

RESTAURANTS.

We mention a few of the best-known restaurants in the West End and the City, but the traveller will have no difficulty in finding for himself scores of other establishments providing excellent fare. It may be said of many of the first-class restaurants that they are not so expensive as they look; and humble mortals who are content with a "grill," or other simple dish, will pay no more than they would have to do elsewhere. The numerous establishments of Slaters, Ltd., J. Lyons and Co., Ltd., Lipton's, Ltd., and other similar companies, supply a very fair luncheon or dinner for about 2s. 6d.; while fare of a lighter kind, including soups, cold meat, etc., can be had at the shops of the Aërated Bread Co., Ltd., J. Lyons and Co., Ltd., and others. The luncheons and dinners served at some of the foreign restaurants in the neighbourhood of Soho are astonishingly cheap.

Visitors who are making the round of the Museums at South Kensington will find an excellent restaurant and grill-room at the Victoria and Albert Museum, near the entrance from Exhibition Road. There are also restaurants at the Natural History Museum, the British Museum, the Tate Gallery, and other show-places.

Ladies shopping at any of the large drapery establishments, such as Marshall and Snelgrove's, Selfridge's, Swan and Edgar's, Peter Robinson's, Harrod's, Shoolbred's, Gamage's, or the Stores, will find excellent luncheon and tea-rooms on the premises. The object of providing these conveniences being to attract and keep customers, the fare is always of the best, and the prices are often below those charged outside.

It is usual in all restaurants to tip the waiter or waitress about 1d. per shilling in the bill (2d. per 1s. in the higher-class places). In the establishments of the Aërated Bread Co., Ltd., J. Lyons and Co., Ltd., and some others, "no tips" is the golden rule.

West-End Restaurants.

Many restaurants, notably those under foreign management, are open on Sunday afternoon and evening. These houses are distinguished in the following list by an asterisk (*).

In addition to the following, there are the restaurants and grill-rooms attached to the principal hotels, which are generally available to the public.
