III, 716.
- Revolt of Islam, by Shelley, III, 108, 113.
- Revolution, History of the, by Mackintosh, II, 642.
- Revolution in Tanner's Lane, by W. Hale White, III, 687.
- Revolution Period and After, II, 13.
- Reynard the Fox, by J. Maschfield, III, 710.
- REYNOLDS, FREDERIC, II, 710.
- REYNOLDS, GEORGE NUGENT, II, 759.
- REYNOLDS, JOHN HAMILTON, III, 268.
- REYNOLDS, SIR JOSHUA, II, 542.
- Rhetoric, by Campbell, II, 427.
- Rhoda Fleming, by G. Meredith, III, 658.
- RHODES, JAMES FORD, III, 854.
- RHODES, WILLIAM BARNES, II, 710.
- Rhodora, by R. W. Emerson, III, 763.
- Rhymed Tragedy, introduced, I, 787.
- RHYMER, THOMAS THE, I, 43, 166.
- Rhymes à la Mode, by A. Lang, III, 692.
- Rhymes of Childhood, by J. W. Riley, III, 831.
- Rhythm of Life, by Alice Meynell, III, 704.
- RICARDO, DAVID, II, 757.
- RICE, JAMES, III, 650.
- Riceyman Steps, by Arnold Bennett, III, 712.
- RICH, BARNABE, I, 238, 333.
- Richard Cable, by Baring-Gould, III, 664.
- Richard Carvel, by W. Churchill, III, 832.
- Richard Cour de Lion, I, 50.
- Richard Edney, by Sylvester Judd, III, 773.
- Richard II., by Shakespeare, I, 360; Richard III., I, 360.
- Richard III., History of, by Sir Thomas More, I, 121, 123.
- RICHARDS, IVOR ARMSTRONG, III, 724, 849.
- RICHARDSON, DOROTHY M., III, 720, 851.
- RICHARDSON, JOHN, III, 720, 839.
- RICHARDSON, JOSEPH, II, 670.
- RICHARDSON, SAMUEL, II, 6, 294; book on, by Austin Dobson, III, 688.
- Richardson, by G. P. R. James, III, 327; by Lord Lytton, III, 333.
- RIDDELL, HENRY SCOTT, III, 311.
- Riddle of Existence, by Goldwin Smith, III, 727.
- Riddle on the Letter H, by Catherine Maria Fanshawe, II, 739.
- Riddles, by Cynewulf, I, 13.
- Riders to the Sea, by Synge, III, 709.
- RIDGE, WILLIAM PETT, III, 846.
- Rienzi, by Lord Lytton, III, 332; by Mary Russell Mitford, III, 176.
- Rifle Brigade, by Sir J. Kincaid, III, 223.
- Rights of Man, by Paine, II, 559, 560.
- Rights of Woman, by Mary W. Godwin, III, 706.
- RILEY, JAMES WHITCOMB, III, 831.
- Rimini, by Leigh Hunt, III, 148.
- Ring and Book, by R. Browning, III, 555, 556, 559, 565.
- Ringan Gilhaize, by John Galt, III, 297.
- RIPLEY, GEORGE, III, 763.
- Rise and Progress of Religion, by Doddridge, II, 332.
- RITA (Mrs Desmond Humphreys), III, 850.
- RITCHIE, LADY, III, 689.
- RITCHIE, LEITCH, III, 327.
- RITSON, JOSEPH, II, 637.
- Ritter Bann, by Campbell, II, 766.
- Rival Queens, or Alexander the Great, by N. Lee, II, 88.
- Rivals, by Sheridan, II, 564, 565.
- Road to Ruin, by T. Holcroft, II, 570.
- Roaring Girl, by Dekker and Middleton, I, 423, 458.

- Rob Roy, by Scott, III. 34, 43.
 Robene and Makyn, by Henryson, I. 189.
 Robert Elsmere, by Mrs Humphry Ward, III. 704.
 Robert Falconer, by George Macdonald, III. 606.
 Robert Macaire, by Henley and Henderson, III. 695, 699.
 ROBERTS, SIR CHARLES GEORGE DOUGLAS, III. 726, 728.
 ROBERTS, LORD, III. 840.
 ROBERTS, MORLEY, III. 844.
 ROBERTSON, ALEXANDER, II. 309.
 ROBERTSON, FREDERICK WILLIAM, III. 493; Life of, by Stopford A. Brooke, III. 662.
 ROBERTSON, JOHN MACKINNON, III. 843.
 ROBERTSON, THOMAS WILLIAM, III. 637.
 ROBERTSON, WILLIAM, II. 382.
 Robin Hood and the Curtal Friar, I. 531.
 ROBINS, ELIZABETH, III. 851.
 ROBINSON, EDWIN A., III. 835.
 ROBINSON, HENRY CRABE, III. 168.
 ROBINSON, MARY (Mide. Duclaux), III. 704.
 ROBINSON, PHILIP STEWART, III. 842.
 Robinson Crusoe, by Defoe, II. 6, 150, 156-158.
 ROCHE, MAZO DE LA, III. 852.
 ROCHESTER, THE EARL OF (John Wilmot), I. 779.
 Rock of Ages, by A. M. Toplady, II. 456.
 Rocks Ahead, by W. R. Greg, III. 400.
 RODD, BARON KENNEL OF, III. 844.
 Roderick, by Southey, III. 48, 49, 51.
 Roderick Random, by Smollett, II. 442, 443, 445.
 Rodney Stone, by Sir A. C. Doyle, III. 707.
 ROE, EDWARD PAYSON, III. 825.
 ROGER DE HOVEDEN, I. 33.
 ROGER OF WENDOVER, I. 33.
 ROGERS, HENRY, III. 374.
 ROGERS, SAMUEL, III. 723; Recollections of, by Alexander Dyce, III. 324.
 Rokeby, by Scott, III. 38.
 ROLLE, RICHARD, OF HAMPOLE, I. 49.
 Rolliad, II. 669-672.
 ROLLOCK, ROBERT, I. 230.
 Roman, by S. T. Dobell, III. 603.
 Romaner of the Forest, by Mrs Radcliffe, II. 594.
 Romance of the Nineteenth Century, by Mallock, III. 703.
 Romance of War, by James Grant, III. 578.
 Romances, Later, I. 50; Alliterative, I. 51; Metrical, I. 51.
 Roman de Rou, by Wace, I. 34.
 ROMANES, GEORGE JOHN, III. 842.
 Roman History, by Sir G. C. Lewis, III. 306; by Charles Merivale, III. 307.
 Roman Literature, History of, by J. C. Dampier, III. 219.
 Roman Poets of the Republic, by W. Y. Sellars, III. 634.
 Roman Republic, by Ferguson, II. 430.
 Roman Republic, Fall of the, by C. Merivale, III. 307.
 Romantic, On the Epithet, by J. Foster, II. 738.
 Romantic Revival, III. 1.
 Romney Rye, by G. H. Borrow, III. 432, 434.
 Rosamund of the Rose, I. 61.
 Rome, History of, by Dr T. Arnold, III. 202.
 Romeo and Juliet, by Shakespeare, I. 358.
 Romulus and Juliet, by A. Broke, I. 263.
 Ronola, by George Eliot, III. 530, 531.
 Ronald and Dorna, by Aaron Hill, II. 198.
 Rondel of Lufe, by Alexander Scott, I. 232.
 Rookwood, by W. H. Ainsworth, III. 377.
 Room of One's Own, by Virginia Woolf, III. 705.
 ROOSEVELT, THEODORE, III. 855.
 Roots of the Mountains, by William Morris, III. 666, 667.
 ROVER, WILLIAM, I. 125.
 Rory O'More, by Samuel Lover, III. 355.
 Ros, Sir Richard, I. 81.
 Rosalind and Helen, by Shelley, III. 108.
 Rosalynde, by T. Lodge, I. 316, 317.
 Rosamund, by Swinburne, III. 674.
 Rosciad, by Churchill, II. 495.
 ROSCOE, WILLIAM, II. 639.
 ROSCOE, WILLIAM CALDWELL, III. 625.
 ROSCOMMON, EARL OF, I. 777.
 ROSE, JOHN HOLLAND, III. 843.
 ROSE, WILLIAM STEWART, II. 760.
 Rose Aylmer, by W. S. Lander, III. 142.
 ROSEBERY, EARL OF, III. 842.
 ROSS, ALEXANDER, II. 317.
 ROSS, MARTIN (Violet Martin), III. 851.
 ROSSETTI, CHRISTINA, III. 646.
 ROSSETTI, DANTE GABRIEL, III. 10, 641.
 ROSSETTI, WILLIAM MICHAEL, III. 839.
 ROSTOVITZ, MICHAEL I., III. 855.
 ROUS, FRANCIS, I. 503.
 Rousseau, by Lord Morley, III. 686.
 Rovers, by Canning, II. 673, 675, 676.
 Rover's Song, by Eliza Cook, III. 528.
 Row, JOHN, I. 514.
 ROWE, NICHOLAS, II. 63.
 Rowfant Rhymes, by F. Locker-Lampson, III. 609.
 ROWLEY, THOMAS (Chatterton), II. 512.
 ROWLEY, WILLIAM, I. 478.
 Royal Society, I. 685, 726, 733.
 Royston Gower, by Thomas Miller, III. 377.
 Roy's Wife, by Mrs Grant, II. 596.
 Rudder Grange, by F. R. Stockton, III. 824.
 RUDDIMAN, THOMAS, II. 305.
 Ruined Burg, in Exeter Book, I. 8.
 Ruins of Nineveh, by Sir A. H. Layard, III. 498.
 Rule Britannia, by J. Thomson (?), II. 321, 329.
 Rumours from an Æolian Harp, by H. D. Thoreau, III. 798.
 Rump, by J. Tatham, I. 787.
 Runnabede, by John Logan, II. 529, 532.
 Rupert of Hentzau, by Sir Anthony Hope Hawkins, III. 708.
 Rural England, by Sir R. Haggard, III. 703.
 Rural Life in England, by Howitt, III. 283.
 Rural Rides, by Cobbett, II. 682-685.
 Rural Sketches, by Thomas Miller, III. 377.
 RUSDEN, G. W., III. 730.
 RUSKIN, JOHN, III. 568.
 RUSSELL, EARL, III. 318.
 RUSSELL, BERTRAND, 3RD EARL, III. 847.
 RUSSELL, ELIZABETH MARY, COUNTESS, III. 852.
 RUSSELL, GEORGE W., III. 710.
 RUSSELL, IRWIN, III. 854.
 RUSSELL, LADY RACHEL, II. 68.
 RUSSELL, SIR WILLIAM HOWARD, III. 578.
 RUSSELL, WILLIAM, II. 388.
 RUSSELL, WILLIAM CLARK, III. 691.
 Ruth, by Mrs Gaskell, III. 527; by Thomas Hood, III. 140.
 RUTHERFORD, MARK (W. H. White), III. 687.
 RUTHERFORD, SAMUEL, I. 820.
 Ruthwell Cross, I. 10, 163, 169.
 RYCAUT, SIR PAUL, I. 273.
 RYMER, THOMAS, I. 751.
 Sabbath, by J. Grahame, II. 689, 690.
 Sack of Baltimore, by T. O. Davis, III. 365.
 SACKVILLE, CHARLES (Earl of Dorset), I. 781.
 SACKVILLE, THOMAS (Earl of Dorset), I. 237, 245.
 SACKVILLE-WEST, HON. VICTORIA MARY, III. 852.
 Sacred and Legendary Art, by Adna Jameson, III. 183.
 Sacred Latin Poetry, by Trench, III. 303.
 Sacred Theory of the Earth, by Thomas Burnet, II. 28.
 Sad Fortunes of Amos Barton, by George Eliot, III. 529, 532.
 Saga of Burnt Njal, tr. by Dasent, III. 499.
 Sailors and Saints, by Gascook, III. 259.
 St Albans, Book of, by Dame Juliana Berners, I. 99.
 St Augustine's Holiday, by W. Alexander, III. 584.
 St Giles and St James, by Douglas Jerrold, III. 329, 330.
 St Ives, by Stevenson, III. 690.
 Saint Joan, by G. B. Shaw, III. 706.
 St JOHN, C. G. W., III. 839.
 St JOHN, HENRY. See HOLLINGBROKE.
 St Kilda, Voyage to, by M. Martin, II. 303.
 St Leon, by William Godwin, II. 702, 704.
 Saint Mary Magdalene, by Crashaw, I. 678.
 St Patrick, Legends of, by Aubrey de Vere, III. 581.
 St Paul and Protestantism, by M. Arnold, III. 594.
 St Paul's Cathedral, by Milman, III. 209.
 St Peter's Complaint, by Southwell, I. 337.
 St Roman's Well, by Scott, III. 46.
 SAINTSBURY, GEORGE E. B., III. 693.
 Saints' Everlasting Rest, by Baxter, I. 664.
 St Stephen's, by Lord Lytton, III. 333, 336.
 SALA, GEORGE AUGUSTUS HENRY, III. 624.
 Salathiel, by George Croly, III. 171.
 SALE, GEORGE, II. 888.
 Salem Chapel, by Mrs Oliphant, III. 537, 538.
 SALISBURY, JOHN OF, I. 34.
 Sally in our Alley, by Henry Carey, II. 331.
 Salmagundi, III. 743, 745.
 Salmonia, by Sir H. Davy, II. 761, 762.
 Salvation, by T. Traherne, I. 776.
 Samor, by Milman, III. 208, 212.
 Sam Slick, by T. C. Haliburton, III. 726.
 SASSON Agonistes, by Milton, I. 690.
 SANDBERG, CARL, III. 856.
 SANDERSON, ROBERT, I. 562.
 Sandford and Merton, by T. Day, II. 738; Modern, by Burnand, III. 694.
 Sandra Belloni, by G. Meredith, III. 658.
 Sandy Foundation Shaken, by Penn, II. 51.
 SANDYS, GEORGE, I. 456.
 SANGSTER, CHARLES, III. 726.
 SANTAYANA, GEORGE, III. 835.
 Sappho and Phao, by Lyly, I. 274, 315.
 Sappho's Song, by L. E. Landon, III. 181.
 Saracen, Land of the, by Bayard Taylor, III. 821.
 Saracens, by S. Ockley, II. 211.
 Saracinesca, by F. M. Crawford, III. 832.
 Sard Hariker, by Masefield, III. 710.
 Sartor Resartus, by Carlyle, III. 403, 405, 406, 408.
 SASSOON, SEGFRIED L., III. 848.
 Satan, by George Croly, III. 172; by Robert Montgomery, III. 238.
 Satan Absolved, by W. S. Blunt, III. 691.
 Satire and Satirists, by J. Hannay, III. 632.
 Satires of Pope, III. 183; by Dryden, I. 793, 797-799.
 Satirist, Hall claims to be the First, I. 417.
 Satiromastix, by Dekker, I. 423.
 Saturn and Thea, by Keats, III. 103.
 Satyr against Mankind, by the Earl of Rochester, I. 780.
 Satyre of the Thrie Estaitis, by Lyndsay, I. 204, 207.
 Saul, by Byron, III. 135.
 SAUNDERS, MISS M. M., III. 726.
 SAVAGE, RICHARD, II. 282; Life of, by Johnson, II. 457.
 SAYLE, GEORGE. See HALIFAX, MARQUIS OF, I. 755.
 SAVONAROLA, by Alfred Austin, III. 681.
 SAXBY, COLONEL EDWARD, I. 622.
 SAXE, JOHN GODFREY, III. 853.
 Saxon Saints, Legends of the, by A. de Vere, III. 581.
 SAYCE, ARCHIBALD HENRY, III. 842.
 SAYERS, DOROTHY, III. 721, 852.
 Savings and Doings, by Theodore E. Hook, III. 164.
 Say not the struggle, by Clough, III. 513.
 Scalliger, by Mark Pattison, III. 480.
 Scalp Hunters, by T. Mayne Reid, III. 506.
 Scaramonch in Naxos, by J. Davidson, III. 706.
 Scarlet Letter, by Hawthorne, III. 779, 780, 781, 783.
 Scenes and Legends in the North of Scotland, by Hugh Miller, III. 285.
 Scenes of Infancy, by John Leyden, II. 691.
 Scenes from Clerical Life, by George Eliot, III. 529.
 Schiller, by Carlyle, III. 402.
 Schloss Hainfeld, by Basil Hall, III. 227.
 Scholmaster, by Roger Ascham, I. 144, 146.
 School, by T. W. Robertson, III. 637.
 School-Days, In, by Whittier, III. 777.
 School for Scandal, by Sheridan, II. 564, 565, 567.
 Schoolmistress, by Shenstone, II. 353, 354.
 School of Abuse, by Stephen Gosson, I. 266.
 School of Compliment, by Shirley, I. 484.
 Short Poeme of Tyme, by James I., I. 505.
 SCHREINER, MRS CROWWRIGHT, III. 733.
 SCHURMAN, JACOB GOULD, III. 854.
 Scientific Memoirs, by T. H. Huxley, III. 619, 620.
 Scientific Spirit of the Age, by F. P. Cobbe, III. 637.
 Scinde, Conquest of, by Napier, III. 229.
 SCORESBY, WILLIAM, III. 266.
 SCOT, REGINALD, I. 333.
 Scot Abroad, by J. H. Burton, III. 398.
 Scotchironica, by John Fordun, I. 182.
 Scotland, Church of, by Spottiswoode, I. 512; by Calderwood, I. 514; by Row, I. 514.
 Scotland, History of, by Boece, I. 212; by Leslie, I. 227; by Keith, II. 305; by Robertson, II. 382; by W. Tytler, II. 388; by Lord Hailes, II. 456; by Laing, II. 637; by Pinkerton, II. 637; by Fraser Tytler, III. 290; by Cosmo Innes, III. 291; by Burton, III. 398; by Lang, III. 692.
 Scotland's Skait, by H. Macneil, II. 802.
 Scotland Yet, by H. S. Riddell, III. 311.
 Scots, Cleveland's Satire on the, I. 639.
 Scots' Figures, by J. Tatham, I. 787.
 Scots New Testament, I. 212.
 Scots Worthies, by John Howie, II. 640.
 SCOTT, ALEXANDER, I. 231.

- SCOTT, DUNCAN C., III, 729.
 SCOTT, HUGH STOWELL, III, 845.
 SCOTT, JOHN, II, 456.
 SCOTT, LADY JOHN, III, 850.
 SCOTT, MICHAEL, III, 254.
 SCOTT, SIR WALTER, III, 7, 8, 30; Life of, by J. G. Lockhart, III, 250, 251-253; book on, by Saintry, III, 693.
 SCOTT, WILLIAM BEM, III, 490.
 Scottish Ballads, John Pinkerton's, II, 637.
 Scottish Chiefs, by Jane Porter, II, 773.
 Scottish Fifteenth-Century Prose, I, 188.
 Scottish Life and Character, by Dean Ramsay, III, 314.
 Scottish Literature, I, 103, 817; from James VI. to the Civil War, I, 504; Scottish Vernacular Revival, II, 307; Scottish Vernacular Writers under George III., II, 795.
 Scottish Philosophy, by M'Cosh, III, 397.
 Scottish Poems, coll. by Pinkerton, II, 637.
 Scottish Poets, Early Minor, I, 208.
 Scottish Prose Writers, Lesser Sixteenth-Century, I, 230.
 Scottish Rivers, by Dick Lauder, III, 305.
 Scottish Songs, Herd's Collection of, II, 797.
 Scottishse Kyngs, by Skelton, I, 115.
 Scriblerus Club, I, 183.
 Scribner's Monthly, III, 778.
 SCULLY, W. C., III, 733.
 Sea-divided Gael, by T. D. McGe, III, 580.
 Seafarer, in Exeter Book, I, 8.
 Sea-Limits, by D. G. Rossetti, III, 645.
 SEAMAN, SIR OWEN, III, 845.
 Seaman's Secrets, by John Davis, I, 390.
 Sea Nymphs, by Thomas Miller, III, 377.
 Sea Power, by A. T. Mahan, III, 827.
 SEARCH, EDWARD (Tucker), II, 338.
 Search after Happiness, by Hannah More, II, 577.
 Search, by Alfred Austin, III, 681.
 Seasons, by Thomson, II, 321, 323-26; III, 5.
 Sea-spray and Smoke-drift, by A. L. Gordon, III, 731.
 Seat of Authority, by J. Martineau, III, 392, 393.
 Seats of the Mighty, by Sir G. Parker, III, 725.
 SECUMBE, THOMAS, III, 846.
 Secret of Narcisse, by Sir E. Gosse, III, 606.
 SEDGWICK, ADAM, III, 202.
 SEDGWICK, ANNE DOUGLAS, III, 855.
 SEDLEY, SIR CHARLES, I, 778.
 SEGER, ALAN, III, 856.
 SEELEY, SIR JOHN ROBERT, III, 649.
 Sejanus, by Ben Jonson, I, 402.
 SELDEN, JOHN, I, 546.
 Select Charters, by William Stubbs, III, 629.
 Self-control, by Mary Brunt, II, 772.
 Self-Culture, by J. S. Blackie, III, 490.
 Self-Help, by Samuel Smiles, III, 475.
 Self-Reliance, by R. W. Emerson, III, 761.
 SELLAR, WILLIAM YOUNG, III, 634.
 Semites, Religion of, by Robertson Smith, III, 687.
 SENFILL, FRANCIS, I, 819.
 SENFILL, ROBERT, I, 232.
 SENFILL, ROBERT, I, 818.
 SENFILL, SIR JAMES, I, 818.
 Seneca, trans. by L'Estrange, I, 742.
 SENIOR-NASSAU WILLIAM, III, 343.
 Sense and Sensibility, by Jane Austen, II, 774, 779.
 Senses and Instincts, by Aevbury, III, 664.
 Senses and the Intellect, by Bain, III, 497.
 Sensitive Plant, by Shelley, III, 112.
 Sentimental Journey, by Sterne, II, 402, 404, 409.
 Sentimental Tommy, by Sir J. M. Barrie, III, 705.
 Sepoy War, by Kaye, III, 482.
 SERGEANT, E. F. ADELIN, III, 850.
 SERVICE, ROBERT, III, 728.
 Sesame and Lilies, by Ruskin, III, 571.
 Seth's Brother's Wife, by H. Frederic, III, 832.
 SETON-THOMPSON, ERNEST, III, 845.
 SETTLE, ELKANAH, II, 71.
 Seven Lamps of Architecture, by Ruskin, III, 568, 569, 572, 573.
 Seven Pillars of Wisdom, by T. E. Lawrence, III, 716.
 Seven Sages, I, 51.
 SEWALL, SAMUEL, III, 735.
 SEWARD, ANNA, II, 576.
 Sexton's Daughter, by J. Sterling, III, 271.
 Shadows of Shasta, by Joaquin Miller, III, 828.
 SHADWELL, THOMAS, I, 729; II, 63; Satire on, by Dryden, I, 793, 799.
 SHAPTESBURY, EARL OF, 167.
 SHARP, JOHN CAMPBELL, III, 830.
 Shakespeare, Comments on the Commentators of, by H. J. Pye, II, 636.
 SHAKESPEARE, WILLIAM, I, 355; Portraits of, I, 376; ed. by Johnson, II, 459, 460; Beauties of, by Dr Dodd, II, 456; Essay on, by Farmer, II, 629; Illustrations of, by Francis Douce, II, 713; Lectures and Notes on, by Coleridge, III, 60, 69; Characters of, by Hazlitt, III, 80; his Mind and Art, by Prof. Dowden, III, 687; Life of, by Sir Sidney Lee, III, 707; Variorum edition, by Furness, III, 825.
 Shakespeare and his Forerunners, by Sidney Lanier, III, 828.
 Shakespeare's Predecessors, by J. A. Symonds, III, 640.
 Shakespeare to Pope, From, by Sir Edmund Gosse, III, 696.
 Shakesperian Forgeries, Ireland's, II, 711.
 SHAMUS O'BRIEN, by J. S. Le Fanu, III, 365.
 Shandon Bells, by Mahony, III, 254; by William Black, III, 691.
 SHAN VAN VOCHT, III, 579.
 SHAPCOTT, REUBEN (W. Hale White), III, 687.
 SHARP, RICHARD, II, 713.
 SHARP, WILLIAM, III, 705.
 SHAUGHRAUN, by Dion Boucicault, III, 585.
 SHAW, GEORGE BERNARD, III, 705, 722.
 SHAW, HENRY WHEELER, III, 853.
 She, by Sir Rider Haggard, III, 703.
 SHEFFIELD, JOHN, II, 106.
 SHELL, RICHARD LALOR, III, 351.
 She is far from the Land, by Moore, III, 348.
 SHELLEY, MARY W., III, 519.
 SHELLEY, PERCY BYSSHE, III, 9, 107; Early Life, by MacCarthy, III, 583; Life, by Dowden, III, 687.
 SHENSTONE, WILLIAM, II, 353.
 Shepherds' Hunting, by Wither, I, 499.
 Shepherd's Calendar, by Spenser, I, 293, 298.
 Shepherd's Play, in Wakefield Plays, I, 108.
 Shepherd's Song, by Joanna Baillie, II, 731.
 Shepherd's Week, by Gay, II, 172, 174.
 SHERRIDAN, RICHARD BRINSLEY, II, 563.
 SHERLOCK, THOMAS, II, 42.
 SHERLOCK, WILLIAM, II, 40.
 Sherlock Holmes, by Sir A. C. Doyle, III, 707.
 SHERRIFF, ROBERT CEDRIC, III, 849.
 SHERWOOD, MARY MARTHA, III, 324.
 She Stoops to Conquer, by Goldsmith, II, 480, 488-490.
 She would and she would not, by Colley Cibber, II, 272, 273.
 Ship of Fools, by Alexander Barclay, I, 116.
 Ship's Adventure, by Clark Russell, III, 691.
 Shipwreck, by William Falconer, II, 498.
 SHIRLEY, JAMES, I, 484, 729.
 Shirley, by C. Brontë, III, 523, 524, 525.
 Shoemaker's Holiday, by Dekker, I, 422.
 SHORTER, CLEMENT KING, III, 844.
 SHORTER, MRS CLEMENT, III, 851.
 Shortest Way with Dissenters, by Defoe, II, 149.
 SHORTHOUSE, JOSEPH HENRY, III, 637.
 Short Studies, by Froude, III, 502, 504.
 Shropshire Lad, by A. E. Housman, III, 713, 722.
 Sibylline Leaves, by Coleridge, III, 61.
 Sicilian Romance, by Mrs Radcliffe, II, 594, 595.
 Sicilian Summer, by Sir H. Taylor, III, 325.
 Sicily, by E. A. Freeman, III, 626.
 Sick Stock-rider, by A. L. Gordon, III, 731.
 Siddons, Life of Mrs, by Campbell, II, 766.
 Side-Walk Studies, by A. Dobson, III, 688.
 SEDGWICK, ETHEL, III, 851.
 SEDGWICK, HENRY, III, 841.
 SEDNEY, ALGERNON, I, 715.
 SEDNEY, SIR PHILIP, I, 287.
 Sidney Biddulph, by Mrs Sheridan, II, 563.
 Siege of Corinth, by Byron, III, 122.
 SIKERSON, DORA (Mrs Shorter), III, 851.
 Sight and Song, by Fiona Macleod, III, 704.
 SIGOURNEY, LYDIA HUNTLEY, III, 757.
 Sigurd the Volsung, by W. Morris, III, 665.
 Silas Lapham, by W. D. Howells, III, 829.
 Silas Marner, by George Eliot, III, 530, 534.
 Silence: A Fable, by E. A. Poe, III, 788.
 Silix Scintillans, by H. Vaughan, I, 682, 683, 684.
 SILL, EDWARD R., III, 833.
 Siller Gun, by John Mayne, II, 810, 811.
 Silurian System, by Murchison, III, 267.
 Silver Box, by J. Galsworthy, III, 712.
 SIMON OF DURHAM, I, 33.
 SIMMS, WILLIAM GILMORE, III, 752.
 Simonidea, by W. S. Lander, III, 141.
 Simpon Pass, by Wordsworth, III, 19.
 SIMS, GEORGE ROBERT, III, 694.
 Sinai and Palestine, by Dean Stanley, III, 394, 395.
 SINCLAIR, MAY, III, 852.
 SINCLAIR, UYTON, III, 856.
 Sin-Eater, by Fiona Macleod, III, 705.
 Sir Aklingar, I, 523, 533.
 Sir Andrew Wylie, by J. Galt, III, 297, 298.
 Sir Beville, by R. S. Hawker, III, 382.
 Sir Charles Grandison, by Richardson, II, 295, 299.
 Sir Courty Nice, by John Crowne, II, 89.
 Sir Gawane and the Grene Knight, I, 51, 52, 172.
 Sir Launcelot Greaves, by Smollett, II, 442, 444.
 Sir Patrick Spens, I, 532.
 Sir Percival, by J. H. Shorthouse, III, 638.
 Sir Richard Calmady, by Mrs Harrison, III, 706.
 Sir Triatrem, I, 43.
 Sir Turlough, by Carleton, III, 352.
 Sister, by Charlotte Lennox, II, 417.
 Sister Helen, by D. G. Rossetti, III, 643.
 SITWELL, EDITH, III, 723, 852.
 SITWELL, OSBERT, III, 849.
 SITWELL, SACHSEVEREL, III, 849.
 SKERT, WALTER WILLIAM, III, 840.
 SKELTON, JOHN, I, 113.
 SKELTON, SIR JOHN, III, 634.
 SKENE, GILBERT, I, 231.
 SKENE, JOHN, I, 231.
 SKENE, WILLIAM FORBES, III, 399.
 Sketch Book, by Washington Irving, III, 745, 746, 748.
 Sketches by Doz, by Dickens, III, 464, 467.
 Sketches of Irish Character, by Mrs S. C. Hall, III, 280, 281.
 SKINNER, JOHN, II, 318.
 Skipper Ireson's Ride, by Whittier, III, 775.
 SKIRRY, JOSEPH, III, 608.
 SKIRYING, ADAM, II, 810.
 Skylark, by James Hogg, III, 296; by Shelley, III, 110.
 Sky Pilot, by Ralph Connor, III, 728.
 Slang, Dictionary of, by Henley, III, 695.
 Sleeper Wakes, by H. G. Wells, III, 712.
 Sleeping Child, by John Wilson, III, 246.
 Slingsby Papers, by N. P. Willis, III, 749.
 SLOANE, WILLIAM MELLIGAN, III, 854.
 Small House at Allington, by Trollope, III, 487.
 SMART, CHRISTOPHER, II, 423.
 Smectymnus, I, 586; Apology for, by Milton, I, 688.
 SMEDLEY, FRANCIS EDWARD, III, 492.
 SMILES, SAMUEL, III, 475.
 SMITH, ADAM, II, 448.
 SMITH, ALBANY, III, 492.
 SMITH, ALEXANDER, III, 604.
 SMITH, CHARLOTTE, II, 593.
 SMITH, DODIE, III, 852.
 SMITH, EDMUND, II, 190.
 SMITH, FRANCIS HOPKINSON, III, 854.
 SMITH, GEORGE GREGORY, III, 846.
 SMITH, GOLDWIN, III, 726, 727.
 SMITH, HENRY, I, 283.
 SMITH, JAMES AND HORACE, III, 159.
 SMITH, MRS BURNETT, III, 851.
 SMITH, MRS TOULMIN, III, 850.
 SMITH, SARAH (Hesba Stretton), III, 850.
 SMITH, SIR WILLIAM, III, 479.
 SMITH, SYDNEY, III, 155.
 SMITH, WALTER CHALMERS, III, 607.
 SMITH, WILLIAM, I, 278.
 SMITH, WILLIAM ROBERTSON, III, 687.
 SMOLLETT, TOBIAS GEORGE, II, 8, 442.
 SMUTS, JAN C., III, 733, 847.
 Snake in the Grass, by P. Egan, III, 265.
 Snarleywoog, by Marryat, III, 255.
 Snob Papers, by Thackeray, III, 455.
 Snow-Bound, by Whittier, III, 774, 775, 777.
 Snow Image, by Hawthorne, III, 779, 780.
 Social Morality, by F. D. Maurice, III, 441.
 Social Statics, by H. Spencer, III, 586.
 Society and Solitude, by Emerson, III, 760.
 Society in America, by H. Martineau, III, 388.
 Sour Louise, by C. Rossetti, III, 648.
 Soggarh Aroon, by John Banim, III, 354.
 Sohrab and Rustum, by M. Arnold, III, 591, 592, 596.
 Soldier's Daughter, by A. Cherry, II, 758.
 Soldier's Tear, by T. H. Bayly, III, 241.
 Soldiers Three, by Rudyard Kipling, III, 708.
 Solitary Reaper, by Wordsworth, III, 21.
 Solitude, by Grainger, II, 376.
 Solomon, by Prior, II, 114, 116.
 SOMERVILLE, EDITH CE., III, 851.
 SOMERVILLE, MARY, III, 185.
 SOMERVILLE, WILLIAM, II, 300.
 Song of Dermot and the Earl, I, 34.
 Song of the Glass, by J. F. Walker, III, 364.
 Song of the Indian Maid, by Keats, III, 102.
 Song of the Shirt, by Hood, III, 138, 139.
 Song of the Universal, by Whitman, III, 811.
 Song of the Western Men, by R. S. Hawker, III, 381, 382.

- Songs before Sunrise, by Swinburne, III. 671.
- Songs from Vagabondia, by W. B. Carman and Richard Hovey, III. 728, 833.
- Songs of Experience, by William Blake, II. 717, 720; of Innocence, II. 717, 719.
- Songs of Israel, by William Knox, II. 782.
- Songs of Labour, by Whittier, III. 775.
- Songs of Scotland prior to Burns, by R. Chambers, III. 316.
- Songs of the Sierras, by J. Miller, III. 828.
- Song-Writers, Elizabethan, I. 273.
- Sonnet-Cycles, Elizabethan, I. 286.
- Sonnet introduced, I. 159.
- Sonnets from the Portuguese, by E. B. Browning, III. 553, 557, 561.
- Sonnets of Shakespeare, I. 362.
- Sons and Lovers, by D. H. Lawrence, III. 716.
- Sophocles, trans. by Edward Fitzgerald, III. 425; by Lewis Campbell, III. 661.
- Sophonisba, by James Thomson, II. 320.
- Sophy, by Sir J. Denham, I. 641.
- Sordello, by R. Browning, III. 552, 553, 558.
- SORLEY, CHARLES H., III. 849.
- Sorrows of Gentility, by Jewsbury, III. 520.
- Sopetto d'Herode, trans. by Crashaw, I. 677.
- SOTHERY, WILLIAM, II. 713.
- Soul, by Francis William Newman, III. 342.
- SOUTH, ROBERT, I. 760.
- South Africa, by Fringle, II. 789, 790; by Lady Anne Barnard, II. 804; by Bryce, III. 686; by Theal, III. 733.
- South Africa, English Literature in, III. 733.
- South America, Wanderings in, by Charles Waterton, III. 173.
- South Sea Bubbles, by G. H. Kingsley, III. 517.
- SOUTHERNE, THOMAS, II. 75.
- SOUTHEY, MRS., III. 65.
- SOUTHEY, ROBERT, III. 47; book on, by Dowden, III. 689.
- SOUTHWELL, ROBERT, I. 937.
- Space, Time, and Deity, by Alexander, III. 718, 844.
- Spain, Handbook for Travellers in, by Ford, III. 322.
- Spanish Ballads, by J. G. Lockhart, III. 250.
- Spanish Farm, by R. H. Mottram, III. 720, 848.
- Spanish Friar, by Dryden, I. 792, 807.
- Spanish Gypsy, by George Eliot, III. 630.
- Spanish Influence on English Literature, I. 236.
- Spanish Literature, by G. Ticknor, III. 749.
- Spanish Military Nun, by De Quincey, III. 93, 94, 96.
- Spanish Student, by Longfellow, III. 760.
- Spanish Tragedy, by Thomas Kyd, I. 319.
- Spasmodic School, III. 475, 603, 604.
- Specimen Days, by Walt Whitman, III. 807, 809.
- Spectator, II. 3, 121, 213, 215; extracts by Addison, II. 219, 221-226; commenced, II. 232; extracts by Steele, II. 234, 237-239; by Budge, II. 243.
- Spectre Boat, by Campbell, II. 766.
- SPEEDING, JAMES, III. 397.
- Speechcraft, English, by Barnes, III. 412.
- SPEED, JOHN, I. 271.
- Speed the Plough, by Morton, II. 709.
- SPEKE, JOHN STANNING, III. 610.
- SPELMAN, SIR HENRY, I. 271.
- SRENCE, JOSEPH, II. 838.
- SPENCER, HERBERT, III. 586.
- SPENCER, WILLIAM ROBERT, II. 740.
- SPENDER, STEPHEN H., III. 724, 849.
- SPENSER, EDMUND, I. 237, 293.
- Spinosa, by John Caird, III. 625; by Martineau, III. 302; by Pollock, III. 715.
- Spinosa's Ethic, tr. by W. H. White, III. 687.
- Spirit of Patriotism, by Lord Bellingbrooke, II. 202, 205.
- Spirit of Place, by Alice Meynell, III. 705.
- Spirit of the Age, by Hazlitt, III. 80.
- Spirit of the Nation, III. 264, 579.
- Spiritual Quixote, by Graves, II. 376.
- Spiritual Wives, by W. H. Dixon, III. 578.
- Spleen, by Matthew Green, II. 288.
- Splendid Shilling, by John Phillips, II. 241.
- SPOFFORD, HARRIET P., III. 854.
- SPOTTISWOODE, JOHN, I. 612.
- SFRAT, DR THOMAS, II. 56.
- Sprig of Shillelagh, II. 759.
- Spring, Ode to, by Mrs Barbauld, II. 582.
- SURGEON, CAROLINE F. S., III. 851.
- SURGEON, CHARLES HADDON, III. 648.
- Spy, by J. Fenimore Cooper, III. 750.
- Squatter's Dream, by Browne, III. 732.
- SQUIRE, SIR JOHN COLLINGS, III. 848.
- Squire Maurice, by Alex. Smith, III. 605.
- Squire of Alsatia, by Shadwell, II. 63.
- Squire's Pew, by Jane Taylor, III. 175.
- Stand Fast, Craig Royston, by W. Black, III. 691.
- STANHOPE, EARL, III. 374.
- STANHOPE, PHILIP DORMER, II. 291.
- STANLEY, ARTHUR PENRYN, III. 394.
- STANLEY, SIR HENRY MORTON, III. 841.
- STANLEY, THOMAS, I. 746.
- STANNARD, MRS ARTHUR, III. 851.
- STANVURST, RICHARD, I. 332.
- Stanzas Irregulars, by C. Cotton, I. 776.
- Starling, by Norman Macleod, III. 396.
- Star of Bethlehem, by H. K. White, II. 729.
- Statesman, by Sir Henry Taylor, III. 325.
- STEDMAN, EDMUND CLARENCE, III. 824.
- STEELE, MRS FLORA ANNIE, III. 850.
- STEELE, SIR RICHARD, II. 3, 228; Life of, by Austin Dobson, III. 688.
- Steele Glas, by Gascoigne, I. 247.
- STEEVENS, GEORGE, II. 549.
- STEIN, GERTRUDE, III. 720, 855.
- Stein, Life of, by Seeley, III. 649.
- Stella and Vanessa, II. 123, 124; Swift's Journal to Stella, II. 127, 143.
- STEPHEN, SIR LESLIE, III. 662.
- Stephen, Life of Sir James Fitzjames, by Sir L. Stephen, III. 662.
- STEPHENS, JAMES, III. 848.
- STEPHENS, J. BRUNTON, III. 729, 732.
- STEPNEY, GEORGE, II. 112.
- Steps to the Temple, by Crashaw, I. 677.
- STERLING, JOHN, III. 270; Life of, by Carlyle, III. 271, 404.
- STERS, GLADYS BRONWYN, III. 852.
- STERS, LAURENCE, II. 8, 401.
- STERNHOLD, THOMAS, I. 150.
- STEVENS, GEORGE ALEXANDER, II. 708.
- STEVENSON, ROBERT LOUIS, III. 697; ed. by Sir Sidney Colvin, III. 693.
- STEWART, DOUGALD, II. 535.
- STILLINGFLEET, EDWARD, II. 39.
- STIRLING, EARL OF, I. 509.
- STIRLING, JAMES HUTCHISON, III. 661.
- STIRLING-MAXWELL, SIR W., III. 499.
- STOCKTON, FRANCIS RICHARD, III. 824.
- STODDARD, RICHARD HENRY, III. 823.
- Stokers and Pokers, by Sir F. Bond Head, III. 266, 267.
- Stones of Venice, by Ruskin, III. 569, 572, 573.
- STORER, THOMAS, I. 309.
- STORY, WILLIAM WETMORE, III. 784.
- Story (W. W.) and his Friends, by Henry James, III. 830.
- Story of my Heart, by R. Jefferies, III. 640.
- STOW, JOHN, I. 256.
- STOWE, HARRIET BECHER, III. 812.
- STRACHEY, GILES LYTON, III. 715, 719.
- Strains of the Mountain Muse, by Joseph Train, III. 291.
- Strangers Yet, by Lord Houghton, III. 382.
- Strange Story, by Lord Lytton, III. 332.
- Strathmore, by Ouida, III. 690.
- STRETTON, HESBA, III. 850.
- STRICKLAND, AGNES, III. 281; ELIZABETH, III. 281; SUSANNA, III. 725.
- Strife, by John Galsworthy, III. 712.
- STRONG, WILLIAM, I. 570.
- STRYPE, JOHN, II. 148.
- STUART, GILBERT, II. 388.
- Stuart of Dunleath, by the Hon. Mrs Norton, III. 386.
- STURBS, WILLIAM, III. 628.
- Student Life of Germany, by William Howitt, III. 283.
- Studies in Literature, by Lord Morley, III. 686.
- Studies in Parliament, by R. H. Hutton, III. 632.
- Studies of a Biographer, by Sir Leslie Stephen, III. 662.
- Studies Scientific and Social, by A. R. Wallace, III. 614.
- Study of History, by Lord Bellingbrooke, II. 202, 204; by Lord Acton, III. 684.
- STUKELY, WILLIAM, II. 245.
- Style, by Thomas de Quincey, III. 94, 95.
- Subaltern, by G. R. Gleig, III. 323.
- Sublime and Beautiful, by Burke, I. 543.
- SOCKLING, SIR JOHN, I. 630.
- SULLIVAN, ALAN, III. 726.
- Summer is i-cumen in, I. 41, 43.
- Summer Dawn, by W. Morris, III. 665, 667.
- Summer in Arcady, by J. L. Allen, III. 831.
- Summer Morning, by John Clare, III. 234.
- Summers Last Will, by Nash, I. 329.
- Sunday, by George Herbert, I. 496.
- Sun-dial, by Bowles, II. 722.
- Sunset Ridge, by Julia Ward Howe, III. 827.
- Superstitions of the Highlands, by Collins, II. 368, 371.
- SURFACEMAN (Alexander Anderson), III. 841.
- SURREY, HENRY HOWARD, EARL OF, I. 158.
- SURTEES, ROBERT SMITH, III. 414.
- Survey of Cornwall, by R. Carew, I. 353.
- Survey of London, by John Stow, I. 257.
- Susan Hopley, by C. Crowe, III. 280.
- Suspiria de Profundis, by De Quincey, III. 93, 97.
- SUTRO, ALFRED, III. 846.
- SWAIN, CHARLES, III. 376.
- Swallow, by Sir Rider Haggard, III. 703.
- SWAN, ANNIE S. (Mrs B. Smith), III. 851.
- SWANWICK, ANNA, III. 850.
- Swellfoot the Tyrant, by Shelley, III. 111.
- SWIFT, BENJAMIN (W. R. Paterson), III. 847.
- SWIFT, JONATHAN, II. 122; Life of, by Foister, III. 474.
- SWINBURNE, ALGERNON CHARLES, III. 670.
- SWINNERTON, FRANK, III. 848.
- Sword Chant of Thorstein Raudi, III. 310.
- Sybil, by Lord Beaconsfield, III. 437, 440.
- Sylla, by John Banim, III. 353.
- SYLVESTER, JOSUA, I. 345.
- Sylvia, by George Darley, III. 235.
- SYMMONS, EMILY MORSE, III. 851.
- SYMMONS, JOHN ADDINGTON, III. 640.
- SYMONS, ARTHUR, III. 846.
- SYNGE, JOHN M., III. 709.
- Syntax, Dr, by William Combe, II. 661.
- TABR, JOHN BANISTER, III. 854.
- Table-book, by William Hone, II. 760.
- Tables Turned, by Wordsworth, III. 17.
- Table Talk, by Selkirk, I. 547, 548; by Cowper, II. 601, 603; by Hazlitt, III. 80.
- Table Trails, by John Doran, III. 331.
- TABLEY, LORD DE, III. 650.
- TAGORE, RAHENDRAMATH, III. 710.
- Talavera, by J. W. Croker, III. 170.
- Tale of a Tub, by Swift, II. 123, 124, 136-138.
- Tales from Shakespeare, by Charles and Mary Lamb, III. 74.
- Tales in Verse, by G. Crabbe, II. 694, 698.
- Tales of Ireland, by W. Carleton, III. 352.
- Tales of the Hall, by Crabbe, II. 694, 695, 698.
- Tales of the O'Hara Family, by Michael and John Hanim, III. 353, 354.
- Tales of the Peasage and Peasantry, II. 772.
- TALFOURD, SIR THOMAS NOON, III. 272.
- TALLESIN, I. 3.
- Talking Oak, by Tennyson, III. 541, 543.
- Tamar and Tavy, by Mrs Bray, III. 279.
- Tamburlaine, by Marlowe, I. 346.
- Tanning of the Shrew, by Shakespeare, I. 365.
- Tain o' Shanter, by Burns, II. 819.
- Tancred, by Lord Beaconsfield, III. 437, 439.
- Tanglewood Tales, by Hawthorne, III. 781.
- TANNABILL, ROBERT, II. 829.
- TARKINGTON, NEWTON BUCHANAN, III. 835.
- Tar-water, Further Thoughts on, by Berkeley, II. 296.
- Task, by Cowper, II. 601, 604, 607-609.
- TASMA, III. 730.
- Tasso, trans. by Carew, I. 335; by Fairfax, I. 444.
- Taste, Essays on, by A. Alison, II. 639.
- TATE, NAHUM, II. 60.
- TATHAM, JOHN, I. 786.
- Tatler, II. 3, 121, 213, 230, 400; extract by Swift, II. 139; extract by Addison, II. 220; extracts by Steele, II. 233, 236.
- TAUPHIGUS, THE BARONESS VON, III. 385.
- Taxis Bank, I. 210.
- TAYLOR, ANN AND JANE, III. 174.
- TAYLOR, BAYARD, III. 821.
- TAYLOR, CANON ISAAC, III. 244.
- TAYLOR, ISAAC, III. 244.
- TAYLOR, JEREMY, I. 603.
- TAYLOR, JOHN, of Norwich, II. 712.
- TAYLOR, JOHN, the "Water-Poet," I. 454.
- TAYLOR, PHILIP MEADOWS, III. 415.
- TAYLOR, RACHEL ANNAND, III. 852.
- TAYLOR, SIR HENRY, III. 324.
- TAYLOR, TOM, III. 463.
- TAYLOR, WILLIAM, II. 712.
- Tea-Kettle, Song of the, by Ann Taylor, III. 175.
- Tears of Scotland, by Smollett, II. 445.
- Tea-table Miscellany, II. 313.
- TEKAHONWAKE (E. Pauline Johnson), III. 851.
- Temora, by James Macpherson, II. 500.
- Tempest, by Shakespeare, I. 357, 372.
- TEMPLE, SIR WILLIAM, I. 751.
- Temple, by Heybert, J. 495.
- Temple Bar founded, III. 624.
- Temple of Favour, by Lloyd, II. 612.
- Temple of Venus, by Spenser, I. 301.
- TENISON, THOMAS, II. 60.
- TENNANT, WILLIAM, III. 807.
- Tennessee's Partner, by Bret Harte, III. 827.
- TENNYSON, FREDERICK, III. 539.

- TENNYSON, LORD, III. 9, 540.
 Tennyson, by Lady Ritchie, III. 689; by Andrew Lang, III. 692.
 Ten Thousand a Year, by Warren, III. 344.
 Tent on the Beach, by Whittier, III. 775.
 Tenure of Kings and Magistrates, by Milton, I. 689.
 Terminations, by Henry James, III. 830.
 *The of the D'Urbervilles, by Thomas Hardy, III. 679.
 Testament of Beauty, by Robert Bridges, III. 693.
 Testaments, by J. Davidson, III. 706.
 Testimony of the Rocks, by Hugh Miller, III. 285, 286.
 THACKERAY, ANNE ISABELLA, III. 689.
 THACKERAY, WILLIAM MAKEPEACE, III. 453; essay by Dr John Brown, III. 450.
 Thaddeus of Warsaw, by Jane Porter, II. 773.
 Thalaba, by Southey, III. 48, 49, 50.
 Thalia Rediviva, by H. Vaughan, I. 682.
 Thanatopsis, by W. C. Bryant, III. 753, 754.
 Thanksgiving, by T. Traherne, I. 776.
 Thanksgiving for his House, by Herrick, I. 565.
 THAXTER, CELIA, III. 854.
 THEAL, GEORGE McCALL, III. 726, 733.
 Thealma and Clearchus, by J. Chalkhill, I. 443.
 Theatre, by James Smith, III. 160.
 Theism, by F. W. Newman, III. 342; by Theodore Parker, III. 763.
 THEOBALD, LEWIS, II. 200.
 Theocritus, trans. by Calverley, III. 639; by A. Lang, III. 692.
 Theodoric the Goth, by T. Hodgkin, III. 661.
 Theodosius, by Nathaniel Lee, II. 88.
 Theodic, by Thomas Campbell, II. 766.
 Theological Essays, by F. D. Maurice, III. 441.
 There is a Green Hill far away, by Mrs Alexander, III. 584.
 There's nae Luck, by Mickle, II. 523, 524.
 Theron and Aspasio, by J. Hervey, II. 338.
 Thersites, Interlude, I. 153.
 Thief and the Cordelier, by Prior, II. 117.
 Things I have Seen, by G. A. H. Sala, III. 625.
 THIRLWALL, CONNOP, III. 204.
 Thirty Years in Australia, by Ada Cambridge, III. 732.
 Thirty Years' Musical Recollections, by Chorley, III. 273.
 Thirty Years' Peace, by Harriet Martineau, III. 358, 390.
 THOM, WILLIAM, III. 305.
 THOMAS, AUGUSTUS, III. 855.
 THOMAS, EDWARD, III. 847.
 THOMAS THE RHYMER, I. 43, 166.
 THOMPSON, FRANCIS, III. 710.
 THOMSON, WILLIAM JOHN, III. 331.
 THOMPSON, JAMES, II. 320; III. 5.
 THOMPSON, JAMES ('B. V. '), III. 654.
 THOMPSON, W. R., III. 733.
 THOREAU, HENRY DAVID, III. 795.
 Thorn, by John O'Keefe, II. 656.
 Thoughts at Fourscore, by T. Cooper, III. 376.
 Thoughts concerning Education, by Locke, II. 18, 20.
 Thoughts in Prison, by Dr W. Dodd, II. 456.
 Thoughts on Various Subjects, by Swift, II. 144; by Pope, II. 195.
 Thousand and One Nights, trans. by E. W. Lane, III. 327; by Burton III. 610.
 THOMAS, MRS (Mrs Piozzi), II. 473.
 THRAWN JANET, by R. L. Stevenson, III. 698.
 Three English Statesmen, by Goldwin Smith, III. 727.
 Three Generations of Englishwomen, by Janet Ross, III. 373.
 Three Midshipmen, by Kingston, III. 482.
 Three Miss Kings, by A. Cambridge, III. 732.
 Three Priests of Peblis, I. 209.
 Three Tabernacles, by Herbert Knowles, II. 787, 788.
 Three Warnings, by Mrs Piozzi, II. 473.
 Threnodia Augustalis, by Dryden, I. 706.
 Thrissill and the Rois, by Dunbar, I. 192.
 Thucydides, trans. by Hobbles, I. 654, 555; by Dr Thomas Arnold, III. 203.
 THURLOW, LORD, II. 634; the second, II. 792.
 Thyestes, by John Crowne, M. 89.
 Thyrsis, by M. Arnold, III. 692, 697.
 Thyza, To, by Lord Byron, III. 330.
 TICKELL, RICHARD, II. 670.
 TICKELL, THOMAS, II. 251.
 TICKNOR, GEORGE, III. 749.
 Tidings from the Sessions, by Dunbar, I. 198.
 Tiger, by William Blake, II. 720.
 TIGHE, MRS, II. 599.
 TILLOTSON, JOHN, II. 37.
 Timber, by Vaughan, I. 683.
 Time and Tide, by Ruskin, III. 571.
 Time works Wonders, by Jerrold, III. 330.
 Thoo of Athens, by Shakespeare, I. 371.
 Thooby Titcomb's Letters, by J. G. Holland, III. 778.
 TIMROD, HENRY, III. 853.
 TINDAL, MATTHEW, II. 162.
 Tinker, by J. Cooke, I. 443.
 Tintern Abbey, by Wordsworth, III. 13, 16, 17.
 Titles of Honour, by John Selden, I. 546.
 TITMARSH, MICHAEL ANGELO (Thackeray), III. 456.
 Titus Andronicus, by Shakespeare, I. 360.
 TOBIN, JOHN, II. 710.
 TODD, ALPHEUS, III. 726.
 TOLAND, JOHN, II. 161.
 Tom Bowling, by Charles Dibdin, II. 708.
 Tom Brown's Schooldays, by T. Hughes, III. 577.
 Tom Cringle's Log, by M. Scott, III. 254.
 Tom Jones, by Fielding, II. 7, 341, 345.
 Tommy and Grizel, by Barrie, III. 705.
 Tom-morrow, by John Collins, II. 708.
 Tom Sawyer, by Mark Twain, III. 826.
 Tom Thumb, by Fielding, II. 339.
 TONE, THEOBALD WOLFE, II. 759.
 Tony Lumpkin, by O'Keefe, II. 656.
 TOOKER, JOHN HORNE, II. 632.
 Too Strange not to be True, by Lady Fullerton, III. 520.
 TOPLADY, AUGUSTUS MONTAGUE, II. 456.
 To the Lighthouse, by Virginia Woolf, III. 705.
 Tottel's Miscellany, I. 159, 160, 257, 286.
 Tournament, by Dunbar, I. 197.
 TOURNEUR, CYRIL, I. 429.
 TOUT, THOMAS FREDERICK, III. 843.
 TOWNLEY PLAYS, I. 108.
 TOWNLEY, JAMES, II. 410.
 Town of the Cascades, by Banim, III. 353.
 TOWNSEND LORD JOHN, II. 670.
 Toxophilus, by Roger Ascham, I. 144.
 TOYNEBE, ARNOLD, III. 719, 848.
 Toy Shop, by Dodsley, II. 301.
 Tractate on Education, by Milton, I. 688, 706.
 Tracts for the Times, III. 336, 337.
 Traditional Tales, by Allan Cunningham, III. 303.
 Traditions of Edinburgh, by Robert Chambers, III. 316.
 Tragic Comedians, by Meredith, III. 658.
 Tragic Mary, by Michael Field, III. 704.
 TRAHERNE, THOMAS, I. 776.
 TRAILL, HENRY DUFF, III. 841.
 TRAIN, JOSEPH, III. 291.
 Traitor, by James Shirley, I. 484, 485.
 Traits and Stories of the Irish Peasantry, by W. Carleton, III. 352.
 Traump Abroad, by Mark Twain, III. 826.
 Transcaucasia and Ararat, by Bryce, III. 686.
 Transcendental 'Movement' in America, III. 757, 759, 760, 763.
 Transformation, by Hawthorne, III. 781.
 Translators and Translations, Early, I. 258.
 Traveller, by Goldsmith, II. 479, 481-484.
 Treasure Island, by R. L. Stevenson, III. 698.
 Treasure Trove, by Samuel Lover, III. 355.
 Tremaine, by R. P. Ward, II. 754.
 Trembling of the Veil, by W. B. Yeats, III. 709.
 TRENCH, HERBERT, III. 846.
 TRENCH, RICHARD CHENEVIX, III. 393.
 TREVELYAN, GEORGE MACAULAY, III. 715.
 TREVELYAN, SIR GEORGE OTTO, III. 687.
 TREVISA, JOHN OF, I. 83.
 Trial of the Witnesses, by Sherlock, II. 42.
 Trials of Margaret Lyndsay, by John Wilson, III. 246.
 Trimmer, Character of a, by the Marquis of Halifax, I. 756.
 Tristram, by Edwin A. Robinson, III. 835.
 Tristram of Lyonesse, by Swinburne, III. 673, 674, 677, 678.
 Tristram Shandy, by Sterne, II. 402, 404-409.
 Tristram, Sir, I. 43.
 Triumph of Life, by Shelley, III. 112, 117.
 Triumphs of Temper, by Hayley, II. 614.
 Tyvia, by Gay, II. 172, 173.
 Troilus and Cressida, by Chaucer, I. 62, 63, 68-70; by Shakespeare, I. 369.
 TROLLOPE, ANTHONY, III. 486.
 TROLLOPE, FRANCES, III. 276.
 TROLLOPE, FRANCES ELEANOR, III. 490.
 TROLLOPE, THOMAS ADOLPHUS, III. 490.
 True Intellectual System, by Cudworth, I. 670, 671.
 True King, by A. de Vere, III. 581.
 True Patriot, ed. by Fielding, II. 341.
 TRUMBULL, JOHN, III. 736.
 Trumpet and Drum, With, by Field, III. 831.
 Trumps, by G. W. Curtis, III. 784.
 Truth, by Cowper, II. 606.
 TUCKER, ABRAHAM, II. 338.
 TUCKER, MARIA CHARLOTTE, III. 850.
 TUCKERMAN, HENRY THEODORE, III. 853.
 Tufts of Heather, by E. Waugh, III. 492.
 TULLOCH, JOHN, III. 606.
 Tullochgorum, by John Skinner, II. 318.
 TUPPER, MARTIN FARQUHAR, III. 491.
 TURBEVILLE, GEORGE, I. 264.
 Turkes, Historie of the, by Knolles, I. 272.
 TURNER, CHARLES TENNYSON, III. 539.
 TURNER, CYRIL. See TOURNEUR.
 TURNER, ETHEL, III. 729.
 TURNER, SHARON, II. 639.
 TURNER, WALTER JOHN REDFERN, III. 849.
 Tuscan Cities, by W. D. Howells, III. 829.
 TUSKER, THOMAS, I. 248.
 TUTTIETT, M. G. (Maxwell Gray), III. 851.
 TWAIN, MARK (S. L. Clemens), III. 826.
 *Twain when the Seas were roaring, by Gay, II. 174, 177.
 Tweedside, by Robert Crawford, II. 317.
 TWEEDSMUIR, LORD (John Buchan), III. 847.
 Twelfth Night, by Shakespeare, I. 368.
 Twentieth Century Literature, III. 717-724.
 Twice Round the Clock, by G. A. H. Sala, III. 624.
 Twice-Told Tales, by Hawthorne, III. 770.
 Twilight of the Gods, by R. Garnett, III. 668.
 Two Chiefs of Dunboy, by Froude, III. 503.
 Two Gentlemen of Verona, by Shakespeare, I. 358.
 Two Noble Kinmen, I. 334, 373, 469, 473.
 Two on a Tower, by T. Hardy, III. 679.
 Two Paths, by Kunkin, III. 570, 572, 57.
 Twopenny Post-Bag, by Moore, III. 347.
 Two Poets of Croisic, by R. Browning, III. 556, 566.
 Two Years Ago, by C. Kingsley, III. 513.
 Two Years before the Mast, by R. H. Dana, III. 722.
 TYLER, MOSES COIT, III. 854.
 TYLER, SIR EDWARD BURNETT, III. 663.
 Tyndes goe by Turnes, by Southwell, I. 338.
 TYNAN, KATHARINE, III. 851.
 TYNDALE, WILLIAM, I. 129.
 TYNDALL, JOHN, III. 548.
 Typee, by Herman Melville, III. 821.
 Typhoon, by Conrad, III. 711.
 Tyranic Love, by Dryden, I. 797, 807, 808.
 TYRANNUS, or the Mode, by Evelyn, I. 769.
 Tythes, History of, by J. Seiden, I. 546, 549.
 TYTLER, PATRICK FRASER, III. 290.
 TYTLER, WILLIAM, II. 388.
 U
 ULL, NICOLAS, I. 155.
 Ulysses and the Syren, by Daniel, I. 341.
 Ulysses, by James Joyce, III. 848.
 Uncle Remus, by J. C. Harris, III. 831.
 Uncle Silas, by J. S. Le Fanu, III. 365.
 Uncle Tom's Cabin, by Harriet Beecher Stowe, III. 812, 813.
 UNDERHILL, EVELYN, III. 852.
 Underneath the Bough, by M. Field, III. 704.
 Under the Elm-tree, by W. Morris, III. 665.
 Under the Great Elm, by J. R. Lowell, III. 802.
 Under the Willows, by J. R. Lowell, III. 801, 802, 804.
 Under Two Flags, by Ouida, III. 690.
 Under Western Eyes, by Conrad, III. 711.
 Underwoods, by Hen Jonson, I. 408, 410; by R. L. Stevenson, III. 699, 703.
 Unfortunate Traveller, by Nash, I. 330.
 United Netherlands, by J. L. Motley, III. 815, 816.
 United Service Gazette founded, III. 323.
 United States, History of, by Bryant and Gay, III. 753; by G. Bancroft, III. 755; by Goldwin Smith, III. 727.
 Universal Beauty, by H. Brooke, II. 396, 397.
 Universal History, II. 387, 388.
 Universal History, by Hawthorne, III. 779.
 Universal Visitor, II. 424.
 Universe, Intellectual System of the, by Cudworth, I. 670, 671.
 Unknown Eros, by Patmore, III. 602.
 Unseen Foundations, by the Duke of Argyll, III. 614.
 USTERMEYER, LOUIS, III. 856.
 Unto This Last, by Ruskin, III. 571, 572.
 Upholsterer, by Arthur Murphy, II. 455.
 Uplands Mous and the Burges Mous, by Henryson, I. 190.

- Upon Nothing, by Rochester, I. 780.
 Upper Crust, by H. J. Byron, III. 637.
 URQUHART, SIR THOMAS, I. 824.
 USHER, JAMES. See USHER.
 USK, THOMAS, I. 82.
 USSHER, JAMES, I. 440.
 Usury, Defence of, by Bentham, II. 701.
 Utilitarianism, by J. S. Mill, III. 443, 444.
 Utilitarians, English, by Stephen, III. 602.
 Utopia, by Sir Thomas More, I. 121.
- Vale of Cashmere, by Moore, III. 349.
 Valenciennes, by Thomas Hardy, III. 680.
 Valentine Vox, by Henry Cockton, III. 490.
 Valerius, by J. G. Lockhart, III. 250, 253.
 VANDRUGH, SIR JOHN, II. 80.
 VAN DYKE, JOHN WILLIAM, III. 849.
 VAN DYKE, HENRY, III. 854.
 Van's Story, by James Thomson, III. 655.
 Vanity Fair, by Thackeray, III. 457, 459.
 Vanity of Human Wishes, by Johnson, III. 458, 464.
- Variations of Plants and Animals, by Darwin, III. 417, 420.
 Variety, by William Whitehead, II. 357.
 Vassal Morton, by F. Parkman, III. 818.
 Vathek, by Beckford, II. 621, 622-624.
 VAUGHAN, HENRY, I. 682, 731.
 VAUGHAN, ROBERT, III. 271.
 VAUX, LORD, I. 278.
 VEDDER, DAVID, III. 305.
 VEITCH, JOHN, III. 632.
 Velazquez, by Stirling-Maxwell, III. 499.
 'Venerable Bede,' I. 18.
 Venice Preserved, by Otway, II. 72.
 Venus and Adonis, by Shakespeare, I. 361.
 Vercelli, Book, I. 14, 15, 169.
 VERE, AUBREY DE, III. 581.
 VERE, EDWARD DE, EARL OF OXFORD, I. 277.
 Verses and Translations, by Calverley, III. 638.
 Vertue, by George Herbert, I. 496.
 VERY, JONES, III. 853.
 Vestiges of Creation, by R. Chambers, III. 316.
 Vicar, by Fraed, III. 380.
 Vicar of Wakefield, by Goldsmith, II. 479, 493.
 Vicar of Wrexhill, by F. Trollope, III. 276.
 Victoria, by W. W. Campbell, III. 725.
 Victorian Poets, by E. C. Stedman, III. 824.
 Vida's Art of Poetry, tr. by C. Pitt, II. 259.
 Vidua, by Heraud, III. 268.
 Views Afloat, by Bayard Taylor, III. 821.
 Vignettes in Rhyme, by A. Dobson, III. 688.
 Village, by George Crabbe, II. 694, 695.
 Village Communities, by Sir H. J. S. Maine, III. 567.
 Village Minstrel, by John Clare, III. 234.
 Villette, by Charlotte Brontë, III. 523, 524.
 VILLIERS, GEORGE, I. 788.
 Vindication of Natural Society, by Burke, II. 543.
 Vindication of the Rights of Woman, by Mary Wollstonecraft Godwin, II. 706.
 Vindicia Gallica, by Mackintosh, II. 641, 642.
 Viol and Flute, by Sir Edmund Gosse, III. 696.
 Violentia, by W. C. Roscoe, III. 625.
 Virgilemiarum, by Joseph Hall, I. 417.
 Virgil, trans. by Gavin Douglas, I. 202; by Phaer, I. 205; by Stanyhurst, I. 332; by Dryden, I. 794; by Sotheby, II. 713; by Conington, III. 634; by Morris, III. 665.
 Virginian, by Owen Wister, III. 832.
 Virginians, by Thackeray, III. 459.
 Virginian Voyage, by Drayton, I. 344.
 Virginitus Puerisque, by R. L. Stevenson, III. 698.
 Virgilius, by S. Knowles, III. 225-227.
 Virgin Martyr, by Dekker and Massinger, I. 423, 464, 467.
 Vision, by Thomas Moore, III. 549.
 Vision of Judgment, by Lord Byron, III. 129.
 Vision of Sir Launfal, by J. R. Lowell, III. 801, 804.
 Visions in Verse, by N. Cotton, II. 532.
 Visions of England, by Palgrave, III. 609.
 Vittoria, by George Meredith, III. 658, 660.
 Vivian Grey, by Lord Beaconsfield, III. 435.
 Voice from the Nile, by Thomson, III. 655.
 Voice of Spring, by Mrs Hemans, III. 179.
 Voices of the Night, by Longfellow, III. 769.
 Volpone, by Ben Jonson, I. 404, 409.
 Voltaire, monograph on, by Lord Morley, III. 686.
 Voltiger and Rowena, by W. H. Ireland, II. 711.
 Vox Clamantis, by Gower, I. 74.
- Voyage round the World, by Dampier, II. 103.
 Voyages, Collection of, by Hakluyt, I. 284; by Hawkesworth, II. 410.
 Voyage to St Kilda, by M. Martin, II. 303.
 Voyageur, by W. H. Drummond, III. 728.
- WACE, I. 34, 35.
 Wacousta, by J. Richardson, III. 723, 839.
 WADDELL, HELEN, III. 852.
 WADDINGTON, WILLIAM, I. 34.
 WADE, THOMAS, III. 344.
 Wae's ide for Prince Charlie, by William Glen, III. 309.
 Waives of Sin, by Lucas Malet, III. 704.
 WAKEFIELD, GILBERT, II. 647.
 Wakefield Plays, I. 108.
 Walden, by Thoreau, III. 796, 797.
 Waldere, I. 4, 5.
 WALKER, PATRICK, II. 101.
 Walker, London, by Sir J. M. Barrie, III. 705.
 Walk in the Light, by B. Barton, III. 231.
 WALKLEY, ARTHUR BINGHAM, III. 843.
 WALLACE, ALFRED RUSSEL, III. 614.
 WALLACE, LEWIS, III. 823.
 Wallace, Blind Harry's, I. 186; II. 309.
 Wallenstein, tr. by Coleridge, III. 58, 63.
 WALLEY, EDMUND, I. 624, 731, 734.
 WALLER, JOHN FRANCIS, III. 364.
 WALFORD, HORACE, II. 8, 411; Life of, by Austin Dobson, III. 688.
 WALPOLE, SIR HUGH, III. 780, 848.
 WALPOLE, SIR SPENCER, III. 841.
 Walpole, Sir Robert, by William Cox, II. 680.
 WALSH, WILLIAM, II. 111.
 WALTON, ISAAC, I. 613.
 Wanderer, by Richard Savage, II. 283.
 Wanderer, in Exeter Book, I. 8.
 Wanderer of Switzerland, by Montgomery, II. 742.
 Wanderings in South America, &c., by Charles Waterton, III. 173.
 War, Miseries of, by William Crowe, II. 617.
 WARBURTON, ELIOT, III. 274.
 WARBURTON, GEORGE, III. 274.
 WARBURTON, WILLIAM, II. 270.
 WARD, ARTEMUS (C. F. Browne), III. 826.
 WARD, JAMES, III. 841.
 WARD, MRS HUMPHRY, III. 704.
 WARD, ROBERT PLUMER, II. 754.
 WARD, SIR ADOLPHUS WILLIAM, III. 840.
 WARD, WILFRID, III. 843.
 WARD, WILLIAM GEORGE, III. 839.
 Warded, by Anthony Trollope, III. 487.
 WARDLAW, LADY, II. 312.
 Warfare of Science with Theology, by A. D. White, III. 825.
 WARNER, CHARLES DUDLEY, III. 853.
 WARNER, SUSAN, III. 795.
 WARNER, SYLVIA TOWNSEND, III. 852.
 WARNER, WILLIAM, I. 336.
 WARREN, SAMUEL, III. 344.
 WARTON, JOSEPH, II. 506.
 WARTON, THOMAS, II. 506.
 WASHINGTON, BOOKER, III. 855.
 WASHINGTON, GEORGE, III. 736, 742.
 Washington Square, by H. James, III. 830.
 Waste Land, by T. S. Eliot, III. 716, 723.
 Watchman, edited by Coleridge, III. 57.
 Water Babies, by C. Kingsley, III. 514, 517.
 'Water Poet' (John Taylor), I. 454.
 WATERLAND, DANIEL, II. 246.
 WATERTON, CHARLES, III. 173.
 WATSON, H. B. MARSHOTT, III. 730, 846.
 WATSON, JOHN, III. 842.
 WATSON, JOHN, of Kingston, III. 726.
 WATSON, RICHARD, II. 646.
 WATSON, ROBERT, II. 388.
 WATSON, SIR WILLIAM, III. 706.
 WATSON, THOMAS, I. 241, 273, 274, 277.
 WAITS, ALARIC ALEXANDER, III. 323.
 WAITS, ISAAC, II. 206.
 WAITS-DUNTON, THEODORE, III. 668.
 Watty and Meg, by Wilson, II. 812, 813.
 Wat Tyler, by Southey, III. 48.
 WAUGH, EDWIN, III. 492.
 Waverley, by Scott, III. 31.
 Waves, by Virginia Woolf, III. 705.
 WAY, ARTHUR S., III. 842.
 Way to Keep Him, by A. Murphy, II. 455.
 We met—'twas in a Crowd, by T. H. Bayly, III. 241.
 Wealth of Nations, by Adam Smith, II. 448, 450-452.
 Wearin' o' the Green, III. 579.
 WEBER, WILLIAM, I. 266.
 WEBSTER, AUGUSTA, III. 690.
 WEBSTER, DANIEL, III. 744.
 WEBSTER, JOHN, I. 426.
 Wedding Journey, by Howells, III. 829.
- WEDMORE, FREDERICK, III. 841.
 Wee Davie, by Norman Macleod, III. 396.
 Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers, by Thoreau, III. 796.
 Weeper, by Crashaw, I. 678.
 Weir of Hermiston, by Stevenson, III. 699.
 Welcome from Greece, by J. Gay, II. 177.
 WELDON, SIR ANTHONY, I. 589.
 WELLESLEY, DOROTHY VIOLET, LADY GERALD, III. 852.
 WELLS, CHARLES JEREMIAH, III. 657.
 WELLS, HERBERT GEORGE, III. 712, 720.
 Welsh Contribution to English Literature, I. 831.
 Welsh Language, I. 2, 831.
 WELSTED, LEONARD, II. 199.
 WESTWORTH, LADY (Lady A. Mount), III. 691.
 Were na my Heart Light I wad die, by Lady Grizel Baillie, II. 311.
 Were-Wolves, by S. Baring-Gould, III. 664.
 WESLEY, CHARLES, II. 337.
 WESLEY, JOHN, II. 333; Life of, by Southey, III. 50, 54.
 Wessex Tales, by Thomas Hardy, III. 679.
 WEST, GILBERT, II. 259.
 WEST, REBECCA, III. 852.
 WEST, RICHARD, II. 422.
 West Africa, by M. H. Kingsley, III. 517.
 WESTALL, WILLIAM, III. 840.
 WESTCOTT, EDWARD NOYES, III. 831.
 Western and Eastern Rambles, by Joseph Howe, III. 726.
 Western Islands of Scotland, by Martin Martin, II. 303.
 West Indian, by Cumberland, II. 562.
 West India Proprietor, by M. G. Lewis, II. 748, 750.
 West Indies, by Froude, III. 503.
 West Indies, by Montgomery, II. 742.
 Westminster Bridge, by Wordsworth, III. 27.
 Westward Ho! by Dekker and Webster, I. 423, 426; by C. Kingsley, III. 513, 514-516.
 West Wind, Ode to, by Shelley, III. 110, 114.
 Wet Sheet and a Flowing Sea, by Allan Cunningham, III. 304.
 WETHERALD, ETHELWYN, III. 726.
 WETHERELL, ELIZABETH, III. 795.
 WEYMAN, STANLEY JOHN, III. 843.
 WHARTON, EDITH, III. 834.
 WHARTON, THOMAS, II. 98.
 What d'ye Call It? by Gay, II. 172, 177.
 WRATLEY, RICHARD, III. 196.
 What is Life? by John Clare, III. 234.
 What Maissie Knew, by H. James, III. 830.
 What will he do with it? by Lord Lytton, III. 332.
 What you will, by Marston, I. 462.
 When a Man's Single, by Sir J. M. Barrie, III. 705.
 When the Kye comes Home, by James Hogg, III. 295.
 WRESTSTONE, GEORGE, I. 238, 240, 333.
 WREWELL, WILLIAM, III. 198.
 WRIDLEY, CHARLES, III. 844.
 WRICHCOTE, BENJAMIN, I. 603.
 Whims and Oddities, by Hood, III. 137.
 WHIFFLE, EDWARD PERCY, III. 853.
 WHISTLECRAFT (J. Hookham Frere), II. 675.
 WHISTLER, JAMES MCNEILL, III. 854.
 WRISTON, WILLIAM, II. 158.
 Whitbread's Brewery, by Wolcot, II. 664.
 WHITE, ANDREW DICKSON, III. 825.
 WHITE, GILBERT, II. 625.
 WHITE, HENRY KIRKE, II. 728.
 WHITE, JOSEPH BLANCO, II. 791.
 WHITE, RICHARD GRANT, III. 853.
 WHITE, WILLIAM HALE, III. 687.
 Whiteboy, by Mrs S. C. Hall, III. 280.
 White Company, by Conan Doyle, III. 707.
 White Devil, by John Webster, I. 427, 428.
 WHITEFIELD, GEORGE, II. 337.
 WHITEHEAD, ALFRED NORTH, III. 718, 845.
 WHITEHEAD, WILLIAM, II. 357.
 White Heather, by Wm. Black, III. 691.
 WHITEING, RICHARD, III. 841.
 White Jacket, by Herman Melville, III. 821.
 WHITELOCKE, BULSTRODE, I. 750.
 White Ship, by D. G. Rossetti, III. 643.
 White Wings, by William Black, III. 691.
 WHITMAN, WALTER, III. 806.
 WHITNEY, WILLIAM DWIGHT, III. 824.
 WHITTIER, JOHN GREENLEAF, III. 774.
 Who shall be Fairest? by C. Mackay, III. 481.
 WHYMPER, EDWARD, III. 841.
 WHY'LD MELVILLE, GEORGE JOHN, III. 585.
 Wide, Wide World, by S. Warner, III. 795.
 Widow Barnaby, by F. Trollope, III. 276.
 Widow Married, by F. Trollope, III. 276.
 Widowers' Houses, by G. B. Shaw, III. 705.

- Widsith, I. 4.
 Wieland's Oberon, trans. by William Sotheby, II. 713.
 Wife o' Usher's Well, I. 537.
 Wife's Complaint, in Exeter Book, I. 8.
 WIGGIN, KATE DOUGLAS, III. 833.
 WILBERFORCE, WILLIAM, II. 646.
 WILCOX, ELLA WHEELER, III. 855.
 WILDE, OSCAR O'FLAHERTY, III. 706.
 Wild Echo, by William Black, III. 691.
 Wild Irish Girl, by Lady Morgan, II. 781.
 Wild Life in a Southern County, by Richard Jefferies, III. 640.
 Wild Wales, by Borrow, III. 432.
 WILDER, THOMAS, III. 856.
 Wilhelm Meister, trans. by Carlyle, III. 403.
 WILKES, JOHN, II. 495, 516.
 WILKIE, WILLIAM, II. 441.
 WILKINS, JOHN, I. 685.
 WILKINS, MARY ELEANOR, III. 834.
 WILKINSON, HENRY SPENSER, III. 843.
 WILKINSON, SIR JOHN GARDNER, III. 321.
 WILLIAM OF MALMESBURY, I. 33.
 WILLIAM OF NEWBURY, I. 33.
 William and Margaret, by Mallet, II. 328, 329.
 William of Palermo (Palermo), I. 51.
 William Rufus, by Freeman, III. 626; by Michael Field, III. 704.
 WILLIAMS, HELEN MARIA, II. 600.
 WILLIAMS, SIR CHARLES HANBURY, II. 348.
 William Wilson, by Poe, III. 787, 788.
 WILLIS, NATHANIEL PARKER, III. 749.
 WILLIS, SARA PAYSON, III. 749.
 Will o' the Mill, by R. L. Stevenson, III. 697.
 WILLS, JAMES, III. 350.
 WILLS, WILLIAM GORMAN, III. 584.
 Will Waterproof, by Tennyson, III. 541.
 WILMOT, JOHN (Earl of Rochester), I. 779.
 WILSON, ALEXANDER, II. 812.
 WILSON, ARTHUR, I. 588.
 WILSON, DAVID ALEC, III. 846.
 WILSON, JOHN, I. 787; II. 440; III. 245.
 WILSON, JOHN MACKAY, III. 578.
 WILSON, SIR DANIEL, III. 726.
 WILSON, SIR THOMAS, I. 143.
 WILSON, WOODROW, III. 855.
 Winchester Annals, I. 29.
 WINCHILSEA, COUNTESS OF, II. 253.
 Wind and Wave, by Patmore, III. 602.
 Window in Thrush, by Sir J. M. Barrie, III. 705.
 Windsor Forest, by Pope, II. 180, 182.
 WINGATE, DAVID, III. 608.
 WINTER, JOHN STRANGE, III. 851.
 Winterslow, by W. Hazlitt, III. 80, 84.
 Winter's Tale, by Shakespeare, I. 372.
 WINTHROP, THEODORE, III. 823.
 WINYET, NINIAN, I. 167, 230.
 WIREKER, NIGEL, I. 34.
 WISE, JOHN, III. 735.
 Wise Saws and Modern Instances, by Cooper, III. 376; by Haliburton, III. 726.
 Wish, by Cowley, I. 643, 644.
 Wishes to his supposed Mistress, by Crashaw, I. 680.
 WISTER, OWEN, III. 832.
 Wit and Humour, by Leigh Hunt, III. 148; by Sydney Smith, III. 157.
 Wit and Mirth, by D'Urfey, I. 782.
 Witch, by T. Middleton, I. 458, 461.
 Witch of Atlas, by Shelley, III. 110.
 Witch of Edmonton, by Dekker, Ford, Rowley, &c., I. 423, 478, 481.
 WITHER, GEORGE, I. 499, 731, 735.
 Witness, III. 285.
 Wits of Men, by Charleton, I. 744.
 Wit's Recreations, I. 560.
 Wit's Trenchmour, by N. Breton, I. 276.
 WOODHOUSE, PELHAM GREENVILLE, III. 848.
 WOODROW, ROBERT, I. 839.
 WOLCOT, JOHN, II. 662.
 WOLFE, CHARLES, II. 788.
 Wolfe of Badenoch, by Dick Lauder, III. 305.
 WOLLSTONECRAFT, MARY, II. 796.
 WOLSELEY, LORD, III. 840.
 Wolsey, Life of, by Cavendish, I. 140; by Storer, I. 399.
 Woman, Essay on, by J. Wilkes, II. 516.
 Woman in White, by Wilkie Collins, III. 620.
 Woman killed with Kindness, by T. Heywood, I. 431.
 Woman of no Importance, by Wilde, III. 707.
 Woman who Did, by Grant Allen, III. 727.
 Women, by C. K. Maturin, II. 752.
 Women as they are, by Mrs Gore, III. 279.
 Women beware Women, by T. Middleton, I. 458, 459.
 Wonder, by Susannah Centlivre, II. 96.
 Wonder Book, by Hawthorne, III. 781.
 WOOD, ANTHONY, I. 749.
 WOOD, MRS HENRY, III. 520.
 WOODBERRY, GEORGE EDWARD, III. 855.
 Woodcraft, by W. G. Simms, III. 752.
 Woodlanders, by Thomas Hardy, III. 679.
 Wood Magic, by Richard Jefferies, III. 640.
 Woodman, by John Clare, III. 235.
 WOODS, MRS MARGARET L., III. 851.
 WOODSEYS, ROLAND ALEXANDER, III. 854.
 Wood Spirit, by Eadnest Jones, III. 505.
 Wooing of Malkatoon, by Lewis Wallace, III. 823.
 WOOLF, VIRGINIA, III. 705, 720.
 WOOLMAN, JOHN, III. 736, 741.
 WOOLNER, THOMAS, III. 607.
 WOOLSEY, SARAH CHAUNCEY, III. 854.
 WOOLSTON, THOMAS, II. 164.
 Worcester Annals, I. 29.
 WORDSWORTH, DOROTHY, III. 29.
 WORDSWORTH, WILLIAM, III. 8, 11; Apostasy of, by W. Hale White, III. 687; book on, by Myers, III. 691.
 Wordsworth's Grave, by W. Watson, III. 708.
 World, by H. Vaughan, I. 684.
 World, ed. by Edward Moore, II. 400.
 World before the Flood, by Montgomery, II. 742.
 World, Discovery of a New, by J. Wilkins, I. 685.
 World, History of the, by Sir W. Raleigh, I. 305, 309; by Gillies, II. 637.
 World Mother, by W. W. Campbell, III. 728.
 World of William Clissold, by H. G. Wells, III. 713.
 Worldes Hydrographical Discription, by John Davis, I. 390.
 World's Desire, by Lang and Haggard, III. 703.
 Worlds, Plurality of, by Whewell, III. 108.
 WORSLEY, PHILIP STANLEY, III. 840.
 Worthies of England, by Fuller, I. 506, 600.
 WOTTON, SIR HENRY, I. 593.
 WRANGHAM, FRANCIS, II. 741.
 WRAXALL, SIR NATHANIEL Wm., II. 738.
 Wrecker, by R. L. Stevenson, III. 699.
 Wreck of the Grosvenor, by Clark Russell, III. 691.
 WRIGHT, THOMAS, III. 411.
 WRONG, HAROLD V., III. 726.
 Wrong Paradise, by Andrew Lang, III. 692.
 Wuthering Heights, by Emily Brontë, III. 525, 526.
 WYATT, SIR THOMAS, I. 158.
 WYCHERLEY, WILLIAM, II. 65.
 WYCLIF, JOHN, I. 84; by Vaughan, III. 271.
 Wycliffe Bible, I. 86; Scots Wycliffe New Testament, I. 212.
 WYLLIE, ELINOR HOYT, III. 856.
 WYNTOUN, ANDREW OF, I. 166, 171, 181.
 YALDEN, THOMAS, II. 209.
 Yarrow Visited, by Wordsworth, III. 13, 22; Revisited, by Wordsworth, III. 13, 16, 23; Unvisited, by Wordsworth, III. 13, 22.
 YATES, EDMUND, III. 635.
 Year, by Patmore, III. 603.
 Year-book, by William Hone, II. 760.
 Year of Shame, by Sir Wm. Watson, III. 706.
 Years, by Virginia Woolf, III. 705.
 Years After, by Landor, III. 142.
 Yeast, by Charles Kingsley, III. 513.
 YEATS, WILLIAM BUTLER, III. 709, 722.
 YELLOWFLUSH, C. J. (Thackeray), III. 455.
 Ye Mariners of England, by Campbell, II. 766, 768.
 Yemassee, by W. G. Simms, III. 752.
 Yeomen of the Guard, by W. S. Gilbert, III. 694.
 Yes and No, by Normanby, II. 783.
 YONGE, CHARLOTTE MARY, III. 535.
 York and Lancaster, by S. Daniel, I. 339, 340.
 York Plays, I. 110.
 Yorkshire Tragedy, I. 335.
 YOUNG, ARTHUR, II. 627.
 YOUNG, EDWARD, II. 260.
 YOUNG, EMILY HILDA, III. 852.
 Young and Old, by C. Kingsley, III. 517.
 Young Beichan, I. 524.
 Young Duke, by Lord Beaconsfield, III. 435.
 Young Fur Traders, by R. M. Ballantyne, III. 623.
 Young Ireland, by Sir C. G. Duffy, III. 583.
 Young Maxwell, by Allan Cunningham, III. 303.
 Young Tamlane, I. 528.
 Young Voyageurs, by Mayse Reid, III. 506.
 Youth and Age, by Coleridge, III. 62, 67.
 ZAMBESI, by Livingstone, III. 480.
 ZANGWILL, ISRAEL, III. 846.
 Zanoni, by Lord Lytton, III. 332.
 Zapolya, by Coleridge, III. 61, 63.
 Zefuco, by Dr John Moore, II. 618-620.
 Zinzali, by Borrow, III. 431.
 Zion's Flowers, by Zachary Boyd, I. 514.
 Zohrab, the Hostage, by J. J. Morier, II. 783, 784.
 Zoonomia, by Erasmus Darwin, II. 573, 574.

